The work done thus far since the National Convention has developed the necessity of securing a fund for supplying literature without charge to exceedingly needy localities—needy for lack of both moral and financial resources. It has seemed best, therefore, that the dime collection plan be continued, or some other be substituted for raising a missionary literature fund. An appeal is hereby made to any who are interested and who desire to assist in this work to send a voluntary contribution to their state treasurer, who is hereby requested to forward the same to Miss Esther Pugh, National Treasurer, Evanston, Ill., stating that the contribution is for the missionary literature fund. This appeal is the more necessary as no appropriation was made for the department at the last annual Convention.

Let us have a generous response, and a full report will be made as to its investment. Yours for humanity,

FANNY H. RASTALL,
National Sup't.

State papers please copy.

RECEIPTS FOR TEMPERANCE TEMPLE.

Alabama.—Montgomery: Mrs. J. R. Krause, $3.75.

Arkansas—Hot Springs: Mrs. M. A. McCrary, $5.

California—Oakland: Grace Kimball, $3.65; Humboldt county: W. C. T. U., $31; San Francisco: Bertha Browning, $1; Vernalis: Mrs. Lola Larson, $3.65; Sutter City: Miss Everett, $2.

Carolina (South) — Batesville: Harold Baker, $3.65.

Colorado—Axial: Mrs. E. T. Wolcott, $5.

Connecticut.— Meriden: W. C. T. U., $5; Plantsville: L. T. L., $3.50; Hockanum: Miss L. A. Kenney, $3.65.

Dakota (North)—Leonard: W. C. T. U., $38.80.

Dakota (South)—Volga: W. C. T. U., $1.80; Bottineau: Baptist Sunday School, $1.35; Viola: Willie McMillan, $1.25.

Delaware—Wilmington: Sarah Bringhurst, $7.63.

Dist. of Columbia—Washington: Vermont Ave. Y. W. C. T. U., $5.

Florida—Jacksonville: Dora Harris, $5. Kissimmee: W. C. T. U., $1.75.

Illinois—Highland Park: Mrs. J. W. Weddell, 80 cts; Walnut: Mrs. Mary Shirk, $3; Chicago: Mrs. Swannwick, $2; Mrs. McKelvey, $2; Iola: Mary Vickrey, $1; Moreland: Mrs. M. B. Campbell, $5.63; Chicago: H. W. Austin, $11; Sandwich: Miss Mary A. Davis, $25; Windsor: W. C. T. U., $40; Evanston: Mrs. Elizabeth Manly (late of Macomb, Ill.), $100; Davis Junction: Mrs. H. C. Haynes, A. J. Shober, J. F. Shober, H. O. Shober, $1 each; Galesburg: Mrs. and Miss Kiefer, $8.36; Naperville: L. T. L., district No. 9, 58 cts.; Sparland: Maud Webber, $2; Grand Ridge: W. C. T. U., $3; Paw Paw: Mrs. L. M. Stow, $5; Chicago: Alice F. Chambers, $100; Industrial School, Erie Chapel, $5.60; Julia L. Munger, $3.65; Girard: Mrs. M. J. Ashbaugh, $1.55; Belvidere: L. T. L., $100; Cockerell: Ada G. Lanek, $1.15; St. Jacob: Mrs. Frank Herrin, $3.65; Wayne City: Mrs. G. W. Norris, $5; Streator: Mrs. S. P. Whiting, $2; Farmington: W. C. T. U. $10; Carlinville: W. C. T. U., $5; Marshall: Mrs. N. B. De Vol, $4.75; Claremont: Miss Marie Brehm, $1.

Indiana—La Porte: M. H. Ridgway and M. B. Talmadge, $1 each; Ft. Wayne: Y. W. C. T. U., $1; Goshen: Mrs. A. Z. Vail, $1.50.

Iowa—Osage: W. C. T. U., $50; Denison: Mrs. H. C. Laub, $50.

Maryland—Glen Morris: Mrs. Alice Zouck, $5.

Massachusetts—Boston: Mrs. M. H. Gordon, $34; Westfield: Mrs. F. E. Vining, $1.50; Middlefield: L. T. L., $1: Norwell: M. L. Littlefield, $6.75; Worcester; H. J. Coulter, $3.65.

Michigan—Battle Creek: Mrs. Eugene Ross, $2; DeWitt: W. C. T. U., $3.66; Holley: W. C. T. U., $10: Lexington: Mrs. Swackhammer, $1.

Minnesota—St. Paul: Central W. C. T. U., $14; Minneapolis: Central W. C. T. U., $10.75; Marshall Co. Co. A., L. T. L., $4.

Missouri—Fayette: W. C. T. U., $17.

Montana—Butte City: Baby Band, $15.

Nebraska—Lomo: George and Raphael Blakesley, $1 each.

New Jersey—East Orange: Louise Downs Quigley, $5.42; Pennington: W. C. T. U., 35cts.

New York—Troy: Central W. C. T. U., $40; Napoli: W. C. T. U., $3.07; Thorn Hill: Mrs. W. T. Potter, $3.65; Rochester: Mrs. Booth, $5; Corning: Mrs. John Drake, $1.12; New York: Miss Elise Beattie, $5.

Oregon—Junction City: James and Nancy Kirk, $10; Keasey: W. S. Keasey, $1.

Rhode Island—Providence: W. C. T. U., $20.

Vermont—E. Coventry: Isaac Keys, 3; Chelsea: F. M. Corwin, $1.

Washington—Walla Walla: Mrs. Amanda Strong, $2.50; Carrolton: Mrs. M. C. Adams, $2.25; Hoquiam: L. T. L., $5.

Wisconsin—Greenfield: L. T. L., $2.60; Emerald Grove: E. A. Gillies, $5; Sale of models, $17.75.

Sixty-three dollars credited to Venango county, Pa., should have been, Venango county, $13; Mrs. Henrietta C. Maitland, $50.

ESTHER PUGH,
Custodian of Gift Fund.

Evanston, Ill.

Van Houten's Cocoa. Best and goes farthest.

Special Offer to Ladies.—If you secure a Life Insurance policy in the American Temperance Life Insurance Association before January 1st, you pay no membership fee. Write at once for particulars. Geo. E Godward, Sec'y, 187 Broadway, N. Y. City.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints. Having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, and desiring to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who wish it, this recipe in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail, by addressing with stamp, naming this paper. W. A. NOYES, 820 Powers' Block, Rochester, N. Y.

To Hot Springs Without Change.

You can leave Chicago any night in one of the famous Wabash compartment sleepers and make direct connection next morning at St. Louis with a through sleeper for Hot Springs, Ark. The Wabash morning train from Chicago (with free chair cars) also connects with a through sleeper for Hot Springs. See?

A Wonderful Rose.

New and desirable plants are being introduced every season by the enterprising florists of this country. The latest and probably most attractive plant is the Rainbow Rose, which is offered by L. L. May & Co., of St. Paul, Minn., who have grown a large stock of this variety. The blossoms are beautifully striped and mottled with pink, white and carmine, which gives them a most novel and showy appearance. The rose derives its name from the color of its flowers. The plant is a strong, vigorous grower, and as easily cultivated as a geranium. This firm introduced last season the Clothilde Soupert Rose, which created such a sensation both among the amateurs and florists. No lover of plants should fail to read their special offer in this issue, as there are a number of very fine bargains in plants and bulbs.

BAKER'S COCOA
Is ABSOLUTELY PURE. Unlike the Dutch Process, no Alkalies or Dyes used

MALE AND FEMALES
MAKE $3 to $5 A DAY at home working for us. Send your name on a postal card for particulars and Free Sample. Hobb's Medicine Co., Chicago, Ill.

ASTHMA
WORST CASES CURED TO STAY CURED IF UNCOMPLICATED BY ORGANIC DISEASE.
Incurable cases declined.
WE WANT NAME OF EVERY ASTHMATIC.
Examination free by mail.
P. HAROLD HAYES. M.D.
BUFFALO, N. Y.

Tasty Wall Papers
cost no more than ugly designs. You can buy the best, no matter where you live, from our immense stock. By our system the U S mail brings our store to you. Samples of beautiful selected papers mailed for 8c.
A. L. DIAMENT & CO. 1206 Market St. Phila. Pa.

THE BERKSHIRE HILLS SANATORIUM.
For the cure of Cancer in all its forms, without the use of the knife. Book with complete information mailed free. Dr. W. E. Brown & Son No. Adams, Mass

25 CENTS.
UNCLE TOM'S CABIN
UNIVERSAL EDITION.
Paper, 25 cents.
Cloth, 50 cents.
RIVERSIDE PAPER SERIES.
Large type, 50 cents.
POPULAR EDITION.
Illustrated, Cloth, $1.00.
Sold by Booksellers. Sent, postpaid, by
HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO., Boston.

THE WOMAN'S LAND ASSOCIATION
Owns a Beautiful addition to Clarendon Hills, only 10 miles from Chicago on the C., B. & Q. R. R. SHARES NOW FOR SALE to WOMEN ONLY, at $90 each, payable in INSTALLMENTS of $5 per month. WOMEN have determined to reap some of the LARGE PROFITS daily being made by men in REAL ESTATE INVESTMENTS.
We want ENTERPRISING, CHRISTIAN WOMEN to take every share now for sale. IMMENSE PROFITS! Write for information which will be given FREE, with a short sketch of the life of each purchaser.
Address
THE WOMAN'S LAND ASSOCIATION,
116 La Salle St., - CHICAGO, ILL.

DRUNKENNESS cured by using BOSTON DRUG. Absolute secrecy guaranteed or money refunded. Price $1. All druggists or by mail. W. R. BROWN & CO., 105 Chauncey St., Boston.

Good Sense CORSET WAISTS have been growing in favor for the past 10 years. Please examine them and you will be convinced of their merit.

"DELSARTE" Corset Waists and Braces are the best selling goods made. Sold by Agents only. Exclusive territory. Agents Wanted. DELSARTE CORSET CO., 142 W. 23d St., New York. Also 111 State Street, Chicago, Ill.

BABY CARRIAGES ARE DELIVERED FREE to any place in the United States. Also Baby JUMPERS, BICYCLES, SAFETIES and GIRLS' TRICYCLES. One or more at wholesale price sent C. O. D. direct from L. G. SPENCER'S Factory, 221 W. Madison Street CHICAGO. 13 to 819 saved. Send 2c. stamp for new catalogue. The largest factory in the world. Latest Styles.

BABY CARRIAGES
We manufacture to sell direct to private parties at factory prices, and deliver free of charge to all points in United States. Our new Catalogue free. Address C. T. WALKER & CO., 199 E. North Ave., Chicago, Ill.

RYOU Looking for a HOME or an investment where you can double your money? ELLSWORTH the new temperance suburb of Chicago offers both. Write to ELLSWORTH LAND ASS'N, Room 41, 31 Clark St., Chicago.

RUPTURE A Positive Radical cure at Home. (Sealed) Book giving full particulars sent free. Write Dr. W. S. Rice, Box U Smithville, Jeff. Co., N. Y.

TAPE WORM Removed alive, head and all, in three hours at your home. No starving required. Safe, sure and certain. Circulars free. 269 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill. INTERNATIONAL MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

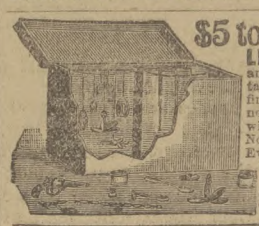
PARALYSIS CURED without medicine. Rheumatism, Spinal Diseases and Dropsy easily cured. Address Dr. C. I. THACHER, 6, Central Music Hall, Chicago, for a valuable book FREE to all.

BABY CARRIAGES
Shipped anywhere to anyone at WHOLESALE PRICES,
Latest Styles. A $5.50 carriage for $2.95; A $12.50 " " $6.95; A $18.50 " " $9.75
Send for 40-page illustrated catalogue free.
CASH BUYERS' UNION, 362 Dearborn St., B 27 Chicago, Ill.

PURE GUM RUBBER GOODS
Of Every Description; also,
Mackintosh Clothing;
also, Japanese Tissue,
For Mending Without Needle or Thread,
ELASTIC TIP CO.,
Headquarters 152-154 Lake St., Chicago

DRUNKENNESS Or the LIQUOR Habit. Permanently Cured. All desire for Alcoholic stimulants quickly removed without knowledge of the patient, if desired. Treatise for home cure mailed free. Hygiene Co., Box 1725, New Haven, Conn.

ASTHMA—CURED DR. TAFT'S ASTHMALENE never fails; send us your address, we will mail trial BOTTLE FREE
THE DR. TAFT BROS. M. CO., ROCHESTER, N. Y.



$5 to $15 per day, at home, selling LIGHTNING PLATER and plating jewelry, watches tableware, &c. Plates the finest of jewelry good as new, on all kinds of metal with gold, silver or nickel. No experience. No capital. Every house has goods needing plating. Wholesale to agents $5. Write for circulars. H. E. DELNO & Co., Columbus, O.

IF THERE ARE CHILDREN in your household you ought to have ST. NICHOLAS. Look at the pictures on the accompanying chart. Each one represents a story in the March number. Is there any boy or girl who would not be delighted with this magazine? Every month thousands of parents buy ST. NICHOLAS for their children because they know it publishes only such matter as is best for young readers. No lurid detective tales or foolishly sentimental love stories, but good, sound, healthful literature by such writers as Brander Matthews, J. T. Trowbridge, Noah Brooks, and Mary Hallock Foote. Mrs. Burnett's "Little Lord Fauntleroy" was first printed in ST. NICHOLAS. So was Frank Stockton's "A Jolly Fellowship," Louisa M. Alcott's "Jack and Jill," Edward Eggleston's "Hoosier School-Boy," and scores of other stories that have become juvenile classics. The boy or girl who reads ST. NICHOLAS regularly for a year will not only cultivate a taste for good literature, but will unconsciously acquire as many facts about history, geography, and the arts and sciences as the average scholar learns about such matters at school in the same length of time. And information gleaned from an entertaining story is apt to be comprehended more thoroughly and remembered longer than that conned from a lesson book. Do you need such a magazine? If so, the March number—now ready—is a good number to begin with. Any newsdealer can supply it. Price, 25 cents a copy: $3.00 a year. Published by THE CENTURY CO., 33 East 17th Street, New-York.

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE ROLLERS
Beware of Imitations.
NOTICE AUTOGRAPH OF Stewart Hartshorn ON LABEL AND GET THE GENUINE HARTSHORN

FINCH'S IMPROVED EXTRA EARLY TREE TOMATO

This excellent variety is distinguished from all others by its large stiff stalks, as shown in the engraving, standing up like a tree without support of any kind. It bears very abundantly of large, bright red tomatoes, very smooth, and of fine flavor; it is extremely early and entirely free from rot; the leaves are very curly and of a very dark green, almost black, making the plant very ornamental as well as useful.

FINCH'S EVERGREEN CUCUMBER
A very handsome variety of superior quality, firm and crisp, of a dark green color, growing from 10 to 12 inches in length, and immensely productive.

FINCH'S SURE HEAD CABBAGE
Is all head and sure to head. Very uniform in size, firm and fine in texture, excellent in quality, and a good keeper. Alfred Rose, of Penn Yan, N. Y., grew a head which weighed 64½ pounds.

☞ I will send a Packet each of Tomato, Cucumber and Cabbage, with my Illustrated Catalogue, for only 25 cents in Silver or 28 cents in Stamps.

FIVE CINNAMON VINES FREE
This rapid growing Vine, with its beautiful heart-shaped leaves, glossy green peculiar foliage, and delicate white blossoms, emitting a delicious cinnamon fragrance, will grow from 10 to 30 feet in a single season, and for covering Arbors, Screens and Verandas is without a rival. I will send 5 BULBS FREE, and postpaid, to every person sending me 25 cents for the above Tree Tomato Collection, the bulbs will produce 5 Beautiful Vines, exactly the same in every respect as I have been selling for One Dollar. Address plainly

FRANK FINCH (Box 58), CLYDE, N.Y.

☞ Every person sending SILVER for this collection will receive extra a packet of the Mansfield Tomato (also known as the Prize) which has been grown over nine feet in height, bearing fruit of good quality, weighing from one to two pounds each.

MANSFIELD TREE TOMATO GIVEN AWAY

Mr. Finch is perfectly reliable and trustworthy.—ED.

MASON & HAMLIN

Examine the new Mason & Hamlin Piano and Organ catalogues, sent free to any address. The Mason & Hamlin Grand and Upright Pianos are constructed on an Improved Method of Stringing, invented and exclusively used by Mason & Hamlin, by which remarkable purity of tone and great durability are secured, and phenomenal capacity to stand in tune. The Mason & Hamlin SCREW-STRINGER was patented in July, 1883, and is a veritable triumph for American ingenuity, being pronounced by experts "the greatest improvement of the century" in pianos. American Pianos and Organs are superior to all others. Mason & Hamlin Organs have long been the Standard the world over. The Mason & Hamlin Piano is fast becoming as famous as the Mason & Hamlin Organ, and illustrates that HIGHEST STANDARD OF EXCELLENCE which has always characterized the latter won for it instrument, and Highest Honors at all great World's Exhibitions since Paris, 1867. Illustrated catalogues free.

ORGANS PIANOS

Without under-estimating the improvements effected by others in pianos, the Mason & Hamlin STRINGER is claimed to be the greatest improvement of them all, and without it the highest attainable excellence is simply impossible.

MASON & HAMLIN ORGAN AND PIANO CO.
BOSTON. NEW YORK. CHICAGO.

"A SWEET FACE."

Everybody says that. But is it not a strong face? Could this woman write nonsense? Look again. No other writer of to-day will be more read in 1892 on both sides of the ocean than ANNIE SWAN. Scotland is proud of her, and America is welcoming her as a true, cheery and winning apostle of chastity, temperance, filial duty and conjugal fidelity. Try her "Gates of Eden," "Briar and Palm," "Maitland of Lauriston," "Who Shall Serve," "Carlowrie," or any other of the shining list. One dollar each, postpaid. Special prices on selections of three or five.

CRANSTON & STOWE, American Publishers,
Cincinnati, Chicago, St. Louis.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED for DARKNESS & DAYLIGHT
or LIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF NEW YORK LIFE.
A Christian woman's narrative of Mission work done "In His Name" in tough places, revealing the "inner life" of the underworld of New York "as seen by a woman." It describes Gospel work in the slums, and gives a famous detective's 30 years experiences. By Mrs. Helen Campbell, Col. Thos. W. Knox, and Inspector Thos. Byrnes (Chief of the N. Y. Detectives). With 250 engravings from flash-light photographs of scenes in Darkest New York by Day and by Night. Pure and good, full of tears and smiles, it is an ally of Temperance, a witness to the power of the Gospel,—a book for every home. Ministers say, "God speed it." Eminent women endorse it. ☞ 5,000 Agents Wanted, Men and Women. ☞ $200 a month made. ☞ Distance is no hindrance, for we Pay Freights and give Extra Terms. Write for circulars to
A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

VOSE & SONS PIANOS
EXCEL IN BEAUTY, TONE AND TOUCH.

Publisher's Notes.

Helps for New Workers and New Helps for Other Workers.

Here's the list and a tempting one it is, too. Some one has said that she "rather liked the W. T. P. A., because it gets out something new once in a while." The list shows quite a variety this time.

"Yale and Amherst on the Effects of Tobacco on Physical Development." Timely Talk No. 9. Price per 100, 30 cents. Exactly the thing for college students.

"The Traveler's Psalm." The 121st Psalm set to music. This is No. 1 in a new series, the Railroad Department Leaflets. Price per 100, 50 cents.

"Why I Never Tasted Liquor," by Edward W. Bok. No. 203, of the National Leaflets, L. T. L. Series.

"An Appeal to Mothers," Frances E. Willard. This is not exactly "new," but it has just been issued as National Leaflet 204, L. T. L. Series, in more attractive form than it has before appeared.

"Fair Play," Mary E. McDowell. Nor is this a new publication, but like "An Appeal," it has been re-issued in more attractive form, as 106 of National Leaflets, Y Series.

Price of either of above three, 90 cents per 100.

Responsive Readings for the W. C. T. U.

The January number is on the subject of W. C. T. U. work in the country. The one for February is entitled, "Evangelistic Department Course of Study." These "Readings" are important helps in educating the union and we know of no better helps to answer the question, "How shall we make our local W. C. T. U. meetings more interesting?" The leaflets are always edited with a view to give light on different phases of work and cannot fail to be an inspiration to the union using them. Price for 13 copies one year to one address, $1.

Bible Readings.

The number for January is on the subject, "Our Father." The one for February: "Follow His Steps." Published monthly and are companion helps to the others above mentioned, for no union can rightly fulfill its mission by simply developing its ethical life. In order to accomplish anything at all, we need to draw generously from the high source of Divine strength, the grace and power needed for proper activity. These readings have proved a blessing to many a tired and discouraged worker in the past.

Price per copy for one year, 12c.

Ten copies, one year to one address, $1.

Temperance Lesson Manual.

Vol. 7. Nos. 1 and 2. Senior Grade lessons. Price, single numbers, 5c.

In lots of twenty-five or over, each 4c.

Advance Pages of the White Ribbon Hymnal, by Anna A. Gordon. These "Advance Pages" contain about twenty-five songs, some of which are new and others selected from among those so popular to white-ribboners, such as "The Crusade Psalm," "Blest be the tie," "God be with you."

Price per single copies, 5c.

Price per hundred, $4.50.

Red Letter Day Calendars.

These useful little calendars are indispensable to W. C. T. U. workers, and excellent for souvenirs and to send to outsiders not interested. We will send any quantity at 5 cents each, or $4 per 100.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Give the Girls a Chance!
To be GOOD NATURED.

GOLD DUST Washing Powder

MEANS:
The washing all done early in the forenoon.
No scrubbing; no backaches; no tattered tempers.
Monday a quiet, orderly and proper day, instead of the horror of the whole week.

4 Pounds for 25 Cents.
Sold by ALL GROCERS.
Gold Dust is The Best.

N. K. FAIRBANK & CO., Sole Manufacturers,
CHICAGO, ST. LOUIS, NEW YORK, PHILADELPHIA, BOSTON, BALTIMORE, NEW ORLEANS, SAN FRANCISCO, PORTLAND, ME., PORTLAND, ORE., PITTSBURGH AND MILWAUKEE.

THE CHARMING MEXICAN PRIMROSE is the Grandest of all New Plants. It is strictly a perpetual bloomer, as it is in flower at all times of the year, a good specimen showing always from ten to thirty large saucer-shaped blossoms, about three inches across, of a beautiful, bright, clear pink color, veined with scarlet and with a white center. The superb color, combined with airy grace and beautiful form, goes to make a flower which is in beauty perfection itself. Each blossom keeps perfect many days before fading, and when it drops, others are out to take its place, and this succession of beauty is continued from one year's end to another. The plant is a free grower, succeeding in any soil or situation. As a window plant it combines great hardiness and ease of culture with unsurpassed beauty and delicate loveliness, and is truly a plant which has no superior. In the open ground it grows freely and blooms profusely all summer, and, in fact, until winter is upon it. Early frosts do not injure it, and it blooms on until frozen solid or covered with snow. It is a plant whose merits of hardiness, ease of culture, perpetual freedom of bloom, and unsurpassed beauty, both in color and habit, are offset by no faults whatever. It is the one most desirable new plant for the whole world. FINE PLANTS, ALL READY to BLOOM, by MAIL POSTPAID, GUARANTEED to Arrive in Good Condition, 40 cts. each, 3 for $1, 7 for $2. Those ordering three or more plants may have a Manettia Vine free by asking for it.

THE TRUE MANETTIA VINE The most magnificent flowering vine in cultivation, and is loaded with brilliant flowers every day in the year. The fame of its marvelous beauty is world wide. Fine plants ALREADY BUDDED AND BLOOMING, 25 cents each, 3 for 50 cents.

NEW PEACOCK PANSY. A Pansy of superb and varied color, showing the glorious and luminous bronze blue seen only in peacock feathers. It is the finest colored strain of pansy ever seen. SEED PER PACKET, 25 CENTS.

SPECIAL OFFER For 60 cts. we will send by mail one plant each of Mexican Primrose, Manettia Vine and pk't Peacock Pansy. Two of each for $1.

Also the Following Extra Choice Collections by Mail Postpaid.

12 Extra choice mixed Gladiolus, flowering bulbs.. 25c	5 Grand Lilies, 5 sorts named, including Auratum. 50c
6 New Double Pearl Tuberoses, flowering bulbs... 25c	5 Grand Cacti, different sorts named..... 50c
5 Rare Chrysanthemums, 5 sorts named..... 50c	3 Different rare new perpetual blooming plants.. 50c
4 Lovely Tea Roses, white, pink, yellow and scarlet 50c	6 Pkts. each rare new Flower, and Vegetable seeds 50c

A GREAT OFFER. For only $3.00 we will send postpaid all the collections, Primrose, Manettia and Pansy offered above. Order at once, as these offers may not appear again.

OUR BRONZE BLUE CATALOGUE (A superb work of art in bronze blue) of FLOWER and VEGETABLE SEEDS, BULBS, PLANTS and RARE FRUITS, is the most beautiful and complete ever issued. 152 pages, hundreds of Elegant Engravings, Stipple Lithograph Covers and 7 beautiful large Colored Plates. We offer the finest standard varieties and novelties in Flower and Vegetable Seeds, Bulbs and Plants of all kinds and rare new Fruits. Also the greatest collection of rare Cacti, Flowering Shrubs, New Aquatic Plants, etc. Don't miss the Great Japanese Wineberry, Allsummer Raspberry, Water Hyacinth, Trailing Queen Fuchsia, Dwarf Orange, Mosquito Catcher Plant, Picture Rock Tomato, Stanley Potato, and hundreds of other Grand Novelties. THIS MAGNIFICENT CATALOGUE WILL BE SENT FREE TO ALL WHO ORDER THE MEXICAN PRIMROSE OR ANYTHING HERE OFFERED. Or for only 20 cts. we will send CATALOGUE, Sample Copy of the MAYFLOWER and a packet of PEACOCK PANSY SEED. We want agents in every town to take subscribers for our beautiful Monthly Horticultural Paper, THE MAYFLOWER, 50c. per year. Large Colored Plate with every number. Liberal premiums. Sample copy free. Address

JOHN LEWIS CHILDS, Floral Park, Queens Co., N. Y.

SEEDS ROSES PLANTS TREES
THEY GROW--THEY BLOOM.
Catalogue Free 150 pages describing one of the most complete stocks in the U. S.
38 YEARS. 700 ACRES. 25 GREENHOUSES.
The STORRS & HARRISON CO.
PAINESVILLE, Lake Co., OHIO.

EASTER

THE Easter season is approaching. The constantly increasing demand for suitable gifts commemorating this sacred holiday has been anticipated, and the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association is fully prepared to supply all requirements, having secured a beautiful and varied assortment of cards booklets and books These are placed at such figures that all classes can be supplied with just what is suitable, and a lovely jeweled token can prove to a distinguished friend the sacred regard it is desired to express, or the numerous members of a Sunday-school or Loyal Temperance Legion class may carry home the true spirit of Easter on a lovely card of insignificant price. The occasion should not be lost, and need not be while lovely articles can be secured for so small a price. Below find classification.

BOOKLETS

Torchon Tints in lovely designs, each.....$ 5

Life from Heaven. 16-page illuminated..... 10

Everlasting Life. Same size and style..... 10

The Stream of Life..... 10

Beyond the Cross..... 10

(Both of these are very fine for the price. The latter contains several poems, and is beautifully illustrated.)

Rejoice. Same size and style, with embossed cover..... 12

The Saviour Lives. Companion to above..... 12

Easter Hymns. A wing-shaped booklet, illustrated in monotints and colors..... 15

From Cross to Crown. A circular booklet in monotints..... 15

Day Dawn—An Easter Gift.....$ 15

Monotint, a rather unusual, but attractive cover design.

Light, Peace and Joy. A Souvenir. Monotint $ 15

Easter Carols.....$ 15

A harp-shaped, monotint booklet, containing five carols with music.

The Resurrection..... 20

Illustrating some of the familiar Bible Texts on the resurrection.

The Lamb that was Slain.....$ 20

Easter lilies, nicely grouped, entwining cross.

An Easter Home.....$ 20

In lily design, tied with ribbon, monotint illustrations.

The Joyful Easter Day. Companion to above $ 20

The Doves..... 20

An Easter melody. Brilliantly illustrated.

The Lamb's Message.....$ 20

Cover in relief, illuminated.

The Conqueror's Crown..... 20

Egg-shaped, thorn-encircled, illuminated.

Easter Watchers..... 20

Floral design, in monotint.

Alleluia..... 20

In rustic design, floral and landscape illustrations.

A Happy Easter to You.....$ 20

Large torchon tint 6x7½ inches.

Resurrection Power. A Poem. By Charlotte Murray..... 25

A fancy-shaped booklet neatly tied with the white ribbon. Jewelled. High class illustration.

Easter Anthems..... 25

The cross with anchor, illuminated.

Jesus Lives..... 30

A large egg-shaped booklet, with floral and other illustrations in soft tints,

Bluer : kies and Brighter Suns.....$ 30

Companion to above.

The Message of the Dove.....$ 50

This well-known Poem is illumined very beautifully.

The Wayside Cross.....$ 50

A large booklet, 7½x9½, monotint illustrations.

Celluloid-covered booklets, in elegant design and different sizes, prices, according to size, each 15c, 25c or 30c.

BOOKS

Easter Interpreted. Being citations from Robert Browning. Compiled by Rose Porter. Vellum bound.....$ 20

The Living Christ. or Easter Thoughts for King's Daughters. By Mary Lowe Dickinson. Same style..... 20

Cathedral Echoes. or Easter Praise. Compiled by Rose Porter. Same style..... 20

Love ; The Supreme Gift. By Henry Drummond. Same style..... 20

The Perfected Life. By Henry Drummond. Same style..... 20

Addresses by Henry Drummond. With sketch of his life. By Rev. W. J. Dawson. Containing six addresses. Bound in muslin, 75
Same, bound in white and silver, in box, 1 00

Prayers from the Poets. A very fine collection from numerous authors. Bound in white and blue in relief, gilt on top..... 1 00

Gleanings Among the Sheaves. By Rev. C. H. Spurgeon. Cloth, gilt top..... 60

Twelve Striking Sermons. By Rev. C. H. Spurgeon. Cloth..... 50

Twelve Sermons on the Resurrection. By Rev. C. H. Spurgeon. Cloth..... 50

Life of Spurgeon. By Rev. James J. Ellis. Cloth..... 1 00

(NOTE.—The works of Spurgeon and his biography will be in great demand. He will speak no more except through the printed page, and there all will be glad to hear him.)

The Christian's Secret of a Happy Life. By Hannah Whitall Smith. Cloth and gilt... 85

(If more expensive binding is desired, write.)

How to Win. By Frances E. Willard. A valuable book for young people. Cloth.....$ 1 00

The Year's Bright Chain. Compiled by Alice M. Guernsey from the writings of Miss Willard. For young people. Cloth..... 50

Helping ; A Children's Story. By Ada Melville. Cloth..... 25

Van and Vet. Same style..... 25

Prove It. A sequel to "Van and Vet." Same style..... 25

Stories of Friends. Same style..... 25

Send for catalogue for larger list of books.

The Earthly Footprints of Our Risen Lord. Being a continuous narrative of the four gospels, according to the revised edition, with an introduction by Rev. John Hall, D. D. Profusely Illustrated. Cloth & gilt, 2 00

The Pathway to Easter. Seven Words for the Seven Days. By Rose Porter, with poem by Mary Lowe Dickinson. The "Seven Words" are the seven utterances from the cross elaborated. Beautifully embossed card board cover.....$ 25
Specially appropriate for gifts to adult Sunday-school pupils. In quantity we will make the price for 6 $1.25; per dozen, 2 25

BIBLES

We can give special figures on two Bibles that are decidedly low in price. Do you not think so? See!

1. Teachers' Bible, pearl type, size 7½x11 inches from edge of flap, Oxford circuit, flaps, with all the helps, including Concordance.....$ 1 75
2. Bagster Bible, minion type, size 9x13 from edge of flap. All helps except Concordance..... 2 75

A full catalogue of Bibles sent on application. These, however, are of special value.

BOOKLETS

NEW—JEWELLED.

For birthdays and Easter. A specially inscribed card sent with each: "An Easter greeting, with best wishes." Each booklet in a fancy box. These booklets are all richly jewelled, frosted and embossed, with indented cover lettering and fancy cut edges. The coloring is unusually delicate and harmonious. Each contains a beautiful poem, and the illustrations are of the finest and best quality. The cheaper ones have on the average six pages and cover; the more expensive, twelve pages. The quantity is therefore limited, but what there is, is of the best quality. Taken as a class they constitute a line of goods finer than any other we carry. The ones named below represent a large variety of others, uniform in design and quality, but varying in contents. A full line of all in stock.

Quiet Resting Places. Margaret Haycraft,$ 25
"Snowflake" cover, indented letters, forget-me-nots in illustration.

The Wheel of Life. Charlotte Murray.....$ 25
Design on cover, showing title encased in a wheel.

Home Light. Charlotte Murray.....$ 25
Fancy cut edges, gold print.

Much More. Charlotte Murray..... 25
Same in design as "Home Light."

Crowned with Promise. M. S. Haycraft..... 50
Imitation leatherette cover, gold print.

The Star of Life. Margaret Haycraft..... 50
Rainbow-hued front cover with "starlight," gold print.

Love Divine. Same author.....$ 50
Containing poem, "The Whisper of the Roses," with suitable illustrations. "Snowflake" cover indented.

Light at Eventide. Same author.....$ 50
Salmon tinted cover, illumined with green and gold.

Breast the Wave. Fairlie Thornton.....$ 50
Buff and gold cover. The spirit of the poem is "Work for the Master."

The Master Himself.....$ 75
Illustrated by Marie Von Beckendorff. Silver print on cover. Inwrought lace design.

Forget Not all His Benefits. Fairlie Thornton $ 75
Spirit of poem, "Kept for Jesus." Silver print and flowers embossed on cover.

The Lord Reigneth. Charlotte Murray..... $1 00
Silver printed cover. Inwrought lace design, exceptionally rich in coloring.

The Unfailing One. Charlotte Murray.....$1 00
Mistletoe design in gilt and light buff. One of the best of them all. Quoted from contents:

"Do you want a word to cheer you,
* * * * * *
Just a touch that will bring comfort?
* * * * * *
It is this, 'He never faileth!'"

WALL DECORATIONS.

Wall Roll—Words of Life..... 75

Suitable texts grouped under headings such as:

In His Name, The Crusade Psalm,
The Victor's Crown, The Perpetual Presence,
Wealth of the Kingdom.

It is arranged with one leaf for every day in the month. It is very neat, and will make an appropriate gift at any time. Printed with large, clear letters, easily read at a distance. Mounted on roller, ready to hang.

Wall Cards, each..... 15
Card size, 5x7 inches. Silver indented print clearly shown on a dark background. A short Scriptural sentiment printed in large letters, with a verse of some well-known hymn underneath.

Also a limited number of EASTER BASKETS, with duckling emerging from a broken shell, carrying greetings in its bill. Orders for this must reach us by April 1st in order to secure delivery in time for Easter. Price 50c.

BEAUTIFUL EASTER CARDS

The cards classified below represent a great variety of designs, shapes and coloring. All our cards this season are new and bright and better than ever for the price. They are made in all kinds of odd and attractive shapes, such as stars with flowery edges, wreaths of flowers, "sheaf-lined" crosses, combination of crosses and stars, egg-shaped, anchor-shaped, folding cards with design in perspective. The higher-priced cards are richly jewelled, frosted and embossed. The reading is very appropriate for the season. If you trust us to select for you as per following classification, we will guarantee satisfaction. Each series contains a variety.

SERIES A.		SERIES B.		SERIES C.		SERIES D.		SERIES E.		SERIES F.		SERIES G.
Single one.....$	2	Single one.....$	3	Single one.....$	4	Single one.....$	5	Single one.....$	10	Single one.....$	15	Single one.....$	20
12 cards.....	20	12 cards.....	30	12 cards.....	40	12 cards.....	50	12 cards.....	1 00	12 cards.....	1 50	12 cards.....	2 00
50 "	75	50 "	1 10	50 "	1 40	50 "	1 75	50 cards.....	4 00	50 "	5 00	50 "	7 50

BIRTHDAY SOUVENIRS

A large and elegant line of birthday cards and booklets kept constantly on hand. Send for Catalogue to

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUB. ASS'N.

161 LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

VAN HOUTEN'S COCOA

"Best & Goes Farthest."

"Cap'en Cuttle
Knows a good thing,
I tell ye; and when
He hails a better
Drink than VAN
HOUTEN'S COCOA
He'll make a note
On it."

CAP'EN CUTTLE.

PERFECTLY PURE.

VAN HOUTEN'S PATENT PROCESS

increases by 50 PER CENT. the solubility of the flesh-forming elements, making of the cocoa bean an easily digested, delicious, nourishing and stimulating drink, readily assimilated even by the most delicate.

Ask your grocer for VAN HOUTEN'S and take no substitute. ☞If not obtainable enclose 25cts. to either VAN HOUTEN & ZOON, 106 Reade Street, New York, or 45 Wabash Ave., Chicago, and a can, containing enough for 35 to 40 cups will be mailed. Mention this publication. Prepared only by the inventors VAN HOUTEN & ZOON, Weesp, Holland.

The Standard Cocoa of the World.

a3.

PERFECTION

KEEPS FLOUR PERFECTLY DRY AND FREE FROM DIRT VERMIN ETC.

COMBINES BIN SIFTER PAN & SCOOP. AERATES AND PRESERVES FLOUR FROM MOLD

FLOUR BIN AND SIEVE

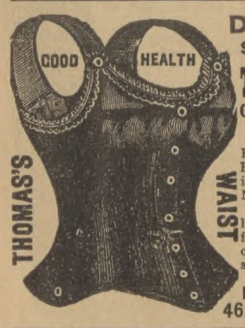
Avoids the great inconvenience of reaching into a barrel or sack. No scattering. Saves time and waste. Once tried you would not be without it for many times its cost. Send for circular.

Prices to hold { 25 lbs. $2.50 / 50 lbs. $3.00 / 100 lbs. $4.00 } Your dealer sells them or ought to. If he does not please write to us.

SHERMAN & BUTLER, Manufacturers, 23-28 W. Lake Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

TOKOLOGY, a complete Ladies' Guide in health and disease. Mrs. G. W. C., of Detroit, Mich., writes: "Tokology treatment, under God, saved my life in childbirth, and gave me a strong, healthy baby girl. I would like to place a copy of your book in the hands of every woman in the land." Price prepaid $2.75. Sample pages free. Best terms to agents.

ALICE B. STOCKHAM & CO. 277 Madison-st. Chicago



DON'T WEAR STIFF CORSETS.

Thomas' Good Health Corset Waists BY MAIL. Ladies $1.50 Misses 1.25 Children. 60

Best for Economy, Health and Beauty. Buttoned or to clasp in front. Long or short waist. Material the very best.

Thousands mailed in the last year, with entire satisfaction to Patrons. Money cheerfully refunded if not satisfactory.

Agents wanted everywhere.

H. A. Thomas & Co., Manf'rs 465 W. Van Buren St. Chicago.

MISS BEACH'S Curling Fluid

Keeps the hair in curl for days. No Odor or Sediment. Harmless. Gives vigor and beauty to hair, increases its growth. A toilet necessity. At druggists or sent prepaid 50c. LADY AGENTS wanted. DENISON CHEMICAL CO., 56 (H) LaSalle St., Chicago.

ESPEY'S FRAGRANT CREAM.

Cures Chapped Hands, Face, Lips, or any irritation of the skin. Is a scientific food and tonic for the skin and complexion. Prevents tendency to wrinkles or ageing of the skin. Keeps the face and hands soft, smooth and plump. CELIA CONKLIN'S CURLING CREAM warranted to hold the Hair in Curl, Bangs and Frizzes. Is absolutely harmless. Both preparations for sale by dealers everywhere. Inclose 2-cent stamp for free Card Case to P. B. KEYS, 405 State St., Chicago, Ill.

FOR MANY LADIES THE KABO ELEGANT SHAPES AND MANY OF THEM NO METAL EYELETS TO STAIN CLOTHES BONES POSITIVELY DO NOT BREAK OR ROLL ALL GUARANTEED BY CHICAGO CORSET CO. ARE THE ONLY ONES GIVING ENTIRE SATISFACTION

Publisher's Dep't.

Our Day.

OUR DAY for March is now ready, and is an exceedingly valuable number. The leading articles are on Signs of the Times in German Theological Faculties; Congested Districts in American Cities; Legalized Robbery in the Louisiana Lottery, etc. The Boston Monday Lecture is on Mr. Spurgeon's Character and Career, while the Vital Points of Expert Opinion and Questions to Specialists are of great interest, the latter containing numerous replies to the leading questions published last month. All reform workers need this magazine. Price per year, $2.50, to ministers and students, $2; sample copies, 25 cts.; to ministers and students, 20 cts. Send orders to

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

We Have An Idea

and should like to give you, dear readers, the benefit of it. Spring will be here before you really know it and that means better weather and more sunshine. That should also mean better health and more money, does it with you? How's this in the way of logic, "I shall have better health and more money if I can be out and take in more oxygen and sunshine!" Well, now, suppose you go out and while out stop in at Mrs. Behind Times and tell her about "Glimpses," Miss Willard's book, you know, which is a most complete history of W. C. T. U. work. After a while you'll come to the cottage where Mrs. Young Husband resides and she is badly in need of advice on the care of the infant who at present seems to be monarch supreme. Suppose you tell her of "Childhood," Miss West's book. Mrs. Y. H. would be helped by possessing the book (of course she would buy) and we would share profits with you! (This is confidential.)

Now to business; the idea is this. You can help your neighbors by selling to them copies of the aforesaid books. We have a plan by which we supply outfits absolutely free to trusted and known people. Send a postal for "the new plan" and we will tell you all about it.

SUBS'N BOOK DEP'T W. T. P. A.,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Testimonials.

SLEEPY EYE, MINN.

"Life of Grant," received and all right. It is splendid. Thanks. MRS. S. S.

The map sent is received and gives entire satisfaction. Yours,
Le Roy, N. Y. D. A. P.

F. L. Neely's map received in good order. Thank you for prompt attention. We think it a volume of beauty and interest. Yours truly,
New Brighton, Pa. M. C. B.

Neely's double map received in good order. We find the map exceeds our expectations and hope after giving it careful study to receive valuable information. Very truly,
New Orleans. A. M. Z.

I received Neely's double map a few days ago; must say I am perfectly delighted with it. It is a real beauty and contains a vast amount of valuable information. I shall take pleasure in showing it to my friends and acquaintances, who, I am sure, will greatly admire it.
Sincerely yours,
Holder, Ill. MRS. S. L. B.

We will send this large reversible map, 5 feet 6 inches by 3 feet 10 inches, postpaid, for $1. Send orders at once to

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

THE Quarterly Temperance Sunday-school lessons for 1892 will all be illustrated, and we are fortunate to be able to announce that Mary Lowe Dickinson will aid Mrs. Rice in their preparation. This alone will create a great demand. Order early and avoid provoking delays. The next lesson is for Sunday, May 22.

Send for Color Samples and Price List. Patented February 25, 1886. Examine closely Stamp on inside of Waist.

TAKE NO OTHER.

THE GENUINE JACKSON CORSET WAISTS

ARE MADE ONLY BY THE JACKSON CORSET CO., Jackson, Mich.

The manufacturer's name is printed upon the boxes, and stamped upon inside of clasp in each waist. They are the most popular articles of the kind now on the market. You should have one of them.

BE SURE AND GET THE RIGHT THING. IF YOUR DEALER HASN'T IT, SEND $1.25 FOR SAMPLE.

METAL TIPPED. EVER READY DRESS STAY Will Not Cut through.

See name "EVER READY" on back of each Stay.

ACKNOWLEDGED THE BEST DRESS STAY ON THE MARKET.

PERSPIRATION PROOF. PLIABLE. EASILY ADJUSTED.

Ask for them. Take none but them. BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.

MANUFACTURED BY THE YPSILANTI DRESS STAY MANUFACTURING CO., YPSILANTI, MICHIGAN.

FOR SALE BY ALL JOBBERS AND RETAILERS.

SPECIAL DEPOTS: MODEL DRESS STEEL and BUSTLE CO., 74 Grand St., New York. BROWN & METZNER, 535 Market St., San Francisco.

COLD BLAST

Feathers and Feather Pillows

ARE SOLD GUARANTEED

Free from ODOR, DUST and QUILLS

AND IN PERFECT CONDITION.

ALL FIRST-CLASS DEALERS KEEP THEM.

IF YOURS DOES NOT, WRITE

THE COLD BLAST FEATHER CO.

MANUFACTURERS OF

FAULTLESS BEDDING

CHICAGO.

FREE

For 30 Days. Wishing to introduce our CRAYON PORTRAITS and at the same time extend our business and make new customers, we have decided to make this Special Offer: Send us a Cabinet Picture, Photograph, Tintype, Ambrotype or Daguerotype of yourself or any member of your family, living or dead and we will make you a CRAYON PORTRAIT FREE OF CHARGE, provided you exhibit it to your friends as a sample of our work, and use your influence in securing us future orders. Place name and address on back of picture and it will be returned in perfect order. We make any change in picture you wish, not interfering with the likeness. Refer to any bank in Chicago. Address all mail to THE CRESCENT CRAYON CO. Opposite New German Theatre, CHICAGO, ILL. P. S.—We will forfeit $100 to anyone sending us photo and not receiving crayon picture FREE as per this offer. This offer is bonafide.

WRITE —TO— US If you are going to BUILD.

Sample designs of MODEL HOMES sent on application.

Our New Book—
"Cottage Souvenir" No. 2 with over 200 illustrations, is A GEM for all who want to build. Price $2.00.

Send for prospectus and sample pages—free.

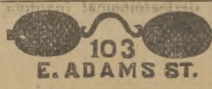
Geo. F. Barber & Co., Architects, Knoxville, Tenn.

LADIES without business experience are making immense sales of Mme. MOCABE'S CORSETS AND WAISTS. Send for agents' terms.

St. Louis Corset Co., St. Louis, Mo.



103 E. ADAMS ST. BORSCH-OPTICIAN CONSULT US ABOUT YOUR EYESIGHT SATISFACTION GAURANTEED

HOME DRESSMAKING

A Complete Guide to Household Sewing.

Women who try to save who love to dress who have to sew Need It

Prepaid $2.75. The only book on the subject.

Free circulars giving Table of Contents.

Best Terms to Agents.

Address, CHARLES H. SERGEL & CO., Dept. A 350 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

"WHAT I EAT, THAT I AM."

U GRANULA U

AN INCOMPARABLE FOOD

Discovered by JAMES C. JACKSON, M. D., Founder of the Famous

DANSVILLE SANATORIUM,

Being the life-giving principle of WHEAT. Easily digested; readily assimilated by all. "A universal favorite wherever known."

Trial Package 36 cents, by mail postpaid. Send for our Pamphlet (free).

GRANULA MFG. CO.
DANSVILLE, N. Y.

STUDY LAW At Home.

Take a Course in the Sprague Correspondence School of Law. (Incorporated.) Send ten cents (stamps) for particulars to

J. COTNER, JR., SEC'Y, DETROIT, MICH.
525 Whitney Block.

PEATS THE WALL PAPER MERCHANT CHICAGO.

Retails all grades of WALL PAPER of the newest designs and latest colorings in small quantities; many patterns cheaper than your home dealer can buy them.

Good Paper, 3c. Gold Paper, 5c.

Handsome parlor paper 10—12½—15c per roll with wide border and ceiling to match.

If you intend to use any WALL PAPER whatever send 10 cents for postage on samples and his guide "HOW TO PAPER" will be sent free. Agents sample books $1.

See his samples before you buy.

ALFRED PEATS, Wall Paper Merchant, 136-138 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

ACME CORSET & DRESS PROTECTOR

A complete garment, worn under the corset or flannels, protecting the clothing from perspiration. Cheaper than dress shields 1 pair doing the work of 6. Misses', bust measure, 28-33, 80c; Ladies', bust measure 34-39, $1; Ladies', bust measure, 40-46, $1.25. M. DEWEY, Manf'r, 1397 West Monroe Street, Chicago.

AGENTS WANTED.

Send money by Post Office Order. Catalogue Free.

THE Total Abstinence Life Association OF AMERICA

PAYS ALL HONEST LOSSES PROMPTLY and in FULL.

It furnishes to Total Abstainers the Cheapest and Most Reliable Insurance to be had.

New and liberal commissions will be paid to experienced agents in Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Michigan, California, Connecticut and Iowa.

It will pay you well to write to us.

THE TOTAL ABSTINENCE LIFE ASSOCIATION of AMERICA.

902-904 Royal Insurance Building, CHICAGO, ILL.

45 sold in '88
2,288 sold in '89
6,268 sold in '90
20,049 sold in '91
60,000 will be sold in '92

A Steel Windmill and Steel Tower every 3 minutes.
☞ These figures tell the story of the ever-growing, ever-going, everlasting Steel Aermotor. Where one goes others follow, and we "take the country."
Though sold, we were unable to make all of the 20,049 Aermotors in '91. Orders often waited 8 weeks to be filled, but now we have vastly increased our plant and are prepared promptly to plant our increase in every habitable portion of the globe.

Are you curious to know how the Aermotor Co. in the 4th year of its existence, came to make many times as many windmills as all other makers combined? How we came to originate the Steel Wheel, the Steel Fixed Tower, the Steel Tilting Tower?

1st. We commenced in a field in which there had been no improvement for 25 years, and in which there seemed no talent or ambition, and none has yet been shown except in feeble imitation of our inventions.

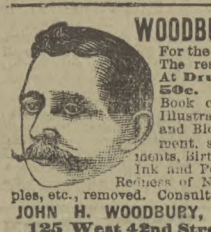
2d. Before commencing the manufacture, exhaustive scientific investigation and experiments were made by a skilled mechanical engineer, in which over 5,000 dynamometric tests were made on 61 different forms of wheels, propelled by artificial and therefore uniform wind, which settled definitely many questions relating to the proper speed of wheel, the best form, angle, curvature and amount of sail surface, the resistance of air to rotation, obstructions in the wheel, such as heavy wooden arms, obstructions before the wheel, as in the vaneless mill, and many other more abstruse, though not less important questions. These investigations proved that the power of the best wind wheels could be doubled, and the AERMOTOR daily demonstrates it has been done.

3d. To the liberal policy of the Aermotor Co., that guarantees its goods satisfactory or pays freight both ways, and to the enormous output of its factory which enables it to furnish the best article at less than the poorest is sold for. For '92 we furnish the most perfect bearings ever put in a windmill, and have made an exhaustive revision of the Aermotor and Towers.

If you want a strong, stiff, Steel Fixed Tower—or if you want the tower you don't have to climb (the Steel Tilting Tower) and the Wheel that runs when all others stand still that costs you less than wood and lasts ten times as long (The Steel Aermotor) or if you want a Geared Aermotor to churn, grind, cut feed, pump water, turn grindstone and saw wood, that does the work of 4 horses at the cost of one ($100), write for copiously illustrated printed matter, showing every conceivable phase of windmill construction and work, to the AERMOTOR CO. 12th and Rockwell Sts., Chicago, or 12 Main St., San Francisco.

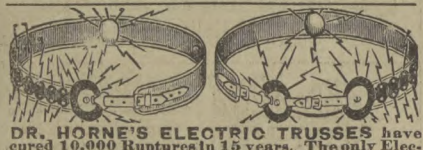
GALVANIZED It is not enough to make portions of a wheel of galvanized metal. That leaves exposed edges and is not so good as painting. The Steel Aermotor and Steel Tower are now galvanized after being completed, thus absolutely protected from rust and decay.

The Aermotor Pneumatic Water Supply System enables you to supply every part of your house with water without an Elevated Tank.

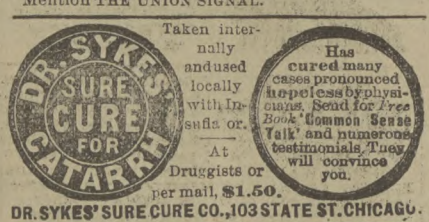


WOODBURY'S FACIAL SOAP
For the Skin, Scalp and Complexion. The result of 20 years' experience. At Druggists or sent by mail, 50c. A Sample Cake and 128 page Book on Dermatology and Beauty, Illustrated; on Skin, Scalp, Nervous and Blood Diseases and their treatment, sent sealed, Oc.; Disfigurements, Birth Marks, Moles, Warts, India Ink and Powder Marks, Scars, Pittings, Redness of Nose, Superfluous Hair, Pimples, etc., removed. Consultation free, at office or by mail.
JOHN H. WOODBURY, Dermatological Institute, 125 West 42nd Street, New York City.

BUY A SUMMER HOME ON THE SHORES OF
Imperial Lake Geneva, Wis.
We offer in parcels of 100 feet and upward BEAUTIFUL RESIDENCE SITES. All prices, all sizes and easy terms.
GRAND TERRACE ADDITION
For plats and further particulars address PRATT BROTHERS, 508 Chamber of Commerce, cor. Washington and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.



DR. HORNE'S ELECTRIC TRUSSES have cured 10,000 Ruptures in 15 years. The only Electric Truss in the world. 60-page book free.
DR. HORNE, INVENTOR, 180 WABASH AVE., CHICAGO.
Mention THE UNION SIGNAL.



Taken internally and used locally with Insufflator. At Druggists or by mail, $1.50.

Has cured many cases pronounced hopeless by physicians. Send for Free Book 'Common Sense Talk' and numerous testimonials. They will convince you.

DR. SYKES' SURE CURE CO., 103 STATE ST. CHICAGO.

DRUNKENNESS is A DISEASE, and can be Cured, by administering Dr. Haines' Golden Specific. It can be given without the knowledge of the patient, if desired, by placing it in coffee, tea or articles of food. Cures guaranteed. Send for free circulars. GOLDEN SPECIFIC Co., 185 Race St., Cincinnati, O.

F. P. VAN VALKENBURGH, Former Associate Physician and Surgeon to the Old People's Home, 3858 Indiana Avenue, Chicago, also examining Physician for the New York Life Insurance Co., Cures Drunkenness, Morphine, Opium, and destroys the desire for Tobacco. Cures guaranteed. Correspondence solicited. Reference: Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Office, 103 State-st. Chicago

PILES CURED FREE. New, Painless. Certain. Gives instant relief and lasting cure—never returns. To prove it we will send a trial package FREE, to any address. PYRAMID DRUG COMPANY, Box 35, ALBION, MICHIGAN.

BEST PAYING THING for Agents is our PHOTOGRAPH FAMILY RECORD PICTURE. We give you liberal terms. Address Dept. G. C. P. CORY & CO., 51 & 58 Jefferson St., Chicago

DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES CURED by Peck's Invisible Ear Cushions. Whispers heard. Successful when all remedies fail. Sold by F. Hiscox, 853 B'way, N.Y. Write for book of proofs FREE

PILES Remedy Free. INSTANT RELIEF. Final cure in 10 days. Never returns; no purge; no salve; no suppository. A victim tried in vain every remedy has discovered a simple cure, which he will mail free to his fellow sufferers. Address J. H. REEVES, Box 3290, New York City, N.Y.

Publisher's Notes.

Do You Want a Bible?

For yourself or any member of your family, for a friend or a member of your Sunday-school class? Then here is a

Splendid Opportunity

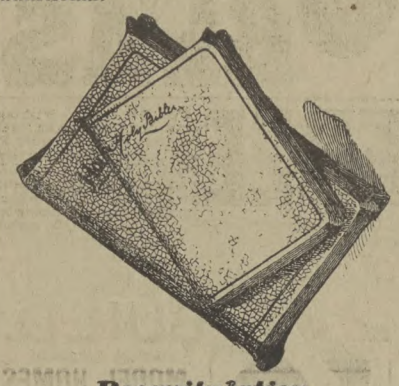
to secure one. Read carefully and see.

By special arrangements with a book dealer we are able to supply for a limited time, two fine Bibles on excellent terms, and have decided to offer them under the following conditions to our subscribers:

First, a Teacher's Bible, pearl, reference maps, concordance, and all helps usually found in a teacher's Bible, with Oxford circuit binding, and gilt edges, 11x7¼ inches from edge of flaps, reduced retail price, $1.75. We will send this Bible and THE UNION SIGNAL one year for $2.25.

Second, a Bagster Bible, minion, reference maps, and all helps usually found in a Bagster Bible except concordance, with Oxford circuit binding and gilt edges, 9x13 from edge of flaps; reduced retail price $2.75. We will send this Bible and THE UNION SIGNAL one year for $3.25.

Third. We will send with either of the above Bibles and THE UNION SIGNAL one year, "How to mark your Bible" by Mrs. S. Menzies, with introduction by D. L. Moody, cloth, price 75 cents, for 50 cents additional.



Recapitulation.

Offer 1. THE UNION SIGNAL one year, and Teacher's Bible, $2.25.

Offer 2. THE UNION SIGNAL one year, Teacher's Bible, and "How to Mark your Bible," $2.75.

Offer 3. THE UNION SIGNAL, one year, Bagster Bible, $3.25.

Offer 4. THE UNION SIGNAL one year, Bagster Bible, and "How to Read your Bible," $3.75.

Tell your friends what a splendid chance they can take advantage of, or get them to subscribe and add the amount necessary to secure these valuable books for yourself.

We said the time was limited. To take advantage of this your order must reach us by April 1.

Address

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Clearance Sale.

There are some copies of Miss Willard's annual address still in our store-room that should be doing missionary work all over the land. To make this easy we have determined to offer them as follows:

1 copy	2c
10 copies	15c
25 copies	40c
50 copies	75c
100 copies	$1 25

The supply is limited, and every copy will soon be taken at these ridiculously low figures. First come, first served. Do not delay, or you may be disappointed.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

THE Oak and Ivy Leaf for March, twelve pages, will be a special entertainment number containing plans for public entertainments, programs and suggestions for church and parlor social gatherings. A beautiful Easter Temperance Program occupies the four-paged supplement.

Temperance workers, Christian Endeavorers and King's Daughters will find unique and practical outlines for social work.

Price, per single copy ..... .10
" " dozen copies ..... .50

The Most Remarkable of New Vegetables,
BURPEE'S BUSH LIMA.
The ONLY Bush Form of the TRUE Large Lima Bean.

BURPEE'S BUSH LIMA is the most unique novelty of the age, being the first and only true bush form of the popular Large Lima Bean. The bushes grow 18 to 22 inches high, stout, always erect, yet branching so vigorously that each plant develops into a magnificent circular bush, two to three feet in diameter. An immense yielder, each bush bearing from 50 to 200 of the handsome, large pods, well filled with the large beans, identical in size and luscious flavor to the well-known Large Pole Limas. By the introduction of this most valuable novelty the largest and best Lima Beans can now be cheaply raised in quantity without the expense and labor attached to the use of poles. Price per liberal packet, 20 cents; 3 packets for 50 cents; 7 packets for $1.00; postpaid.

OVER ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS IN CASH given as PRIZES for the best bushes raised this year. A separate prize for every State. For full information, read Burpee's Farm Annual for 1892, The Best and Most Complete Seed Catalogue of the year. A handsome book of 172 pages; tells all about the Best Garden, Farm and Flower Seeds, including Rare Novelties of surpassing merit, which cannot be had elsewhere. Hundreds of truthful illustrations, and beautiful colored plates painted from nature. Price ten cents per copy, but Free to all who intend to purchase Seeds.

Please mention this paper. W. Atlee Burpee & Co. Philadelphia, Pa.

$500 FOR A PANSY BLOSSOM!
Alice Pansies Every reader of this paper should not fail to enjoy some of the this summer, which were named by Mrs. Harrison. They create a sensation everywhere and their Beauty is beyond description. Their Mammoth Size of odd colors is wonderful, and they have cost me an enormous price to secure them, but they are far ahead of all other varieties of Pansies and can be had from no other seedsman. I want to increase their size and will pay $500 in CASH to any person growing a Blossom measuring 3 in. in diameter. 2¾ in. are very common size. See catalogue. For 25c. in silver or 28c. in stamps, I will mail, carefully packed, so they will go several days, 12 plants of the "Alice Pansies" (soon be blooming), a Pearl Tube Rose Bulb and my Illustrated Catalogue. For $1.00 I will mail 50 good plants, enough for an elegant bed, 4 Tube Rose Bulbs, and Catalogue. ☞ At these prices not a reader of this paper should fail to enjoy at least a few of the finest pansies in the world, which were named "ALICE" by Mrs. Harrison. You can have the nicest pansies around, besides you may grow 3 in. blossom and get $500. Every person ordering any of the above will receive FREE a packet of Mammoth Pansio Flower Seed, Hardy Climbing Vine, perfect beauty that will flower the first year from seed and is worth $1.00. With every $1 order, I will give FREE, 6 Mammoth Verbena Plants, mixed colors, new and elegant. F. B. MILLS, Rose Hill, Onondaga Co., N.Y.
(MR. MILLS is perfectly reliable and trustworthy.—Ed.)

YPSILANTI Dress Reform UNDERWEAR
SPRING GOODS REDUCED IN PRICE.

Sanitary Balbriggan, Sanitary Lisle Thread, Sanitary MERINO, SILK and Sanitary Balbriggan, Silk and Cashmere mixed.
For SPRING and SUMMER WEAR. The ONLY Sanitary Underwear, and Endorsed by the leading medical profession.

☞ Send for new Catalogue, Samples, and revised Price List. If your dealer cannot supply them, they can be obtained of the manufacturers.

DON'T BE DECEIVED.
See that each garment is stamped with our Trade Mark—
"Ypsilanti Health Underwear."

HAY & TODD MFG. CO., Ypsilanti, Mich.

"Oh! that bothersome shave." Why torture yourself?

TORREY RAZORS will conquer the hardest beard, and make shaving A LUXURY.
STROPS are guaranteed to set a finer edge to a dull razor, or surgical instrument, than any other Strop in the world.
The Torrey Razors are forged from the finest steel. Each blade is carefully tested before it leaves the factory.
Every Razor sold under a GUARANTEE to Give Satisfaction. If not to be had of your dealer, send for Catalogue—tells how to sharpen a Razor.
J. R. TORREY RAZOR CO., P. O. Box 753 WORCESTER, MASS.

TESTED
GARDEN, FLOWER AND FARM
SEEDS
PLANTS, BULBS AND TOOLS.
Catalogues Sent Free on Application.
W. W. BARNARD & CO., Chicago, Ill.
Successors to HIRAM SIBLEY & CO.

"Why stand ye all the day idle?"
10 DOLLARS PER DAY
is not easily made in these times, but it can be made working for us in any locality. We have agents that have made more than $25 per day, the whole secret is we have something that every housekeeper wants and will buy at sight without any urging. If agents prefer will pay a straight salary of $75 per month and expenses. Full particulars sent free to all points where we have not already secured an agent. Exclusive territory given. Can refer to any express company in Boston as to our integrity. Address, (in full,)
STANDARD SILVERWARE CO.,
Order Dept. 127 Boston, Mass.

MILLER'S HOTEL New York City, 39 West 26th St. A Prohibition Home. Patronized by W. C. T. U. workers visiting New York. Turkish, Electric, Roman Baths.
Address, CHARLES H. HAYNES, Prop.

ROCK BOTTOM Prices on Dry Goods, Groceries. Everything you eat, wear or use. Send for FREE Illustrated Catalogue to J. R. EAGLE & CO., 68 Wabash Av., Chicago, Ill
We do not sell liquors in any shape.

Signal Notes.

GENERAL BOOTH of the Salvation Army says that nine-tenths of the evil that he has to fight against in the social department of his work is caused by drink.

THE Massachusetts Total Abstinence Society is corresponding with every town in the state in reference to prosecuting a vigorous no-license campaign this spring.

THE Grand Jury of Baltimore county, Maryland, has made a report on the violations of the Sunday liquor law, which are of frequent occurrence there, and the causes which lead to them.

THE Templar's Standard, South Africa, devotes nearly two pages to a graphic account of a meeting held by "two American ladies" (Mrs. Elizabeth Wheeler Andrew and Dr. Kate Bushnell), as a result of which a W. C. T. Union was formed in Johannesburg, numbering sixty members.

IN Italy, the duty on beer has been raised so high, that if maintained, the smaller breweries must be ruined. In France, the effect of the government action has been to increase the price of German beer five centimes per glass. This will force (?) the poor Frenchman to drink his native wine.

PREPARATIONS are already being made for the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the organization of the order of Sons of Temperance in September next. Past Most Worthy Patriarch, Sir Leonard Tilley, governor of New Brunswick, will deliver the anniversary address. The order is in a vigorous and prospering condition.

TEMPERANCE people have good reason for encouragement in vigorously pushing measures to close the saloons in Massachusetts. The aggregate vote on the license question at the last fall elections was 119,191 in favor to 127,123 against license, being a majority in the state for no-license of 7,932. The total vote of the Prohibition party, however, was 8,162.

ACCORDING to the Philadelphia Record, recent experiments made by the proprietors of a distillery of that city have resulted in the production of a kind of whisky which leaves no suspicion of an odor upon the breath. It is said of it that the new whisky has the same effect upon the brain and the legs as that now in use, however, and if so, it is apt to prove even more mischievous than the old-fashioned kind.

AN English woman made her thirty-ninth appearance for drunkenness before the Sheffield magistrates on New Year's Day. Asked by a magistrate whether she had not been continually getting drunk since 1879, she said, "I don't know, I don't keep any memorandum. If you don't want people to get drunk, why do you give licenses to brewers? I work hard for my money. I please myself and spend it." She was then fined £2 including costs, and being unable to pay, went to prison for a month.

THE Chicago Tribune, in reporting a Paris doctor, says:

I think more liquor is consumed in Paris than in any city in the world. Regarded as a matter of drink supply, I have no hesitancy in saying that France is a country of drunkards. I saw some statistics as I was leaving which showed that last year 6,000 people have been sent to the inebriate asylums; they had drunk themselves crazy. This is frightful. And the appalling part of it is that the majority of them were women. The proportion was three to two. Drunkenness is also increasing in Austria, in Germany and in England. Belgium is reeling from drink.

THE World's Temperance Congress, to meet in Chicago during the World's Fair, will hold a four days' session, discussing the following phases of the temperance question, one on each day respectively: 1st, Scientific and Medical; 2nd, Educational and Economical; 3rd, Legislative and Political; 4th, Religious and Miscellaneous. Specially prepared papers will be discussed, but no resolutions adopted. The following named organizations will also hold a World's Congress, one day each, during the Fair—Sons of Temperance, Good Templars, National and World's W. C. T. U., and Non-Partisan W. C. T. U. Popular meetings will be held under Archbishop Ireland's committee.

EXAMINE BFFORE YOU BUY.

WHEN in a grocer's store you stand
And cakes of IVORY SOAP demand,
Be careful not to be misled
And imitations take instead.
For dealers oft will praises sing
Of that which may more profit bring.
Let not your senses clouded be Because a snowy cake you see
For villainy is not confined
To darkest colors, bear in mind,
And oft the sham is not remote
From fairest face or whitest coat.
Examine well with careful eye
The cake until the name you spy,
And always thus be well assured
That IVORY SOAP you have procured;
And should a lingering doubt remain,
'Twill vanish like the darkest stain,
When in the tub on washing day
That cake of soap is brought in play.

COPYRIGHT 1891, BY THE PROCTER & GAMBLE CO.

FOR THE
NATIONAL W. C. T. U.
$150,000 OF THE ISSUE OF $300,000
10 YR. 6 PER CENT.

INTEREST PAID TWICE A YEAR, JANUARY 1st AND JULY 1st.

BONDS PAYABLE TO BEARER, Therefore ARE TRANSFERABLE.

TEMPLE TRUST BONDS

AUTHORIZED BY THE
Woman's Temperance Building Association.

I am now ready to fill MARCH ORDERS for these most desirable and popular BONDS. Denominations $100 and $500.

DATE, JULY 1, 1891 DUE, JULY 1, 1901.

HOW TO ORDER.

Each $500 bond at par and interest to March 1, 1892, is worth $505; add to this 8 1-3 cents interest for each day in March to date of your remittance.

Each $100 bond at par and interest to March 1, 1892, is worth $101; add to this 1 2-3 cents for each day of March to date of your remittance.

Remit by New York or Chicago bank draft, and the bonds will be sent promptly, prepaid.

Address all orders and inquiries for further information to

H. C. SPEER, BANKER,
237 LA SALLE ST., - - - CHICAGO, ILL.

FREE Excursions TO CHICAGO

Over all Railroads for the next 30 days, from February 25th. this paper a chance to see the wonderful temperance town of HARVEY. you can form but a small World's Fair Buildings, lars being invested in prises at Harvey. There tual railroad fare to Chica- amount of not exceeding 2½% of the amount of lots you purchase of us while here. culars free to all.

HARVEY

The object of this is to give all readers of From your homes idea of Chicago, the and the millions of dol- manufacturing enter- we offer to pay your ac- go and return to the Illustrated Plats and Cir-

WALTER THOMAS MILLS & CO., 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

The Double V Waist

A Very Satisfactory Garment.

WHY? Because it Supports Stockings and Underclothes from the SHOULDERS and has no stiff cords; fits with perfect ease and freedom. Elegant, and strictly hygienic Sold by leading dealers.

LADY CANVASSERS WANTED.
Send for Illustrated Price List.
THE FOY, HARMON & CHADWICK CO., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"BEAUTY" ACCOMMODATION WAIST No. 7, WITH TAMPICO DRESS FORM.

Made of finest Sateen. Soft Sateen bust and pockets for Tampico Dress forms. Removable Steels, Adjustable Shoulder Straps. Lace Back, Button Front, curved to figure at back.

PERFECT FORM, EASE AND SUPPORT.

Sizes 18 to 30 in. in White and Black. Sent free by mail, for $1.50. Little Beauty Waists for children, the best. Catalogue free

E. H. HORWOOD & CO.,
51 Mercer St., - New York.

Send to 339 W. 46th St., N.Y., for Samples of GARFIELD TEA Overcomes results of bad eating; cures Sick Headache; restores Complexion; cures Constipation.

Rheumatism Cured
by ABBOTT BROS. CURE.

Fireman H. L. Strenning, 438 W. 12th St., Chicago, Ill., writes: "For two years I suffered terribly with muscular rheumatism. Words can not describe what I have suffered. I could not get one good night's rest. Physicians and all kinds of remedies, except ABBOTT BROS. CURE, did me no good. After using ABBOTT BROS. CURE only a few days my pain was all gone. Three bottles cured me; that was two years ago, I have been well ever since."

$1.25 per bottle. All Druggists and ABBOTT BROS., 290 S. Franklin St., Chicago. Book Free.

MY WIFE SAYS SHE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT FOR THE MONEY.

$12 Buys a $65.00 Improved Oxford Singer Sewing Machine; perfect working reliable, finely finished, adapted to light and heavy work, with a complete set of the latest improved attachments free. Each machine guaranteed for 5 years. Buy direct from our factory, and save dealers and agents profit. Send for FREE CATALOGUE.

OXFORD MFG. COMPANY, DEP'T 20, CHICAGO, ILL.

ALUMINUM SOUVENIR

Charm (dime size) with the Lord's Prayer coined in smallest characters, and strung on blue silk ribbon, sent free to any one sending 10 cents for sample copy of The FREE St. Louis Magazine. Aluminum is the wonderful new metal, bright as silver, light as wood, strong as steel, will not tarnish.

St. Louis Magazine, 901 Olive St., St. Louis, Mo.

LADIES Send to the Stevens' Dish Washing Machine Co., Cleveland, for descriptive circulars of this wonderful invention. No dish or wiping cloth used; truly a great blessing to the household. Agents wanted.

LADY Agents make big wages every day With our Ladies' and Children's Specialties. Over 100 different articles. Indispensable. Catalogue Free. G. L. ERWIN & CO., Chicago, Ill.

LADIES Send only five cents and receive a Large, Elegant Fashion Catalogue and how to secure 50c. worth of dress patterns, FREE Add. Young Lady's Bazar. 230 La Salle St. Chicago.

A LADY WANTED in each locality to manage Toilet Parlor at home; write, obtain names, send circulars. $5 to $15 weekly. Our Toilet Art Book Free. Send stamp. SYLVAN TOILET CO., Port Huron, Mich.

LADY wanted, on salary, to sell Roses, Shrubs, &c Brown Bros. Nurymn, Rochester, N.Y. & Chicago

HOUSEHOLD NECESSITY. Agents make big profits. Catalogue (A) and particulars free. Cline Mfg. Co., 67 W. Washington St., Chicago.

LADY AGENTS CLEAR $10 PER DAY selling my garments for ladies & children Mrs. L. E. SINGLETON, Box 665, Chicago, Ill.

LADY Agents $5 a day sure; new rubber undergarment. Mrs. N. B. LITTLE, Chicago, Ill.

THE UNION SIGNAL

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION — FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Vol. XVIII.—No. 10.] CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, March 10, 1892. [Price $1.00 per Year in Advance.

Mrs
Ursula D Hettick
2419 19th st

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

The price of salt has dropped forty per cent.

Milwaukee gambling houses have been closed by the authorities.

There are employed in the city schools of Chicago 3,008 women and 92 men.

Congressman Springer, of Illinois, is dangerously ill at his home in Washington.

The 114th anniversary of Ireland's patriot, Robert Emmet, occurred last Friday.

Seven of the World's Fair buildings are already enclosed and the woman's building is almost completed.

Dr. Noah Porter, the venerable ex-president of Yale College, died at his home in New Haven, Conn.. March 4.

The Chicago High School teachers recommend elementary instruction in natural science in the primary and grammar grades.

The Methodist Episcopal Conference of Kansas, by a ballot of 85 to 25 decided in favor of admitting women as delegates to the General Conference.

Three hundred of the partisans of M. Delyannis, the late Greek Prime Minister, who was removed from office by the King, have been placed under arrest.

Developments in Iowa are being watched with especial interest by white-ribboners. At latest accounts Republicans had introduced license bills in both branches of the legislature.

The Nebraska prohibition convention in session at Lincoln on Friday last, adopted a platform in favor of government ownership of railways, telephone and telegraph lines, and woman suffrage.

M. Loubet, the new prime minister of France, appeared at the opening session of the Chamber of Deputies last Thursday, with the other members of the new cabinet, and announced his ministerial policy.

Mrs. Spurgeon has sent the following message to those who have offered their condolences on her husband's death: "All that was choice, generous, and Christ-like seemed to be gathered together in him and to be lived out in his life. The Lord granted us both three months of earthly happiness in Mentone before taking him away."

The memorial ordered by the National W. C. T. U. last November at its Convention in Boston, requesting Congress to pass the bill favorably reported last year, providing for a commission of inquiry on the alcoholic liquor traffic and that women be appointed on that committee; also the memorial to pass the bill asking for a commission composed of men and women to investigate the causes and consequences of the social vice, was presented in the Senate last week by Hon. O. H. Platt, of Connecticut, and in the House by Hon. E. H. Funston, of Kansas.

A WOMAN in New York City recently said she had changed her church membership because they served so much better wine at the one to which she was now going!

NEWS from England tells us there will undoubtedly be a debate this session on the question of extending the Parliamentary franchise to women. Sir Albert Rollit has obtained the first place on April 27, for his bill extending the franchise to women, and Mr. Walter Maclaren has secured the same place on May 10, for a bill on the same subject.

THE statement made in the President's annual address in Boston concerning Governor Knapp, of Alaska, is declared on good authority to be unjust, as he is a total abstainer. We are glad to make this retraction and sorry that we cannot also correct the statement that in a territory under prohibition by United States authority, the governor has put his name to licenses.

WE should congratulate ourselves and white-ribboners that with few exceptions all the great army of foreign missionaries are total abstainers and temperance advocates, who are telling our bronze-faced brethren the world around that true Christianity sends no rum up the Congo, and no drunken sailors to the ports of China and Japan.

THROUGH a misapprehension the press has stated that certain local W. C. T. U's had expressed themselves favorably toward our honored friend, Mr. Demorest, as a candidate on the Prohibition ticket. THE UNION SIGNAL wishes to state hereby that the white-ribboners are not in the presidential candidate business so far as heard from up to date—except in a Pickwickian sense.

A FORM to be filled out as a letter of introduction between the members of local unions has been prepared by the National corresponding secretary, and can be had by writing Mrs. Caroline B. Buell, Evanston, Ill. This is most desirable, and we hope that local unions everywhere will keep this letter in stock and give out a copy to every member who goes as a stranger to a strange city or land.

HENRY W BLAIR of New Hampshire, avows himself a candidate for President. We do not know a statesman more thoroughly committed to the people's good. But ex-Senator Blair is so much better than his party, as to have been thoroughly disowned by its press and politicians. Our candidate, Mary A. Livermore, stands a better chance to-day for nomination by her party than H. W. Blair by his. We wish it were otherwise, but "facts are facts."

ATTENTION was recently called in our Official Communications to the World's prayer week for the Sabbath cause and specifically for Sunday closing of the exposition, and we believe our unions will respond heartily. Mrs. Bateham in a recent letter asks that we specially set apart one day in that week and request every white-ribboner to observe it with earnest and united prayer. She says "if the outlook is dark, the uplook is bright." Being fully impressed with the peril and the need of prayer as well as effort, we cordially agree, and hereby designate the 3d of April as the day wherein all white-ribboners are requested to unite their prayers that God will incline the commissioners to decide that the gates shall be wholly closed upon the Sabbath, and that no intoxicants shall be sold.

LET be clearly understood that no action had by any one, in any wise involves the W. C. T. U. or the Prohibition party. Several of our most devoted leaders have sought to know if it were possible to bring about a closer sympathy between the two great camps of earnest reformers whose united forces would, it is believed, do more to help the people to better conditions of life and development, than can ever be done by either of the old parties. They acted strictly "on their own motion" and have helped to a better understanding, without implicating any organization whatever. The old parties, hating each other on principle, are still united in an even greater antipathy to the Prohibition and the People's parties, because they know that if a juncture were effected between the two great armies now moving forward toward a common point, namely: the disruption of the old and the triumph of the new, such a result would, more than anything else, damage the prospects of the old. For this reason the Republican and Democratic press is belching forth thunders against the patriotic action of prohibition and reform leaders, but the motives that actuate the old parties and the reform leaders may be summed up in the following aphorism: Politicians want the people to do something for them; patriots want to do something for the people.

A VOLUME is now on our press that will be of unique interest to all readers of THE UNION SIGNAL. Since the passing from this world of Julia Ames, her friend, Miss Hood, has been indefatigable in her efforts to gather material for the promised book about her. This has been edited by Lady Henry Somerset and the World's W. C. T. U. President and will bear the title "A Young Woman Journalist." It is meant to be a volume practically helpful to the class described and to bright girls who have gifts and purposes in the same line. The book will be finely illustrated and daintily bound. We recommend it as a birthday gift to daughters in our white ribbon homes.

MISS BALGARNIE'S excellent letter in last week's issue on the Woman's Prison at Indianapolis derives fresh interest from the fact that on March 1 the institution was burned to the ground. When the fire was discovered, Miss Kelly, the superintendent, ordered the inmates of the reform department to go into the yard. They were taken back when the fire was supposed to be under control. Upon the discovery that the flames had communicated to the stairway and up to the roof the girls were once more ordered to the yard and were guarded by a half dozen attendants. In this part of the institution there were 157 inmates. From those confined in the prison department the most trouble was anticipated. Miss Kelly went into the hallway and in a loud tone called the attention of the prisoners to the fact that the building was on fire. "I am going to unlock these cells, but I want you to promise me that you will stand by me, and not one attempt to escape," she said. The women with one voice promised this and the doors were opened. No one tried to escape. The fifty-three prisoners hastily followed Miss Kelly through the hallways and to the grounds, where they were placed in charge of the attendants. Of the inmates of this department there are eight who have been sentenced for life and a half dozen or more for long terms. Others were in on minor charges of grand and petit larceny and several for abduction. So far as known none of the prisoners made any attempt to escape. The loss will exceed $300,000, with an insurance of but $51,000.

AT THE National Convention in Boston, last fall, a generous collection was taken up for the benefit of the starving Russians. The National W. C. T. U. rounded up the donation to $200, and sent it immediately to Countess Tolstoi, who responds in the following letter lately received at Headquarters:

Moscow, Jan. 26, 1892.

DEAR MISS PUGH:—I have received your contribution for the sufferers from famine of our country and heartily thank the kind souls which have taken part in the collection.

My father and all our family are especially touched by offerings from strange lands. It is a new token of the universal brotherhood which is not violated by the difference of government and nationality.

My father and I are at present for a short visit in Moscow, and are going back to the government of Riazau, where we have organized seventy free eating-houses, in each of which about fifty people have their meals twice a day. With God's help and with the help of good people we hope to increase the number of those eating-houses. The distress is severe every day, and I cannot imagine what it will be in the spring and next year, when the greater part of the cattle will be eaten, and dead from hunger.

If you happen to hear of new collections for our famine-stricken peasantry which are appointed to be sent to our family, will you please give my mother's address in Moscow, Hamovniky 15, Countess Sophia Tolstoi? She will send the money to us, or to my brother, who is now working at the same aim in the government of Samara.

TITIANA TOLSTOI.

Contributed.

THE TWO MYSTERIES.

BY MARY MAPES DODGE.

We know not what it is, dear, this sleep so deep and still;
The folded hands, the awful calm, the cheek so pale and chill;
The lids that will not lift again, though we may call and call;
The strange, white solitude of peace that settles over all.

We know not what it means, dear, this desolate heart-pain;
This dread to take our daily way and walk in it again;
We know not to what other sphere the loved who leave us go,
Nor why we're left to wonder still, nor why we do not know.

But this we know: Our loved and dead, if they should come this day—
Should come and ask us, "What is life?" not one of us could say.
Life is a mystery as deep as ever death can be;
Yet oh, how dear it is to us—this life we live and see!

Then might they say—these vanished ones—and blessed is the thought,
"So death is sweet to us, beloved! though we may show you naught;
We may not to the quick reveal the mystery of death—
Ye cannot tell us, if ye would, the mystery of breath."

The child who enters life comes not with knowledge or intent,
So those who enter death must go as little children sent.
Nothing is known. But I believe that God is overhead;
And as life is to the living, so death is to the dead.

[This exquisite poem is said to have been founded upon the following incident in the home of Walt Whitman's sister in Camden, N. J. The poet was seated with little children around him as they are so apt to be; on the center table stood a small white casket bearing the remains of the poet's little nephew who had been a playmate of the children. They had never seen death and were full of unuttered, wonderful questionings. Walt Whitman said to them in his deep, tender voice, "You don't know what it is, do you, my dears? We don't either."]

RECOLLECTIONS OF NOTED MEN AND WOMEN.

V.

BY LADY HENRY SOMERSET.

Mrs. Hannah Whitall Smith.

"Have you ever read the Christian's Secret of a Happy Life?" was a question put to me some years ago, and the voice of the interrogator seemed to imply that if I had not, I was as ignorant of the classics of religious thought as though I had confessed that I was a stranger to Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress. I was, however, bound to admit that I had never heard of the book or its author, but during the course of the conversation that followed I determined to know both as soon as possible.

It seems almost unnecessary to give a sketch in these columns of a woman so well known and so dear to the hearts of many of its readers as Mrs. Hannah Whitall Smith. We come to our impressions, however, by various routes in the circuitous journey of life. We may meet at the same point, but to some the way thither has been all bright and flowery; to others it has meant a lonesome ascent, and our final impression is moulded more than we know by the varieties of the road along which we have traveled.

I first met Mrs. Hannah Whitall Smith in the winter of 1889, in London. I had begged my sister, the Duchess of Bedford, who knew and admired her, to write and say how much I longed to meet her, and to ask her to appoint an hour to call at my hotel and try to arrange to give some Bible readings in my country home. The evening had set in after a long day's work, and I was told a lady desired to speak to me in the public parlor.

In the jar and fret of life there are moments when we have gone out into the quiet country and stood leaning over a gate perhaps, looking at a scene as familiar as the sight of sun or sky; our soul has been wont to see but little in that landscape, but on that day the furrowed fields are speaking the hope of harvest; the fluttering birds light on the earth for a moment, in order to soar again the higher into the clear air; the brown woods stand out in strong relief, each bough delineated with the perfect outline of Nature's delicate tracery against the pale blue sky, and a sense of harmony is breathed into our inmost being that sends us back rested and hopeful to the turmoil of our daily cares. It was an impression such as this that came to me when first I saw the face of the woman I had so wished to meet; calm and restful, she looked as though life's sorrows had but touched the surface of her nature, because her spirit dwelt in the fathomless depths of the peace that passeth understanding. They tell us that in the deep of the great ocean the storms are never felt; that when the waves rise mountain high and the white foam clouds and lashes the air, the delicate shells and dainty seaweed rest in still, unruffled water. The grand face, fine features, large blue eyes and clear-cut outline framed in the round Quaker bonnet, the tall, strong figure, all betokened that rarest combination—the gentleness of strength. Her genial welcome gave me at once an insight into the kindly, great heart which is essentially the characteristic of the woman. She gives the sense of tenderest protection, as though her very presence stood between one and all evil. We sat and talked as though we had been familiar friends for years—so wonderful is the touch of sympathy our common cause evokes—the great freemasonry of the lovers of humanity.

After an hour's conversation I told her I must take the train to go to a meeting in the east end of London, where I expected to be on the platform with John Burns and other labor reformers on behalf of Women's Temperance Unions. She expressed a wish to go with me, and thus we took the first of many expeditions of a like character.

The first Bible reading I ever heard given by this famous woman is yet vivid. There is a calm conviction in her utterance, a rugged strength in her presentations, that seem to sweeps away preconceived conventionalities and reduce the ethics of religion to very simple proportions. She takes for her illustrations simple, homely images and everyday occurrences. She discards all vexed questions of theology, all dark uncertainties, and seems to revel in the great "I know whom I have believed," the deep personal experience of all that God's love has brought to her, and the tender assurance of His love to all the world. The words from which she spoke were these:

Hannah Whitall Smith

"'The Lord is my rock, and my fortress, and my deliverer, my God, my strength, in whom I will trust; my buckler, and the horn of my salvation, and my high tower.'

"A fortress is a place of safety. It is a refuge from the enemy, where everything that is weak and helpless can be hidden and kept in security. When we are told then that God is our fortress, it can mean nothing else but this, that we are perfectly safe and secure in His care from every assault of every possible enemy that can ever attack us.

"What we need in reading the Bible is to see that it actually does mean what it says, and that when it is declared of the Lord that He is our 'fortress,' it means a real fortress where one is as safe as the fortress is strong. The ninety-first Psalm, which I call the Bible Fortress, shows us the sort of fortress God is.

"'He that dwelleth in the secret place of the most High shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty.

"'He shall cover thee with his feathers, and under his wings shalt thou trust; his truth shall be thy shield and buckler.'

"Notice here first of all what a loving and tender 'fortress' the Lord is. We always associate with a fortress the idea of a rough, hard granite building, whose safety is devoid of all comfort. But nature has many fortresses that are full of comfort. 'He shall cover thee with His feathers,' just as the mother hen covers her little helpless brood in the fortress of her warm and brooding wings. The fortress of a mother-heart, whether it be of a human mother, or a hen mother, or a tiger mother, is the most impregnable fortress the world knows, and yet the most tender. And it is this sort of a fortress that the Psalmist tells us the Lord is. 'Under His wings shalt thou trust.' 'He shall carry them in His bosom.' 'Underneath are the everlasting arms.'"

The impression left upon my mind at that time has been confirmed by intimate acquaintance. I have often asked myself the secret of her power, and the solution seems to be that she has, more than any other that I ever met, an abiding concept of the divine fatherhood and motherhood of God, the perfect blending of tenderness and strength, and an implicit and unshaken belief, in the midst of circumstances that might have undermined many a strong foundation, of the fact so wonderfully expressed by Robert Browning in his "Pippa Passes," "God's in his heavens, all's right with the world." Many a time when we have been discussing the intricate problems of our day, the abysses of heartrending poverty, over which tower so complacently the heights of luxury and idle wealth, the depths of ignorance and sin which our modern Christianity seems so powerless to alleviate, she has said with her beaming smile, "Well, there is one comfort in all, and through all—God is."

One Sunday evening while going through the worst slums of London, we watched with aching hearts women come out of the saloons with their bottles or their jugs and sit upon their doorsteps to drink, during the hours of divine service, when those charnel houses of sin are closed by law for an hour; turning to me she said as we looked on the wretched squalor and misery of the scene, "Is it not beautiful to believe that God loves them more than we do and will help us all He can to save them from themselves?" Her heart is ever filled with this message, and I have seen the tall, strong form standing on a chair in one of our public thoroughfares and heard her speak to the rough crowds that gathered round her, with all of the love of a mother for her children. In homely, straightforward words she told the story of the great Father's love, until the tears welled up in eyes all unused to such emotion, and many paused on their way, listening at first half deprecatingly and then yielding to the gentle influence,—while thoughts of far-away homes and mother voices long since silent seemed to take possession of their hearts and hold them spell-bound.

Mrs. Smith speaks with equal ease to a dozen friends gathered in a homely parlor, or to immense audiences such as those she addressed in 1875, when no hall was large enough to accommodate the crowds anxious to hear the secret of that joy "no man taketh from us." The perfect simplicity which is her chief characteristic makes all nervous self-consciousness impossible. "I give God's message," she says, "and I tell all I know of Him," and the freshness and originality with which she propounds the deepest thoughts, have produced a powerful impression on the religious thought of both continents. There is a breezy atmosphere surrounding her that has given moral ozone, not only to her words but to her writings. At every meeting we have attended together, there have been many who have come to the platform at the close, and holding out their hands have said, "Mrs. Smith, let me clasp yours a moment,—my whole life changed when I read your book; I learned God's love; life seemed to me so hard and dark, but you showed me how plain was the path." Such expressions come from the lips of all sorts and conditions of men and women. I have heard them alike from the weary, working woman who looked as if the cares of a hard lot had made life a dreary, dead level, save for the bright horizon to which she had learned to turn; the popular minister who had for years led others along the way he had found through the influence of her simple homely words; and the refined, cultivated, fastidious woman who, having laid her best treasure in the arms of the silent angel, knew no rest until she had the strong sheet-anchor that has held so many souls from shipwreck in the stormy seas of bitter sorrow, and the secret of hope was made plain once more. The thoughts contained in her little volume are not new; they are to be found in the writings of the mystics and the divines of our own time, but they are told as if by the fireside of every-day life, and the greatest truths appeal to us as something not beyond our comprehension, not too high for our capacity, while above and around and through it all is interwoven the central thought, as simple as the first prayer we ever breathed at our mother's knee—God loves us and can make us and keep us good.

Hannah Whitall Smith was the daughter of a well-known merchant in Philadelphia. Her free and joyous nature seems never to have lost the simple confidence that early happiness brings into life. "Whatever has come to me in after years," she often says, "my childhood was unclouded; it is the best heritage parents can give their children." She has certainly exemplified her belief in this training, for her whole life has been devoted to pouring out its best treasures to enrich her sons and daughters. In the beautiful biography written by Miss Willard in 'Woman and Temperance," she gives a characteristic touch when she relates how one day Mrs. Smith went to her eldest daughter and said, "I want thee to read this tract of mine and tell me what thee thinks." Whereupon the girl answered, "Oh, mother, I don't need to read thy tracts to know that they are good. Thee lives them."

One sunshiny September day I had persuaded Mrs. Smith to speak to the hop-pickers on a neighboring farm. As she stood in their midst I noticed that her son, who was then an Oxford undergraduate, and her youngest daughter, who had taken her degree in Bryn Mawr College, had followed us, and were listening in the doorway of the barn. "We came," they afterwards remarked, "because we would sooner hear mother preach than any other sermon."

In 1874, when Mrs. Smith was on a visit to England holding remarkable religious meetings, she first met Lord and Lady Mount Temple, an acquaintance which afterwards ripened into devoted friendship. It was at Mrs. Smith's suggestion that a series of conferences were held at Broadlands, the beautiful country home which Lord Mount Temple had inherited from his stepfather, Lord Palmerston. These gatherings brought to the church militant a foretaste of the church triumphant. Men and women of all shades of opinion met under the quiet beech groves to find that they were one in the essentials of the Christian faith, that prejudices of long years were laid low, and many weary workers rejoiced in the tender welcome of their most truly noble hosts. Hannah Smith was one of the most prominent leaders at these gatherings. When she spoke, one who was a constant guest at Broadlands, writes: "Her set face gained a soft, Madonna-like beauty, and her tones were of an urgent but restrained sweetness; the listeners felt that they were entering together into new and undreamed-of happiness, and a really heavenly love and comradeship was manifested by all who were there." Year after year these conferences continued until the gracious spirit who convened them passed from the communion of saints on earth to fellowship with the souls of just men made perfect. Since the death of Lord Mount Temple, Mrs. Smith has been the greatest solace to the beautiful and gifted woman who shared his earthly life.

For some years Mr. and Mrs. Smith have now made their home in England, where her cosmopolitan nature has thrown itself into all the interests, political and social, of the old country. Her quick intelligence grasped the practical side of our special difficulties and has made her an invaluable helper in all philanthropic work: as a member of the executive committee of the British Women's Temperance Association she has done splendid service, her experience and strong judgment being a real support to a movement which took its impetus from the white-ribbon crusade in America, with which she has been connected from the beginning. As she steadily refused official position in the executive committee of the World's W. C. T U., she was elected a member by the unanimous wish of the officers.

In October, 1891, Mrs. Smith accompanied me on my first visit to America. I owe this noble woman many a debt of gratitude but I shall find none more difficult to repay than the fact that through her influence has come to me the inspiration I have gained from my personal knowledge of the white ribbon army and its splendid leaders.

She has long been an intimate and valued friend of the President of the W. C. T. U. and the strong tie of sympathy and affection which now exists between myself and that grand woman was bound by the loving hands of our great-hearted, mutual friend.

There are few in this world to whom we turn instinctively for help, but Hannah Smith is the rare exception. Her presence seems like the shelter of a mother bird's protecting wing, a spirit ever ready to be small that others may be great, ever ready to take the "lowest place" that others may "go up higher."

AFTER THE MAINE LAW.

II.

BY NEAL DOW.

When getting up petitions to the legislature for an act of prohibition I went into the counting house of Israel Richardson and asked his signature to be placed at the head of the one I had in hand. Mr. Richardson was one of the most prominent merchants in town; we had no citizen more respected than he. He hesitated for some time, then said:

"I am in entire sympathy with all your temperance work and wish it all possible success, but I do not think the measure you propose by this petition will help it. I do not think temperance work can be promoted in any way by law; it must be by appeals to men's understandings, consciences and hearts. Liquors have always been sold for centuries in every civilized country, with never even a thought of suppressing the trade by law; but a great many liquor sellers have been induced to abandon the trade by appeals to their conscience. I think that is the best way; indeed, the only way in which the liquor traffic can be suppressed."

I made no reply, but waited patiently for a moment or two, when he said: "I do not like to refuse my name, because it might be thought that I do not sympathize with your work; to avoid that I will sign your petition, though I do not think any good can come from it;" and he wrote "Israel Richardson," and I had at the head of my petition a name than which there was not one more influential in Portland.

About three or four months after the enactment of the Maine law I met Mr. Richardson in the street; he said: "I have been wishing to see you for some time that I might confess to you my mistake in supposing that no good results to the temperance cause could come from appealing to law in its behalf. Portland is already almost entirely changed; I see it everywhere as I pass through the streets. As I go to my counting house I pass through Fore street, formerly lined with grog-shops and noisy fighting men from end to end. Now those shops are all closed, and the street is as quiet as any other in town. Formerly no decent person would like to pass through it at night, but now it would be perfectly safe for any lady to do so. Passing through any of our streets now, no indication of a grog-shop is anywhere to be met. I see legitimate branches of business now occupying the shops which had formerly only bottles and jugs in the windows, and noisy, half-drunken men within. Just now, in coming down Exchange street I saw that a watchmaker and jeweler's shop and a clothier's shop were in the notorious rumshops of Davis & Kingsbury, so well known all over town.

"I see by the papers also that our jail, which has been badly overcrowded for years, is now nearly empty having but five inmates, three of whom are rumsellers. Our workhouse was also overcrowded, and the city was talking of enlarging it, but now the papers say it is sufficient for a city four times larger than ours. The House of Correction, the papers say, is entirely empty, while it was generally crowded. The papers also say that the jails in Penobscot, Kennebec, Franklin, Oxford and York counties are entirely empty, a thing that never happened before. I am very glad that the result of the prohibitory law has been so different from what I expected, and I am more glad than I can tell you that I was entirely mistaken in all my views of the only way in which the liquor traffic could be suppressed. I see now that in my way that could never be done, while in this way, with a law properly framed and honestly enforced, it can be speedily and thoroughly accomplished."

The law was well enforced generally throughout the state and was a terror to the entire body of the fraternity whose evil practices it was intended to suppress. A steamer from Boston, a regular coast packet, brought to Bangor five barrels of rum. They were seized by the city marshal and put on shore. While the marshal was away to find a team, the captain put them again on board, slipped his fasts and went off. The marshal telegraphed to the city marshal of Rockland, where the steamer was to call. When made fast to the wharf there, the marshal stepped on board and took possession of the barrels. The captain instantly slipped his cables and put off to sea taking the marshal with him. The marshal said to him: "Captain, is it good policy for you to do this? When you arrive here next trip your steamer will be seized and libeled; you will be arrested for resisting an officer in the discharge of his duty, and for forcibly taking property away from an officer who had seized it by order of court as contraband of law, and you will be put in jail in default of bail, and the season's business of your steamer will be broken up. Consider whether it is wise for you to incur all this unpleasantness and these risks in order to save a few barrels of rum in which you have no concern, and no interest except to deliver them at their address." The captain turned his boat about and returned to the wharf where his men put the rum on shore.

Throughout the state the law was enforced in this prompt and practical way. A police force was always at the wharves in Portland and at the railway stations on the arrival of steamers and trains, and liquors found there were always seized. The first seizure of this kind was at Portland, where a large quantity of liquors was taken, some of it directed to Portland and some of it to other towns all up and down the railroads. The steamboat men were in a panic, supposing they would be held responsible for the safe delivery of the goods (or bads) to their address. A body of them, including the owners of the line of steamers, in great tribulation called upon the mayor to beg that the liquors be restored to them, else they would be compelled to pay a large sum. They could be seized again, they said, when in the hands of the parties. The mayor allayed their fears by assuring them that they had no responsibility in the matter. The liquors had been delivered in Portland by them according to contract, and had then been taken from their possession by officers of the law, under order of a court of competent jurisdiction whose warrant the steamboat people could not resist. The mayor said, "Lay your case before General Fessenden (the head of the Cumberland bar) and ask his opinion." This they did, and their anxiety was entirely relieved as to any pecuniary responsibility on their part.

But liquors continued to arrive at Portland and other Maine towns by sea and by land, though very little was now seen without disguise. It was generally in kegs of ten or twenty gallons, inclosed in flour or sugar barrels packed in with sawdust, salt, sugar, beans, peas, oysters in the shell; sometimes it was in boxes marked "dry goods, keep dry;" sometimes marked, "glass, this side up with care;" and once an attempt was made to smuggle it in a coffin as if it were a body on its way to interment at its native town. I have seen it in all these disguises; once a full barrel of rum enclosed in a large sugar hogshead packed in tightly with sugar. It came sometimes in trunks as if it was the baggage of some traveler. The police became very expert in detecting the liquor under all these disguises.

The men who sold it in the towns had sly places constructed on their premises in which to conceal it from the vigilance of the officers; often it was carried in their pockets in small bottles. Once I saw it in a thin hollow vessel of tin made to fit the person and worn under the vest; it had two apartments, one for a quart of rum, the other for a quart of whisky. It was hidden in the ash-pit of the cook-stove, concealed in the earthen floor of the cellar. In a hundred ways the rumsellers sought to carry on their business in spite of the vigilance of the officers in hunting them down as ferriers hunt rats; but sooner or later they were brought to grief.

In 1884, after an experience of the benefits of prohibition of more than thirty years, our people put it into our constitution by a majority of 47,075, the affirmative vote being three times larger than the negative; and the policy of prohibition is now more deeply rooted than ever before in the hearts and consciences of our people.

John Bright said: "If intemperance could be put away from England, the country could no longer be recognized as the same." Precisely that has happened to Maine. Some years ago on a train to the West, a stranger took the seat at my side; he knew me and immediately began to talk. He said:

"I am from Wisconsin, where I have lived for twenty years, and am on my way home. I am a Maine man, having now been back there for the first time since I left twenty years ago. I did not know Maine, could not recognize it as the same country I left a few years since. The shabby, dilapidated houses, barns, school-houses, town houses, churches are all gone and new ones occupy their places, or the old ones have been repaired so as to be no longer recognized as the same. The farms are all in good order, and well kept; the fences are in good condition, and everything I saw in the state indicates industry and thrift. When I left Maine twenty years ago the rumshops were at every crossroads and scattered about everywhere, the farmers and their sons spending their time and money in them drinking New England rum and cider-flip, settling their shop accounts by mortgages on their farms. Now there is nothing of that; I did not see a rumshop during all my visit, nor a man whose appearance indicated the drink-habit. Throughout all the rural districts of Maine, being more than three-fourths of its territory, containing more than three-fourths of its population, an entire generation has grown up never having seen a rumshop nor the evil results of one.

"In the old rum-time throughout the farming districts, dilapidated houses, barns and all out-buildings and fences were so common as almost to be the rule; now nothing whatever is seen of that, but on the contrary everything is in good condition, clearly indicating a better way of living among the people. The houses are now so generally painted as to be the rule; the barns are now large and good, many of them painted. In the old time it was very common to see old hats and rags in the windows instead of glass; clapboards hanging by one end; shingles off the roof; doors hanging by one hinge and the door-yards covered with rubbish so as almost to blockade the doors. All that and more of the same sort was so common in the old time as to attract but little notice except from strangers. Now, there is nothing of that to be seen; it is all gone with the grogshops, never, I hope, to return."

The reason for this wonderful improvement in the condition of Maine as the result of prohibition is easy to be seen. The drink bill of the nation is now about twelve hundred million dollars annually; Maine's share of that in proportion to population, would be about seventeen million dollars, but one million dollars is a far larger sum than the cost of all the liquor smuggled into the state and sold in violation of law. The indirect cost to the nation of the liquor traffic is not less than ten hundred million dollars; Maine's share of that would be about fourteen million dollars, making about thirty-one million dollars in all as Maine's share of the direct and indirect cost of the annual national drink bill. But of that enormous sum the actual cost to Maine is not more than one and one-half million dollars, instead of its full share, thirty-one million. Even if the annual savings were but half this sum it would be sufficient to account for the marvelous improvement in the condition of the state as the result of prohibition. Before the Maine law Maine was the poorest state in the Union; now it is one of the most prosperous. Mr. Blaine, in a great political meeting in City Hall, Portland, in the Garfield campaign said: "Maine is now the most prosperous state in the Union."

RAILROAD TIES.

V.

BY JOHN G. WOOLLEY.

I have been praying that the National W. C. T. U. might take on an ultra-evangelistic habit and when I met your newest National worker, Mrs. Mary McGee Snell of Columbus, Miss., I knew it had. She is a whole revival herself—a Presbyterian revival with Methodist symptoms—preacher, exhorter, witness-seeker and "after-meeting." She is the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians in a locomotive. In poise, perseverance, power and incomparable endurance she is the D. L. Moody of women. I have just worked with her a week in Washington and I never felt less "stuck up" in my life. Five sermons a day are a "constitutional" for her.

Washington is the strategic point for W. C. T. U. work. I never thought of it before, but am sure of it, and I think there ought to be an evangelistic session of the W. C. T. U. during the whole of every session of Congress, with your National evangelists alternating in charge. It is easy to get a crowd, and the crowds are cosmopolitan.

One thing I rejoice at, that not only in Washington, but every place, there is a plain revulsion of esteem for the National W. C. T. U. I think the verdict of even your critics, who are intelligent, is that your attitude toward prohibition has been consistent, dignified and praiseworthy, and any woman who has anything to say, and gracious lips to speak with, can have respectful audience anywhere, especially in Washington.

The Fredonia Hotel is really a continuous session of the W. C. T. U. in its most practical aspect. I meant to tell Mrs. La Fetra to fly a white ribbon on the flag-staff, but forgot it. It has a hundred or more rooms full of guests, and every one who leaves there knows that a city hotel can be run successfully without tobacco, bar or billiards, and that is worth knowing.

. . . . . .

More and more, I think the gospel of the future is to run to hotels, coffee houses, kindergartens and the like. "The kingdom of God cometh not by observation." But it comes, and is in fact so near that telescopes, sextants and other observational machinery are in disuse. Clearer and clearer it grows that "the kingdom of God is in the midst of you." Surer and surer it appears that "the kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ."

Penn. R. R., February 13, 1892.

CONGRESS ON THE COLUMBIAN FAIR GROUNDS.

BY B. V. CUSHMAN, M. D.

The great event of the season in this eventful city has been the visit of the congressional party, consisting of sixty-seven congressmen and their wives, accompanied by representatives of the leading newspapers of the country.

Mrs. Potter Palmer was universally recognized as hostess, while "all Chicago" might have been considered the host. Society reporters in some of our dailies are trying to use the cockney word "function," as it is used in London. They do not make it sound natural yet, and as a good deal of freedom is taken with the foundling, I see no objection to stretching it over the whole three days' outing had by our law-givers. Then I shall say, the "function" began with a most delightful evening in "The Castle by the Lake," where Mrs. Palmer is at home. It was no leap-year affair; old bachelors again received the cut direct, as married couples only were invited to meet the distinguished guests. This was Saturday night. Sunday had no program, save a visit to the great afternoon Sunday-school in Armour mission.

At ten o'clock Monday morning, Washington's birthday, a special train of thirteen coaches started for Jackson Park. So far as heard from not a woman was left behind with "a headache," and all were in time for the train. Half an hour and the great skeleton frameworks loom up. Can it be that in eight short months they will be covered and clothed, ready for the promised opening? "Outside of Chicago perhaps not," is the gracious answer of one of the visitors. Senator Shoup, of Idaho, said: "I was in the city and at the grounds a month ago, and the changes since then are marvelous."

The first stop was at the Woman's Building, and you should have heard the chorus of delight at sight of the beauty it has already taken on. Chief Architect Burnham led the party up the staircase into the hall, where the thousand looked but a handful, there was room for so many more. There President Baker waited, with a gallant speech of welcome:

"LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—We welcome you to-day. In eight months we shall welcome the world. On the twelfth day of October these buildings will be ready for formal dedication.

"I desire to call your attention first to this, the Woman's Building. It is to-day the scene of the first meeting of visitors to the World's Fair. It is the nearest of all to completion, and it is an open question whether this results from the remarkable industry of the women who have had the work under their direction, or whether it be from the chivalry of the workingmen." (This point for the workmen was applauded heartily, especially by the ladies.) "The outside covering is finished; the interior plastering is nearly done and the external woodwork is being painted."

From an immense map, drawn in colors, Chief Burnham pointed out the buildings that are to be, telling the dimensions and purpose of each, and describing the pavilions, lagoons and other features of landscape to be introduced. The first trip was to the roof gardens of the Woman's Building. The new stairway was christened, and the "gardens" crowded. The view from this point is unsurpassed, and the party were loth to come down, but President Baker announced the train to take them on to other points of interest. This conveyance was made up of open, flat cars, seated and covered with canvass. The thoughtfulness of President Baker in ordering nothing but coke to be used for firing the locomotive, brought blessings upon his head, for there was neither smoke nor cinder to obstruct the vision.

Horticultural Hall, to the south of the Woman's Building, is already beautiful to look upon. The next great mass of timber and trusses is the Transportation Building; and then the train seemed to be steaming out into open country, but it was on its way to Machinery Hall and the Stock Pavilion, still farther south. Senator Peffer, standing in the Manufacturers' Building, surveying the mammoth arches all around him, was reminded of Kansas prairies in the magnificent proportions. The weight of the iron trusses alone is nearly eleven millions of pounds. These trusses have each a span of three hundred and eighty feet and height of two hundred and eleven feet.

Congressman Springer covets the great hall of the Electricity Building for the National Democratic Convention. This was the only time "politics" crept into the crowd. Four hours were passed upon the grounds, luncheon was served at the Washington Park Club House, and a tired, but still enthusiastic party embarked for the city. In the evening the ladies were entertained by Mrs. Stone on behalf of the Woman's Auxiliary, while the gentlemen, alone—and some of them confessedly lonesome—wore away the time in banqueting and speech-making at the Commercial Club. Senator Peffer made bold to point out the need of reform. He is reported to have said: "To-day when we were escorted to the grounds, the first building pointed out to us was the Woman's Building; it is the one nearest completion; it is the one of all that grand architecture, which the women accompanying us took special pride in. You could not succeed in this or any other great enterprise without the aid of the women, and you ought not to do it. Yet as I look around this well-dressed audience, I do not see a woman—not one here. Why is it? If you will come out and attend one of our Farmers' Alliance meetings, and I wish you would—I'll give you the pass-word—you will find women with us, and that. I believe more than anything else, accounts for this great enterprise to-day."

I notice that President Harrison in his World's Fair appropriation message, recommends Congress to grant the necessary sum "subject to certain conditions." Mothers and sisters and wives, have you not influence to make the exclusion of intoxicating beverages from the grounds one of those "certain conditions"? The chairman of the senate committee, Senator Pettigrew, has declared his purpose to vote for it. This measure means much to the young, and means to the world that Columbia turns down her wine-glass at the banquet of the nations. If temperance women fail to secure it, it will be, I believe, because their attention is diverted to other issues, instead of being concentrated upon temperance. The church is with us, and the senator from every congressional district should hear from his constituency by personal letters. Every mother whose son is likely to go to the Fair —and what kind of boy is it who is not planning to go? —ought to feel about this as she would feel if a decanter and glasses were to be placed upon her own table. Let women remember the plan of campaign that wrought such success when the temperance education bill was before Congress, and be swift to pray and act. The opportunity is wide as the earth, for the uttermost parts are to be represented.

It is, indeed, wonderful that interest should be felt so far away. Even little Ceylon has appropriated $4.000 and asks for twelve thousand feet of space. Cape Colony, South Africa, wants to bring two thousand tons of blue earth, from the center of the diamond district, dump it on a space ten thousand feet square and show how diamonds are mined and cut.

Japan proposes to exhibit her products in three temples of historic pattern and offers, when the Fair is over, to present them to the United States as a mark of friendship. Mr. Tejima, the special Japanese commissioner, was of the opinion that his countrywomen are not sufficiently advanced industrially to act upon a special commission, although he intended that their work should be honored in the general exhibit. But lately Mr. Tejima had a long and delightful interview with Mrs. Palmer, telling her all about the Japanese women who are flower-makers, silk-growers and pottery-painters. Then the President of the Board of Lady Managers, with characteristic wisdom, suggested that the wife of the president of the Japanese commission and three other women of note and education, known to her, together with the Empress, who is noted for her advanced ideas, would form a small but highly efficient committee, and the charmed commissioner went away, pledged to move a reconsideration of the decision against admitting women to the Japanese commission.

Queen Margherita, of Italy, promises the loan of her famous historic collection of laces, also specimens of modern work done now by her own lace women. It will be accompanied by a portrait of the Queen and a number of old books upon antique lace. Mrs. Power-Lalor, the philanthropist and lace inspectress, is arranging for an exhibit of Irish lace work.

Mrs. Palmer has lately received a very interesting letter from Mrs. Rosalie Olivecrona, of Stockholm, concerning the conditions of Swedish women. According to her statements, they are the freest women of the world as regards the franchise. They vote in the cities for municipal councillors, and in the country have the ballot for electing the country council, in which is vested the power to appoint members of one chamber of the Diet. This gives them direct power in the government of Sweden. Mrs. Olivecrona thinks they will make a fine showing, especially in the fine arts. Several of them are famous as musical composers, others are skillful as engravers of all sorts, while one has for many years executed the medals at the royal mint.

Sir Henry Wood, who is enthusiastic about the interest awakened in England, which he pronounces "unparalleled," reports a fine committee of Englishwomen, numbering twenty, with Princess Christian its president. Among the names are the familiar and famous ones of Mrs. Fawcett, Baroness Burdett-Coutts, the Countess of Aberdeen and Lady Alfred Churchill.

Of course American women are busy as bees everywhere. I have heard of nothing prettier in contemplation than the design of the Mississippi W. C. T. U., who will have a model of the Temperance Temple, built of cotton in all stages of growth and in its varied crude and commercial forms. For the foundation it will be in bales, while the turrets will be fleecy, and Old King Cotton will appear in every form and disguise known to him, from boll to loom.

It would not be strange, if true, that Paris is a bit jealous of Chicago, and tempted to say she "won't play," for surely there was no such great getting ready all over the world for her Exposition; but then France did not appoint a Board of Lady Managers. No one will ever again try to have a World's Fair without one.

Correspondence.

HOME FOR INEBRIATES.

EDITORS OF UNION SIGNAL:—In THE UNION SIGNAL of February 18 I find a plea for an inebriate home. It strikes me as a most practical way of doing a grand temperance work. I second "the motion" that one of the bright legal minds of the W. C. T. U. form a memorial that will be just the thing to present to the legislature or national government, and have it become a law. We have a prohibition state, but the necessity of some one doing the informing business and then suffering the persecutions and hatred of the sympathizers of the liquor traffic, deters good people from enforcing law. But this arrangement of making the saloons or state which legalizes the saloon take care of its victims is a grand idea. The law should be so framed that the wife or mother or any friend could make an affidavit of the financial loss from neglect of business, inhuman treatment or indifference to family while under the influence of liquor, and be able to pray that their loved ones might be taken care of by the strong arm of the law—not imprisoned in jail, insane hospital or penitentiary, but in "a home," where neither they nor their family would feel disgraced in placing them, but where they would be obliged to remain a stipulated time under the gold treatment or other equally good until the appetite for liquor be neutralized, the mind restored to its normal condition, and where evangelistic W. C. T. U. work would be free to enter. I would take pleasure in presenting such a memorial to meet the heartfelt needs of the oppressed women that have never yet had any relief except in death. I hope this subject will be discussed till something practical comes out of it. "There has no temptation come to us but the Lord has a way of escape;" may be this is the Lord's way and if it is it will work good to all.

I cannot plan anything. only help roll the stone. I leave this with you, and will watch developments.

Fraternally yours,

MRS. W. B. WATSON.

Bismarck, N. D.

CALLED HOME.

Miss Julia C. Dickinson, World's president of the Bahama W. C. T. U., died of rheumatic fever, at Nassau, Bahama Islands, January 9, 1892, five days after her arrival, writes Mrs. H. R. Edgett, president of Fairport, N. Y., W. C. T. U. Since early childhood her home had been in Fairport, though it had been the custom of the family to spend their winters in their own home in Nassau. Various causes hindered their leaving the present winter till the middle of December, when just on the eve of departure the aged mother was suddenly called to the heavenly home, after eighty-six years of sojourn in the earthly tabernacle. Miss Julia Dickinson had suffered from a severe attack of la grippe, and set sail for Nassau late in December, accompanied by her only sister and their friend, Miss Elizabeth Dowd. A violent storm of sixty hours made the ocean trip so severe a strain that it was evident Miss Dickinson could not rally, and on the Saturday after her arrival she joined the sainted mother beyond the river. The shock to her home friends is a sad one for high and low responded with unbounded devotion to her faithful life for the highest good.

She had been widely known for her use of time, wealth, strength and influence for all good works, and through years of semi-invalidism had won her way into the sanctuaries of human souls in a measure granted only to the largest sympathies and tenderest touch. Throngs of all classes gathered at her funeral—the American Consul, and other notables, Good Templar lodges, and kindred organizations; but closest about her were the W. C. T. U.'s whom she had organized and guided. They would permit no one else to bear her loved form to the grave, begging, as the distance was short, that they might take the place of the appointed pall-bearers. Under the shade of wide spreading branches they laid her to rest, enfolded in such coloring of sky and sea as imagination only pictures in the New Jerusalem; fragrant breezes the long year through wave blossoms above her, and deep calleth unto deep, in a voice restful like God's eternity—around this "Isle of June"—supernal shrine for a beautiful life.

'Say not her work is done;
No deed of love or goodness ever dies,
But in the lives of others multiplies;
Say it is just begun."

LOYAL TEMPERANCE LEGION STATE CONVENTION.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—Will you allow me to make an explanation through your columns? I am often in receipt of letters from other states asking my plan for graduating pupils from the Loyal Temperance Legion, also how I called the Loyal Temperance Legion convention, how it was conducted, etc. First, I will say I have no other plan than that found in the little manual entitled "Diplomas and Seals," published by the W. T. P. A. After being made state superintendent of juvenile department a little less than two years ago, I began looking over the field, and found that the great drawback to the highest success of the work lay in the fact that the local superintendents found it difficult to draw in the older girls and boys to the Legion, and that the members when reaching a certain age largely dropped out. There was lacking an attraction of sufficient force to hold these young people through the age most critical and yet most promising.

I talked with my ever-present counsellor much about the work that I love so truly, and He gave me the thought of calling a state convention of all who would take up the study in earnest of the Temperance Lesson Manuals. Then I asked the generous union of which I have the good fortune to be a member, if it would invite and entertain such a gathering. The earnest women at once assented, and I asked counsel of our National superintendent, Mrs. Rice, and every door opened before me without hesitation. Why should it not, when the Hand that blessed the children was on the latch?

So all I had to do was to send out a call in our state paper and write many private letters to superintendents, and keep in close touch with Him who gave me the thought, and daily and hourly inspired me with hope and courage and plans, and kept the devastating horde of little worries far away. That is all, dear sisters in Loyal Temperance Legion work. It is a blessed truth, and one that ought to make us certain of success, that "God works at both ends of the line." If He suggests to your thought a course to advance His work, He touches other hearts to coöperate. Some unforeseen obstacles may suddenly appear in the way, as did in our path when we were preparing for our convention, but they proved to be more in the "seeming," and only gave a new impetus to our courage.

Our state Loyal Temperance Legion, "organized for more advanced temperance work," is a blessing to Wisconsin, and its coming convention in July next will be many steps in advance of the first. It is to be held in a beautiful little town, where twenty Loyal Temperance Legion graduates are at a white-heat of interest all the time, and this branch of the state Legion has already begun to put its young shoulder to the mighty wheel of influence turned by the W. T. P. A. Sometime I would like to tell you of lines of work—real work—that other branches are taking up.

The enthusiastic superintendent of the Loyal Temperance Legion that will entertain the convention writes me, "Tell people not to stay away for fear of lack of accommodations." Of course that means Wisconsin people, but I do not hesitate to invite any state superintendent to meet with us early in July (railway rates not yet decided upon). May God help us to "go forward" without a tremor in our steps, till our bright girls and boys take the nation for the right. Yours in His name,

ANNIE J. BRADBURY, Supt. L. T. L.

Milwaukee, Wis.

SENATOR DOLPH'S BILL TO DEAL RUIN IN ALASKA.

[One of our white-ribbon chiefs in Oregon sends us the following. Mrs. Nash is an accomplished English lady, once a pupil of the illustrious George McDonald.—EDS.]

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—I want to enlist the help of all good white-ribboners in our crusade "away off," as the Easterners say, in Oregon. Our Senator Dolph has brought in a bill in Congress to legalize the saloon in Alaska. We feel heartily ashamed of our Senator in whom we had reposed confidence enough that he would never do an iniquitous nor an inhuman thing. Now that the bill is the possession of the Senate it is every one's business to try and prevent it from becoming law. I beg very earnestly that the officers of each union will write letters to the Senators and Representatives of their respective states begging them for humanity's sake that they will veto the bill when it is brought up for action. Although we women have no vote ourselves, our petitions go for something, for do we not influence the home voters?

Letters from missionaries show how ruinous is the liquor to the Aleutr and the Eskimos. How maniacal it makes them, and how, in a short time, it would wage a war of complete extermination. That the same Congress, which on January 11 of this year signed the European treaty which is to provide prohibition in the Congo states of Africa, should foist the curse upon another set of natives to whom the liquor is as ruinous, is an anomaly. The present prohibitory law, instead of being repealed should be strengthened by what is called the "injunction clause," and steps taken by the officers of the government to prevent the whalers (to whose cupidity the mischief is chiefly due) from trading in their illicit wares.

L. A. NASH.

A BRILLIANT PROMISE.

The famous author of "Sir Rohan's Ghost" writes as follows. A hopeful outlook for our readers:

MY DEAR MISS WILLARD:—Thank you very much for asking me to write for THE UNION SIGNAL. I shall take great pleasure in doing so and will send you something at my first opportunity. I am not well at present, having been ill for some months, and so am writing only that which I am absolutely obliged to write. But as soon as I am well enough I will do for THE UNION SIGNAL the best in my power.

Thanking you also for your kind words, I am truly your friend. HARRIET P. SPOFFORD.

TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS.

BY MATILDA B. CARSE.

If ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, remove hence to yonder place; and it shall remove; and nothing shall be impossible unto you.—Matt. 17:20.

"I tell you if we don't stir ourselves that Temple will never be built." The little five year old grandson of our loved and lamented Mrs. Downs of New Jersey was heard by his mother the other day saying this to his little sister. Mrs. Quigley writes, "I resolved I would stir myself and the mite-boxes will soon be full." From the way the money and pledges are coming in, we believe this dear child has voiced the feeling that is abroad in the land in regard to the Temple. The white-ribboners evidently feel that unless they stir themselves it will never be paid for, so they have set to work in earnest. Money is coming in as never before and orders for mite-boxes have greatly increased. We are going to make an offer that we trust will increase the orders for mite-boxes a thousand fold. It is this: all persons who fill a mite-box, (it must contain $3.65) during the coming year—commencing with April 1, 1892, and closing with April 1, 1893—will receive a photograph containing a group consisting of Lady Somerset, Miss F. E. Willard and the founder of the Temple. It will also contain their autographs.

***

We are sure that all white-ribboners will be desirous to look upon the beautiful face of our distinguished English visitor, Lady Henry Somerset. Had she been born of the lowliest parentage she would be a royal woman. As it is, her Christlike character and beautiful abnegation of spirit sinks into insignificance any supposed luster that is attached to high birth. Still in this day of worldliness and self-pleasing it is a marvel to see a young and beautiful woman, who stands in the very forefront of the English nobility, with great wealth at her command, turning a deaf ear to the siren's voice of worldly pleasure, and following her Master into the slums to seek and to save the perishing. The picture of such a woman is an inspiration to every one that looks upon it.

It goes without saying that all will desire to have the picture of our own incomparable Frances E. Willard, who, had she been born a queen, the luster of her own grand and noble character would have entirely eclipsed any greatness that royal birth might have conferred.

The excuse for having the face of the founder of the Temple in the group arises from the fact that a great many who are interested in the Temple have written desiring to secure a picture of her. Let all who wish to possess this picture and help build the Temple send orders at once for mite boxes. The picture is not for sale, and can only be had by sending for a mite-box. A two-cent stamp sent to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, 149 Ashland Boulevard, Chicago, will secure one. Ask your friends to help fill it if you cannot do it all yourself. If the box should be filled before the year expires, the picture will be sent on receipt of the money.

***

The silver models of the Temple are in great demand. They are double-plated in silver and lacquered, this prevents them from tarnishing. The models have been converted into three most beautiful and useful articles: No. 1 is in the form of a bank, price $1.75; this pays for transportation. No. 2 is an inkstand and contains two one ounce bottles, price $2.25; this also pays for transportation. No. 3 is a beautiful jewel case, lined with silk velvet in light blue, old gold and royal purple; price $2.25, which includes transportation. We make a handsome discount to unions or individuals who order twenty-five or more of the models to sell again. All orders for the models should be sent to Mrs. Carse. We give below some of the kind things that have been said about them. Mrs. Sarah D. La Fetra, president District of Columbia W. C. T. U. writes: "I have received the silver model of the Temple and am delighted with it. It is a thing of beauty and a joy forever. It will constantly remind me while sitting at my writing desk of woman's ability and her devotion to a blessed, sacred cause." Mrs. Lydia B. Chase, Newport, R. I., says: "I was more than pleased with the Temple bank. It is indeed a beautiful parlor ornament." Mrs. H. A. Hobart, president Minnesota W. C. T. U. writes: "I have received the silver model of the Temple, and it is beautiful! I found myself wishing as I looked at it that I could send one just like it to my dear Minnesota white-ribboners. It is so elegant and chaste that a sight of it inspires one, recognizing it as the model of the magnificent Temple. There could be no more unique and beautiful ornament for the parlor or library table. I hope they will sell by the million. We of Minnesota are going to do our best to have the W. C. T. U. own that splendid building." Mrs. C. H. Case, of Chicago, writes: "I like the Temple inkstand very much; it will not tip and spill, it covers from the drying process that spoils our ink so much, and it takes up little room on the table."

***

Mrs. Helen D. Arnold, Seneca Falls, N. Y., writes: "I have for some time had an earnest desire to have an interest in the wonderful Temple in Chicago, and as I have read from week to week your stirring words, the desire has been intensified and at last has reached a tangible shape in the inclosed $100 draft." Mrs. B. M. Parsons, Hartford, Conn., sends $100. Mrs. R. S. Hubbard, La Grange, Ind., sends $25. Rev. Florence Kollock, Chicago, pledges $100, and pays first installment of $10. Mrs. E. A. Kennedy, Ionia, Mich., sends $55, this completes her pledge of $100. She writes: "I have had faith in the project from the first and hope to see it completed without encumbrance, the sole property of the W. C. T. U., and I shall esteem it a great honor to have my name recorded in Willard Hall."

***

All checks and post-office orders should be made out in the name of Miss Esther Pugh and sent to her at Evanston, Ill.

Our Children.

THE ROBIN AND THE SUNBEAM.

BY HAZEL.

A robin looked down from his nest one day,
And paused in his song so blithe and gay,
To question a sunbeam flitting by,
Just from its home in the cloudless sky.
"Bright little sunbeam," he cheerily said,
As he thrust through the leaves his dark brown head,
"Where are you going this sweet spring day,
Dancing and skipping so merrily?
Why did you leave yon sky, blue and clear,
With its fleecy clouds, and balmy air,
And the king of day, in his palace bright,
Where never are seen the shades of night?"
"My friend," she said, as she paused to rest
Her dainty form on a violet's crest,
"I love yon beautiful realm of day,
Undimmed by clouds and shadows gray,
But I never could rest content up there,
If I knew that my presence were needed here.
There are thousands of sunbeams pure and bright,
Taking each day their downward flight.
Each morn they kiss fair nature's face,
And bid her rise from night's embrace.
All over the world they gladly go,
To dreary homes, and huts of woe.
But now my friend, I must bid you adieu,
And hasten on, for I've work to do.
There's a little girl in yon city street,
Unable to walk, for her crippled feet;
All day long on her couch she lies,
With sunken cheeks, and great sad eyes,
That wander o'er the cheerless room,
In search of something to brighten the gloom.
At length they rest on a shining spot,
And she almost springs from her little cot
As I enter the window, and take my place
Just where I can look on her pale, sweet face;
And oh, you can never know how glad
I feel, when I see that look so sad,
Pass from those features, pale and wan,
Just for a gleam from yonder sun.
And now I think, if you'll come with me,
And make your home in the nearest tree,
Your song will make her happier far,
Than brightest gleam from sun or star."
"Yes, I will go," the robin said,
"And cheer her, in her lonely bed.
I'll sing from morn, till close of day,
My sweetest songs and carols gay."
And so they on their mission went,
Each with his little task content.

BLOSSOM'S PLEDGE.

BY LIZZIE YOUNG BUTLER.

It was such hard work! The barn door, against which she held the paper, was rough; the pencil which traversed the piece of brown paper bag in jagged letters was just a little stick with no perceptible point. Poor Blossom! The crutch kept slipping from beneath her arm, and the poor lame foot ached with the effort to aid the other keep the balance of the small body. But Blossom's undertaking was of too serious a nature to be interrupted by trifles. The crutch was readjusted many times before the pencil ceased its work upon the brown paper. Then Blossom looked at her pledge with beaming eyes, spelling each word over carefully before she signed her name. It looked something like this when she had finished:

WE ARE TEMPRUNCE AND ARE GOING TO MAKE PA TEMPRUNCE TO BLOSSOM COUNCE

As she printed the last letter of her name there was the sound of merry voices, and Blossom's two brothers came running into the barn.

"Hullo, Sis, what you doing?" called Franz.

"That's so! What you got there?" chimed in Fred, as the two boys neared Blossom's side.

"Come up on the haymow with me and I'll tell you."

Blossom took her crutch, but before she could use it Franz and Fred had made a chair of their hands and "Queen Blossom" was carried in state and deposited safely upon the fragrant hay. This was the children's quiet place where they talked over their plans and joys, and where the boys delighted to come to rest and to confide to Blossom their ills, and to get solace for their troubles. Dear little crippled Blossom was perfect in their eyes; and she, feeling something of their dependence upon her influence, tried to be a very helpful sister. She was old for her years, and had many a serious thought in her young heart, the depth of which would have astonished and startled her parents.

"Do you see this, boys?" said Blossom, showing her pledge.

"Read it," rejoined Fred.

In a very decided, serious tone Blossom read the pledge.

"You know what temp'rance is?"

The boys nodded their heads while Franz added, "Cold water to drink."

"Yes, and no bad words, no tobacco, no small smokes" (meaning cigarettes). "Now I want you to put your names right under mine. Remember all the time what you have done, and help all you can to get pa to be temp'rance."

The boys were always glad to please Blossom, so with some show of hesitation, and under the fire of some convincing talk, they printed their names. Blossom was a wise little woman. Full well she knew what might result from the drinking of that which her father sometimes left in his glass! She had watched with growing uneasiness the increased relish with which they drained the dregs left in the glass, and had devised this way of getting her brothers to let the wretched stuff alone. To procure her father's signature to the pledge would be a more difficult matter. Yet she did not falter. Though she was the apple of his eye, he was not a man to be easily influenced away from his pet theories, one of which was that moderate drinking could do no harm. A kind and loving father, he did not realize that as the months went by he was deepening his love for the glass and was growing irritable. Blossom saw, and her heart was sad over the knowledge. She had determined to do something to hinder if she could.

"Well, Blossom, you have a birthday to-morrow," said Mr. Counce after tea as Blossom nestled at his side. "What shall pa give his girlie?"

If she could get him to put his name to the pledge! The thought set her heart to beating so fast that her limbs began to tremble, and the hot blood dyed her cheeks.

"I want something very much, pa. See, I want just your name right there," and taking the pledge from her pocket, Blossom pointed to the space beneath Fred's name.

"What have we here?" said he glancing at the paper. Then his face grew stern and forbidding as he said:

"What nonsense! Don't let me see that again." But Blossom was not satisfied.

"Please, pa! Blossom would rather have your name there than all you could buy."

How could he withstand the pleading look on the sweet face? Yet he sternly replied as he drew his arm from about her:

"Blossom, you understand me! Don't let me hear any more of that nonsense!"

Poor Blossom! her eyes were so blinded with tears as she limped across the room that she did not see the hassock against which she struck her crutch and fell headlong against the lounge.

Her birthday was one of fearful anxiety to Mr. Counce who held himself responsible for Blossom's fall, and he felt that he would be willing to do anything if he could but feel her nestling against his side once more. Even in her unconsciousness she clutched the piece of brown paper. Once she had opened her eyes and said: "Please, pa!" and her words sent the strong man from the room in an agony of remorse and fear.

That night was one never to be forgotten by Mr Counce. The clock ticked the hours away till midnight, then the dear eyes opened and the sweet voice faintly said: "Quick, pa, there!" Her hand raised the brown paper pledge and Mr. Counce tremblingly wrote his name.

"There, darling. I'll keep it, so help me God!"

"Thank you, pa. That's my best birthday gift," and she put up her lips for his kiss. Then the faint breath fluttered and ceased.

In a celluloid case which Blossom once made for him, Mr. Counce keeps the precious pledge. He never sees it without the keenest remorse and a sobbing sigh over what "might have been." If he had but heeded Blossom's wish she need not have met her death. Then folding it tenderly and laying it in its case he says: "Yes Blossom, I'm keeping it, so help me God."

Rockland, Me.

ONE WAY TO SPELL POTATO.

Considering the state of the crops and the anxiety expressed by our English cousins about our spelling, the following exercise may be appropriate. Who invented it is unknown to me, but it sounds like Dr. Wayland, of Philadelphia, a "fonetik parson": "What does this spell —Ghoughphtheightteeau?" Well, according to the following rule, it spells potato: Gh stands for p, as in the last letters of hiccough; ough for o, as in dough; phth for t, as in phthisis; eigh stands for a, as in neighbor; tte stands for t, as in gazette, and eau stands for o, as in beau. Thus you have potato.—Boston Advertiser.

What Shall We Call It?

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:—While on a visit last Sabbath in an Ohio city, it was my pleasure to attend a Sabbath-school which is noted for its good order. The venerable superintendent, with his snowy hair and beard, seemed like a gracious father to the earnest, quiet flock of children and older people who looked up to him so attentively.

A lady spoke at the opening of the school and told the little ones an interesting temperance story about a Fourth of July which had been celebrated in a different fashion from usual in the village of which she spoke. For the ladies of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union had taken the matter in hand, and were present at the old-fashioned celebration all day, with barrels of ice-cold water to quench the thirst of the people. There was no need then for anybody to pay out their money for beer when a better drink could be had for nothing. A saloon-keeper also, was so affected by their earnestness that he has since given up the business of selling liquor.

This Sabbath-school of which I speak is now preparing to celebrate its annual supper, which is a most delightful occasion always. It has observed temperance Sunday and circulated pledges among the children, many of whom have signed and of course will keep them. I will tell you more about this school at some future time.

We have received so many good names for our "What shall we call it?" column, that it is a difficult matter to choose among them. We will let you know which has been oftenest suggested, and will publish the entire list received very soon, with our choice among them all. Please send in your names as soon as you can to your

AUNT JANE.

LOTS OF NICE NUTS TO CRACK.

We have taken THE UNION SIGNAL for quite a while, and we have always enjoyed the stories on children's page. I think it will be very nice to have the puzzles. I think some nice names have been given. I would like to suggest one. How would the "Children's Cozy Corner" do? You see this corner is such a nice one and the children can all get there with lots of nice nuts to crack.

Your friend,

RUTH GIBSON.

SOFT-SHELLED NUTS.

13.

AMPUTATED TEMPERANCE TEXTS.

Each word is beheaded and curtailed.

1. B- -o- -run- -it- -in- -herei- - - -xces-.
2. Wo- -nt- -i- -ha- -ivet- -i- -eighbo- -rin-.
3. Lov- -orket- - - -l- - - -i- -eighbo-.
4. I- -n- -a- -estro- -h- -empl- - - -o- -i- -hal- -o- -estro-.
5. Loo- -o- -po- -h- -in- -he- - - - - -e-.
6. Tho- -hal- -ov- -h- -eighbo- - - -hysel-.

14.

CONCEALED TEXTS.

A word is hidden in each of the following sentences. When the words are rightly guessed and read in the order here given they will form a familiar text:

1. I am feeling quite well.
2. I think the use of tobacco very hurtful.
3. My sister teaches a Sabbath-school class.
4. Do you know my brother's whereabouts?
5. "This lion is very tame," said the keeper.

15.

RHYMING BLANKS.

The first line rhymes with the second; the third with the fourth in each verse:

Many people I know when invited to —— (dine,)
Best enjoy a good dinner without any —— (wine.)
And when they are out to reception or ——
Think it's far better "form" not to drink any ——

And when to their homes they invite you to ——
You'll find no such thing as decanters of ——.
You can have a good time and be gay and ——
As you please, and not swallow a drop of rank ——

And should they imagine you look thin and ——
They'd ne'er recommend daily glasses of ——,
For they know that if you but once be——
You'll want something stronger like —— or ——.

They teach the dear children, great and ——
To decline every drink which contains ——,
And this is their toast, for son and for ——
"I'll drink to your health, in a glass of cold ——!"

Answers to these puzzles given in three weeks. Send all replies and original puzzles to Puzzle Editor, UNION SIGNAL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

ANSWERS TO PUZZLES PUBLISHED FEBRUARY 18.

4. Cocoa, coffee, lemonade, tea, milk, water.
5. Iowa, Dakota, Kansas, Maine.
6. Dow, Gough, Willard, Fisk.

Correct answers have been received from Marguerite M. L.; Kathryn; Leonard Hancock; Georgia Christian; W. P. Wharton; Bessie A. Straw; Fred C. DePuy; Harry V. Kerschner; Hattie Wolfe; Rosa H. Green; Eva F. Roberts.

The Household.

A SONG FOR TO-DAY.

BY LOUISE MANNING HODGKINS.

Groweth the morning from gray to gold;
Up, my heart, and greet the sun!
Yesterday's cares are a tale that is told,
Yesterday's tasks are a work that is done.

Yesterday's failures are all forgot,
Buried beneath the billows of sleep;
Yesterday's burdens are as they were not,
Lay them low in the soundless deep!

Share thy crust and ask no dole;
Offer the cup thou wouldst never drain;
Only he who saveth his soul,
Loseth all that he fain would gain.

Smile with him who has gained his desire;
Smile the gladder if at thy cost—
It was his to win and thine to aspire,
It is his to-day that loved the most.

Pluck the flower that blooms at thy door,
Cherish the love that the day may send;
Cometh an hour when all thy store
Vainly were offered for flower or friend.

Gratefully take that life offereth,
Looking to heaven nor seeking reward,
So shalt thou find, come life, come death,
Earth and the sky are in sweet accord.

BERTIE'S BURDEN.

BY JANE EGGLESTON ZIMMERMAN.

"The hair of the hound will cure his bite."—Old adage.

"What's the matter?"

"Well, I guess if you was me you'd think something was the matter, and lots of it too." Here Bertie Noyes dug the toe of his neat little boot into the dust under the hammock and looked as savage as a bear. "I don't mind tellin' you, Aunt Mary, cause they're your relations too, almost as much as mine, and if you stay here a few weeks, you're bound to find out about it. Oh, dear!"

Bertie whipped out a clean little pocket-handkerchief, and cried copiously into it. I never could see how my sister Helen manages to keep her children looking so presentable all the time, but I think the children inherit a certain fastidiousness from her. To see Bertie Noyes, of all children in the world, lying in a hammock on a bright June morning, sobbing, was a puzzle to me, so I sat down in a garden chair and waited for him to explain further.

"You see, Aunty Mary, mamma acts the funniest sometimes; I never saw the like." Bertie's sentences are not models of English but we can always understand them, at least almost always. "She isn't one bit like a mamma in a story book. You know story book mammas are always well behaved, and so grieved when their children act naughty, but my mamma doesn't do that way. 'F you'll believe it, mamma acts just like me and Flossie! It's getting so I'm ackshilly afraid to do a thing 'less it's just as proper as—as—" here Bertie was going to say "an old maid," it is a favorite expression, but fearing I might take it as a personal allusion, he changed his simile—"as an owl."

The idea of my small nephew acting in the least like the bird of wisdom was too much for my gravity. He rolled up the once clean handkerchief into a round ball, and began tossing it while he continued:

"You're laughin' cause you think I haven't anything to cry about; but you just wait till I tell you. The other day when I didn't see my napkin anywhere, and I was in an awful hurry, I just wiped my mouth the least little bit on the table-cloth, and don't you believe, mamma took up the end of the table-cloth and wiped hers too! Oh, I was ashamed of her, I tell you! But she did worse'n that. I like maple syrup most better than anything, and the other day, I was in a hurry, you know I 'most always am in a hurry—fear I'll be late to school—and I ate all my cake up, and then just tipped up my plate to get the syrup that was left. Mamma took up her plate and licked it just 'cause I licked mine a little speck. I didn't think she'd notice, but she did, and when she set her plate down, there was a little speck of syrup on the end of her nose. I wiped the end of my nose pretty quick, I tell you, and said 'scuse me,' and ran to school as hard as I could. Now tell me, aunty, did you ever see any lady lick her plate in your life?"

I had to acknowledge that I never had, and that I could not imagine what could have come over my sister to make her act so.

"One day," Bertie went on, "I asked her for a cent to buy some gum; all the boys had gum and I wanted some. 'All right,' said mamma; you know I can't bear to hear mamma say 'all right;' it sounds too much like a boy. 'All right,' said mamma, 'you take two cents and buy me a stick too.' 'What for, mamma?' I asked, just as s'prised as I could be, for I never did see mamma chew gum in my life. 'Why,' she said, 'why shouldn't I chew gum if you do?' 'Oh, well, I won't then,' I said, for I couldn't bear to see mamma chewing gum. But that ain't the worst, auntie. One day I bought a package of cigarettes. All the boys smoke, and I didn't see why I couldn't smoke a little, 'cause I'm a boy, if I am only eight years old. I hid 'em just as carefully as I could, 'way back in my bureau drawer; and what should mamma do but clean out my bureau that very day, while I was at school. When I came in I found mamma sitting on the sofa in the front parlor smoking one of my cigarettes! I tell you, I hustled up stairs and got the whole box and threw it into the kitchen fire. I don't believe mamma smoked very much after that, for I found 'most the whole cigarette she was smoking, on the parlor table. I threw that into the fire too. I'm afraid to smoke again as long as mamma lives, for if she's going to do everything I do, I can't behave well enough to save my life.

"Then, the other day, Flossie and I were playing in the back parlor, and Flossie just pervoked me till I couldn't stand it, and I flew at her and pounded her and she began to cry and pulled my hair and I pulled her hair then, and when I thought I'd run and tell mamma how naughty Flossie was, why there in the front parlor was papa pounding mamma and mamma screaming and pulling papa's hair; you never saw such a sight in all your born days, never! And right in the midst of it all, in walked Dr. Graham and Mrs. Graham. I ran away off up in the attic and cried and cried. Thinkin' of that, and Dr. Graham and Mrs. Graham finding my papa and mamma fighting made me cry again this morning. Now 'f you was a little boy and had such awful queer streaks in your father 'n mother, wouldn't you cry?"

"Lunch is ready!" called my sister from the porch. When we went in, there right across the pretty table with its spotless lunch cloth, lay a small tennis racquet, a dusty, battered-looking ball and a soiled tennis blouse, truly a strange looking center-piece for a lunch table. Bertie hastily gathered them up and, with a very red face, sped upstairs with them. When he came down again his mother was chatting and serving strawberries as if nothing but the most faultless lunch table had ever been seen in all the history of her housekeeping.

Poor little Bertram! His burden is almost heavier than he can bear. Let us hope he will make haste to throw it off by setting his mother the best example a boy ever set.

SOME WAYS OF WOMEN.

I.

There is a time in nearly every woman's life when she is in love with the preacher. It seizes some early, and wonderful is the inflorescence of clerical slippers and sofa cushions, enthusiasms for district visiting, missionary meetings and guild labors not a few. Later in life the expression of it is altar cloths, rehabilitation of the pastor's study and a crying need for spiritual consolation no layman can furnish. All this may be innocent enough, but painful, wearisome or ridiculous according to the point of view.

The case alters, however, if the preacher assumes that the "laying on of hands" conveyed the apostolic command "salute one another with a holy kiss." What reason is there in the realm of good manners or morals why an aged bishop, or preacher of any age or order, should kiss his women parishioners, young or old, any more than an old doctor, merchant or lawyer, the "butcher, baker or candlestick maker" should do the same? The "odor of sanctity" about "the cloth," has a singularly beguiling effect on the fine judgment and knowledge of some good women.

There is something in a religious woman's nature that responds with tremendous velocity to a desire in a young man to study for the ministry. All that is fine within her stirs to help, if he is unable to pay his expenses in the theological school, and needles fairly fly to keep him there. Does it ever occur to the church women that this may be one reason why there are so many weaklings in the pulpit? If they offered to pay the expenses of a medical student or a merchant young man, their aid would be promptly and indignantly rejected, and the world would applaud. Is it not possible that the young man who will accept money from women's hands to put him through college, lacks the manly independence, the true grit imperative in a strong nature, necessary to endure the hardness of the Cross in the preacher's life? So the church, through woman's sympathy, is fostering a set of weak-knees that must be carried all their days.

Why shouldn't the aid societies of the church lend the means, at a low interest, to the needy theological student, allowing fifteen years, if necessary, for its repayment? "And let the young minister begin his life saddled with a debt!" some cry. Often the first thing a theologue does on leaving college is to saddle himself with a wife. Let him wait for the wife and gird himself with the vigorous self-respect that refuses to accept like a beggar, and with the faith in himself, by the help of God, to meet life single-handed like any other manly man. More than any on earth the kingdom of Christ needs the bravest, most self-respecting, self-denying soldiery. Feather-bed preachers are not wanted in the church more than "feather-bed scouts" in the war. It is true some of our "top-shelf" preachers have been educated by church societies, but probably the fact was a conscious pain "e'en down to old age." Let the help come, but always with an uplift and uplook and not with the discouragement of the robust virtues.

OBEDIENCE THE ORGAN OF SPIRITUAL KNOWLEDGE.

"Yield utterly to God, and there shall come to you an inner witness assuring peace both to the heart and to the intellect. . . . . .

"I hold it to be a truth of exact mental science, revealed in ten thousand times ten thousand personal experiences, that whoever yields himself to God utterly will find that obedience is the organ of spiritual knowledge otherwise utterly unattainable. That is the height of culture, that is the beginning of wisdom. . .

"Of course, the Christian life is a growth; the faintest beam of the light in the east at first, but the soul does understand in secret hours, even in its untutored state, that some things are sinful and others holy; and it then goes on trying to avoid the one and cultivate the other. Then gradually there comes the greater fact, a conception of God's presence. Then, finally, after years have passed, after the soul has been scarred and furrowed by lapses into sin, when it has seen the hollowness of everything in mere time, out of some great valley of humiliation and shadow of death, it comes up to the doctrine of sin on the one side and the doctrine of atonement on the other, and by one great throe of its being, fully counting all it can of the cost, looking death steadily in the face, and knowing that its God and its Redeemer are present, a personality to witness and hear, it says, once for all, 'utterly and forever thine.'

"The instant that is said the world is new. There is a strange, unutterable feeling that something from the Infinite above has flashed down into the soul, and henceforward there are union and equilibrium. A well of eternal life has at once suddenly sprung up in the heart. It is transformed; the treasures of the soul are in eternity, no longer in time." . . "That Spirit which it is said is given to those who really seek it enters the heart. There will be sins of infirmity and inadvertency at times, and sins of ignorance almost constantly, but the soul will mourn for them more than it formerly did for willful transgressions. Watchfulness is its constant business. The soul endures as seeing Him who is invisible and because it is fed on the joys of its own consciousness. The calm, transcendant resolution has been taken for eternity as well as for time. It secures every interest for time and for the infinite future. To take it is a bold act, but not to take it is a bolder one, since the latter would be braving, not man, but God. A few strong, decided actions, letting it be known where the heart lies, and constituting precedents enough to form a habit, and there will be less trouble from the world than would at first be expected. . The spirit trembles within itself for very joy to find death no longer a terror; the end of life is seen to be really and truly the beginning. The soul lies in the arms of duty. Something is borne in upon the mind from above, abides with it, guides it. The only thing feared is sin, for this grieves and may forfeit the Divine Presence. The soul will do no willful sin; its face is set; in that resolution is its life. It has courage for private and public duty. . The dwelling in the Infinite Spirit gives wisdom. The Scriptures grow strangely sweet and luminous."—Joseph Cook.

No lesson has impressed us more than the fact that we should say our kindly words while our friends are yet alive. Poor old Carlyle was wont to stand, with head bared, as near the grave as he could get where his wife suddenly was laid. He it was, we must remember, who per-mitted that day of judgment to appear, wherein his character minifies as one reads page by page, and reads the famous epithet over her grave: "In her bright existence, she had more sorrows than are common; a clearness of discernment and a noble loyalty of heart which are rare. For forty years she was the true and loving helpmate of her husband, and by act and word unweariedly forwarded him as none else could in all of worth that he did or attempted." She died at London the 21st of April, 1866, suddenly snatched away from him, and the light of his life is as if gone out.

UNION SIGNAL
WORLD WHITE RIBBON

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

FRANCES E. WILLARD, LADY HENRY SOMERSET, MARY ALLEN WEST, } EDITORS.
MARGARET A. SUDDUTH, MRS. HARRIET B. KELLS. } OFFICE EDITORS.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.
MRS. F. H. RASTALL, Business Manager.
161 La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

Entered at the Post-office, Chicago, Ill., as second-class matter.

DEP'T BOOKS AND LEAFLETS.—ALICE M. GUERNSEY, Editor.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

NEWS NOTES AND EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS.
EDITORIAL ARTICLES That St Louis Meeting—The Welcome Guest—Presidential Suffrage for Women 8, 9
WATCH-TOWER 9
CONTRIBUTED Poem, The Two Mysteries, by Mary Mapes Dodge—Recollections of Noted Men and Women, by Lady Henry Somerset—After the Maine Law, by Neal Dow—Railroad Ties, by John G. Woolley—Congress on the Columbian Fair Grounds, by B. V. Cushman, M. D..... 2, 3, 4
CORRESPONDENCE Home for Inebriates—Called Home—Loyal Temperance Legion State Convention—Senator Dolph's Bill to Deal Ruin in Alaska—A Brilliant Promise—Temperance Temple Items 4, 5
OUR CHILDREN Poem, The Robin and the Sunbeam—Blossom's Pledge—One Way to Spell Potato..... 6
WHAT SHALL WE CALL IT? 6
THE HOUSEHOLD: Poem, A Song for To-day—Bertie's Burden—Some Ways of Women—Obedience the Organ of Spiritual Knowledge 7
QUEEN'S GARDENS The Ideal Nurse 10
NEWS FROM THE FIELD Missouri, Iowa, Northern California, Michigan, Tennessee, News in a Nutshell..... 10, 11, 12
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS Favorable Winds for Police Station and Police Matron's Work—Sunday-school Convention, 12
PUBLISHER'S DEPARTMENT: 13, 14, 15
SIGNAL NOTES 16

And they remembered that God was their Rock, and the high God their Redeemer.—Ps. 78 35

THAT ST. LOUIS MEETING.

LETTERS FROM LEADERS.

We have received a variety of most interesting letters apropos of the recent industrial conference in St. Louis, to which we went as fraternal delegates and by which we were made full voting delegates and given prominent official positions. We think our readers will be interested to see along these different angles of vision. For ourselves, we are sincerely glad we went, we feel better acquainted and more warmly attached to our industrial friends and hope they do to us; we shall welcome their leaders at any of our meetings that they may choose to attend, and we believe that the entent cordiale begun at that great meeting will continue and steadily increase. We wish our labor reform brothers and sisters had done all that we desired; we believe if they had had the opportunity squarely to meet the questions they would have fulfilled our hopes. We are glad that the ballot for women went into their code of beliefs as a resolution if not a plank, and are hopeful that they will never take a backward step on this subject, but that in Omaha on the Fourth of July they will incorporate prohibition and woman's ballot as planks in their platform. To this end we urge them to work earnestly and wisely during the months that remain before the final decision is reached. Now let us hear our correspondents:

CHICAGO, ILL., Feb. 25, 1892.

DEAR SISTER:—I read this morning the account of the St. Louis convention as given in the Daily News. Basing my judgment on this information I wish to say: Well done; you filled out the measure of your opportunity, and itis all right. I feel more hope this morning than for some years past. Everything is so strange, I can explain it only by the supposition of an Unseen Hand. It has looked to me that we have been sold, like Israel and Judah, into the hands of the Moabites; but there seem indications of the stirrings of a deliverer,—the Democracy divided, the People's party spurning "moral issues" by a resort to trick and tactics, the Republican party in the dust before Mammon, though with one bright spot in Iowa. True, the church utters no sound more intelligible than a snore, but Gabriel has not mislaid his trumpet, and they who weep between the porch and the altar are at their post. Yours, etc.,

A. J. JUTKINS.

EVANSTON, ILL., February 25, 1892.

DEAR SISTER:—I am glad you dared. You went into it with the strategy of a woman, didn't have much help, was patient, firm, loyal to the best, and you found the waters shallow indeed. I am glad you cast the plumb line, and now we know the depths thereof. I was sorry to fail you, but could not leave on account of church duties on which I had already entered.

One of our leading pastors in the city recently went out with a bodyguard and took a Nehemiahic sort of survey of darkest Chicago. He found the walls of honor, righteousness and justice fallen, and all under high license. He told the people about it and the old ladies of his congregation, and one of the brothers said he "fell back well-nigh faint" when he had finished. What would he say to putting saloon destruction first in his voting?

Another of our leading pastors said in my hearing recently, "The blood of Christ is needed to cleanse these immoral stables and clear out these slums." Yea, verily, thought I, he has it right, but by the correlation of forces what is needed in Chicago now should take the form of blue-coats backed by a mayor, the chief of police and the council, backed by Christian laws and Christian voters. When shall we live in our own day and preach Christ according to the needs of our own environment? Perhaps I am wrong, but so it looks to your brother,

HENRY A. DELANO.

EN ROUTE TO BOSTON, February 25, 1892.

MY DEAR SISTER:—I have been in Indianapolis all through the St. Louis convention, at leisure any moment when I chose, ready to start for St. Louis if it seemed best, reading reports of the proceedings every morning and evening, as given by the Republican and Democratic papers. Only my deep distrust of the convention has prevented my being with you all the while. I have been through so many of these affairs, only to find our great cause betrayed—only to learn that the indirection, insincerity and dishonesty of politicians are unfathomable, —and that woman and her rights and wrongs, and all her interests will never weigh a feather in the political balance, until matters have come to such a pass that our help is needed to save the nation.

When Grant was nominated in Philadelphia, for the Presidency (I forget whether for the first or second term) the leading woman suffragists of the country were sought by the leading politicians and entreated to come to Philadelphia to attend the convention. A dozen of us, Lucy Stone, Mrs. Stanton, Miss Anthony, myself, etc., accepted the invitation and were seated with the dignitaries on the platform. We were received with unstinted courtesy, and but for our determination to take care of ourselves, we should have been housed in the most palatial hotel, had carriages at our disposal and been escorted by the most elegant flunkeys of the Republican party. We would not be beholden to them in the least. We were asked to write out a woman suffrage resolution that would suit us—and we wrote the most pronounced resolution we could pen. It was adopted into the platform without a verbal alteration, amid such cheering as nearly lifted the roof of the Academy of Music. We were put on the program for speeches at the outdoor ratification meetings, amid the blaze of bonfires, discharge of fireworks, blare of trumpets and shouts of the multitude. It really seemed as if we had gained a great deal.

All over the country women took the stump for Grant, and in all the large cities the demand for good women speakers was incessant. I cleared the whole month of October of Lyceum engagements, and went into the campaign like a whirlwind, speaking every night and sometimes three times a day. The very iron of iron seemed to have entered into my constitution—I never knew fatigue—and the very fire of fire into my speech. I was working for women!

Grant was elected, and the papers said, and the politicians assented, that women had done it. Now, when we began to apply to Republican legislatures for the redemption of their promises, the miserable deceiver put their fingers in their eyes and asked us "if we saw anything green?"

I went to our Massachusetts senators, Henry Wilson, Charles Sumner and others, and inquired, "Will the Republican party keep its promises to women?" And their answer, with seeming, but hypocritical, regret, was this: "Why, Mrs. Livermore, all that performance at Philadelphia was political buncombe, gotten up to carry Grant's election."

If the St. Louis convention had put woman suffrage into its platform I would have been content, for never will prohibition prevail till women vote. I should not have been content if it had put prohibition into the platform and left woman suffrage out, but I would have smothered my wrath and made the best of it.

MARY A. LIVERMORE.

BUENA PARK, ILL., Feb. 26, 1892.

DEAR EDITOR:—The St. Louis conference came out much as I expected. The project of consolidation had not been sufficiently agitated. The plan of organization should be matured by a full and free and friendly discussion before the convention is called. As I have said before, there is more importance attached to the plan of organization than to anything else.

The plan should include all parts of the reform that may be demanded. This should be insisted upon. The plan should be based on equal rights, equal terms, equal justice, and equal opportunities for all. These parties should be willing to allow to each of the other parties the same rights and privileges they claim for themselves.

Let each party work out its own part of the reform under a superintendent appointed by the national party. The new party should not be named after any special reform.

Wendell Phillips says one million earnest men well organized can govern the country. We have no organized party in this country, that can succeed in this reform movement. There must be a new party organized sooner or later. It is inevitable. The success of the new party will depend on the plan of its organization. It must be organized for an object in which everybody agrees, and which will commend itself to everybody's conscience and judgment. The good of the people will necessarily have much to do in this new organization.

Yours in behalf of our National Reform Party,

JOEL A. SIMONDS.

CHAMPAIGN, ILL., February 25, 1892.

DEAR SISTER:—I have just been reading the report of the St. Louis conference, and I am very happy because you were not successful. If they had put a prohibition plank in the new party platform it would have driven many from the support of the "Party of Labor," and what we want is to draw all possible votes from both the Republicans and Democrats to disintegrate the old parties. They accepted a woman suffrage resolution, showing that there are many who are in favor of woman suffrage who are much opposed to prohibition. I don't know why, for they are synonymous in my estimation. Woman suffrage will be more or less agitated, and the agitation will reach many who would not be reached (especially in the South) if it was accompanied with prohibition. Now let Prohibitionists work for prohibition and woman suffrage and be a distinct party. It was good for the Prohibitionists that prohibition was presented at the conference, and I so feared it would be adopted and the prohibition ranks decimated thereby. Let all the parties put woman suffrage planks in their platforms, but I hope none of them, except the Prohibition party, will give even "catnip tea" to the Prohibitionists, then the latter will feel it incumbent on them to do valiant work for prohibition, as they will know they have only themselves to depend upon, and the weak "catnip tea" Prohibitionists in the old parties will find nothing to excuse them for staying in them.

I think a year hence, most Prohibitionists will be as glad as I am now, that the new Labor party platform has no prohibition in it.

I am the crankiest kind of a prohibition crank, and I want everything done for the best good of the temperance cause in every way.

I do wish all temperance organizations and people could work together in harmony. Defeat was victory.

MRS. SARAH SPENCER.

CHICAGO, ILL., Feb. 25, 1892.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—Although freely criticising you and your woman's association I have never for a moment ceased to fight your battles. I think you are wise enough to know that "faithful are the wounds of a friend."

Now let us compare "field notes." In 1886-7 at the Springfield Prohibition Conference, I insisted that the Prohibitionists should send to that Cincinnati Union Labor Convention a greeting of brotherly regard, and capture at least the farmers. All alone I went there and reported (as you did) a minority (substitute) report adopting prohibition even stronger than your late resolution. Like your resolution, mine was adopted, only my majority was much larger than yours. Just as with you so they did with me.

Robert Schilling (backed by Colonel Norton) arose and said: "As Chicago is of the committee on platform I rise to say that unless Mr. Haaff's substitute is reconsidered, and our majority report is adopted, I will lead the Wisconsin delegation and bodily leave this hall." Again rising I shouted, "Let them go," then Streeter showed his hand and introduced a motion to reconsider, declared it carried, although it was plainly lost as every farmer stood by me solid.

Now please to pause a moment and read the resolution of the United Labor Party: "Intemperance is the result of poverty." "Give a poor man all the money he needs and he will not drink." Go read it for yourself and see how truly I boil it down.

Now recall, you had that same "poverty" lie hurled at you—no doubt pounded into you in the committee room. I am now wise for the future. Will you, too, learn wisdom? Let us draw some conclusions:

No reform movement can rise higher than its leaders. Witnesses: Reformation, Luther; Abolition party, Wendell Phillips, Garret Smith, Lloyd Garrison, Lyman Beecher; Republican party, William Seward, Horace Greeley, Thurlow Weed, Salmon P. Chase, Lincoln, Wade, etc., etc., etc.; America, Pilgrim Fathers; Mexico, Pizarro.

No reform order can rise higher than its leaders. Now stop a moment and think of the Prohibition party—think of your Fisk, Finch, Hastings, Black, Funk, Demorest. Look at the W. C. T. U.; look at your Woodbridge, Lathrap, and as I said at the '90 banquet, "The most wonderful display of oratorical stock since the days of Clay and Calhoun." Now what ails things anyhow?

H. H. HAAFF.

CYCLONE, IND., Feb. 29, 1892.

DEAR FRIEND:—I see by the papers that you are not very well satisfied with the platform of principles promulgated at St. Louis last week. Neither am I satisfied and I am one of the old guard in this county. I consider the platform weak in several particulars and especially so on suffrage and the temperance question. It will not satisfy the old guard in the People's party and I fear that it means defeat to the reform forces of this campaign. Nevertheless we will hope on until the People's party meet at Omaha, and if that convention refuses to hear us, we will have to pitch our tents over against the People's party, along with Streeter, Delamater, Jones and others. I will say, however, that municipal suffrage is all you can hope to secure from the states at present and it is no use to ask for more. I herewith transmit planks on these points that would meet my approval and you are at liberty to use them as you think best. ROBT. S. COOK.

KIRKSVILLE, MO., February 29, 1892.

DEAR SISTER:—My husband attended that conference of earnest men and women at St. Louis. Among other things he told me of the brave and dauntless efforts of yourself and others for prohibition and suffrage.

While thinking about it, a part of the monologue of Charles V. before the tomb of Charlemagne has so often come to my mind, I am impelled to remind you of the quotation:

"God's fiat rules it all. One day he wills
A thought, a want, should burst upon the world,
Then grow and spread, and mix with everything,
Possess some men, win hearts, and delve a groove
Though kings may trample on it, and may seek
To gag—only that they some morn may see
At diet, conclave, this the scorned idea,
That they had spurned, all suddenly expand
And soar above their heads, bearing the globe
In hand, or on the brow tiara."

Victor Hugo, in his preface to "Hernani" says: "In revolution every movement is an advance. Truth and Liberty have this excellence, that all one does for and against them serves them equally well."

If this be true there is a mighty host at work. Can we not at once in confidence, make our banners of victory, and have them ready (a woman's way) for this morn when these scorned ideas shall suddenly expand and soar above our heads, proclaimed and accepted by the American people? Yours, for God and Home and Native Land.

X.

THE WELCOME GUEST.

Some people come to our houses and we entertain them from necessity, tolerance or good nature. The coming of others is a benediction, we wait for it, we long for it and rejoice when it occurs. We all know women whose advent in a home makes holiday for all. England and America have produced more of these than other nations.

We see her sitting there, this ideal guest. She is thoroughly wholesome in appearance, healthful and happy looking; she is dressed in good taste and is of attractive aspect, attitude and manner; has a breathable waist and some hint of dress reform in her general appearance but not enough to make her in anywise out of line with the sympathy of those about her; she is not in anywise a blue-stocking, but still it is apparent that she is an intellectual woman in the best and broadest sense, hospitable towards new ideas and well versed in old ones, ready for the next thing, sympathetic in nature so that she takes in to a degree the spirit of her environment and comes like a warm breeze into the house, rather than as a northern blast. The host is glad to see her and tells her what he is thinking about in great affairs that must occupy every voter who wishes well to his kind. The hostess dotes upon her as an elder sister beloved, welcome, and appreciative to the last degree of every good and pleasant thing. The lads and lassies gather round to show her the books they love and the games that brighten the long evenings. The little folks climb to her knee or hang about her chair asking for stories and the unfolding of that rich repertoire of plays and happy hits in which she is well versed, knowing what childhood likes. The big boy wants her to go out skating with him. His sister takes her into a corner to get criticisms of the essay she must read in school next week,—in short, the welcome guest is a sister-at-large whose universal sympathies attract and hold all members of the home into which she has been admitted, with a loving good will.

This is our ideal of the role that THE UNION SIGNAL should play as it goes on its long journey into every civilized nation under the sun. It is a great part in the drama, a beautiful hope. We cannot make so much as an approach to our ideal, except by the earnest coöperation of the best men and women who care for the white-ribbon cause. So, we ask them for their bright thoughts, and their help in every possible way, and we beseech them not to judge us with severity, since we can only go "inching along" the bright pathway of possibilities, for the paper loved alike by them and us. We are glad that THE UNION SIGNAL is read and loved by men, for it was never intended for women alone—we want competition for our paper around the evening lamp. Every line of it has been penned with prayer, and we ask the prayers of all who read. As we move forward we should like to be described in Browning's words:

"One who never turned his back, but marched breast forward,
Never doubted clouds would break,
Never dreamed, though right were worsted, wrong would triumph,
Held, we fall to rise, are baffled to fight better, sleep to wake."

PRESIDENTIAL SUFFRAGE FOR WOMEN.

The Rhode Island Woman's Suffrage Association has presented a petition to the legislature, which has been heartily indorsed and recommended as a model by the Woman's Journal of Boston, and the National Woman's Suffrage Association, at its recent convention at Washington, indorsed the movement and appointed a committee to carry out the ideas involved. The point made is that presidential suffrage is the very best form of suffrage for women to get first. All things in the republic relate themselves politically to the presidential election.

It is within the constitutional prerogative of our senators to grant this franchise and it is their constitutional duty to grant it. The negro in the seceding slave states owes his ballot not alone to the fifteenth amendment but wholly to Congressional enforcement of the constitutional guarantee to the states in the United States of a republican form of government. This is set forth in the greatest of Charles Sumner's speeches on "The Equal Rights of All." It is held by many first-class lawyers to be impossible to secure a suffrage amendment to the National Constitution, and whether we believe this or not, we can certainly indorse with all our hearts the movement for presidential suffrage. A hearing is soon to be given before the Rhode Island legislature backing up the petition for presidential suffrage. If properly managed, this movement should have a better chance of immediate success in Iowa and Kansas than in any eastern state, and between now and 1896 the gate can be opened wide. The petition is so suggestive that we print it for its educational value:

To the Honorable the General Assembly:

The Rhode Island Woman Suffrage Association respectfully represents:

1. That the Constitution of the United States provides that the President and vice-President of the United States shall be chosen by electors of whom "each state shall appoint in such manner as the legislature thereof may direct," a number specified in the constitution.

2. That the constitution prescribes a republican government for all the states.

3. That the principle of republicanism is the equal right of all the people, the citizens, all the members of the body politic.

4. That the people are legally identical with the citizens; that women are legally citizens and members of the body politic, constitutionally a part of the people.

5. That the legislature of this state, in the exercise of its constitutional power and duty to direct the manner in which the presidential electors shall be appointed, has provided by law that electors shall be chosen by "the people of this state qualified to vote in the election of general officers," thereby referring the choice of electors to a part only of the people, and disfranchising all the women of the state, embracing in this disfranchisement a majority of all the adult citizens of the state.

Wherefore, believing the aforesaid disfranchisement to be in derogation of the rule of republican equality which the constitution requires, and that such discrimination against women is against natural justice, said Association prays that the General Assembly will grant relief to the female citizens of the state by providing by law that such citizens, having the qualifications other than sex required of male citizens, may vote in the election of such electors.

A GALLANT brother, Benjamin St. James Frye, of Kansas, has lain down his pen forever. Mr. Frye was editor of the Central Christian Herald for nearly twenty years, and with voice and pen ever ready to aid in all efforts for the advancement of women.

The Watch-Tower.

"Follow me," was what Christ said, not follow my disciples.

***

One of our correspondents has undertaken to defend Job's wife, and declares it is good exegesis to claim that she never said to her suffering spouse, "Curse God and die," but "Bend the knee and die." I hope so for the sake of womankind.

***

The women of Chicago are among the most enterprising of modern times. Among other moral indications of this fact they have recently caused to be placed in the street cars of the city a neat placard to the following effect: "Cleanliness is next to godliness. We cannot all be gods, but we can all be clean. Please do not spit on the floor." On the reverse side of the same are these words: "The ladies do not speak about it, but they don't like the spitting habit on the cars—just ask them."

***

"Nineteenth Century Authors," is a guide to the study of contemporary literary men and women, published by Louise Manning Hodgkins, formerly professor of English literature in Wellesley College. Whoever will master its contents will be well paid in the lore of those bright geniuses whose thoughts have done more to knit together the nations in our day than any other group could do, because without antagonizing men in their politics or their religion, they have stolen in at the postern gate of the imagination and taken captive men's spirits at their will. Professor Hodgkins is a thorough-going temperance woman, and On Duty hopes to have articles by her in THE UNION SIGNAL.

***

At a recent meeting in Central Music Hall, where Mrs. Annie Jenness Miller spoke on dress reform in her usual attractive and convincing manner, a resolution was put to vote on motion of our senior editor to the effect that women who had worked their way up through the different grades of the public schools ought to be eligible as school principals, and that ability, not sex, should settle the question of preferment. This resolution was offered because opposition had been made to a very capable young woman who was proposed as candidate for a principalship in our public schools, and it was suggested that a man should have the place although he was not in anywise more capable. That great audience of women without dissent gave a hearty vote in favor of the resolution. Thus little by little, women are learning to stand by their own, and they may well do so, for their position is analogous to that stated by Dr. Franklin when, after they had signed the Declaration of Independence, he addressed himself to his comrades and said, "Gentlemen, we must all hang together, for if we do not, be assured we shall all hang separately."

***

Mrs. Alice Gordon Gulick saw in the Sandwich Islands a family in whose blood is intermingled that of the five races of mankind, namely: Indian, African, Malayan, Mongolian and Caucasian. This is the only case on record, so far as we know. It will be most interesting to watch the outcome of these confluent rivers of humanity in children who are one-half Caucasian, one-fourth Mongolian, one-eighth Malayan, one-sixteenth African and one-sixteenth Indian. Sir Francis Galton, the specialist in heredity, ought to have this object lesson placed under his well-instructed eyes.

***

Every guild has its own stereotyped errors of expression and action. The temperance worker is very apt to sound the "h" in prohibition with a doubled emphasis. He is also given to using the word "verbiage" after this fashion: "That thought is very good, but I don't like the verbiage." It would be well for him to look in the dictionary and find what "verbiage" means. A more correct expression would be, "I don't like the wording of that phrase." "I move you" instead of "I move" is a common error. In point of fact, the mover does not move you, and does not move himself, but he moves that such and such an action be taken. "Rise and stand upon your feet" is a frequent utterance, as if there were some device by which one could stand otherwise than in such a position as to involve the pedal extremities. We should be glad to have a list of other pet errors forwarded to us. These are mentioned by way of a beginning. Another common question is, "Are you through?" The better form is, "Have you finished?" "I am through," said an American rising from his hasty breakfast. "Through what," asked the Englishman, "the cellar or the roof?"

ON DUTY.

Queen's Gardens.

THE IDEAL NURSE.

BY MRS. JOSIE CURTIS.

Like all perfected work the ideal nurse does not mature in a day or in a century. She is evolved through years of experience growing through the mistakes and failures and successes of people who have lived in the past, until to-day we have a being so utterly unlike the woman who did neighborhood nursing half a century ago that it is easy to perceive the evoluting tendencies of the worm and butterfly extending to the human race.

The transformation that has already taken place inspires us to adjust before our eyes the telescope of the future and describe a few qualifications of the ideal nurse. When another half century is marked on the dial plate of time, the band of women who are aiming toward the ideal nurse will have severed the cords that have bound them to their traditional namesake who reveled in goose grease, polecat oil, soiled socks, and pork sweats, lobelia and ipecacua mixed ad libitum (internally) with copious doses of castor oil and boneset tea.

Among the stored up memories of childhood's years, I resurrect my mother's description of the neighborhood nurse who frequented my grandfather's home. I see her to-night in pantomime as she goes to an afflicted home, nestled between the hills of the Granite state. The fireplace smokes intolerably. Boys would be boys, even fifty years ago. It was so easy to stuff the chimney full of straw when Nurse Robinson appeared with her blue home-spun frock, "all buttoned down before." She smoked her pipe, carried her snuff-box and used it, drank cider, saw spooks before midnight, and grew eloquent over her smart son Jack. It is supposable (I can't say how authentic) that the renowned and immortal proverb, "Quicker than Jack Robinson," first fell from the lips of this nurse who was counted good in her day.

The ideal nurse will be well born, inheriting a large degree of health and the effects of education and culture, transmitted by an ancestry who, having lived intelligently according to the laws of heredity and hygiene, will have made the qualifications of a more perfected race, subject to intelligent law rather than accident. Born well, reared, educated and trained well, the ideal nurse will enter upon her vocation subject only to circumstances and a few characteristics which (still remaining) may indicate her relationship to Adam and Eve, but possessing a will-power that has been strengthened through the years, and never weakened by injuries received prior to, or after birth.

The ideal nurse will do much to eliminate qualities of character which could harm the body or mar the soul. Being happy in her own freedom she will strive to break the chains of habit, of custom, of ignorance, which make slaves of children born of an ancestry less fortunate than her own. Desiring to uplift humanity she will bring all her intelligence to bear upon the problem of removing as far as possible all forms of sin and disease in people seeking her services, thus gradually doing much to lift the mortgage that has for centuries rested so heavily upon the human race.

Our ideal nurse, like her sister of the present time, will care for the physical bodies of her patients after the most approved methods taught by the training schools of her day; the noble women with skilled hands and educated brains, graduating from the training schools in this century, devoting their days and nights to others, alleviating the pains and sorrows of the afflicted,—these are the women who are photographing in the minds of the rising generation the ideal nurse that is to be.

The attributes that this branch of life's helpers are to possess can possibly be feebly pictured by one who has in times of severe sickness felt the difference between the touch of hands inspired by love and sympathy, and those that wrought only for the money gained by service. The ideal nurse, like the ideal physician, should have a vast deal of tact, using it skillfully in all the details of work, treating in varied ways the same disease in different bodies possessing a diversity of temperaments, relying ofttimes on tact well mixed with the medicine to cure the patient. The nurse who is thoroughly schooled, having a natural love for the sick, possessing ingenuity and tact, can be to the physician an aid of the greatest value. Such a nurse will be able to receive and carry out medical orders without requiring nonessential minutia of detail. In order to do this the nurse must be quick in perception, yet sufficiently reflective to avoid mistakes.

The ideal nurse will be a student of human nature as well as a student in her profession, controlling a patient with the same kind of wisdom as a wise wife uses in guiding her husband with so little friction that he feels happy in believing he is having matters all his own way. The ideal nurse will go quietly about her work, though never conveying the impression by step or look that a funeral is hourly expected. Some patients are so constituted that a mournful, gloomy or hopeless atmosphere emanating from the nurse would do much to hasten their exit from this world. The ideal nurse will work in unison with the ideal physician in an endeavor to lead a patient's mind out of old grooves and away from continuous habits of thought upon which the brain has exhausted itself. People sometimes remark of some patients, expressing themselves in a cynical manner, "Oh, they only think they are sick." Admitting the assertion to be true in many cases, the patient deserves our intense sympathy rather than our sarcasm, for mind sickness, in whatever form it may be found, is a disease most difficult to eradicate, and that nurse or that physician who learns here and now to judiciously administer any remedy, whether physical or mental, that shall alleviate the distressed conditions of a diseased mind are sowing the seed for that millennial day that will bring to humanity many physicians of wonderful power assisted by their helpmates, the ideal nurses of the future.

Soul and body are so closely connected and act upon each other with such rapidity that a division line can never be ascertained. Physicians of the past and their conservative colleagues of the present have made the physical body almost entirely the subject of study, giving but little consideration to its spiritual tenant. The metaphysicians of the present day are so taken up with the tenant, that the most radical of them would relegate his house to oblivion; perhaps both are right and both are wrong, like the two sides of a shield; much depends on how you view them, but progressive individuals, nurses or physicians will adjust their angles of vision so that a comprehensive view of all sides may render to them helpful and efficient service in the hour of need. The ideal nurse will never look through the eyes of prejudice, for they are always narrow eyes. The more the roll of centuries has cast dust upon the vision, the deeper rooted the prejudice, but the nurses of the future will be free from this taint that so retards the progress of the race to-day. Comprehending more fully the dual nature of human beings, she will perceive that a disturbance in mind produces inharmony in body and vice versa. If the house is out of order its occupant will be disturbed. Perceiving this, she will set herself to the task of regulating matters with all the wisdom, physical or mental, at her command.

The ideal nurse will possess positive attributes of character that shall be to her like a shield or an armor, aiding in protecting herself from taking on the diseased conditions of patients. Positive qualities, however, must be exercised with great care and judgment, never proceeding from combativeness, thus arousing antagonisms, but springing from justice and knowledge; her orders, though positive, may always be tempered with sympathy, kindness and love. The ideal nurse will deem it unscientific to disturb the conscientious faith of a seriously sick patient, however differing may be her own religious views. Faith strengthens both soul and body, and a disturbance of faith during a critical period of health might be disastrous to the life of the patient.

The nurse of the present and future ought always to be a person of great trustiness of character, a kind of mother confessor to her patients, a woman who, knowing the sorrows and trials of other souls, would never reveal secrets sacredly entrusted to her care. She will not only carry in her heart, but comprehensively understand the philosophy of the spiritual Law-giver who taught us to "bear one another's burdens." Believing in the power of this great truth she will practically apply it to the restoration of the sick in body or soul.

The ideal nurse and the ideal physician will better understand the needs of soul and body, treating cases with reference to the dual make-up of mankind. Radical metaphysicians sometimes make spirit too great a sovereign in its own house, too little subject to external conditions. On the other hand, physicians ofttimes vigorously subject the body to heroic treatment, ignoring the claims of spirit. Both may learn from each other, unless they unfortunately possess narrow-gauged eyes and narrow-gauged feet on a narrow-gauged track.

This outline of the ideal nurse is not too mythical to become practical. She is typified in our day, and ere many of Bellamy's pictures of the future shall materialize into reality she will be forming rescue stations for the shipwrecked souls and bodies of men. While we reverence the name of Florence Nightingale, let us not forget our own Dorothea Dix, and Elizabeth Blackwell in whose brain the germ of the sanitary commission originated, which ultimately raised $12,000,000 to care for the sick and the dying. While we pay tribute to the statesman-like talents of Madam Rowland, and honor the memory of Queen Isabella, let us cherish in loving memory the names of Mary A. Livermore and Mother Bickerdyke, and many other women who aided in saving the Union by restoring to health many a boy in blue who otherwise must have surrendered his life in Southern hospitals or on blood-stained battle-fields. As long as memory lasts we should revere the name of Clara Barton, who for four long years exposed her life beside the field surgeons, carrying her own supplies and distributing them alike to northern friend or southern foe, and when her own country was at peace, with a soul on fire for love of humanity, she crossed the ocean to follow the destinies of the Franco-Prussian war. And last, but not least, recall to memory Anna Carter Lee, daughter of Gen. Robert Lee, who was ostracised from home and friends for devotion to the Union cause, dying in the third year of the war, with no friend to soothe her closing hours but the tried and trusted friendship of an old colored nurse. Though this woman's flesh was black as ebony she must have possessed a soul of fairest whiteness.

This is a faint tribute to these noble women, these workers of the past, these helpers of the present, these women of the future. How we need them! Receiving us at birth, caring for us in sickness and age, making smooth our passage through physical death into eternal life—beautiful and beneficent hands are these, consecrated to the necessities of humanity.

Marengo, Ill.

News from the Field.

MISSOURI.

GLIMPSES HERE AND THERE.

"Time past thou canst not it recall;
Time future thou mayst never see;
Time present is the only time for thee."

On January 12 our beloved comrade and co-worker, known by us all as "dear mother Lemen," was called by the Master to "come home." Mrs. M. P. Lemen was converted when only a child. She left her home near Boston, and came west as a missionary. She has labored long and faithfully in every good cause. May her mantle fall on the white-ribboners she loved so well to work with, and a double portion of her spirit be given us. A truer and nobler mother we do not know. Her daughter, Mrs. Denny, state lecturer of Indiana, is one of our very best speakers. Her son-in-law, Col. John Sobieski, was a great admirer of "Mother Lemen." The minister who preached her funeral sermon, said, "When I think of her as a mother, as a soldier of the cross, as an educator and as a white-ribboner, I feel my insignificance as never before in my life."

The thirteenth district has the past month lost another comrade beloved. Miss Belle Wilson, of Monett, in the strength of mature young womanhood, was called from this world of labor. She was a worker of rare consecration. "He giveth his beloved sleep."

Mrs. Ida Burr has spent a month in the thirteenth district recently, with fair results. On account of her continued ill health, our state superintendent of Sabbath observance, Mrs. Kate L. Shaw, of Cameron, has been obliged to resign her position and visit California for a time. The best wishes of the many white-ribboners of Missouri attend her. A new superintendent will be appointed soon.

Col. C. J. Holt has been holding a series of lectures in the first district, at La Belle; much enthusiasm was aroused and ten new members were added to the union.

The third district has done most excellent work in arranging and holding medal contests. At St. Charles a Demorest medal contest was held on the evening of February 22. The large opera house was crowded. The St. Charles college and Lindenwood female seminary teachers rendered exceptionally fine music. The W. C. T. U. meetings at this place are largely attended. Many of the young ladies have given their names for a Y organization which will soon be perfected. A series of temperance lectures are being arranged for. A temperance union service was largely attended at the Presbyterian church, January 24. Besides the minister, several gentlemen of the city spoke. More interest in the great temperance reform was manifested at this meeting than had been for many months.

Our state organizer has begun a month's work in the fourth district. Much work is being done here in the departments of juvenile and evangelistic work. Dr. Brumbaugh has given some rousing lectures and the unions in general are actively at work.

Eldorado Springs union is being blessed by an increase of membership. They hold mothers' meetings, study our state minutes, hold medal contests, and are trying as much as possible to educate public sentiment.

Osceola has been doing what she could. Her president, Mrs. Barnes, and our state superintendent of Sunday-school work, have been very ill, but notwithstanding all this, they recently held an evening meeting at the Opera House which was well attended. The program consisted of music and recitation and a charming motion song by the little folks.

Mrs. J. H. Clark, state organizer, spent five weeks in the second district doing good work. She held twenty-two public meetings and fourteen afternoon meetings, organizing at Mooresville, Sumner, Brunswick, Keytesville, Dalton and Lagonda, collecting dues and gaining subscribers for THE UNION SIGNAL. Mrs. Ida B. Cole, president of the second district, gave an excellent lecture for the Carrollton Y's.

On the evening of January 31, a temperance mass-meeting was held at Holden. The district president, Mrs. N. E. Golliday, read an inspiring paper on the widening work of the W. C. T. U. Mrs. McNary very ably presented her department—social purity. Short addresses were given by the pastors, charming music was rendered by Mrs. J. W. Mitchell, and some appropriate recitations were given by "our girls." A "free-will" offering was received of $9.25.

The new union at Green Ridge is prospering; two new members and several honorary members were received at their last meeting. A Y will soon be organized here. Each week a larger amount of space is given for the furtherance of this great temperance work in The Enterprise, which is ably edited by our brother and co-worker, Van B. Wisker. He is assisted by his wife, who edits the woman's department.

Sedalia has a new corps of officers, Mrs. S. E. Barrack, president, Mrs. Flora McLaughlin, secretary. This union has been doing valuable work for the Temple, and was assisted by the Ministers' Alliance in arranging for a lecture given by our president, Mrs. Hoffman.

Miss E. P. Babb visited some points in her district this month. At Centralia she met the W. C. T. U. on Saturday, and on Sunday organized a Loyal Temperance Legion of forty members. The Demorest medal contest held by the university students at Columbia was a success. Our state president has been filling engagements in the state with marked success, as usual.

Bolivar has now local headquarters of its own, and is doing most admirable work in many departments. A parlor meeting was held which netted them twenty-six dollars.

The Central W. C. T. U. of Kansas City last week entertained the interstate conference of women. The immense church was filled to overflowing at each session. Mrs. Hoffman gave the welcoming address; the response was given by Mrs. Laura M. Johns, of Kansas. Addresses were delivered by Rev. Anna Shaw, Miss Florence Balgarnie, of England, Miss Mary Dunn, our state superintendent of franchise, Mrs. Virginia Hedges, and others. This is reported one of the most instructive meetings for women ever held in the state.

N. B.—Will all reporters please sign their names in full when they send me reports? An excellent report was received from some person (unknown to me) in the second district with no name signed.

MRS. MARY E. JONES,
State Reporter, Humansville.

IOWA.

ALL ALONG THE LINE.

Needing material for my SIGNAL reports, I sent an appeal for it through the columns of our little gem, the Iowa Signal.

Mrs. Eva S. Gilchrist was the first to respond, for the eleventh district. This district has eighteen unions. Rock Valley union is preparing for a mass county convention which is to be held the last of March for the purpose of effecting a county organization. Our state president is to be there to help. It is also planning for lectures from Mrs. S. F. Grubb, president of Kansas W. C. T. U., and from Rev. Henrietta G. Moore, of Ohio. Calliope union is also to have Miss Moore, and is arranging for a medal contest.

Ireton union is blessed with a flourishing Loyal Temperance Legion and a Band of Mercy. This union furnishes for the local paper every week, a full column of items of general interest concerning our many-sided work. It has recently held a social from which five dollars was realized for the Temple and Temperance Hospital. It has secured 120 names to the World's Petition. Twenty copies of THE UNION SIGNAL, fourteen of the Iowa Signal, and twelve copies of the Midget are taken. Fifty copies of the Convention numbers of THE UNION SIGNAL and of the Iowa Signal were distributed.

In Cedar county, in the fifth district, eight silver and two gold medal contests have been held since the fifteenth of last May. These contests are revolutionizing the entire county. One class was composed of eight young men. Two hundred and seventy-five dollars have been raised through these meetings.

Belmond union, in the third district, has purchased the building it has been renting for headquarters, and is expecting soon to build a house better suited to its needs. The members are now working on quilts and clothing for the nursery at Davenport, where children given to the Child's Educational Aid Association are temporarily cared for until they can be placed in permanent homes. This union also sustains a Loyal Temperance Legion and Band of Mercy. Miss Theo Whiting, one of the workers, recently gave an interesting entertainment in her school and raised three dollars and twenty-six cents for the Legion.

THE UNION SIGNAL and Iowa Signal and the Midget go into nearly all the homes, some one of the three finding its way into every house.

Willard union, at Charles City, in the fourth district, is doing grand work in various ways. Demorest medal contests held under its auspices draw larger crowds than any other attraction.

Volga and Asbury unions are arranging for medal contests. Rev. Henrietta G. Moore began her work in Iowa at Volga, and spoke to delighted audiences at this place, West Union, Maynard, Sumner and Shell Rock, and I confidently affirm that this was the case wherever she went, though all have not yet reported to me.

The janitor at one place told the weak little union that he should charge a dollar and a nalf for his services the evening she spoke, but after he heard the address, said he would take nothing, for he had been well paid in listening to the eloquent speaker. Miss Moore bravely yet gently speaks the truth as she knows it, and the people kindly receive it. She organized a union of sixteen bright, interested women at Sumner with the following named officers: President, Mrs. Alice M. Lawrey; secretary, Miss Celia Probert; treasurer, Mrs. Robert Paden.

Among other good works the Rockford union has faithfully discharged the too-often neglected duty of circulating petitions, and has collected an encouraging list of names to several different ones.

Mrs. M. H. Dunham has sent out an official circular with blank pledges asking our women to secure signatures to the million voters' agreement.

Hundreds of our workers will cheerfully fall in with this arrangement.

CLARA P. WHITE,
State Reporter, Volga.

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA.

ALL'S WELL.

In the absence of our state reporter I have been requested to drop a line to THE UNION SIGNAL if only to keep up our credit as an active union.

Correspondence from all parts of the state indicates a continuous, healthy growth—there has been nothing spasmodic in these developments, but a steady advance. As usual, the holidays seemed to interrupt active work—but many unions reported New Year receptions. In San Francisco a reception was given to seamen on New Year's day, under the direct supervision of Mrs. Eden, state superintendent of work among sailors, assisted by the unions of the city. This annual reception is a real means of grace: the ladies furnished a continuous program of speeches and music, from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m., to which a house full of sailors gave ready ear. They come and go freely all day, are all regaled with hot coffee and good eatables, and their New Year's reception is a strong counter-attraction to the water front saloons, and Jack Tar has a day of happy and wholesome associations, instead of the coarse revelry of these pitfalls.

The Oakland union kept open house also on New Year's Day. The usual January executive meeting was well attended, and plans for a year of aggressive work were laid.

Dr. Mary Allen, of New York, has paid a brief visit to the state, and given several lectures in San Francisco, Oakland and San Rafael, with great acceptance. She is expected to return in April, when a course of lectures is planned for her. During her stay here, she was given a delightful reception in Oakland and assisted at a county convention in San Francisco.

Mary Allen West came with the Press League, and in the midst of its engrossing claims found time to look in at our county convention, give one of her bright and hearty speeches, and receive the warm greetings of the white-ribbon women. She also has promised to return to San Francisco later. The reception given to the Press League by the Women's Press Association was a brilliant affair. We were all proud of Miss West, the one white-ribboner of the League. It was pleasant to see many of our ilk among the California press women and their guests.

Our organizers are hard at work—Mrs. Skelton in the far north, in Shasta county, and Mrs. Smith in the mountains of Amador. Both are doing valiant, faithful work, that must tell for the cause. A work we have desired for several years to inaugurate is at last well on its feet. That is in the line of scientific temperance instruction and juvenile work. Mrs. N. B. Eyster, who has no superior in that specialty, is lecturing to the children of the public schools. Morning and afternoon, day after day, she goes from one school room to another, always filling each room to its utmost capacity, with eager children, and giving lessons that we feel sure will rank among the most permanent work we are doing.

The California women are doing many things more that it would be pleasant to relate, but I must leave something for the state reporter when she returns.

D. J. SPENCER,
Cor. Sec., San Francisco.

MICHIGAN.

ETCHINGS.

Our superintendent at Plymouth, Miss Anna Smith, has secured twenty-four subscribers to The Young Crusader. We have two sisters loyal and true in Los Angeles. At the holiday season they sent our union a beautiful white satin banner—decorated with roses, and a picture of the district president, Mrs. Jennie Voorheis. Mrs. Mason and Mrs. Hackett were the donors.

At the annual meeting at Detroit, Mrs. Lillian Hollister was made president of the "union of unions." The Detroit Central is planning for a course of study upon the science of government; instructive lectures as well as readings will be insured during the year.

The state convention is to be held in this city in May, and there has been a meeting of the general officers at Flint to devise plans for this, and for a better carrying on of our lines of work. The state paper, the Michigan Union, is to be enlarged. The editor's report was very encouraging.

The million voters' pledge was discussed, and voted a wise plan, both as a means of agitation and as a help to an organized ballot for prohibition. It seemed to us that here is an opportunity for the members of our local unions to do some very effective anti-saloon work.

Mrs. Green, superintendent of the L. T. L. writes, "I am trying to have more scientific temperance instruction given than has been in the past and as an incentive I urge the Legions to complete one volume of the Temperance Lesson Manual by the first of June and then receive their diplomas. She urges the autograph pledge cards for the World's Fair.

After the National, Mrs. Blodgett, of Detroit, visited Plymouth and gave a very full report to the union, which was the means of adding five new members. This very live union is having a series of monthly temperance meetings, collecting fruit for Grand Rapids hospital, and planning for a series of meetings under charge of Rev. George Vibbert. Miss Clara Wheeler, Y organizer, and Mrs. Lucretia Willard Treat have a line of engagements in the first district. Next in line, surely, comes the wise letter, or extracts from it, of our honorary evangelistic superintendent, Mrs. Boise. She sends me the six months program of the Central union of Grand Rapids, beautifully gotten up with a paper or subject for discussion for every meeting. These are some of the titles: "Claims of the Temperance Reform upon the Church," "The Sabbath in the Home," "Our Daughters in the Home," "Missionary Work and the Temperance Reform; their relative value." She writes, "My brain and heart have been laboring for some time with the problem how to keep our forces in good order and ready for action. One of our plans is by a review of the past to revive our knowledge of what we are and why we are and by means of these discussions draw in others." Their anniversary closed with a tea.—fifty being present.

The Grand Rapids unions manage to keep the home and hospital running, also the Y's school for girls, the jail mission, and its growing library; and we aid in the Sunday gospel temperance meetings. We seem to be in a sort of calm as far as active work for saloon destruction counts, but I have been reading Wendell Phillips and it inspires me. We are traveling over the same road and God watches His own and will appear at the right time if we are watching and obediently working as we are able.

Caseville in Huron county writes of much sickness among the members, but a spirit of courage and work. It is distributing literature, and soon a committee will go from door to door soliciting subscriptions to THE UNION SIGNAL and Michigan Union. One saloon-keeper has been prosecuted with success, the first victory of the kind ever gained in this county.

From the seventh district the secretary, Mrs. King, writes of Mrs. Benjamin's work: "Twenty-one lectures, two evening drills, two parlor talks." One writes, "every one here liked her. Ministers were glad she came." Bad Axe union reorganized after the lecture in the evening; fifty-two names were secured, including honoraries.

The union at White Pigeon has forty members, all conscientious Christian women. They all have labors and cares at home, yet are willing to sacrifice, if need be, to help the cause. They organized only last July, yet have contributed to Temple and hospital, and started a Loyal Temperance Legion with seventy-five names enrolled. Their next thought is a room for young men.

The California union writes of contests for children and young people. The prize was a copy of Longfellow's poems. As an evidence of the interest taken, some came twenty miles, and $15.80 was added to the treasury. The W. C. T. U. asked the pastors of the Methodist and Presbyterian Churches to bring the subject of the Brussels Treaty before their congregations, and each gave a stirring address concerning national sins. This union has also sent five dollars towards the support of a missionary among the lumbermen.

Elsie, in the sixth district, has been having Rev. Mr. Barney for a series of revival temperance lectures. Audiences were large, and much interest was manifested; twelve new names were added to the union. Mrs. D. M. Garver also spoke to a full house, securing five more members.

Mrs. Holman, the energetic superintendent of lumbermen's work, lives at Flint. The second missionary for the north woods left this week. The Swedish missionary has the circuit of sixteen counties. His monthly reports show thorough gospel and soul-saving work. Mrs. Barnes writes in regard to Sunday-school work: "When the day for quarterly temperance lesson comes, make the most of it. Make it a temperance day. Have ready songs, recitations, and an earnest talk by one whose heart is in the work."

Flat Rock sends a program for six months; one date is filled by a "Scrap Social;" another "Temperance News Items," conducted by two of the Y's.

I close this letter with clippings from a letter from Shiawassee's county president, who has been shut in for weeks yet been able to answer every letter, and keep the workers reminded: "For a little spice among the unions, and to get them better acquainted with each other's work, I asked each union to appoint one to write a paper on 'What is Necessary to Obtain Temperance Laws in our State?' After it is read and discussed in the union, each one is sent to me. I exchange them until each has the benefit of all the papers. Letters begin to come saying, 'We had such a good meeting.'"

Laingsburg Loyal Temperance Legion is the banner Legion in the eighth district. At the district convention recently held, two Y's were elected to office; Miss Ward, secretary, Miss Tillotson, superintendent of the Loyal Temperance Legion. The Y's have doubled their numbers and gained many honoraries. They write of trying to work in a social way; have given one reception at the Town Hall in Laingsburg; the programs are very pretty, with this motto at head, "You shall have better cheer ere you depart," and this at the close, "What we can do, we'll do to do you service." The toasts were "The Y's," "As we see ourselves," "Average wants of a boy," "When girls can vote."

On the committee on religious organizations appointed by the Michigan board of World's Fair commissioners, is Mrs. Mary T. Lathrap; several of our women have been appointed on committees of Women's Work. Our president's last circular letter closed with these words:

"We need new recruits; go after other women with the fife and drum of social method, with thundering cannon of indignation that speaks for an outraged world. Go after men in whose ballot lies the guilt and the remedy. Try persuasion, literature, public lectures, union meetings, the million pledge plan, anything! 'Hold the fort,' but make attacks for warfare or capture."

MRS. C. H. JOHNSON,
State Reporter, Flint.

TENNESSEE.

REVIVAL OF EFFORTS.

The sun is shining as brightly as on a day in June. The weather is so mild that it is delightful to be in the open air. Gardens are being planted, and the farmer's lands "turned" for the coming crops. All around are signs that winter is taking his flight before the advancing footsteps of the gentle springtime, and that the days of our incarceration behind closed doors and windows, always a trying time for Southern folks, are gone. Along with the renewed and renewing life of nature, the temperance forces are waking from their winter nap, and along the prohibition lines show that everywhere we are sipping the elixir of a new life. County conventions of the Prohibition party are being called in all parts of the state, and the million voters pledge circulated, and occasional Demorest medal contests show that that method of agitation and education is still kept up.

W. C. T. U. work could but look up a little in the general awakening, and so we hear of one or two new unions forming, and of old unions taking on renewed life and getting ready for the summer campaign against the forces of evil.

Jonesboro W. C. T. U. sends in a good report. They meet every first and third Thursday in W. C. T. U. hall, with decidedly greater interest in the work than ever before manifested. They have twenty-five regular and ten honorary members. Thirteen names have been added to their roll since the meeting of the state convention, six of whom were added as a result of Mrs. Meriwether's lecture a few weeks since. They received on New Year's day, and added seven more names to their list. Mrs. Meriwether delivered two lectures to highly appreciative audiences, gaining golden opinions from the people, and greatly strengthening the work by her visit.

In their meetings they use the monthly leaflets and the Home Protection Reading Course, and Hannah Whitall Smith's Bible Reading. They have been having mothers' meetings. They have taken up work in several new departments, and appointed new superintendents.

Athens union is always alive. They report a visit from our state president and one lecture which was well received. They meet every two weeks with good attendance and all departments of work progressing well. They take special pride in their juvenile and prison work; while parlor meetings hold a prominent place in their work the present year. They have sixteen regular and seven honorary members. At the time of sending in report there was in progress a series of gospel temperance meetings under the supervision of Dr. W. W. Satterlee, professor of scientific temperance instruction in the U. S. Grant university. They have had about two hundred and fifty signers of the pledge. They have good music and the meetings are well attended. Mr. Cone has a commodious, beautiful hall which he opens free of charge to all temperance meetings. He keeps on hand at all times for free distribution, thousands of temperance leaflets. Would there were more like him. They report also a lecture from Judge Horn and an "open meeting" at Cone's hall. The hall was packed and all enjoyed the literary program consisting of music, speeches and tableaux. They took up a good collection for their work at close of meeting. Athens also reports five flourishing saloons as a result of the re-incorporation of their town, which furnishes the W. C. T. U. plenty of work.

Morristown union has been greatly crippled by the sickness of its most prominent members this winter. They lost by death one of their best workers, Mrs. Lyle, who left a husband and three small children, the babe just one week old. Another good worker moved away and left them. The other sick have recovered, and they have taken up their work again with renewed hope and zeal. They meet every week. Mrs. Meriwether, our loved and honored president, has just been with them, and her visit gave a fresh impetus to their work. Quite a large audience was out to hear her, and some who were opposed to woman suffrage were converted on hearing her lecture on the "Silent Seven." They have a flourishing Loyal Temperance Legion, and report a class of young people almost ready to compete for the gold medal in the Demorest contest.

McMinnville union, though a small band, is very much in earnest. They report a visit to the county poorhouse, ten miles away, carrying to the inmates papers, pictures, cards, apples, etc. The only other item they report this time is that they have been told by the police that they ought not to ring the bell for their meetings as it alarmed people. If they did but know it, the main object of the W. C. T. U. is to alarm some people. McMinnville W. C. T. U. women are specially fond of the yellow ribbon, and the principle it represents.

East Nashville W. C. T U. reports having missed meeting two weeks this winter on account of the cold weather. But they are now in full harness again, their meetings being well attended and full of interest. Reports from prison work and hospital committees are often full of encouragement and touching in their pathos. Their night school at the cotton factory is in good condition, the average attendance being about thirty. Their superintendent of colored work reports great interest among the colored children, where she teaches the Loyal Legion lessons.

The Harriman W. C. T. U. dedicated their temple January 31, Mrs. Meriwether delivering the address. She also gave an address on January 30 for the benefit of the Temple. On February 1, she gave an address in Chattanooga for the benefit of the Working Girls' Home.

MRS. T. P. HOLMAN,
State Reporter, Fayetteville.

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

MRS. LIDE MERIWETHER, president of Tennessee W. C. T. U., is critically ill in Memphis with la grippe.

THE second district convention, Ohio W. C. T. U., has been indefinitely postponed on account of serious illness in the family of the president.

MRS. H. W. SAYERS, who founded the Waynesburg, Pa., W. C. T. U., was an energetic and faithful worker, who died "in the harness." Her works live after her.

MAJOR HILTON, of gospel temperance fame, has settled in Los Angeles and instituted a mission, in connection with which a midnight mission is soon to be established.

MRS. MARY C. WOODY, president of the North Carolina W. C. T. U., sailed for England, February 13, on the Umbria. She will be engaged in Gospel work for four months.

A RECEPTION was recently given to Miss Mary Allen West, one of the editors of THE UNION SIGNAL, and Mrs. Stedman, president of the Dominion W. C. T. U., by the Pasadena W. C. T. U. of California.

A PUBLIC meeting was held by the Decatur, Ill., W. C. T. U., to celebrate Lincoln's birthday. Close following this successful undertaking came the loss of their property and headquarters by fire, a depressing calamity, which they meet bravely, hoping soon to retrieve their loss.

MRS. EMILY PITT STEVENS, of California, has been stirring up the Crescent City to an eloquent realization of "who is my neighbor" as interpreted by the W. C. T. U. She spoke in the First Baptist Church to a large audience with marked results in recruits for the cause. Mrs. Stevens and Mrs. M. G. C. Edholm, press reporter for the World's W. C. T. U., were the guests of Mrs. Caroline E. Merrick, president of Louisiana, by whose invitation they went to New Orleans. Mrs. Stevens has been doing fine service in the East since the Boston Convention, but has now returned to California.

Official Communications.

FAVORABLE WINDS FOR POLICE STATION AND POLICE MATRON'S WORK.

A letter lies before me from one who has had large experience, in which she writes, "We succeeded in getting a bill passed which was permissive in securing matrons in the station houses, but it was a long time before we got the words must and shall instituted in place of may or can. But within the past week police matrons have been appointed in a number of station houses, and now in six stations we have twelve matrons."

Another letter from Colorado, from a loyal W. C. T. U. woman, desires to have literature sent on the subject of police matrons, as public sentiment is aroused on the subject of making the experiment in several cities where it has not been tried.

One of the most satisfactory features of the work is the manner in which it is spoken of by the chiefs of police, where the system of police matrons is tried. These chiefs (many of them) are college-bred men. They are moral, conscientious and good men, faithful in the discharge of duty, punctual in details of business and earnest in effort to promote good order.

One of them says, "The good cannot be estimated that one trusty, motherly woman can do as a matron, in a station where the larger number of arrests during the month have been women and children." It is now a matter of necessity, we cannot do without matrons: to shelter, protect, advise and direct the wayward, unruly and disobedient young girls, who have come under arrest, and need above all things, a true friend to take charge of them, until sentence is passed by the judge of the police court.

It is the testimony of the matrons themselves, that in the performance of duty, the interest increases and love for the unfortunates becomes strong and lasting. Since women have gone into every path that opens to them, and are neither afraid nor ashamed to seek for humanity suffering children wherever they may hide, the office of police matron is seen to be of God's appointment.

Let not our zeal abate, nor heart grow weary, dear comrades, in this department. There is much to be done, and now that we have so much encouragement by the fruits which we see, shall we not be vigilant, patient and faithful?

Will not each state superintendent look over her field and try to get a local superintendent appointed in every city of ten thousand inhabitants? Will you not try to ascertain whether an effort has been made, and with what success to secure police matrons?

Trusting in an all-wise Father for guidance and direction, and asking the prayers and sympathy of all the comrades of the W. C. T. U.

MRS. MARGARET ANDERSON WATTS,
Nat. Supt. Police Stations and Police Matrons' Dept.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL COMMUNICATION.

The first quarterly temperance Sunday for 1892 has passed. I desire to express my most hearty thanks to those who responded so kindly and quickly to my appeal in behalf of the same.

The Illustrated Temperance Lesson Leaflet I prepared for that occasion at the request of Sunday-school workers, had a very large sale. One hundred and seventy thousand copies were used. From all quarters I hear good words concerning it and the success of the day.

To those who failed to have their orders filled, or did not get them in time, it is but just to say that it was not from lack of ample provision on the part of the W. T. P. A. The printing of the lesson leaflet and filling of orders began early, but the demand was so unprecedented it could not be met at the last. Anticipating large orders I asked the one who had the printing in charge if he was sure that abundant provision had been made for later orders. He replied that "an enormous quantity had been printed and there must be sufficient to supply any demand." But after that I was told 10,000 per day for a week were struck off. If your individual order was not filled, or failed to reach you at the time desired, you will, I am sure, rejoice in this proof of so practical and widespread an interest in Sunday-school Bible temperance study.

We must capture and turn into practical channels whatever of thoughtfulness or conviction, or enthusiasm may have been awakened by this temperance Sunday.

THE COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION AND THE SUNDAY-SCHOOLS.

I ask you to unite with me in securing the names of all pledged scholars, and of all who will sign the pledge, upon the autograph pledge cards, in the national colors, red, white and blue, for the decoration of the W. C. T. U. building of the World's Fair. These autograph cards with the triple pledge printed on them, can be obtained upon application to me or the department secretary, at cost: 10 cents per package of thirty, assorted colors; 25 cents for three packages of assorted colors; $2.50 for 900, postpaid. These cards cannot be sold singly, or less than a package of thirty. In payment please send money in express order if possible, otherwise in postal note or postage stamps.

Upon each autograph pledge card, secure the name—one only—of the scholar, the name of the Sunday-school, the name of the town and the name of the state.

When all possible names have been secured, send the cards by mail, or if by express with charges paid, to Miss Anna A. Gordon, Evanston, Ill., who will have charge of fastening them together along with those bearing the names of the children and young people the world over, to festoon our W. C. T. U. building of the World's Fair. As Miss Gordon has said, this Total Abstinence Chain will make one of the most magnificent decorations of the Exposition.

It is hoped that in every town where there is a W. C. T. U. these autograph pledge cards will be furnished to the Sunday-schools free of charge. Where this is not done I trust the local superintendent will secure the funds from personal friends to furnish these cards. Never again shall we be likely to have such an opportunity for the representation of our temperance army in a world's gathering, and the silent, but most forceful protest of our boys and girls and young people against the great evil of the drink habit and traffic. Where there is no union or no superintendent of this work, will not some one interested send for the cards?

SPECIAL REQUESTS.

1. To Anna Gordon belongs the honor of devising this lovely plan; she desires the coöperation of the Sunday-school department, and kindly says we can send the collected cards to her for arrangement, but we must not let her do our work in securing them. Therefore, please do not burden Miss Gordon with applications for information in regard to this effort in the Sunday-school or societies connected directly with the Sunday-school. A circular giving full instructions, and having report blanks for local, county and state reports will be furnished to any one who sends a postage stamp to me or the department secretary. It will also be furnished in quantity for state, county or local use at twenty-five cents per hundred, postpaid.

2. Please do not send to me or the department secretary for information or cards for societies not directly connected with the Sunday-school. Miss Gordon is the World's superintendent of children's work outside of the Sunday-school.

3. Do not send the collected autograph pledge cards to me or the department secretary, or to the county or state superintendent, unless specially requested so to do, as this will involve the expense of double postage, but send directly to Miss Anna A. Gordon, Evanston, Ill.

4. Please report the number of autograph pledge cards you have collected and send to your county superintendent, if there be one, if not, to the state superintendent.

I will also ask you to report the same to me, giving the name of town, county and state that due credit may be given in my annual report.

5. Do not send to the W. T. P. A. for information concerning this or any other plan of work pertaining to the Sunday-school department as it involves the trouble and expense of forwarding the communication to me.

I wish also to thank the many who have written me that they desire the lesson leaflet for the next quarterly Sunday, May 22 (if I am to prepare such an one) and to say that while I did propose to prepare such a lesson help for each quarter, after carefully examining the lesson helps of the various denominations, and others undenominational, I find the lesson for the next quarter so fully and admirably treated it does not seem necessary to issue an extra lesson leaflet. Therefore, I recommend that the money you would spend for an extra lesson leaflet be put into the autograph pledge cards and leaflets bearing upon the importance and helpfulness of pledge signing.

To the Superintendents of the Sunday-school Department of the World's W. C. T. U. outside of the United States:

Distance cannot widely separate us since our hearts are united in this holy cause. Lady Henry Somerset has promised to take charge of this special effort for Great Britain, and will, upon her return to England, send out the autograph pledge-cards in the national colors of that country.

May I not ask that the superintendent of the Sunday-school department in each country do the same, and where a superintendent has not yet been appointed that the National President attend to this, using the national colors of her own country, that thus all nations may be represented in this prophetic total abstinence chain?

For our instruction and inspiration let us all read together the "thus saith the Lord," as recorded in the following passages from God's Word: Isa. 54:13; I John 3:8; Isa. 42:1-16; Matt. 9:29; Ps. 90:17.

Yours in service for God and Home and Every Land,
LUCIA E. F. KIMBALL.
644 W. Monroe St., Chicago, or Woodfords, Me.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

Ask for Van Houten's Cocoa, take no other.

Special Offer to Ladies.—If you secure a Life Insurance policy in the American Temperance Life Insurance Association before January 1st, you pay no membership fee. Write at once for particulars. Geo. E. Godward, Sec'y, 187 Broadway, N. Y. City.

Chinese Matrimony

is the name of a hardy, rapid-growing, berry-bearing vine, which is the star novelty in plants for 1892. This beautiful hardy climbing plant was illustrated and fully described in the introducers' advertisement in our issue of Feb. 4. It is a profuse bloomer, and following the violet colored flowers, the berries, of oblong form and the size of cherries, begin to form, and increase in great numbers, until the vine is one mass of brilliant scarlet fruit. The Matrimony Vine may be had from the introducers, Peter Henderson & Co., 35 and 37 Cortlandt Street, New York, for 40c. each, 3 for $1, 7 for $2, 12 for $3, who will send them free by mail on receipt of the prices named With every order Messrs. Peter Henderson & Co. will also send free their great catalogue of "Everything for the Garden" (the value of which alone is 25 cents). Those wishing catalogue only can obtain it by remitting 25 cents, which amount can be deducted on first order from catalogue Postage stamps accepted as cash for either vine or catalogue.

Reliable Seeds.

As most of our readers will want to plant a few choice vegetable or flower seeds this Spring, they should send for Wilson's seed catalogue, plant, tree and live stock annual, one of the most complete works of the kind published. It not only gives a full description of all kinds of garden, flower and field seeds, roses, flowering plants, fruit and ornamental trees, small fruits, etc., but also choice breeds of thoroughbred land and water fowls, registered pigs, and in fact everything that is needed for the farm and garden will be found fully illustrated and described and at very reasonable prices. Sent free on application. Address SAMUEL WILSON, Seed Grower, Mechanicsville, Bucks Co., Pa.

WE would call the attention of our readers to Mr. Speer's advertisement in another page of this issue of the Temple Trust Bonds of our Temple. An investment in these bonds is safe, and aids in promoting the temperance work.

A Popular Winter Resort.

Are you going to Hot Springs, Ark.? Take the Wabash Line. Everybody does. Line of sleepers morning and evening from St. Louis to Hot Springs. Practically a through train from Chicago. Don't forget our compartment sleepers. Berths reserved in advance.

The Only One.

The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway is the only line running solid Vestibuled, Electric Lighted and Steam Heated trains between Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Minneapolis.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway is the only line running solid Vestibuled, Electric Lighted and Steam Heated trains between Chicago, Council Bluffs and Omaha.

The berth reading lamp feature in the Pullman sleeping cars run on these lines is patented, and cannot be used by any other Railway Company. It is the great improvement of the age. Try it and be convinced.

For further particulars apply to Ticket Office, 207 and 209 Clark street, or Union Passenger Station, Madison, Canal and Adams streets, Chicago.

Railroad Arrangements for the National Encampment, G. A. R.

For the National Encampment G. A. R., at Washington in September next, the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad offers an unexcelled service of through limited vestibuled express trains, with Pullman Sleeping cars from Chicago, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Columbus, Wheeling, Pittsburgh, and all principal intermediate stations to Washington. The Encampment will be the greatest event in Washington since the grand review of 1865.

No railroad in America is better equipped than the B. & O. to transport large volumes of passenger traffic with dispatch, safety and comfort. Its long experience in transporting crowds to inauguration ceremonies, Knights Templar conclaves, and similar gatherings on an extensive scale, will prove most valuable in carrying the thousands to the Encampment.

The B. & O. is the shortest route to Washington from nearly all points east and west. Passengers from Chicago will have the option of traveling via Pittsburgh or via Grafton, both routes crossing the crest of the Alleghenies amid the most picturesque scenery in America. All B. & O. east-bound trains pass Harper's Ferry and traverse the historic valley of the Potomac, whose battle grounds are familiar to every veteran.

Visitors to Washington will be pleased to learn that the B. & O. will sell excursion tickets at greatly reduced rates from Washington to Maryland and Virginia battlefields during the Encampment

Publisher's Notes.

Sample Copies.

Demorest's Monthly Magazine has won an enviable reputation as a home journal. It is clear and clean and true. The subscription price is $2 per year, but we will send it and THE UNION SIGNAL (price $1 per year) for one year for $2.25 only. A limited number of sample copies of Demorest's Monthly Magazine will be sent to any person who will agree to use them faithfully in securing new subscribers.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Do you Want a Bible?

For yourself or any member of your family, for a friend or a member of your Sunday-school class? Then here is a

Splendid Opportunity

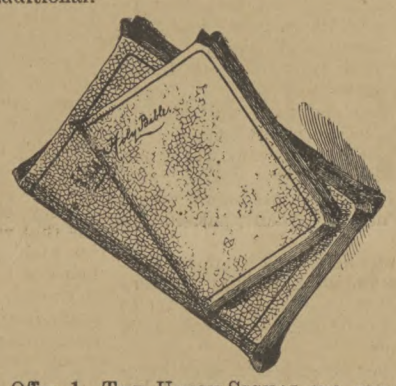
to secure one. Read carefully and see.

By special arrangement, with a book dealer we are able to supply for a short time, two fine Bibles on excellent terms, and have decided to offer them under the following conditions to our subscribers:

First, a Teacher's Bible, pearl, reference maps, concordance, and all helps usually found in a Teacher's Bible, with Oxford circuit binding and gilt edges, 11x7¼ inches from edge of flaps, reduced retail price, $1.75. We will send this Bible and THE UNION SIGNAL one year for $2.25.

Second, a Bagster Bible, minion, reference maps, and all helps usually found in a Bagster Bible except concordance, with Oxford circuit binding and gilt edges, 9x13 from edge of flaps; reduced retail price, $2.75. We will send this Bible and THE UNION SIGNAL, one year for $3.25.

Third, We will send with either of the above Bibles and THE UNION SIGNAL one year, "How to Mark your Bible," by Mrs. S. Menzies, with introduction by D. L. Moody, cloth, price 75 cents, for 50 cents additional.



Offer 1. THE UNION SIGNAL one year, and Teacher's Bible, $2.25.

Offer 2. THE UNION SIGNAL one year, Teacher's Bible and "How to Mark your Bible," $2.75.

Offer 3. THE UNION SIGNAL, one year, Bagster Bible, $3.25.

Offer 4. THE UNION SIGNAL one year, Bagster Bible, and "How to Mark your Bible." $3.75.

Tell your friends what a splendid chance they can take advantage of, or get them to subscribe and add the amount necessary to secure these valuable books for yourself.

We said the time was limited. To take advantage of this your order must reach us by April 1.

Address
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Miss Willard's New Book.

her very latest, is ready. The title is "A Classic Town; a Story of Evanston." This does not mean that the classic suburb is the only subject of the book. No, indeed; it tells of men and things, and the story is told in an uncommonly interesting way, and shows what right principles will do for a community. The history of "Garrett Biblical Institute," "Northwestern University," and the "Female College and its Evolution" are told in full. The book is profusely illustrated, with the pictures of a great many divines of national reputation. It is a book which will be wanted by all W. C. T. U. people, all Methodists, and all who know Miss Willard. Price $1.50; bound in cloth, full gilt. Agents wanted everywhere.

SUBS'N BOOK DEP'T W. T. P. A.,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Three Danger Signals

foretell the approach of Pulmonary Consumption. The rattle-snake never strikes its fatal blow until after its note of warning has been given; so with Consumption; the attack of this dread and insidious foe is preceded by EMACIATION, loss of flesh without sufficient sick symptoms to account for it. A COUGH; slight, perhaps; a mere habit, the patient says, which he can and must prevent; doubly ominous if continuing through warm weather. UNEQUAL DEPRESSION beneath the collar bones. Tubercles almost always invade one lung, and at its apex. The one attacked soon contracts and the flesh above it shows a greater depression than over the other.

These are the signals. Where is the remedy? Will any drug supply it? Observation (and too often experience) makes you answer no. More than 20 years ago we said that our COMPOUND OXYGEN would help in a manner and to an extent far exceeding any other agent known to man. We say so still; but it is not our word only now. Scientists admit it; physicians prescribe and take it; and better still, thousands of people everywhere, stepping aside from the crowded path of hoary failure, have tried it themselves and are living to-day, glad to tell of its great power to rebuild the system, the gradual consumption of which it is that we call Consumption.

If a person has seen one or all of these signals; if he wants help rather than sympathy; if he can weigh and believe the evidence of others, we would like him to send for our 200-page book of explanation and of proof. ENTIRELY FREE.

Drs. STARKEY & PALEN, 1529 Arch St., Philadelphia.
120 Sutter St., San Francisco, Cal. 864 Broadway, New York. 66 Church St., Toronto, Canada.

4,000 Population in 18 Months.

HERE IS A LIST OF FACTORIES NOW IN ACTIVE OPERATION IN

HARVEY

THE TEMPERANCE MANUFACTURING TOWN

The Harvey Steel Car and Repair Works.
The Craver & Steele Manufacturing Co.
The Buda Foundry and Manufacturing Co.
Bliss & Laughlin.
The Middleton Car Spring Co.
The Automatic Mower & Manufacturing Co.
The Atkinson Steel and Spring Works.
The Middle Division Elevator Co.

The immense plant of the Bellaire Stamping Company is nearly completed, and will have a capacity for 500 to 700 workmen.

The Wells Glass Company's large buildings will be ready for occupancy about May 1, and will employ about 150 men.

A. J. Sweeney & Son, a large manufacturing firm from Wheeling, W. Va., will begin building at once, manufacturing rolling-mill machinery, plate-glass machinery, nail-mill machinery, etc. These last three factories will bring to Harvey hundreds of families, increasing the population, the demand for property, and all branches of trade.

HARVEY was founded, platted and improved by which has a contract with all the factories it has located, by which preference in employing help is given to those who live in Harvey proper, or on land owned or controlled by THE HARVEY LAND ASSOCIATION or their grantees. There is choice property near the factories, the schools, and churches, the hotels, and in the business district, which THE HARVEY LAND ASSOCIATION is selling at ORIGINAL PRICES. Lots $175 and upwards.

THE HARVEY LAND ASSOCIATION,

Call or send for plats, and the most complete pamphlet (size 36 pages, sent free) ever published, giving information about HARVEY.

THE HARVEY LAND ASSOCIATION, 819 to 825 THE ROOKERY, Cor. La Salle & Adams Sts., Chicago.

P. S. For the next 60 days we will pay your actual railroad fare from your homes to Chicago and return, provided it does not exceed 2 1-2 per cent of what you purchase of us while here.

Mention THE UNION SIGNAL.

Temple Trust Bonds

AUTHORIZED BY THE

WOMAN'S . . TEMPERANCE BUILDING . . ASSOCIATION.

I am now ready to fill MARCH ORDERS for these most desirable and popular BONDS. Denominations $100 and $500.

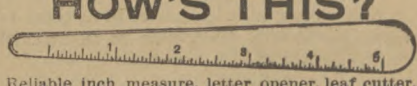
Date, July 1, 1891. Due, July 1, 1901.
BONDS PAYABLE TO BEARER, and TRANSFERABLE
INTEREST PAID TWICE A YEAR—JAN. 1st, JULY 1st.

Address all orders and inquiries for further information to

H. C. SPEER, Banker,
237 La Salle St. - Chicago, Ill.

COMPOUND OXYGEN Price reduced. For information address DR. A. H. HIATT, Central Music Hall, Chicago

HOW'S THIS?



Reliable inch measure, letter opener, leaf cutter. Made of Aluminum, the wonderful new metal. Light as wood. Strong as steel. Cleaner than silver. Will not tarnish or corrode. Six inches long. Just right for vest pocket. Elegant for desk or library. You want one? 25 cents, please. Stamps will do.
E. E. Thain, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.

A Treasure and a Wonder in the Horticultural World!

Splendid! Delicious! Excellent! are the exclamations from those who have fruited the Green Mountain, the earliest and best of all grapes. Ripens in August, yet of most delicate texture and exquisite flavor. Be not misled into buying this grape under other names. Every genuine vine is sealed with our trade mark seal as above. Send for circular giving full information. Price of 2 or 3 year vine by mail, $1 00 each. Address
STEPHEN HOYT SONS, New Canaan, Ct.

Save Money By Buying BICYCLES WINTER PRICES.

To reduce '91 stock we offer | FORMERLY NOW
Ormonde Safety 1¼ cushion tires $140 , $90
..., (91 make) lady or man, all ball.... 75 42
...ury Diamond Safety, all steel " 100 57
...in. Victor Jr. ball bgs. tangent [also other sizes] 87 17
...other styles, & 200 2d hd wheels, greatly reduced.
...ta. free. Rouse, Hazard & Co. 77 G St. Peoria, Ill.

FREE Excursions TO CHICAGO

Over all Railroads for the next 30 days, from February 25th. The object of this is to give all readers of this paper a chance to see the wonderful temperance town of HARVEY. From your homes you can form but a small idea of Chicago, the World's Fair Buildings, and the millions of dollars being invested in manufacturing enterprises at Harvey. There we offer to pay your actual railroad fare to Chicago and return to the amount of not exceeding 2½% of the amount of lots you purchase of us while here. Illustrated Plats and Circulars free to all.

HARVEY

WALTER THOMAS MILLS & CO., 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

STRONG WORDS

I. "I could quote a thousand men who, when everything else failed them, found in Granula the very food their systems needed."—JAMES C. JACKSON, M. D., founder Dansville Sanatorium.

II. "Granula has saved my life on several occasions. I now carry the article with me as a sort of life preserver."—WM. GILLETTE (the actor).

III. "The Judge (A. W. Tourgee) has been crazy ever since he was in Dansville about the delicious Granula."—MRS. A. W. TOURGEE.

FOR THAT "PERFECT HEALTH FOOD"
GRANULA

GRANULA CO., Dansville, N. Y.
Pamphlet free. Trial box, postpaid, for 36 cts.

ALUMINUM SOUVENIR
Charm (dime size) with the Lord's Prayer coined in smallest characters, and strung on blue silk ribbon, sent free to any one sending 10 cents for sample copy of The FREE St. Louis Magazine. Aluminum is the wonderful new metal, bright as silver, light as wood, strong as steel, will not tarnish.
St. Louis Magazine, 901 Olive St., St. Louis, Mo.

PEATS THE WALL PAPER MERCHANT CHICAGO

Retails all grades of WALL PAPER of the newest designs and latest colorings in small quantities; many patterns cheaper than your home dealer can buy them.
GOOD PAPER, 3c. GOLD PAPER, 5c.
Handsome parlor paper 10—12½—15c per roll with wide border and ceiling to match.
If you intend to use any WALL PAPER whatever send 10 cents for postage on samples and his guide "HOW TO PAPER" will be sent free. Agents sample books $1.
See his samples before you buy.
ALFRED PEATS, Wall Paper Merchant,
136-138 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Cocoas MADE BY THE DUTCH PROCESS are "Treated with Carbonate of Soda, Magnesia, Potash or Bicarbonate of Soda."

The use of chemicals can be readily detected by the peculiar odor from newly opened packages, and also from a glass of water in which a small quantity of chemically treated cocoa has been placed and allowed to remain for several days.

For more than One Hundred Years the house of Walter Baker & Co. have made their Cocoa Preparations ABSOLUTELY PURE, using NO Patent Process, Alkalies, or Dyes.

W. BAKER & CO., Dorchester, Mass.

MASON & HAMLIN
Examine the new Mason & Hamlin Piano and Organ catalogues, sent free to any address. The Mason & Hamlin Grand and Upright Pianos are constructed on an Improved Method of Stringing, invented and exclusively used by Mason & Hamlin, by which remarkable purity of tone and great durability are secured, and phenomenal capacity to stand in tune. The Mason & Hamlin SCREW-STRINGER was patented in July, 1883, and is a veritable triumph for American ingenuity, being pronounced by experts "the greatest improvement of the century" in pianos. American Pianos and Organs are superior to all others. Mason & Hamlin Organs have long been the Standard the world over. The Mason & Hamlin Piano is fast becoming as famous as the Mason & Hamlin Organ, and illustrates that HIGHEST STANDARD OF EXCELLENCE which has always characterized the latter instrument, and won for it Highest Honors at all great World's Exhibitions since Paris, 1867. Illustrated catalogues free.
ORGANS PIANOS
Without under-estimating the improvements effected by others in pianos, the Mason & Hamlin STRINGER is claimed to be the greatest improvement of them all, and without it the highest attainable excellence is simply impossible.
MASON & HAMLIN ORGAN AND PIANO CO.
BOSTON. NEW YORK. CHICAGO.

FOR MANY LADIES THE
BALLS PERFECT COMFORT HEALTH NO POSSIBLE INJURY TO WAIST NO METAL EYELETS TO CUT OR RUST FULL SIZE IN BUST EASY THE FIRST DAY NEVER BREAK OR ROLL UP SONGS VELVA SATEEN FIT STAYS BUT
CORSETS & CORSET WAISTS FOR OTHERS THE
KABO ELEGANT SHAPES AND MANY OF THEM NO METAL EYELETS TO STAIN YOUR CLOTHES BONES POSITIVELY DO NOT BREAK OR ROLL UP FULLY GUARANTEED BY THE CHICAGO CORSET
CORSETS ARE THE ONLY ONES GIVING ENTIRE SATISFACTION.

Publisher's Dep't.

Our Day.

OUR DAY for March is now ready, and is an exceedingly valuable number. The leading articles are on Signs of the Times in German Theological Faculties; Congested Districts in American Cities; Legalized Robbery in the Louisiana Lottery, etc. The Boston Monday Lecture is on Mr. Spurgeon's Character and Career, while the Vital Points of Expert Opinion and Questions to Specialists are of great interest, the latter containing numerous replies to the leading questions published last month. All reform workers need this magazine. Price per year, $2.50, to ministers and students, $2; sample copies, 25 cts.; to ministers and students, 20 cts. Send orders to

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Red Letter Day Calendars.

These useful little calendars are indispensable to W. C. T. U. workers, and excellent for souvenirs and to send to outsiders not interested. We will send any quantity at 5 cents each, or $4 per 100.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Clearance Sale.

There are some copies of Miss Willard's annual address still in our store-room that should be doing missionary work all over the land. To make this easy we have determined to offer them as follows:

1 copy	2c
10 copies	15c
25 copies	40c
50 copies	75c
100 copies	$1 25

The supply is limited, and every copy will soon be taken at these ridiculously low figures. First come, first served. Do not delay, or you may be disappointed.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

THE Oak and Ivy Leaf for March, twelve pages, will be a special entertainment number containing plans for public entertainments, programs and suggestions for church and parlor social gatherings. A beautiful Easter Temperance Program occupies the four-paged supplement.

Temperance workers, Christian Endeavorers and King's Daughters will find unique and practical outlines for social work.

Price, per single copy	.10
" " dozen copies	.50

We Have An Idea

and should like to give you, dear readers, the benefit of it. Spring will be here before you really know it and that means better weather and more sunshine. That should also mean better health and more money, does it with you? How's this in the way of logic, "I shall have better health and more money if I can be out and take in more oxygen and sunshine!" Well, now, suppose you go out and while out stop in at Mrs. Behind Times and tell her about "Glimpses," Miss Willard's book, you know, which is a most complete history of W. C. T. U. work. After a while you'll come to the cottage where Mrs. Young Husband resides and she is badly in need of advice on the care of the infant who at present seems to be monarch supreme. Suppose you tell her of "Childhood," Miss West's book. Mrs. Y. H. would be helped by possessing the book (of course she would buy) and we would share profits with you! (This is confidential.)

Now to business; the idea is this. You can help your neighbors by selling to them copies of the aforesaid books. We have a plan by which we supply outfits absolutely free to trusted and known people. Send a postal for "the new plan" and we will tell you all about it.

SUBS'N BOOK DEP'T W. T. P. A.,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Send for Color Samples and Price List. Patented February 23, 1886. Examine closely Stamp on inside of Waist.

TAKE NO OTHER.

THE GENUINE JACKSON CORSET WAISTS
ARE MADE ONLY BY THE
JACKSON CORSET CO., Jackson, Mich.
The manufacturer's name is printed upon the boxes, and stamped upon inside of clasp in each waist. They are the most popular articles of the kind now on the market. You should have one of them.

BE SURE AND GET THE RIGHT THING. IF YOUR DEALER HASN'T IT, SEND $1.25 FOR SAMPLE.

YPSILANTI Dress Reform UNDERWEAR
SPRING GOODS REDUCED IN PRICE.
Sanitary Balbriggan, Sanitary Lisle Thread, Sanitary MERINO, SILK and Sanitary Balbriggan, Silk and Cashmere mixed.
For SPRING and SUMMER WEAR. { The ONLY Sanitary Underwear, and Endorsed by the leading medical profession.
Send for new Catalogue, Samples, and revised Price List. If your dealer cannot supply them, they can be obtained of the manufacturers.
DON'T BE DECEIVED.
See that each garment is stamped with our Trade Mark—
"Ypsilanti Health Underwear."
HAY & TODD MFG. CO., Ypsilanti, Mich.

One-third Your Life is Spent in Bed!

The Art of purifying Feathers for Bedding purposes has been the subject of close study for many years, and has reached its highest development in the COLD BLAST PROCESS, by which all foreign matter, dust and the causes of odor are eliminated, and the Feathers rendered pure, clean and sweet, as well as permanently buoyant, while retaining their Feathery softness. FEATHER PILLOWS MADE OF THESE ARE HEALTHFUL. Watch for Trade Mark. Your dealer probably keeps them. If not, address
THE COLD BLAST FEATHER CO.
MAKERS OF Faultless Bedding. CHICAGO.

FREE For 30 Days. Wishing to introduce our CRAYON PORTRAITS and at the same time extend our business and make new customers, we have decided to make this Special Offer: Send us a Cabinet Picture, Photograph, Tintype, Ambrotype or Daguerotype of yourself or any member of your family, living or dead and we will make you a CRAYON PORTRAIT FREE OF CHARGE, provided you exhibit it to your friends as a sample of our work, and use your influence in securing us future orders. Place name and address on back of picture and it will be returned in perfect order. We make any change in picture you wish, not interfering with the likeness. Refer to any bank in Chicago. Address all mail to THE CRESCENT CRAYON CO. Opposite New German Theatre, CHICAGO, ILL. P. S.—We will forfeit $100 to anyone sending us photo and not receiving crayon picture FREE as per this offer. This offer is bonafide.

MENDING MADE EASY BY THE USE OF GUM TISSUE
Used for repairing all kinds of clothing, from the very finest silk or satin to a buckskin mitten, Kid gloves and umbrellas mended without sewing, quicker, neater, and stronger than ever before. SAMPLE 10cts. to intending agents. F. Cassgreen Mfg. Co., 134 Van Buren St., Chicago, Ill.

$22. FIRST CLASS CURTAIN DESK Four and a Half feet long. Unlimited variety in stock and to order.
American Desk & Seating Co.
270-272 Wabash Av., CHICAGO, U.S.A.

PARENTS CANNOT AFFORD
To let their children grow up without the amusement and physical training which the World's Parlor and Lawn Game gives. ELASTIC TIP CO., 152 and 154 Lake Street, Chicago.

LADIES without business experience are making immense sales of Mme. McCABE'S CORSETS AND WAISTS. Send for agents' terms
St. Louis Corset Co., St. Louis, Mo.

103 E. ADAMS ST. BORSCH-OPTIGIAN CONSULT US ABOUT YOUR EYESIGHT SATISFACTION GAURANTEED

HOME DRESSMAKING
A Complete Guide to Household Sewing.
Women who try to save who love to dress who have to sew Need It
Prepaid $2.75. The only book on the subject.
Free circulars giving Table of Contents.
Best Terms to Agents.
Address, CHARLES H. SERGEL & CO.,
Dept. A 350 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

YOSE & SONS PIANOS. ESTABLISHED IN 1851.
Celebrated for their Pure Tone, Elegant Designs, Superior Workmanship, and Great Durability. Sold on easy terms. Old instruments taken in exchange. Write for catalogue and full information.
170 Tremont St., Boston, Mass.

'DELSARTE'
Corset Waists and Braces. Send for Price List.
Agents Wanted. Also
DELSARTE CORSET CO.,
142 W. 23d St., New York.
111 State Street, Chicago, Ill.

BABY CARRIAGES ARE DELIVERED FREE
to any place in the United States. Also Baby JUMPERS, BICYCLES, SAFETIES and GIRLS' TRICYCLES. One or more at wholesale price sent C. O. D. direct from L. G. SPENCER'S Factory, 221 W. Madison Street CHICAGO. $3 to $10 saved. Send 2c. stamp for new catalogue. The largest factory in the world. Latest Styles

BABY CARRIAGES
We manufacture to sell direct to private parties at factory prices, and deliver free of charge to all points in United States. Our new Catalogue free. Address
C. T. WALKER & CO., 199 E. North Ave., Chicago, Ill.

MY WIFE SAYS SHE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT FOR THE MONEY. $12 buys a $65.00 Improved Oxford Singer Sewing Machine; perfect working reliable, finely finished, adapted to light and heavy work, with a complete set of the latest improved attachments free. Each machine guaranteed for 5 years. Buy direct from our factory, and save dealers and agents profit. Send for FREE CATALOGUE.
OXFORD MFG. COMPANY, DEP'T 20, CHICAGO, ILL.

$525 Agent's profits per month. Will prove it or pay forfeit. New articles just out. A $1 50 sample and terms free. Try us. Chidester & Son, 28 Bond-st. N.Y.

LADIES Send to the Stevens' Dish Washing Machine Co., Cleveland, for descriptive circulars of this wonderful invention. No dish or wiping cloth used; truly a great blessing to the household. Agents wanted.

LADY Agents make big wages every day With our Ladies' and Children's Specialties. Over 100 different articles. Indispensable. Catalogue Free.
G. L. ERWIN & CO., Chicago, Ill.

LADIES Send only five cents and receive a Large, Elegant Fashion Catalogue and how to secure 50c. worth of dress patterns, FREE. Add. Young Lady's Bazar 230 La Salle St. Chicago.

LADY wanted, on salary, to sell Roses, Shrubs, &c Brown Bros. Nurseries, Rochester, N.Y. & Chicago

HOUSEHOLD NECESSITY. Agents make big profits. Catalogue (A) and particulars free. Cline Mfg. Co., 67 W. Washington St., Chicago.

LADY AGENTS CLEAR $10 PER DAY selling my garments for ladies & children Mrs. L. E. SINGLETON, Box 665, Chicago, Ill.

LADY Agents $5 a day sure; new rubber undergarment. Mrs. N. B. LITTLE, Chicago, Ill.

"Why stand ye all the day idle?"
10 DOLLARS PER DAY
is not easily made in these times, but it can be made working for us in any locality. We have agents that have made more than $25 per day, the whole secret is we have something that every housekeeper wants and will buy at sight without any urging. If agents prefer will pay a straight salary of $75 per month and expenses. Full particulars sent free to all points where we have not already secured an agent. Exclusive territory given. Can refer to any express company in Boston as to our integrity. Address, (in full,)
STANDARD SILVERWARE CO.,
Order Dept. 127 Boston, Mass.

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE ROLLERS

Beware of imitations. Notice autograph of STEWART HARTSHORN on label and get the genuine Hartshorn.

THE

Owen Electric Belt

[Trade Mark.] DR. A. OWEN.

AND APPLIANCES

For Men and Women

Are now recognized as the most valuable inventions of the present century.

They tone up the system and restore lost vigor.

CURE Rheumatism, Sciatica, Bright's Disease, Torpid Liver, Dyspepsia, General Debility, Female Weakness, Nervous Prostration, and many other diseases which drugs and medicines do not reach.

A FULL EXPLANATION will be found in

OUR ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE

containing sworn testimonials of people who have been cured, cuts of belts with prices and how to order, and other valuable information. Published in English, German, Swedish and Norwegian languages. Will be mailed to any address on receipt of 6 cents postage, or, treatise on rupture cured with electric truss by mail 6 cents.

The Owen Electric Belt and Appliance Co.,

Main Office and only Factory,

191-193 STATE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

NEW YORK OFFICE, 826 BROADWAY.

The Largest Electric Belt Establishment in the World.

THE

Total Abstinence Life Association OF AMERICA

PAYS ALL HONEST LOSSES PROMPTLY and in FULL.

It furnishes to Total Abstainers the Cheapest and Most Reliable Insurance to be had.

New and liberal commissions will be paid to experienced agents in Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Michigan, California, Connecticut and Iowa.

It will pay you well to write to us.

THE TOTAL ABSTINENCE LIFE ASSOCIATION of AMERICA.

902-904 Royal Insurance Building, CHICAGO, ILL.

AGENT made $71 in four days selling my Electric Corsets and Specialties. 100 PER CENT. profit and Cash Prizes. Sample free. Dr. Bridgman, B'way, New York.

20 Hidden Name, New Emb. Basket, Plush Fringe Cards, 1 complete Fountain Pen 25 Games & Agts. Outfit 10cts. Typewriter and Photo Cameras free to Agts. Clinton Bros. Clintonville, Ct.

Adjustable Vapor Baths in one. Every Home Wants This.

PORTABLE BATHS.

Best ever known. Wholesale and Retail. Agents Wanted Everywhere. Send for Circulars.

E. J. KNOWLTON, Ann Arbor, Mich.

See Name "EVER READY" on back of each DRESS STAY you buy. Take none but them.

YPSILANTI DRESS STAY MFG. CO., Ypsilanti, Michigan.

ROCK BOTTOM Prices on Dry Goods, Groceries. Everything you eat, wear or use. Send for FREE Illustrated Catalogue to E. R. EAGLE & CO., 68 Wabash Av., Chicago, Ill

We do not sell liquors in any shape.

R YOU Looking for a HOME or an investment where you can double your money? ELLSWORTH the new temperance suburb of Chicago offers both. Write to ELLSWORTH LAND ASS'N. Room 41, 81 Clark St., Chicago.

HOTEL FREDONIA. Washington, D. C. H St. between 13th and 14th. ELEGANT, QUIET, HOMELIKE & STRICTLY TEMPERANCE. G. R. La Fetra, Prop

MILLER'S HOTEL New York City. 39 West 26th St. A Prohibition Home. Patronized by W. C. T. U. workers visiting New York. Turkish, Electric, Roman Baths. Address, CHARLES H. HAYNES, Prop.

BUY A SUMMER HOME ON THE SHORES OF

Imperial Lake Geneva, Wis.

We offer in parcels of 100 feet and upward BEAUTIFUL RESIDENCE SITES. All prices, all sizes and easy terms.

GRAND TERRACE ADDITION

For plats and further particulars address PRATT BROTHERS, 508 Chamber of Commerce, cor. Washington and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.

Publisher's Notes.

Take Notice.

Special editions of THE UNION SIGNAL are prepared for all special days, and extra numbers can be secured by ordering in advance. For rates on large numbers address

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Helps for Workers.

As has been before stated in these columns, it is impossible to do good work without good tools. W. C. T. U. people especially need the best of "tools" in order to carry on efficient temperance work. Your attention is therefore drawn to the below given list of helps, the quality of which has already been indisputably proven.

National Leaflets.

No. 47. "Should Women Vote?" A masterly discussion of the subject, by Miss Willard.

No. 48. "Safety for School Children," specially for Teachers and Parents, by Miss Willard.

No. 49. "Dead Reckoning." Very suggestive to leaders of gospel meetings—also adapted to free distribution.

No. 50. "Country Unions," Mary Allen West. Discussing the question, "What can a W. C. T. U. do in a Small Place Where there are No Saloons?"

No. 51. "Farm Mortgages," Mary Allen West. An argument clearly proving that the heaviest mortgage under which a farmer can stagger, is the liquor traffic, and that this traffic is the direct cause of financial depression in rural districts.

No. 52. "Gospel Temperance," John G. Woolley. This leaflet gives the author's definition of "Gospel Temperance" and his views are practical, worthy of your study.

All six sent for five cents. Price per 100, one number or assorted, 90 cents.

Address all orders to

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N.
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Responsive Readings.

The January issue is on the subject of W. C. T. U. work in the country, by Miss West.

The February number explains Dean Wright's "Course of Study" in the evangelistic department. Both are very instructive. You will notice that special attention is given to temperance work in the country and gospel work in general, in the helps above enumerated.

The Responsive Readings are published monthly, at the nominal cost of 10 cents per year, 13 copies sent monthly to any one address for $1. If your union does not always they can be made good by the judicious use of these "Readings." Have never heard of them before? Well, well, you should send for samples without delay.

Have Good Meetings

No charge for sample. Address

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

A Chance for Missionary Work.

We have on hand a large number of copies of The Young Crusader, running back for a year or two, in the old form. We will send them at the rate of 75c. per hundred to those who will use them as missionary papers. For instance, your state L. T. L. is helping some other in a state less fortunate than your own; why not send the Legion in the latter a goodly supply of these papers? Could you help along the work any better? Then there is that Mission School down on Canal street. Do you believe they will have temperance Sunday? Better order papers to encourage them to do so while you think of it, and they will be ready for the May lesson that will, we trust, bring home more forcibly than ever before the lesson of Bible temperance.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Burpee's Seeds Grow!

If it were not true that Burpee's Seeds Grow our business would not have grown to its present proportions. It is an acknowledged fact that thousands more planters annually order seeds direct from us than from any other seed grower in America. For many years our business has been supplying only the BEST SEEDS direct to Market Gardeners and private planters who can appreciate quality in seeds. If YOU want QUALITY and NO DISAPPOINTMENT at harvest, plant BURPEE'S SEEDS, but first read all about them in BURPEE'S FARM ANNUAL for 1892,—this is a handsome book of 160 pages, with honest descriptions, lifelike illustrations and colored plates painted from nature. It is mailed Free to all who intend to purchase

W. Atlee Burpee & Co.
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

60c. worth for 20c. A Rare Collection of Flower Seed. 60c. worth for 20c.

Marguerite Carnations. A magnificent strain of this beautiful flower. Blooms easily from seed. Last all winter. Sweet scented. Red Ridinghood Pansy. Most beautiful of this popular flower; deep red, hazel eye, edged with gold. The Oriole, grand large double Golden Flowers, always in bloom. Giant English Show Balsams, (Queen Victoria's Strain.) 2 feet high, covered with large double flowers resembling roses, all colors. Helichrysum Monstrosum, best of all everlastings; keep their bright colors all winter. One packet each of the above choice varieties sent by mail for 20c. in stamps; retail price, 60c. Our beautiful illustrated 116 page catalogue accompanies each order. Address:

Samuel Wilson, Seed Grower, Mechanicsville, Pa.

$500 FOR A TOMATO

Last spring I offered $500 to any person producing a 3 lb. Mammoth Prize Tomato: T. R. Harris, Abbott, Neb., won it with one weighing 3 lbs. 8½ ozs., and I sent him my check for $500. It measured over 8½ in. in diameter. 37 tomatoes grew on one stem over 3 feet from the ground. Largest plant on record 18 ft. 6 in. tall. This mammoth strain creates a sensation wherever it goes, and is the largest ever offered. Thousands of my customers have grown them to weigh over 45 ozs. The quality is excellent; after you once test it you will grow no others. If well cared for they will produce 1 bu. to a plant (see cut) of large, smooth, bright red tomatoes, very solid with only a few seeds in each, and entirely free from rot. If started early, fruit ripens from July 4th until frost. This year I offer $500 Cash to any person producing a 3½ lb. tomato. (It can be done.) Full directions how Mr. Harris grew his with each order. Plant some, you may win the prize. All my seed is saved from large specimens.

SURE HEAD CABBAGE

Is all head and sure to head, very uniform in size, firm and fine in texture, excellent in quality and a good keeper. Single heads have weighed over 64 pounds.

EARLY SNOWBALL TURNIP

Is the earliest in the world, easy grown, good size, excellent quality. Will be far ahead of your neighbors.

My Catalogue, is worth 50 cts. to any one who gets it. $500 offered largest order; $500 for a pansy blossom; $300 for a bean plant with 100 pods, and above tomato prize. I will send a packet each of Prize Tomato, Cabbage and Turnip, with my Catalogue of Bargains for only 25 cents. Greatest bargain catalogue ever sent out. Every person sending silver for above collection will receive Free a packet LINCH'S IMPROVED EXTRA EARLY TREE TOMATO, and a 50c. certificate for seeds, your choice from my bargain catalogue Free.

F. B. MILLS, Rose Hill, Onandaga Co. N. Y.

IF YOU LOVE CHOICE FLOWERS

and want something really rare that will 'astonish the natives,' try the gorgeous new Red, White and Blue African Water Lillies. Plants are sold by some florists for $3 to $5 each, but they are as easily raised from seeds as Asters. They are sure to bloom in any part of the U. S. the first year, in ponds, tubs or pails, incredible as it may seem. They bear fragrant double flowers, 4 to 8 inches across, every day from July to Oct., and all winter if moved to a warm house. The Blue variety varies from light to deep rich blue, and the Red from pink to crimson. A pond at Pansy Park filled with these magnificent lilies was admired by thousands of visitors. Special 30 Days Offer! For only 25 cts. I will send seeds of all varieties—Red, White and Blue—with my Floral Catalogue (which tells all about the culture of these and other rarities); also 2 other packets, 70 varieties Choicest Double Asters, mixed, new Mammoth Double Fringed Poppies. For 35 cts. I will send all the above and 4 more packets (amounting to $1.00 at regular rates): 50 vars. Large German Pansies, mixed, finest ever offered: New Brazilian Morning Glory, grandest of all vines, climbs 50 feet, leaves a foot across, large rose-colored flowers; New Mexican Fire Plant, 3 feet tall, leaves blotched with scarlet; 42 vars. Improved Sweet Williams. I grow acres of Asters, Pansies, &c.

L. W. GOODELL, Seed Grower, Pansy Park, Dwight, Mass.

WANTED! A Christian lady in every township to do writing at home. Pleasant, remunerative work, requiring only a portion of each day's time. Address The Yale Hygiene Co. Agency Department, New Haven, Conn.

HOW TO MAKE A FORTUNE

WANTED—Salesmen; who can easily make $25 to $75 per week, selling the Celebrated Pinless Clothes Line, or the Famous Fountain Ink Eraser—Patents recently issued. Sold ONLY by salesmen, to whom we give Exclusive Territory. The Pinless Clothes Line is the only line ever invented that holds clothes without pins—a perfect success. The Fountain Ink Eraser is entirely new; will erase ink instantly, and is king of all. On receipt of 50c. will mail you sample of either, or sample of both for $1, with circulars, price-lists and terms. Secure your territory at once. THE PINLESS CLOTHES LINE CO., No. 184 Hermon St., Worcester, Mass.

ASTHMA

WORST CASES CURED TO STAY CURED IF UNCOMPLICATED BY ORGANIC DISEASE. Incurable cases declined.

WE WANT NAME OF EVERY ASTHMATIC. Examination free by mail.

P. HAROLD HAYES M.D. BUFFALO, N. Y.

WEAK, NERVOUS PEOPLE.

DR. HORNE'S ELECTRO-MAGNETIC BELT positively cures RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, LIVER, KIDNEY and exhausting chronic diseases of both sexes. Contains 23 to 100 degrees of Electricity. GUARANTEED the latest improved, cheapest, scientific, powerful, durable and effective MEDICAL ELECTRIC BELT in the WORLD. Electric Suspensories free with Male Belts. ELECTRIC TRUSSES FOR RUPTURE. 9,000 cured. Send 4c-stamp for pamphlet.

DR. W. J. HORNE, REMOVED TO 180 WABASH AVE., CHICAGO

Mention THE UNION SIGNAL.

DR. SYKES' SURE CURE FOR CATARRH

Taken internally and used locally with Insufflator. At Druggists or per mail, $1.50.

Has cured many cases pronounced hopeless by physicians. Send for Free Book 'Common Sense Talk' and numerous testimonials. They will convince you.

DR. SYKES' SURE CURE CO., 103 STATE ST. CHICAGO.

RUPTURE CURED!

(PATENT ALLOWED.)

Positively Holds Rupture. WORN NIGHT AND DAY. Has an Adjustable Pad which can be made larger or smaller to suit changing condition of rupture. Illustrated Catalogue sent securely sealed by

G. V. HOUSE MFG. CO. 744 BROADWAY, N. Y. CITY

DRUNKENNESS IS A DISEASE, and can be Cured, by administering Dr. Haines' Golden Specific. It can be given without the knowledge of the patient, if desired, by placing it in coffee, tea or articles of food. Cures guaranteed. Send for free circulars. GOLDEN SPECIFIC Co., 185 Race St., Cincinnati, O.

F. P. VAN VALKENBURGH, Former Associate Physician and Surgeon to the Old People's Home, 3858 Indiana Avenue, Chicago, also examining Physician for the New York Life Insurance Co., Cures Drunkenness, Morphine, Opium, and destroys the desire for Tobacco. Cures guaranteed. Correspondence solicited. Reference: Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Office, 103 State-st. Chicago

MALE AND FEMALES MAKE $3 to $5 A DAY at home working for us. Send your name on a postal card for particulars and Free Sample. Hobb's Medicine Co., Chicago, Ill.

BEST PAYING THING for Agents is our PHOTOGRAPH FAMILY RECORD PICTURE. We give you liberal terms. Address Dept. G. P. CORY & CO., 51 & 53 Jefferson St., Chicago

DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES CURED by Peck's Invisible Ear Cushions. Whispers heard. Successful when all remedies fail. Sold by F. Hiscox, 853 B'way, N. Y. Write for book of proofs FREE

PILES Remedy Free. INSTANT RELIEF. Final cure in 10 days. Never returns; no purge; no salve; no suppository. A victim tried in vain every remedy has discovered a simple cure, which he will mail free to his fellow sufferers. Address J. H. REEVES, Box 3290, New York City, N. Y.

ECZEMA I NEVER FAIL to CURE Add DR. W. H. ROSS Grand Rapids, Mich.

TAPE WORM Removed alive, head and all, in three hours at your home. No starving required. Safe, sure and certain. Circulars free. 239 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill., INTERNATIONAL MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

PARALYSIS CURED without medicine. Rheumatism, Spinal Diseases and Dropsy easily cured. Address Dr. C. I. THACHER, 6, Central Music Hall, Chicago, for a valuable book FREE to all.

LINCOLN TEA. Guaranteed to cure Constipation, Liver and Kidney trouble, Blood and Complexion Purifier. Send for sample. Sold by all Druggists. McCLURE DRUG CO., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

RUPTURE A Positive Radical cure at Home. (Sealed) Book giving full particulars sent free. Write Dr. W. S. Rice, Box U Smithville, Jeff. Co., N. Y.

OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till cured. DR. J. STEPHENS, Lebanon, Ohio

GOOD SENSE CORSET WAISTS have tape-fastened buttons won't pull off; cord-edge button holes—won't wear; ring buckle at hip—secures hose supporter.

YOUR NAME on 25 LOVELY CARDS, 1 RING, 1 LACE PIN, 1 PATENT FOUNTAIN PEN, 1 FORGET-ME-NOT ALBUM, 400 Album Verses, &c., with the New and Popular Monthly, WAYSIDE GLEANINGS, THREE MONTHS FOR 10c. LAUREL CARD CO., CLINTONVILLE, CONN.

Signal Notes.

THE Lord Chief-Justice, at the Birmingham assizes last year, said: "If England could be made sober three-fourths of her jails could be closed."

THE Yale faculty hereafter require the exclusion of all restaurant, hotel, and other advertisements which include the sale of intoxicating beverages, from the college publications.

A TEMPERANCE autograph pledge-book placed conspicuously in railway, Y. M. C. A., or other reading-rooms or libraries frequently attracts voluntary signatures. This is a suggestive note for temperance workers.

THREE days of prayer were held in Exeter Hall, London, February 8, 9 and 10, for the abolition of the Anglo-Asiatic opium traffic. Intensely earnest prayers were offered and a spirit of solemnity and fervor prevailed.

BISHOP HARRISON, of Glasgow, speaking at a Burns gathering in Greenock Temperance Institute, said that the truest way of honoring the memory of Burns is to fight against the giant intemperance with whom the poet had too often struggled in vain.

THE Paris mission to the Jews reports work accomplished the past year on religious and philanthropic lines. The Jews recently driven from Russia tell of their suffering and persecution and are helped. Many show a deep interest in the study of the Scriptures.

"THERE have been two main characteristics of the Asiatic opium traffic," says The Christian, "devastation in India and China, and discredit to the name and fame of Great Britain. The wicked traffic has long been doomed and now its end seems almost in view."

RUSSIA is still pursuing her cruel policy toward the Jews; notices of expulsion are being relentlessly executed. The exchanges say that the protests of the general public at the severity of the officials recently became so violent that the chief of police was compelled to defer the further expulsions until a later date.

ANTI-OPIUM memorials are being prepared, to be presented to the British government by the active humane friends of the anti-opium movement. It is said that nearly every official in Burmah, native and European, is in favor of the immediate abolition of the traffic, and that a great anti-opium party has been formed amongst the officials in India.

A DRINK made out of ground quassia (a half ounce steeped in a pint of vinegar) is recommended as a substitute for alcoholic drinks to those who crave them. A small teaspoonful in a little water should be taken whenever the liquor thirst becomes overpowering. This is very helpful if a drinker will persevere in trying it.

AT THE hall of the Central Temperance Association in London, last month, Mrs. Annie Besant delivered a notable temperance address in the course of which she said that instead of the drunkard's being "no man's enemy but his own" that he is "a focus of poison to the community in which he has a physical presence;" and it is the views which she holds of the relationship of one man to another, and the influence which he exerts upon another, that have made her a total abstainer.

A NINETEEN year old New Jersey boy died not long ago from excessive use of cigarettes. He began to smoke them when eight years of age, and the habit so grew upon him that he could not shake it off. A few weeks ago he became so sick that he had to cease work, and grew weaker every hour. From his former healthy, robust form he dwindled to a skeleton. As he died he turned to those beside him and said: "Tell the boys that cigarettes killed me; let them profit by my sad experience." A moment later he was dead.

IN an address of welcome at the recent interstate conference of women, held at Kansas City, Mo., Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman spoke eloquently of woman's progress. The revolution of thought and custom regarding women, she claimed, has been the most important the earth has known; she touched upon its relations to schools, colleges, trades, professions and philanthropies; its world-wideness; and lastly referring to man's attainments, she said: "The dignity and equality of woman must be the true measure of man's development."

Good Cooking

Is one of the chief blessings of every home. To always insure good custards, puddings, sauces, etc., use Gail Borden "Eagle" Brand Condensed Milk. Directions on the label. Sold by your grocer and druggist.

As you value good looks be careful what soap you use on the hair and scalp. To preserve the lustre, beauty, and softness of your hair, never wash it with ordinary Soap, as that is too severe. Use Ivory Soap always. Be especially careful about this. You will never be troubled with scurf or dandruff and the hair will become soft as silk with the use of Ivory Soap.

COPYRIGHT 1891, BY THE PROCTER & GAMBLE CO.

For Harness, Buggy Tops, Saddles, Fly Nets Traveling Bags, Military Equipments, Etc.

Gives a beautiful finish which will not peel or crack off, smut or crock by handling. Not a varnish Used by the U. S. Army and is the standard among manufacturers and owners of fine harness in every quarter of the globe.

SOLD BY ALL HARNESS MAKERS.

A Complete Line of Dress Reform Goods,

INCLUDING THE

NEWELL BUST SUPPORT,

Equipoise Waist and Jenness-Miller Specialties. Send stamp for free Illustrated Catalogue.

MRS. S. W. PIKE,

75 Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

"THE SALOONS MUST GO!"

The "just edict has gone forth" from the noble women of the W. C. T. U., and all along the line this "Invincible Army" is advancing against the "strongholds" of the enemy. Their work is not only to "fight the enemy," but also to "rescue the perishing." The pitiful victims of strong drink, the slaves to this terrible appetite, by the tens of thousands, go reeling through the streets of our large cities, and are numbered by the hundreds of thousands in our fair land. MEDICAL SCIENCE comes to the rescue, and says, "A REMEDY HAS BEEN FOUND!" a remedy so potent that it "Strikes off the shackles from the slaves" of and says to them "GO FREE!" This advertisement is not the announcement of some "New Nostrum" for the purpose of drawing a few dollars from the unfortunates or their friends, and then have them once more disappointed, as they find they have been misled. It is to herald the news of a SUCCESS which challenges investigation. IT HAS BORNE INVESTIGATION! It has done, and is doing, the work indicated above. Its work HAS BEEN INVESTIGATED by many of Chicago's LEADING CLERGYMEN, PHYSICIANS and TEMPERANCE workers, and it has received their full indorsement.

ALCOHOL, OPIUM AND TOBACCO

The NATIONAL BICHLORIDE OF GOLD CO.

WAS INCORPORATED FEB. 15, 1892, UNDER THE LAWS OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS—CAPITAL, $500,000.

OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS.

MARK M. THOMPSON, M. D., President, Originator of Dr. Thompson's Bichloride of Gold Treatment.
WALTER THOMAS MILLS, Secretary, The well-known Temperance Lecturer and Author.
J. J. THOMPSON, M. D., Vice-President.
GEORGE B. TOWNSEND, Treasurer, Late Financial Secretary Chicago Y. M. C. A
LUCAS L. MILLER and ELLERY C. HUNTINGTON.

4,000 SHARES of its full-paid non-assessable Stock at $25 per Share are now offered for sale. The proceeds will be used to establish in Chicago

THE NATIONAL BICHLORIDE OF GOLD INSTITUTE

For the Treatment and Cure of Alcoholism, Narcotism and the Tobacco Habit by the use of

DR. THOMPSON'S BICHLORIDE OF GOLD

TREATMENT, and also to establish BRANCH OFFICES for the same purpose in other cities and different States.

The Institute is now located in a beautiful stone building, corner West Monroe St. and Hoyne Av. This property, with the lot it stands on, has just been purchased by the National Bichloride of Gold Co., and is valued at $25,000. This will furnish ample accommodation for the present needs of the Institute, but as the work increases it is proposed to purchase property and erect a much larger building near one of Chicago's beautiful Parks, where the equipment and surroundings will be as helpful as possible. Each shareholder acquires an interest in the property now owned by the Company, besides participating in all profits, and will share in whatever property the Company may acquire.

The work of the Institute will be supplemented by The National Medical and Moral Temperance Association, newly chartered, of which is President, and many of Chicago's leading Divines, Physicians and Temperance Workers are Vice-Presidents. See article on page 2 in last week's UNION SIGNAL by Bishop Samuel Fallows, headed "The Medical Cure of Drunkenness."

BISHOP SAMUEL FALLOWS, D. D.

PATIENTS who prefer not to be treated at the Institute may receive treatment at the offices of the Company, Suite 805 to 808, Nos. 17 and 19 Quincy Street, or at private residences in Chicago by special arrangements with the Company.

THE STOCK OF THE COMPANY WILL PAY VERY LARGE DIVIDENDS. It offers

A SPLENDID INVESTMENT FOR WOMEN.

It could be placed in large blocks with capitalists, but we prefer to divide it into small shares and have it distributed as widely as possible, so as to have people in every community interested in sending patients to us. Branch Institutes will be opened throughout the country as soon as practicable, but the profits from the great Chicago Institute will yield handsome dividends.

In order to enable people of moderate means to secure shares we have decided to sell stock on $5 monthly payments. We furnish free by mail, or at our office, a pamphlet giving full information in regard to our plans and treatment, also testimonials of those who have been cured, and the indorsement of many of Chicago's leading Clergymen, Physicians and Temperance Workers. This pamphlet will convince you of the desirability of investing in the stock. Send any amount of money, NO MATTER HOW SMALL, to secure as many Shares of Stock as you wish to have reserved until you can send a further remittance. The 4,000 Shares of STOCK WILL SOON ALL BE TAKEN, so Act Promptly. Shares may be secured by telegraph and remittance may follow. We will furnish remunerative employment to a good agent in every neighborhood. Address

THE NATIONAL BICHLORIDE OF GOLD CO., 17 to 21 Quincy St., Chicago, Ill.

THE UNION SIGNAL

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION — FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND

"Thou hast given a banner to them that fear Thee; that it may be displayed because of the Truth."

Vol. XVIII.—No. 11.] CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, March 17, 1892. [Price $1.00 per Year in Advance.

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

The House of Representatives in Iowa has voted to re-submit a prohibitory amendment.

Earthquake shocks of unusual length and breadth have occurred the past week in California.

A number of people perished in the terrible blizzard that prevailed in the Northwest the middle of last week.

The death-roll from the Anderluis colliery explosion in Belgium, March 11, numbers two hundred and fifteen victims.

John Burns, the labor leader, has been elected to Parliament. He says the working people will stand by Gladstone's party.

The Grand Duke of Hesse died on Sunday morning, and as a mark of respect the court of Berlin has gone into mourning for three weeks.

Twenty-eight of the large breweries of Chicago, representing a capital of $20,000,000, have combined against the English breweries' syndicate.

The French Chamber of Deputies has adopted a proposal giving women the right to vote in councils of master tradesmen and workmen, the object of these councils being to decide disputes between persons of these two classes.

A large meeting was held in London, March 11, presided over by the Lord Mayor, in the interests of the Columbian Exposition. Measures were adopted to insure adequate representation for Great Britain, and it was suggested that British goods should be marked with the home selling price to demonstrate the cost of protection.

New and improved catalogues of the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association are nearly ready for distribution. They will be welcomed everywhere in their enlarged and more complete form.

The suggestion of Mrs. Bateham, superintendent of Sabbath observance, in another column, calling for an avalanche of letters, we hope will be responded to by our prompt women everywhere. As she says, "we must not fail."

Mary Sparkes Wheeler, of Phœnixville, Penn., has been appointed superintendent of World's temperance mission work, and she will soon solicit the money to help us send out our missionaries. She has excellent plans, which the women can obtain by writing her, and they will also see them if they are careful readers of The Union Signal. Her first communication appears on the twelfth page of this issue.

The next issue of The Union Signal will contain a valuable symposium on Sabbath Observance and closing the gates of the Columbian Exposition on Sunday. As Sabbath Observance day is April 3d, superintendents of this department, or local presidents, should see that a generous supply of this issue is distributed on or before that date to create sentiment in favor of our principles. A united effort at this time will be most effective.

St. Louis has recently had a conference of all the leading societies within its borders that are managed by women. It lasted four days. Protestant, Catholic and Jewish societies were represented, each reporting its own work. After all these reports were in, the committee on resolutions made its report, and strong suffrage and temperance resolutions were adopted. This is something like it. Why cannot we have such a conference in every town, city and village? It would tend greatly to the unification of woman's work, and, reported by the press, would spread abroad ten thousand fruitful ideas, helpful to human brotherhood.

The People's party altogether ignore prohibition and the woman's ballot, thus causing a bolt in the party of much of its best membership. The National Reform party will call a convention one day earlier than the Prohibition party's convention, and will put in the two planks above named, the admission of which would have united at St. Louis the reform forces of the country, and with its aggressive policy on economic questions will seek union with the Prohibition party. This is a good move, and we await developments with profound interest.

In Easthampton, Ct., on March 10, at midnight, Mrs. Caroline Brown, the revered mother of our beloved Caroline B. Buell, corresponding secretary of the National W. C. T. U., breathed out her soul to God in the eighty-third year of her age. Watched and tended by her faithful, only daughter for three months, this blessed mother in Israel has passed to heaven surrounded by her nearest relatives and a large circle of lifelong friends. The Union Signal sends love and sympathy to each and all. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints."

The Woman's National Temperance Hospital was visited March 9 by Lady Henry Somerset and Miss Willard, who met Dr. Ousley, the resident physician, and Mrs. Hornby, the matron; also ten young women nurses, who are soon to take their diploma from the institution. A brief interchange of kindly greetings was had, and "Blest be the tie" was sung. "A nicer set of young women one does not often see" was the commentary of our leaders, who sent letters of congratulation to Mrs. J. B. Hobbs, in view of her pioneer relations to the enterprise, and the noble growth that has already filled the hospital to overflowing and made necessary plans for a new building with all the modern improvements. Mrs. M. E. Kline, president of the board, is indefatigable in her forwarding of this movement that is sure to materialize for the World's Fair.

Easter was named last week as our special prayer day for Sunday closing at the exposition. We are now told the question is to be settled the week previous, and we therefore name instead April 3, the red-letter day of our calendar. But let us by no means forget that the whole week is set apart for prayer and work for Sabbath observance. It had been our hope and that of our National superintendent, that while exhibits were closed, the grounds might be utilized for religious and reform work, but it soon became evident that if the day was honored at all the gates must be firmly closed, and for that let us all pray, and also that all sale of intoxicants may be ruled from the grounds. In response to the petitioning of our faithful white-ribboners, New York, Massachusetts and Ohio have voted against having their state exhibits open on the Sabbath at the Exposition, and others will probably soon take the same action.

Lady Henry Somerset's editorial relations will not be interrupted by her going back to England. She will send sketches, paragraphs and editorials, and will soon set going our English edition. She left Chicago, where she has lived nearly three months, March 16, and will sail April 13 on the Teutonic, of the White Star line, and addresses but three more meetings in America, one for the miners in Pittsburgh, March 17, arranged by our white-ribboners; one in Portland, Maine, in honor of Neal Dow and Mrs. Stevens, and one on April 7, in Tremont Temple, Boston, for Mary A. Livermore and the Massachusetts W. C. T. U. Miss Helen L. Hood and Miss Florence Balgarnie are going to England within a few weeks to coöperate with our British sisters in building up the temperance work of women. All these forward movements help to make the World's W. C. T. U. in fact what it has been for years in name.

Our entire editorial staff, with the regretted exception of Miss West, absent in California, and the happy addition of Mrs. F. H. Rastall, our business manager, Miss Ruby Gilbert, our bookkeeper, and Miss Anna Gordon, were invited to dinner in the apartments of Lady Henry Somerset on March 9. The evening was devoted to the careful study of The Union Signal, that its interests might be promoted by the most thorough understanding of the views and inspirations of each white-ribboner present. The result will be felt for good by our constituency, we are assured. One of the decisions reached was to issue a twenty-page paper for three months at least, in order to present to our readers contributions and advertisements for which our columns are now too crowded. The management of The Union Signal appreciates all criticisms, whether favorable or otherwise; suggestions and helps have our careful consideration.

Lady Henry Somerset's farewell to Chicago on the evening of March 12, in Central Music Hall, was a notable event. The stage was magnificently decorated with the great motto that loomed conspicuous above the Boston Convention in November last, "Christ for the World," besides flags, English and American, and the word "Farewell," in large letters made of roses, with the motto, "We wage our peaceful war for God and Home and Every Land." Choice baskets of flowers and a tall vase of lilies were on the platform where sat scores of our representative philanthropists. Our senior editor presided, Rev. Dr. Lawrence, of the Second Baptist church, opened the meeting with prayer, Mrs. Katherine Fiske, the well-known singer, gave beautiful selections, and Mrs. Matilda B. Carse introduced the noble woman, who, coming to us as a stranger, is now revered as a leader and loved as a comrade by all American white-ribboners. Lady Henry's speech on "The Submerged Tenth" was all that her warmest admirers had prophesied,—logical, witty and tender, holding the audience to the last word, and given in a voice sweet as an Æolian harp. The press of Chicago, which, like that of the entire country, has been most brotherly to our guest, reported her address in full; this we would also gladly do did space permit. Mrs. Susan Gale Cook, secretary of the Board of Lady Managers of the Columbian Exposition, with words wisely chosen, presented a bouquet of roses. Mrs. Charles Henrotin, vice-president of the Women's Congresses of the Exposition, wittily gave a great bunch of "American beauties" to "the English rose;" Dr. Sarah Hackett Stevenson, of the Chicago Woman's Club, bestowed an exquisite bunch of orchids, and the World's W. C. T. U. presented a testimonial on vellum, than which Ricketts, the artistic engraver, never executed one more beautiful. Lady Henry in miniature is the principal embellishment with the World's and National's seal on either side, the great temple below. The border is in Louis XIV. style, and most elaborate. Water lilies and trailing arbutus are wrought into the design, with the tasteful monogram of the W. C. T. U. This testimonial, which our English guest will hang up in the great hall at Eastnor Castle, will speak of the mighty battle for a clear brain, in which the guns are ballots and the bullets are ideas. "Just now we do not love Lord Salisbury but we do love Lady Somerset" were the opening words of this presentation speech. In her gracious responses to the four ladies who represented the most influential organizations of women in America, Lady Henry said that our two nations would never be left to fight over a few miserable fishes; that if our seacoast was unprotected this very fact proved our unequaled greatness, the good will we felt toward all the world, and all the world toward us—a sentiment loudly applauded by the audience. The great meeting adjourned with the tender song, "God be with you till we meet again," and the benediction. Thus did Chicago take leave of Lady Henry Somerset in this unique testimonial meeting, as charming as it was genuine.

Contributed.

THE BON TON SALOON.

Sunshiny, crisp broke that October morning,
Montana way;
Down the white roadways of Helena tramping,
At break of day,
Gang after gang of brisk workmen came thronging,
Gathering soon
Where crawled long, snakelike trenches, in front of
The Bon Ton saloon.

Oh, you would never have looked for a hero
Out of that crowd!
Navvies from east and from west were assembled,
Soiled, labor-bowed,
Infidels, Jews—and one Salvation soldier,
Humming a tune,
Digging away where the trench ran in front of
The Bon Ton saloon.

Waked the young city to clangor and bustle,
Effort and strife.
Townsmen and ranchmen were passing, repassing,
Sinning was rife,
Whirled all the wheels of life faster and faster, till
Just at high noon
Came a great crash, and a dust cloud in front of
The Bon Ton saloon!

Silence an instant. Then oaths and quick orders,
Clamor and din.
Two men the earth-slide had buried already
Up to the chin.
Well knew the hurrying workmen unless their Help reached them soon,
Two corpses, ready-graved, stood there in front of
The Bon Ton saloon!

Clear rose a voice from the mound that was crushing
"Never mind me! [them,
I—I belong to the Salvation Army,
Dig my mate free!"
Care-free was he of the Helena soldiery,
Humming his tune,
Under the earth or above it, in front of
The Bon Ton saloon!

Half an hour later he stood on the sidewalk;
Scathless was he.
God can be trusted to always look after
"Never mind me!"
All over Helena, sinners, remember it—
How, high at noon,
Testified Tracy, entombed there in front of
The Bon Ton saloon.

—By the Editor of "All the World."

RECOLLECTIONS OF NOTED MEN AND WOMEN.
VI.

BY LADY HENRY SOMERSET.

Sir Wilfrid Lawson, Baronet, M. P.,

President of the United Kingdom Alliance for the Suppression of the Liquor Traffic.

Few men in England have braved public abuse more gallantly, few are more popular than the subject of this sketch. Throughout the ages all reformers have been stoned until they succeed, but the very hands that have wielded those weapons and hurled them with the greatest force, have been those that eventually were raised to bless, and whose eyes have been opened to see the vision of the "better further on" which has ever sustained the martyr and the patriot. As a leader of the temperance forces Sir Wilfrid Lawson's name is a household word in England, but although he is so prominently connected with this great reform, he is associated with all the forward movements of the day, for he is far from being a man of one idea. None has more bravely and consistently so often led a forlorn hope for an unpopular cause, and upon no shoulders has the burden been more often laid of carrying through a measure that was deemed well-nigh hopeless, and designated as "unpractical legislation."

Politically and socially Sir Wilfrid Lawson has long been the intrepid champion of the unpopular side, and through it all, perhaps because there is a latent chivalry in the hearts of men that leavens still this most practical age, he has not only won a place in the hearts of those whom he has served so unselfishly and well, but he has the respect of all with whom he has crossed swords, and has largely silenced the clamor of many whose abuse of class prerogative called him forth to battle. It is of course as a temperance leader that Sir Wilfrid Lawson is best known, but many another "cause that lacked assistance" has found in him a courageous supporter, and if the temperance interest seems to overshadow other phases of his service to the people, it is due to the greatness of the one, not to the comparative smallness of the other.

In the House of Commons, where he takes the first place for his incomparable humor, his earnestness of purpose and firmness of principle are fully recognized, and on the platform the unfeigned sincerity of the admiration with which great crowds of his countrymen are wont to welcome him as a reformer, is a tribute to the services that he has rendered our nation. Public opinion, like the tides of the ocean, seems sometimes to have receded so far from a given point that we deem it well-nigh impossible for that which is left so high and dry ever to be borne along again upon the swelling waters. But little by little as the tide turns, gently the waves pursue each other, each making a little way until the high-water mark far outreaches the object which we had thought it impossible ever to encompass. A few years ago Sir William Vernon Harcourt, who is now prominent in Parliament as supporter of temperance legislation, sneeringly called Sir Wilfrid Lawson in the House of Commons, "the Pontiff of Prohibition," In 1864 when Sir Wilfrid Lawson proposed in Parliament his "Permissive Bill," the principle of which was to grant to the people the power to prohibit the liquor traffic, the idea was considered so preposterous that he was flatly told that no member of Parliament would be found to second him. Even at that time, however, forty members, facetiously called the "forty thieves," voted for the bill. For twenty-eight years Sir Wilfrid Lawson has steadily, as Abraham Lincoln called it, "pegged away," losing no occasion to bring before Parliament the necessity of reform, compelling attention by his sincerity, geniality and wit. The resolute fight which he has made for the principles of prohibition outside our legislative assemblies, effected such a change upon the thought of our country that, in 1880, the House of Commons passed, by a majority of twenty-six, a resolution identical in principle with his "Permissive Bill," re-affirmed it in 1881 by a majority of forty-two, and in 1883 by a majority of eighty-seven. Sir Wilfrid Lawson has now the infinite satisfaction of seeing the great Liberal party to which he belongs and with which he acts, place the direct popular veto in the front rank of the measures to which they are committed when they shall hold again the reins of national government.

The late Earl of Beaconsfield, then Mr. Disraeli, when leader of the House of Commons, spoke of "that gay wisdom which is the honorable baronet's chief characteristic," and that sentence fitly gauges Sir Wilfrid Lawson's fund of humor. His witty repartee never fails, never stings and his powers of ridicule are used only to point a moral and illuminate an argument. On one occasion speaking of the local option bills which were introduced in 1883, he said, "We got another resolution passed and made them say that it was urgent that the people should be granted this power of protecting themselves; but they have a curious idea of urgency in the House of Commons. They remind me of two men in Ireland, one of whom called out, 'Hullo! there is a man in a bog;' the other asked, 'Is he far in?' 'No, not far,' was the answer. 'Let him be then,' said the man. 'But,' shouted the other, 'he is in head first!' I hold," said Sir Wilfrid, "'that we are in head first and I think the House of Commons was right in saying it was an urgent question." On another occasion Mr. Bass, the great brewer, had brought in a bill that the barrel-organs—which are a well-known annoyance in the London streets—should not play where people did not want them; the bill provides that one person on the street could order the poor Italian to stop his grinding and "move on." At an Oxford debating society where the subject to be discussed turned upon who was the greatest benefactor of the age, Mr. Bass' name was carried by a majority of votes in consequence of this legislation. "Well," said Sir Wilfrid, "if one person in a whole street is permitted to remove a man who is playing a barrel-organ while all the rest are in rapt admiration, ought not two-thirds to be permitted to remove Mr. Bass' barrel?" I remember on one occasion Sir Wilfrid Lawson telling me the story that at a certain meeting in the south of England one of our ablest bishops had declared upon the platform that he had taken the pledge although he himself had never been a drunkard. "The next morning," said Sir Wilfrid with that irresistible look of amusement beaming on his kindly face, "the whole of that town was placarded by the liquor party with this announcement: 'Startling statement by a bishop; he affirms that he was not a drunkard.'" His power of appreciative humor has enabled him to steer clear of many of the pitfalls which have often been laid for unsuspecting orators in an unpopular cause.

When some of our members rise to speak in the House of Commons they do so often to a dreary waste of empty benches, for there is little doubt that many of our legislators have a wonderfully expelling power. But when an intimation comes to the lobby, the library or the tea room of the House of Commons that "Lawson is up," a stream of members is always ready to listen to the great apostle of temperance—even though many of them are there to answer the party whip and vote against him. I have heard that in America a reputation for humor is fatal to a successful congressional career, but "our Sir Wilfrid" has made his pure and sparkling wit serve as a most valuable aid to progress. The late Cardinal Manning showed the reason when he said, "I never knew any one whose spontaneous fun was so overflowing as Sir Wilfrid Lawson's; he somehow or other cannot open his mouth without joking, but I may say that I never heard out of his mouth a joke that ought to have wounded any man." With all real humor there runs side by side a deeper stream of pathos and a true appreciation of proportion; Sir Wilfrid makes men laugh at themselves, rather than feel that they are laughed at. He has probably a larger assortment of opprobrious names than any other reformer has yet collected in his "abuse scrap-book;" "old cracked tea-pot," "washed-out water party," "peregrinating pump-handle," "pop-bottle pump orator," and "the apostle of slops," are among the number, and often in his addresses Sir Wilfrid Lawson has quoted these epithets as though he rather enjoyed their ingenious diversity. The Sportsman, a distinctly pro-liquor paper, was obliged not long since to pay a tribute to Sir Wilfrid's work,—which comes with the more weight on account of its source. It says:

The work of the Alliance party has been somewhat like that of the builders of a breakwater; for days and days tons and tons of stone are thrown into the sea and apparently lost, but at last the bowlders begin to show above the water, and the work of crowning and completing the edifice proceeds apace. Sir Wilfred Lawson's efforts are now beginning to show themselves in the political sea, and he and his friends are making merry and rejoicing over the event. Though we have no feeling with the Cumberland baronet it is impossible not to admire the persistency with which he has stuck to his thankless task, and given the world another instance of what British pluck and endurance can accomplish.

Sir Wilfrid Lawson's father was created a Baronet in 1831. His mother was the daughter of the Right Honorable Sir James Graham, a well-known statesman. His father was a man of simple Christian character who, fearing the bad influences of a public school and unreformed university life, educated his two sons at home. The present Sir Wilfrid has often therefore been heard playfully to say that he "never had any education." The study of the classics, however, alternated with the recreation of fox hunting, formed the work and the pleasure of his early life. He entered Parliament in 1859 as one of the representatives of the city of Carlisle, and with the exception of six months in 1885 when he lost his election by ten votes, has held his seat in the House of Commons ever since. In 1860, Sir Wilfrid married Miss Packlington-Senhouse. Lady Lawson seconds her husband's labors and is a woman universally respected and admired. Sir Wilfrid is a champion of the suffrage for women. It is natural that a mind so balanced on the great social questions of the day should not overlook that, which is second to none in individual importance, and which undoubtedly will prove to be the enacting clause of temperance reform.

Sir Wilfrid has not only the courage of his opinions in public life, but in his social gatherings he takes the position which is, alas, too often an uncommon one in our country, of giving no wine to his guests, Mr. Gladstone himself being no exception to the rule when he dines with large parties of Liberal leaders at Sir Wilfrid's house. On one occasion this loyal reformer refused to open a Liberal Club when he learned that strong drink was to be sold upon the premises.

The first streaks of light are now dawning that must tell this great and good man that the aims of his life are likely to shine forth and bring a glow of satisfaction to his soul; the day when for

"The sighing of the poor and needy God hath risen,
And chains are breaking, and a door is opening for the souls in prison."

It is, however, only perhaps when the bugle sounds victory, that men begin to realize how hard has been the fight, how many are the slain hopes and dying ambitions with which the field of life is strewn, for only as the burden is laid down, when the object is accomplished, do we learn how heavy and how long has been the battle. The old mediæval legend which tells how Christopher, the giant, came down to the water's edge and found there a little child sitting forlornly on the rocks, unable to ford the rushing stream, presents a vivid picture of the life of many of our modern reformers. Christopher bent down to raise the little one, and seating him upon his shoulders he waded first ankle and then knee deep into the turbulent water. The child, so light at first, seemed to grow heavier until the burden was almost more than he could carry. At length, bowed down beneath the weight, and exhausted by the struggle, he reached the opposite shore, when lo! the little humble child stood radiant with light before him as the Christ of God. How often do great hearts, filled with pity for the suffering world, stoop to raise and help men across the dark river of life, little dreaming how great the weight will be, how heavy the burden will grow; and when, the struggle ended, the dark flood passed, they lay their burden upon the shores of victory, they realize with joy that it was not only humanity they carried in their arms, but that within humanity's breast there beat the heart of God.

THE GOSPEL MEETING.

BY S. M. I. HENRY.

The gospel meeting, as distinguished from the regular church service, and conducted by women, is to play an important part in the world's redemption. The whole gospel cannot be taken to all the people without it and its accessories, as they exist in the plan of work of the W. C. T. U. This is no disparagement of the church service which has its own mission, and the W. C. T. U. gospel meeting has its own; the one must supplement the other.

The gospel from the standpoint of men teachers has been faithfully presented to the world for nearly twenty centuries; but it has been, at best, a one-sided application, and in spite of all its best efforts, thus far, it has reached but a small percentage of mankind, and the most unclean appetites and practices sit comfortably under its preaching, while all about it the grossest evils are stalking unhindered. Only a one-sided truth could be taught when all the teachers are men. The churches refuse to admit women to this ministry, therefore the other side—the mother side—cannot be taught by the church, as such, in her regular services.

There are masses of people in every city and large village who will not listen to religious teaching by men. They have no confidence in men, less in ministers than any other class of men. They have been looking from the saloon standpoint, at the church and her clergy, and this is not a favorable point from which to study these subjects. They judge all men by themselves, and insist that man is only vile. They believe in nothing on this earth but motherhood and mother love. In my city missionary work of years ago, I do not remember to have found one man who could not be touched by a reference to his mother, or who was not inclined to reverence her memory.

The great success of the W. C. T. U. in her gospel ministry has been because she could appeal directly to this sacred sentiment; she could touch the most hardened, because she represented organized motherhood and entered directly into the secret place of the man's heart, where he kept sweet and green the memory of his childhood, and the mother whom he loved and trusted then, or the mother whom he had never known and for whom his heart had always hungered. One wicked man said to me: "Oh, if my mother hadn't died and left me when I was so young, I might have been a better man." Another said, "My mother wasn't much, I reckon; she went off 'n left me when I was a baby, 'n I've been lonesome always."

This hunger of the human being after motherly love and care seems to be the one thing which God has reserved to himself and hedged about in even the hardest heart; so that in the time of his extremity, when weakened by sickness, depressed by misfortune or awakened to the loneliness of sin, one who can reach the memory of or longing for this motherly touch in the heart of the man, can preach Christ to him with almost the certainty that He will be accepted. Unbelief, recklessness, untold vice, has given away again and again under the gentle tone and the motherly pleading of the W. C. T. U. gospeller, and the outcast has become a respected member of society and of the church.

The efforts that have been made of late to bring discredit upon woman's ministry are clearly in the interests of vice and selfish greed. It would be a sad day for the church when she should throw the weight of her influence against this ministry, for many sons and daughters of the church whom she has been unable to hold, for whom her heart is breaking, if they are ever saved must be reached and brought back by the ministry of woman.

The church is crippled, and the whole world poisoned by the things against which the recognized ministry of the church is practically silent.

There is needed a voice which has believed this, and the desperate courage of suffering yet believing womanhood will teach the whole truth, and declare the whole counsel of God's Word against those things that feed the lusts of the flesh and the greed of power, destructive in the using; there must also be a place where this teaching can be plainly given without hindrance.

The gospel meeting and its accessories in the hands of the W. C. T. U. meets this need, and should become a permanent auxiliary to the regular church services in every city and village in the nation. It should be a gospel meeting pure and simple. But a true gospel meeting must cover a wide range, and like the good news of salvation, go out in healing influence as far as the curse has gone. Is the destroyer found in domestic life, in business, in society, in personal habit, in political action? Does it lurk in the hospital, in the physician's prescription, in the law, in the pulpit, in the press? Does the pastor smoke it, the elder chew it, the class-leader vote for it, the deacon drink it? Does it hide its leprosy under broadcloth and silk, and sit devoutly in the pew, by the force of its influence checking the truth which the preacher would like to utter, and from which he is restrained only by the thought of salary and position? Then it is the mission of the gospel preacher in the gospel meeting to supplement the preaching in the pulpit, and bring the truth, unwelcome, unprofitable as it may be considered, to bear on business, society, politics, and everything else that in any place helps to perpetuate vice and threatens the purity of the people, seasoning it all with the gentleness of Christ.

The gospel meeting will have to be made by direct personal missionary effort, if it is composed of the people whom we ought to reach, and it must be practical and helpful to be permanent. The Spirit of the Lord must be the power in it. A machine meeting run by human devices will not live long; but one in which the living truth beams always like the old sacred fire on the altar; where men and women know they will be taught something that will help them through the week; to which they are drawn by that strange, nameless something which is not the magnetism of a leader, the eloquence of a speaker, the sweetness of a song, but the secret of the Lord; such a meeting will live, and grow, and blossom, and bear fruit in the lives of men and in the legislation of the nation.

The meeting should have one woman in charge, who will see that the preliminaries are all arranged; that it begins and closes on time; that the hymns are appropriate, the books distributed, the audience made to feel comfortably at home, the speaker introduced; that the meeting does not fail if the speaker should, and that the man or woman, to whom the truth spoken has been a sword, shall not be left without the truth that heals; who, if everybody else forgets to mention the special request, will herself see that it is laid before the Lord; who will shake hands with the stranger and the pastors that have strayed in and will invite them to come again.

The meeting should begin with a spirited service of song, interspersed with prayer, followed by the Scripture with a practical exposition, or the address; testimony, prayer, closing hymn and benediction.

A collection should always come in somewhere; special requests for prayer should be invited, and when practicable an inquiry or consecration meeting should follow the benediction, to which all thoughtful persons should be personally invited to remain.

A table with pledges and literature, pen and ink, in charge of a member of the union, should be convenient, and opportunity given for people to sign the pledge. The literature should be freely distributed at the close of every service.

No arbitrary methods, however, will apply to this service which comes so close to the quick of humanity. The gospel meeting as to style and form, should grow, by the divine life that is in it, about its spiritual center.

Consecrated tact, hatred of sin, love of souls, loyalty to truth, together with the mind that is in Christ, and the baptism of the Holy Spirit in the leader, will insure the correct method and make the meeting so interesting that the most indifferent shall feel its power and come again.

[Just before the last National Convention I received a letter from Miss Ames asking me to write for THE UNION SIGNAL on the above subject as soon as convenient. I had been obliged to drop all work and return to the sanitarium, and was too sick to even reply, at that time, to this last word which I was ever to receive from my comrade, friend and neighbor. But now, as strength begins to return, first of all comes to mind this request and my first real effort at work with my pen is for its fulfillment.]

Clifton Springs, N. Y., Sanitarium.

A CONVERSATION IN HIGH LIFE.

BY "SHE."

"Look here, Columby," said Uncle Samuel, laying down his paper, and looking over his spectacles at Aunt Columbia who sat near the lamp table cutting out a star for New Mexico, who was soon to come of age and eat at the same table with his Par and Mar. This was the way the good woman kept tally of her numerous household. "Look a-here, I thought when we began housekeeping, we agreed that I was to take care of the boys and you the girls."

"Well, haven't I done it? Where in all the created world can you find a prettier, smarter and pearter lot of girls than I can show? Just tell me, Samuel."

"W'all, I don't know as I can say anything agin' that, but it does seem to me that you don't keep them as well in hand as you used to. Now, before the boys had that awful scrimmage which gave us so much trouble to settle, the girls was always at home, milkin' the cows, churnin', sewin', cookin', scrubbin', and sich womanly work, and never run on the streets, or went to conventions, or belonged to anything but the church and the sewin' society; but now there is not a day that some of them are not in my office, interruptin' my work, and talkin' such high-falutin' nonsense they don't know the meanin' of, and pryin' into their brothers' business; and sometimes, a sassy minx actually says: 'Par, if you would let me do that, I could beat brother all to pieces.' Just think of that, Columby! Then when they don't come themselves, they are writin' me notes all the time, callin' my attention to this, that and t'other, that the Lord only knows how they ever heard of.

"Columby, I think sendin' those girls to boardin' school was a great mistake—they have been fidgety ever since. Now, would you believe it, the other day when I was threatenin' to spank that little upstart neighbor of ours who behaved so bad lately, every blessed daughter of yours, married and single, wus writin' and dispatchin' to me for a week. 'My dear Par, don't you fight. A man of your character ought to be above it. You ought to set an example to the world and stand on your dignity as a Christian gentleman and arbitrate; for we girls are dead agin' fightin' and if you and the boys start a fuss agin, we don't intend to help you one bit, no, we jest don't.'

"Now, Columby, it took everlastin' cheek to do that—you certainly are lettin' those girls get ahead of you. I can't turn a corner but I meet some of them out a-pesterin' and tormentin' the boys; and when I say, 'Where are you goin', girls?' 'Only to our W. C. T. U. convention,' or 'to a meetin' of our W. S. A.,' or 'the King's Daughters,' they answer so chipper it is enough to make your head swim. Then they come when we are gettin' ready to go into the great business of regulatin' and purvidin' for the family, and talk about rights and privileges and positions, until we are plum distracted. Where did they git such notions, Columby? Something has got to be done. I can't do your work and mine too.

"Here I am pestered out of my life trying to keep the boys straight. Here's one-half of 'em fussing at me to keep out all outsiders and let them swap knives and trade coats with each other, sayin' they would get better bargains than anywhere else. Well, they have done it and some of 'em have come out mighty well, and some of 'em haven't. Now there is Pennsylvany, and the boys on the east side of the farm dress mighty fine, and have trunks full of clothes, but they have nearly stripped my plow boys; the poor chaps haven't clothes enough left to be decent in. Then the other half are growlin' and say if I would let them cross the duck pond and trade at their Aunt Vic's and Cozin Williams's and with the Frogmore kin, they could make lots of money, and I am beginnin' to think they are about half right.

"Then, agin, the boys have taken to drinkin' so much whisky that it takes more money to pay their whisky bill than all their other bills put together. I don't like this, you know, but they say they pay more money into my strong box with the revenue from this great industry than anything else, and that I could not meet my expenses without it. Wall, this do seem reasonable, very; but somehow I think it is bad for the boys; they don't go to Sunday-school and church like they used to, and are not half so respectful and well-behaved even to me. Then there's those adopted children, they have no gratitude on earth, and are rowin' and fussin' and actually talk like they want to turn me and the boys out and run things themselves. I am that worried and upset tryin' to keep them all in order, that I am sure there are some gray hairs in my head if you would only look for them. Then my expenses have been so great in the last four years (the boys claiming that I must pay them all extry who stood up for me in the scrimmage) that it looks like it would take all I can make to satisfy them.

"The other day, over at St. Louis I clean had my breath took out of me, when your daughter Frances walked in among all those Reform boys, as they call themselves. They like to have clapped the top of the house off when they saw her and made her a vice-president on the spot. She took her seat on the platform, meek as Moses. Then the first thing you know she up and asked them to vote that all the girls ought to have a say in everything in this nation that the boys decide about, and to shut up this liquor business, so the boys can't get drunk. I must say, she spoke powerful and noble for her side. I nearly blowed the top of my head off when I wiped my eyes to keep the boys from seein' I was makin' an old fool of myself. I felt sorter with the boys when I went in, for most of that set are good fellers and haven't worried me to death trying to grab all they can get; but I tell you, Columby, I was plumb with your daughter Frances when she got done. She talked sense, "horse" sense. It was a disgrace to the nation the way those boys behaved. I could 'a' crawled through an auger hole to see 'em act like a passel of wild Injuns and before the strange English lady with Frances. She's been uncommon proper over here and hasn't made anybody feel bad with her being an Earl's daughter, and I wanted our folks to show they'd had some raisin', too. But I'll be blessed if Frances wasn't bigger 'n the whole Convention, though I wouldn't tell her so for the whole of Cuba and Canada. But I was that proud of the way she made 'em say who was and who wasn't for what she wanted, that I wished you were there to see it. It's wonderful how girls do take after their Par, sometimes.

"Now, Columby, I've talked to you to-night like the sensible woman I know you air—and I put it to you as a matter of jestice if I haven't got enough to do to manage the boys, without being bothered to death by the girls?"

"Now, Samuel, I knew this talk was bound to come sometime. I've seen how things were going and I know all your troubles; my own heart aches over my dear boys, for I see plainly they are going to the bad. And, Samuel, I can tell you that sending our girls to school was the best day's work we ever did. Those girls have learned nearly everything; they do their work in half the time they used to, and do it twice as well; then they get their books and papers and read to me such wonderful things; and then get their Bibles and read to me, and sing such beautiful hymns, and pray for you and the boys, always telling me God will make it all right and save our boys after awhile. They are that smart, Samuel, that Wyoming says he let his wife come into his office to help him, and now he couldn't begin to do without her; and everything is so much nicer and cleaner; Mississippi, too, was thinking of asking his wife to do the same, for he was in a mighty bad way at home and could not see his way through managing the servants, when up starts that big boy, George, of his (he's been twisting his Par round his fingers for some time) and says, 'It won't do, Par, at all; the friends I run with won't like it; and they have promised to send me on to see grandpa and they pay all my expenses; and they know if ma comes fooling around their personal liberty would soon be gone, and they wouldn't dare to say their souls were their own, and their business would soon suffer so they might not be able to keep their promise to me.' Poor, foolish boy! His mother would have soon set those friends of his at better business, and stopped so much extravagance that she could have kept him at his grandpa's as long as he wanted to stay. Now, Samuel, my advice is to let those girls help you in your work, and you will be surprised to see how things will straighten out; because, Samuel, they will do right, and God always helps those who try to do right; this is why I know it would be better; the boys would soon quit lots of their meanness and the girls would be so proud to be trusted. Did it ever occur to you, Samuel, that when God gave all the men in the world to a woman's care to train and teach in their tender years, He was showing in another way, that it was not good for man to be alone? And as long as you try to keep house with the boys alone, you shut out the only help that will lead you out of the difficulties of life upward and onward to the purer atmosphere, where hand in hand they walk together with faces upturned to Heaven, to fulfill the high destiny of a God-directed people."

RAILROAD TIES.

VI.

BY JOHN G. WOOLLEY.

En route in Iowa! Letters all written! Speech ready for to-night! Tired! Must go to sleep! Hitch mind to car-wheel! There—I'm dreaming! . . . . We approach Des Moines—stranger presents card—"Mr. B. Z. Bub;" says, "Capitol?" (loquacious eyebrows finish sentence thus: "You are a member of the legislature—on your way back from spending Sunday at your home in the country. Go to, I will question you.")

I answer nothing, and truthfully, for it is just what I think.

Sitting at my feet—and gripsack—so deferential he says, "I dare say you have studied this high license question, and can state it to me clearly in a simple way." "Yes," I reply, "you are in the House I presume!" "No," he says, "being independent in politics, I am not in office, but I have friends in both Houses and the Governor and I were boys together; but what is the argument against license in its simplest form?" . . . . Then we go on thus:

D. (for dreamer)—Well, look at it this way! If a man were to offer me five dollars for leave to tempt my daughter, I would refuse, wouldn't you?

B. Z. B.—Yes, it would be worth more.

D.—Not at all; "price" cannot be scaled to such a thing, and the man who can think of turning such privilege to commodity is ineffably base or devilish. (He looks disgusted.) Infinite multiplication of the price would not affect the bargain's quality.

B. Z. B.—But the license is general, is it not?

D.—Yes, but infinite multiplication of the girls only increases the villainy; temptation is indistributable. Whisky is like water, in that it exerts pressure in all directions equally.

B. Z. B.—But the license money goes to the people.

D.—Yes, but infinite multiplication of the father does not diminish his depravity. Sin is indivisible.

B. Z. B.—But it is not girls, but boys that are tempted.

D.—Yes, directly, but whenever you damn a boy (he winces) you strike somebody's daughter; at any rate a father who would barter the safety of his son would also his daughter's. Duty is sexless.

B. Z. B.—You would not permit any saloons at any price!

D.—No! not at any price.

B. Z. B.—Not even though you could decrease the number by allowing some?

D.—Have you been in New Jersey?

B. Z. B.—Oh, yes!

D.—Did you kill any mosquitoes?

B. Z. B.—Of course, thousands.

D.—Did you experience great relief after thinning them out? . . . .

B. Z. B.—I beg your pardon . . . .but what answer can you make to your foreign citizens who naturally desire to enjoy their home comforts and customs?

D.—When a man becomes a citizen he ceases to be "foreign." If the devil should settle in Iowa, would you allow him to introduce his "home comforts" here? Would you not require him to choose between hell and Iowa?

. . . . . .

The brakeman at the rear door shouts "De-mon!"—My vis à vis starts. The brakeman at the forward door cries, "De-M-O-I-N-E-S!"

B. Z. B.—I hope I shall see you later. (His frank, communicative nose curls an end for the sentence) "You idiot!" and taking up his Sheol strap he moves down the aisle and

. . . . . .

Bump!! Whiz!! I'm awake.

March 8, 1892.

MISTAKES OF PROHIBITIONISTS.

BY LYMAN ALLEN.

THE UNION SIGNAL editorial on "The Present Crisis in the Prohibition Party," in the issue of February 18, is admirable. We should hear from friends of the cause on these questions.

In considering a proper future course it is well to recall past errors. Some of the mistakes Prohibitionists have made in the past are:

1. Early we pronounced for equal suffrage, but we have not to this day acted as if we fully indorsed the idea. We should invite women to join with us in our party work—in meetings, committees, conventions, everywhere she should bear a part. She may do all but vote, and we should act as if we intended her to vote. In some instances men have not been so much at fault in this regard, but as a rule we have not practiced what we preached. The Alliance has led us in this reform.

2. We declared for government ownership of railroad and telegraph lines, for abolition of national banks, for postal savings banks, for civil service reform and for other much needed reforms, but we failed to advocate them as we should have done in the press and on the stump. In the main, we acted as if these were not live questions demanding our hearty service, but as mere side issues of little importance, put in our platforms to show our "cordial sympathy" with the depressed laboring classes. In large measure we talked of prohibition and of nothing else, and failed to interest the farmer and mechanic. Not that we had not adopted these reforms in good faith, but that in our zeal for prohibition we ignored other issues. Even since the Alliance entered the field we have been slow to advocate economic reforms. There were exceptions to this. Hon. O. R. Dougherty, Prohibition candidate for Congress in this district in 1890, canvassed southern California with ex-Governor Bidwell, and gave considerable time to the discussion of other reforms than prohibition, and was commended for his course. People said to him: "We like that. You give us something new."

3. After the Alliance had made a showing in the political arena, many of our leaders and organs were slow to encourage a union of reform forces—even discouraging laudable efforts to that end. We should have been prompt to take advantage of all opportunities for gaining recruits. Our cause should be of first importance—party name and party preferment secondary.

This error has been shown and mainly rectified. Most of our leaders seem disposed to aid any movement for gaining new forces, which includes the moral issues and is sound on economic and financial questions.

The campaign of '92 should see a union of reform forces. If this cannot be wholly accomplished, the Prohibition party should adopt a name and a platform which would attract new elements, and should make a canvass which would sustain the platform and command the votes of many thousands of thoughtful men who have not before stood with us.

If our party is to be more than a John the Baptist, it will need more than the zeal of the moral reformer. It must command the allegiance of those who have like zeal to labor for the success of other reforms. Besides, we should not devote all our energies in advocating a reform, the moral and economic advantages of which have been demonstrated by experience, and which in many cases is fully established in organic law. Prohibition is here to stay, and millions of sturdy men and women are here to stay with it.

There are other evils to be remedied, other wrongs to be redressed, other problems to be solved. And the party which does not energetically advocate the leading needed reforms is derelict in its duty, will not attract the masses, and will not deserve success. To succeed, we must either unite with other reform bodies or adopt a course that will draw other reformers to us.

Pasadena, Cal.

FOR A CLEAN CITY.

BY MRS. HENRY WADE ROGERS,

Chairman of the Municipal Order Committee of the World's Congress Auxiliary.

Chicago's visitors in 1893 from the cities of Paris, Berlin, Vienna, and even foggy old London will experience a peculiar sensation when they attempt to cross a street in Chicago after a shower, or even in bright weather, provided the streets are in the condition we know them to be in this year of grace, 1892. A universal cry of pity and of scorn for the dwellers in the dirtiest city of the civilized world will go up in the languages of all nations.

No excuses for the unparalleled growth of the city will be accepted; no plea that Chicago has had so much to do she could not make and keep herself clean; no explanations that poor pavement, badly laid, and a naturally sticky soil underneath, will quiet the general disturbance of our foreign guests. As for patient American citizens who will come to the city, we may expect them to bear the ills of sticky or dusty sidewalks, horrible alleys, impassable gutters and a smoky, soot-laden atmosphere with the well-known American patience and equanimity. We are a long-suffering people, and evils are not usually remedied among us until they are way past endurance.

The state legislature has voted not to permit Chicago to increase her tax levy and thus get funds for cleaning house, so all hope of an increased appropriation seems vain. If the city is to be made presentable and healthful in 1893 it must be done by the increased efficiency of the street cleaning and health departments, and by the intelligent coöperation of citizens with the authorities.

The necessity for active measures for a clean city has been recognized by the World's Fair authorities in the appointment of a committee on municipal order This committee was organized to coöperate with householders and citizens generally, and with the city authorities in making Chicago a clean city, and to secure certain public improvements essential to health and cleanliness. That it is high time, from the point of view both of health and decency, for agitation and action on these lines, nobody doubts, and least of all this committee, which on careful investigation finds the streets of Chicago very dirty, the alleys an abomination, the garbage receptacles unsightly and unsanitary, and the removal and disposal of garbage utterly inadequate, and smoke and foul odors abounding. It finds along many principal streets garbage boxes overflowing with refuse and ashes, gutters generally strewn with papers and filth of all kinds, alleys unpaved, unlighted, muddy, paper-strewn, and often containing one or more dead dogs and cats. A chapter might be written on the alleys of Chicago, and it would make most unpleasant reading for order-loving citizens. The committee finds also that there are no public baths in this city of over a million inhabitants, nor public laundries, which in foreign cities contribute so much to the comfort and cleanliness of the poor.

Piles of dirt and refuse which have been swept together in the night are left in the gutters or on one side of the street for hours of the following day, and sometimes for days, and if the weather is rainy or damp the muddy piles of earth only disgust the eyes, emit foul odors and interfere with travel; but if dry and windy besides these evils, the much-enduring citizen must breathe into his throat and lungs, and carry home in his clothing his due share of the foul dust heaps. Where streets and alleys are passably clean, the committee invariably found the cleaning was done by private contract and not by the city.

In addition to the practical work it is doing, the municipal order committee is doing educative work for a clean city. The press is a most important factor in this. By asking for fuller and more frequent articles on and reports of existing conditions in the city, and of measures to improve these, and in many other ways the committee seeks and is receiving the active aid and sympathy of the press. Home science clubs are being organized throughout the city to promote a knowledge of sanitation and hygiene; to create public sentiment for the enforcement of and obedience to city ordinances, and to secure clean streets and alleys, proper drainage and plumbing, sanitary garbage receptacles, and other improvements. In order to utilize the youthful energy of Chicago's boy citizens for a clean, healthful and beautiful city, and to promote civic patriotism among them, the municipal order committee has organized the Columbian Guards, a semi-military organization having for its objects "a clean city and good citizenship." The boys are being enrolled by companies and, besides the excellent discipline of military drill, will inform themselves on all matters relating to the government and welfare of the city and the duties which belong to good citizenship. Dr. John Henry Barrows in a recent address on municipal patriotism urged the necessity of an educational and moral campaign, that the people should be trained to a civic patriotism, and the children instructed in a regard for the common life of our city. He says further: "We live in a community where palaces are girded with weeds and surrounded by filthy lanes. We complain of the uncleanliness of our streets, and yet contribute to the evil all the while by the careless throwing into them of dirt and garbage. Why," he asks, "should not the citizens resolve to begin that agitation and organization which shall certainly result in municipal reform?"

The municipal order committee has precisely this end in view. The measure of its success must depend on the support and coöperation of the citizens.

Correspondence.

BY HOPE YE ARE SAVED.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—Some weeks ago a stranger, a German student of theology at the University here, came to make some inquiries about temperance work and to tell me how he had been impressed with what Swiss students here related about the Blue Cross movement, and that he longed to see a similar attitude toward intoxicating drinks among his German fellow-students. He had therefore published upon the university bulletin-board a call to his fellow students to join him in organizing a society for the promotion of temperance. To that call not one of his compatriots responded, but only two Jewish and several Swiss students. Nothing daunted he determined to work on, and upon consultation it had become evident that even those few could not unite upon a religious basis, and that the organization must be international. "Similar societies have been formed in Basel and Zurich to fight the drink evil purely from the hygienic and scientific standpoint. What do you think of the plan," said he, "and will Americans also join us, and ladies?" To his great joy I could give him a large supply of those Bunge pamphlets the Tennessee convention of the W. C. T. U. had enabled us to purchase, and he went out to agitate the movement.

For want of a better place the first meeting was called in a private room of a restaurant, not certain that we should be allowed there to proceed with our mission. It recalled the days of the temperance Crusade, for we were obliged to wend our way between tables covered with beer glasses to reach the apartment granted to us. We numbered twenty-eight all told, mostly young men. One student came in whose face and head still wore plasters on wounds he had received in a duel. The waiter's face expressed bewilderment as he took orders for so much tea, coffee and lemonade, and absolutely nothing else. There was evidently some excited curiosity to learn what was going on, for it was difficult to keep our sliding doors shut; but nothing happened.

The society was organized, and Dr. Burkhardt, the youngest instructor at the University, was elected president. He presides over the Anatomical Institute, and any young American who comes into his laboratory is obliged to give a reason for the faithlessness in him if he resorts to beer. Noble Lieutenant Col. Von Knobelsdorf, who does so much for temperance in Germany, was present to bid the organization God-speed, and also representatives of the Lodge of Good Templars, recently organized by that valuable worker, Miss Charlotte A. Gray, and others from the German Methodist Societies of Temperance. Mary B. Willard, and Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Patton of Evanston, were among the number.

The second meeting of this society has just been held, which found more homelike surroundings in the Graham Haus, a sanitarium recently established, which is also intended as a temperance hotel. Two cheery rooms, with abundant light, were placed at our disposal. The rooms soon filled with German and Swiss young men from the University and the book trade, who seated themselves around the tables covered with spotless linen. Important business was done to organize work for press notices, for the support of the International Monthly in Opposition to the Drinking Customs, published by Christian G. Tienken at Bremerhaven, to publish a call for "arrest of thought," as you would call it, on the German customs of drinking and the spread of temperance literature.

After the business there was an Ess Pause, the pause for eating, without which no German would consider a meeting complete. And it is a cozy custom. Each member ordered some simple refreshment, delicious in quality and neatly served. There was quite a variety. My neighbors at table had either a slice of apple cake, plain, a variety of our apple pie, or the same served with whipped cream; or two apples with a slice of cake, or a cup of chocolate with whipped cream, or a cup of tea, or a glass of raspberry vinegar, each varying in cost from five to not quite ten cents. The most extravagant had nine cents to pay.

This little sociable had lasted fifteen minutes when we were called to order to listen to an admirable paper upon "The Relation of Literature to the Drink Custom." The reader was full of fire for his theme, with keen insight into all subtle beauties of thought and expression, evidently an aspirant for literary distinction. It was a paper that deserved publication and translation. He complained that Germany cannot be said to have a literary public. Books of fiction and of poetry drop from the press still-born; even such as by general consent of the critics are pronounced best of our literature meet a weary sale. People complain they have no money to buy books, no time to read them. In the Reclam and other editions, classic books are advertised at "the price of a glass of beer!"

Beer and wine are considered a necessity and no matter how small the income that outlay is considered first. In disposing of one's leisure, the beer garden and the restaurant lay claim to hours every evening, often over the most stupid conversation but which gives opportunity to sip the favored brew. It is a dreary outlook for the author. Men who have ten hours, a small estimate for beer sipping, have no time for reading books. He then spoke of the effect of alcoholic drinks upon the appreciation of literature. Habitual drinkers grow incapable of appreciating anything but what is brutal and highly seasoned.

As to the effect of drinking upon authorship, he quoted a number of German scientists, and Bismarck's famous saying, "Beer makes stupid." A sad list of names of splendid talents was read, those of men ruined by drink. Some one had told Goethe he sometimes needed the inspiration of wine under which to write. Goethe replied, I think in his "Conversations with Eckermann," that such wine-inspired passages would probably do no credit to the writer. A number of German authors of note were total abstainers for long periods of years, and others very temperate. The subtle and exquisite effects in writing can neither be produced nor appreciated by minds inevitably deadened to high sensibility by alcoholic poison.

The paper had evidently been very suggestive to the students who added to his list of names of eminent talents brought to an early grave by drink, and regretted that he had not included the daily press in his considerations.

MARY G. STUCKENBERG.

Berlin, Feb. 5, 1892.

WHERE WOMEN VOTE.

EDITOR UNION SIGNAL:—The question is asked, "What states have woman suffrage?" Women have full suffrage in Wyoming, municipal suffrage in Kansas, and school suffrage in twenty-three states and territories, which I believe are as follows: Arizona, Colorado, Delaware, Idaho, Illinois, Kansas, Kentucky, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Dakota, Vermont, Washington, Wisconsin and Wyoming. Any one perceiving an error in this list will confer a favor by correcting it.

In some of these states, as in New Hampshire, women have unrestricted school suffrage, upon the same terms as men. In others the right is more or less restricted. In Kentucky, it is limited to widows.

ALICE STONE BLACKWELL.

NOTES FROM FRANCE.

DEAR FRIENDS:—Those interested in temperance work in France rejoiced to learn a short time ago that the French government had come to the conclusion that some vigorous measures must be taken with regard to water supplies for Paris, and decreed that an immense reservoir should be built at St. Cloud to convey spring water from the country to Paris, and thus render the Parisians independent of the unwholesome drain—containing Seine water.

St. Cloud is one of the loveliest of the many lovely hills around Paris. Here stood the old Castle belonging to the French kings, and hither resorted the late imperial Court to enjoy the wonderful view and the beautiful woods in the summer time. The old castle is now a stately ruin, destroyed in the time of the war by the French themselves, to prevent the possibility of its destruction by their enemies; the private imperial garden has become a public park; the private imperial station has become a public gangway.

Upon the summit of the St. Cloud hill, just six months ago, there sprang up a little cluster of wooden huts, most of them cantines (a cantine is a wine-selling and food-providing and rough lodging-establishment for workmen). While we were all wondering what it could mean, there appeared some 300 workmen from different parts of Paris and France to take up their abode in these huts, some of them with their wives and families, but the greater number of them single. It soon became known that they were the executors of the governmental resolution with regard to supplies of fresh spring water for Paris. We rejoice daily as we see these men with their spades and other working instruments hastening the happy day, some three years hence, when each Parisian will be supplied with 200 litres of good water per diem; we shall then be able to urge total abstinence freely with the people without being met at every point by the too often unanswerable objection, "But we shall be poisoned if we drink the water!"

These good workmen were sitting at their cheese and wine one morning at eleven o'clock, in the different cantines, when there appeared in their midst a tall, bright, Frenchwoman who gave them tracts to read and told them of a service some twenty minutes' walk away, where they would always be heartily welcomed. Some bantered, others said, "We'll come and see."

They did come, but they only saw the outside of the building the first evening. Our little mission church at St. Cloud used to be a cottage. I considered it quite a respectable size before my trip to America, and now it looks like a doll's house. We are yet in the day of small things in France. The work was begun at St. Cloud in a hayloft. We had great discouragements and hard times. Protestantism had not been known before in the town. The impress of the imperial court is still upon the people. Here Empress Eugenie had been surrounded by her priests. The rich are under their influence, the poor are dependent on the rich. Thank God, the very strong prejudice against us is wearing away. I can visit the poor women down town, now, without being hissed or called after in the streets as in former times; prejudice has given way to intelligent interest; slowly but surely there has been progression. The boys, whose naughty tricks in the Sunday-school filled us with dismay, now form part of the audience at the week night services. Instead of a rented hayloft we have a chapel of our own, free of debt and self-supporting, this same building, at the threshold of which I left our good reservoir workmen standing, before going into this long digression.

The next week they ventured inside; after that they came in larger numbers, and now there is scarcely room for the eager, stalwart "Wooden town free-thinkers" (so called) who crowd to hear the word of God week after week.

One young fellow of twenty-three years, notorious for his drunkenness, rose in one of the meetings and said before all his comrades and the St. Cloudites present: "Two weeks ago I was arguing that there was no God. I know there is one now. I want you to pray to Him for me." When he asked pardon of God for his sins with sobbing voice the evangelist suggested he must give up his drinking and smoking. He said, "I thought of that in my prayer." The conversion of this young man has been no mere stirring of the emotions; it has been an "arrest of thought," an awakening of the conscience. "I cannot swear now," he was saying the other day, "but it is pain for me to hear my comrades swear. I never noticed it before."

Through his means there has been quite a spirit of inquiry and awakening among the three hundred. The French mind, keen to detect a sham, is also keen to detect a reality. Boulanger (such is the name of our hero) has changed. A great stalwart workman was saying, as we came home from the service last night, "comme cà!" and he showed me the inside of his hand which was as black as pitch, then turned it over showing a peculiarly well-scrubbed exterior.

There may be some more to tell about these reservoir men at some future date. For the time being I feel I have tried your patience. Yours in the good work,

MARION ISABEL GIBSON.

St. Cloud, près. Paris.

Our Library Table.

"Reform" is the leading word of the best thought of this closing nineteenth century. Who cannot sound it forth from a zealous soul will ere long be cried down and utterly voiceless in the universal chorus for the betterment of mankind. A magazine that has not somewhere within its covers a response to this world-wide sentiment can hardly hope for long-lived favor in the literary world. OUR DAY, a Record and Review of Current Reform, does not belie its name, but gives to its readers more than one hopeful prophecy of "better days coming." 'Signs of the Times in German Theological Faculties," by Rev. G. R. W. Scott, D. D., is an able setting forth of the conditions of spiritual growth in Germany, closing with these words: "The signs of the times show that the Fatherland is having a spiritual uplift. May all her scholarship come into line with God!" Frank McGloin's article on the Louisiana Lottery, which appeared in The Forum of January, is reprinted here, as is fitting, that its strong utterances may become widely familiar. Joseph Cook's "Boston Monday Lecture" in this number is "Mr. Spurgeon's Character and Career," a sketch which every friend of the great preacher will welcome. The Editorial Notes are terse, well rounded paragraphs,—rich meat in nutshell capacity, for the busy book-worm who cannot wrestle with discursive articles on the topics of the day.

Woman's Temperance Pub. Ass'n, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill. Price $2.50 per year.

ELEANOR KIRKE'S IDEA, a monthly periodical in the interests of woman, has for its chief aim, helpfulness along the avenues of activity that are most sacred to women hearts. There is want enough in this old world, so that hands willing to "help just a little" need never lie idle, and it must surely be that the columns of the IDEA will receive inspiration and uplift from the spirit of its own high mission.

Published at 786 Lafayette Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y. Price 50c per year.

THE CONQUEROR is the name of a handsome magazine of which the first number comes to us marked February, 1892, price ten cents, published monthly by Ballington Booth, commander of the United States forces of the Salvation Army, 111 Reade street, New York City. The mechanical execution of this magazine is of the highest class. Its illustrations are most attractive and its matter up to the highest thought and purposes of that great movement which now embraces all nations and seeks earnestly to reach those most neglected, forgotten and forlorn. We warmly welcome this new magazine. Indeed, we are proud and grateful for the work of this grand army. Of "In Darkest England and the Way Out," that great book by General Booth, has been already sent out 200,000 copies. The song books of the Army are most inspiring, and its smaller publications, leaflets, books and papers are crisp with the spirit that animates everything done by this mighty movement for God and for humanity. We advise our women to remember the address and to make themselves better acquainted with the publications of these valiant workers.

THE STUDENTS' SERIES OF ENGLISH CLASSICS is comprised of well-edited, substantially-bound editions of the Classics which are required by the eastern association of colleges to be read by candidates for admission. These books are admirably adapted for the use of students, the print being clear, lines numbered for more ease in reference, each book containing reliable, brief notes on the life and work of the author under consideration. Aside from its worth to students, the series is a valuable addition to the libraries of literary workers. Additions will be made to the series, which now numbers eleven volumes put up attractively in a neat box.

Leach, Shewell & Sanborn, 106 and 108 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

THE TOBACCO PROBLEM, by Meta Lander, is a book that should be in the hands of every white-ribboner, every man and woman who acknowledges the hurtfulness of this habit, and, if read by those who "cannot see the harm" in smoking, would, without doubt, convert not a few from the error of their ways. It is one of the best books on this subject of daily increasing interest, and besides being strong in its array of facts, is bright and telling from beginning to end. For full information address Meta Lander, Linden Home, Marblehead, Mass. Price, $1.25.

In a recent notice of Prof. Charles W. Pearson's poem on "Methodism," we omitted to say that among the phases of modern Christian work on which he touches, he does not forget the W. C. T. U. For the benefit of our readers we quote the passage which will also serve as a fair specimen of the versification and general style of the whole poem of nearly 2,000 lines:

"The Woman's Christian Union sisterhood
Engaged in every form of doing good,
Joining in holy work the hearts and hands
Of women to the earth's remotest lands.
Seeing with eye of faith the light divine
Within the darkest human spirit shine;
Philanthropy, wide as the fallen race
That speaks in every tongue like words of grace;
As their joint offering all the churches raise
In unison for it in the voice of praise;
A glory to the common heart and brain
Of Christian womanhood it will remain,
And yet, though every brain one purpose fills,
And every heart with one affection thrills,
One soul there is of all these souls the soul,
One will to give direction and control,
And radiance o'er every member shed
Rests with redoubled splendor on the head."

Published by Hunt & Eaton, New York. Leatherette 25c: cloth, 30c.

President's Column.

WORLD'S W. C. T. U. HEADQUARTERS.

AMERICAN—Chicago, Ill., 161 La Salle St.
ENGLISH—London, W. C. 57 Gordon Square.

WORLDS W. C. T. U. OFFICERS,

President—MISS FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Vice-President-at-Large—LADY HENRY SOMERSET, 13 Memoria Hall, Farringdon St., London, E. C., Eng.
Secretary—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Ravenna, O.
Treasurer—MRS. ELLA F. M. WILLIAMS, 26 Chomedy St., Montreal, Can.

AN INSIDE VIEW OF THE LIFE OF ONE LITERARY WOMAN.

[We believe the following extract from a private letter recently received will make those who read think better of human nature in general, and "blue stocking" nature in particular.]

I am "total abstinence" to the core. It has never gone so far as to be even a principle with me, because it is so utterly a practice. I have never tasted anything stronger than bread and milk in my life, so to speak; at least, never stronger than tea or coffee. I no more take wine at fashionable dinners than I go into a saloon and order whisky. I no more think of ordering wine for my guests than I should think of taking them to a bar. I go occasionally to a dinner where wines are served and simply turn my glass down. Occasionally my hostess or some one asks if it is against my principles. "Worse still," I reply, laughingly, "it's against my practice." I don't know that it is any special virtue in me, as it might be if I wanted it. I simply don't want it. I don't like it. In the same way, I never taste chocolate, simply because I don't like that. I don't mean to say that if I liked wine I would take it. I wouldn't. But I don't ever want it. In fact, I absolutely eat almost nothing; anyway, nothing beyond what you would call nursery food. I am not a vegetarian, yet I almost never taste meat, because I don't like it. I live here at this hotel year after year. My food yesterday, for instance, is a sample of all days. In the morning I had coffee and rolls in my room. When it isn't coffee and rolls it is tea and toast, but always and invariably one or the other, and never, year in and year out, anything more. At about 3 p. m. I went to the dining room and had dry toast, with milk and baked apples. At 9 p. m. I had a piece of French bread (without butter for I never tasted butter in my life) and two oranges, and this is just about my living three hundred and sixty-five days out of the year. Never tea or coffee except in the morning, and perhaps once in three months a bit of steak. The hotel people laugh and say they charge me for my rooms and "throw in" my board. When I have guests I give them the hotel resources, but I always think I would do them a kindness to give them milk and baked apples! Still, I live here on the American, not on the European plan, and could just as easily have thirteen courses for my dinner as to have bread and milk and baked apples, so far as any difference to myself (in finance), except that if I ate such things I couldn't do the work I do, and should probably end in the almshouse. People say to me: "With your simple living, why do you live at a hotel?" As if one lived at an hotel only to eat! But I like my toast perfectly made, my milk and apples daintily served. I like the atmosphere of the sweetest kindness one can imagine this side of the heavenly kingdom that pervades this house. Why, I have a great company of personal friends in the servants here. They stay year after year, as I do, and they come to me with their personal affairs, especially in the way of reading and study. I find a revelation in these colored servants. Many are college students, here but for a year to earn enough to get through. Last year my bill for text-books to help some of these was over $100. Several of them during the winter are my correspondents, and I send them this or that magazine, paper, cut, slip, etc., etc., as suggested by their individual needs. Not one scrap of printed matter ever goes to waste in my rooms. I apportion all the time, from the clergyman to the elevator boy, the table waiter, the chamber-maid, the servants at this house. All reading matter is apportioned according to the need and appreciation of the individual. My room is, as a matter of fact, a kind of bureau for the colored servants here. Well, I did not mean to run on to this length, but when people talk to me of leaving this homelike hotel, it always starts me talking thus. This, my dear sister, is my life here. I am in a net; giving little aids so far as in my power, to perhaps twenty-five or thirty poor people—colored people—who are honest, faithful, aspiring and who look to me as their special friend and adviser. I have never told this before, even to one of my brothers. I have never thought of it as a matter of narration; it is simply my daily life. But the thing I care for is this: Hotel life is not necessarily a matter of selfish, sensual indulgence, and it is really true, my precious and beloved sister, that I believe in my heart that God has put me right in this place as the place where I, so far as my little efforts go, can work for Him, by bearing a little aid to a few of His creatures. This little private and unseen work of mine, with my writing, absolutely takes all my time, with the usual seeing of friends, going out a little and fulfilling social engagements.

TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS.

BY MATILDA B. CARSE.

O thou of little faith, wherefore didst thou doubt?—Matt. 16: 31.

Walter Crane, England's most noted artist, is now at work on the inter-mural decorations for Willard Hall. As has before been stated, the memorial windows in Willard Hall are all to be designed by Mr. Crane. It will be a matter of interest to our white-ribboners to know that one of the leading Catholic laymen of Chicago is now at work raising a fund of $500 to place a memorial window in Willard Hall to the memory of that great and good man, Cardinal Manning. He so hated liquor on account of the woe that it caused humanity that when ill he would not touch it even as a medicine, and made his physician prescribe something else in its place. We hope our Catholic friends will send in their gifts for this window. Mrs. L. J. Kennard, Lebanon, Tenn., writes about the invitation given the Y's in THE UNION SIGNAL of January 21, in regard to each member sending a small gift towards a memorial window for our loved and lamented Yolande Ames. She says: "If there is anything I would love to do it is to help with that window. Would you allow me to do it? I have earned a little money aside from my home needs, which I would love to devote to that beautiful window. Oh, how I have grieved with you all for dear Miss Ames. Reading of her life work and beautiful character has been such an inspiration to me." The boon desired has been granted this dear white-ribboner. All gifts from whatever source will be accepted for this window. Why are the Y's not more responsive? If all of them who read this would send fifty cents towards this object the needed sum would be secured.

***

The W. C. T. U. of Indiana has honored itself in sending $100 for a tablet to "Our Deborah." No name, we are sure, will stand forth more honored in the historic list that is to adorn Willard Hall than that of Mrs. Zerelda Wallace, our brave leader for equal rights for women. The Batesville, Ark., W. C. T. U. sends $35, the first installment on $100 for a tablet in honor of their president, Mrs. Esther A. Byers. Their treasurer writes: "No more honored citizen has ever lived in our town; no truer, braver worker for temperance has lived anywhere. As an offering of love to her and the cause our union undertakes the task of raising $100 and placing her name among the list of workers in Willard Hall." Mrs. Hattie M. Phelps sends $100 on behalf of the state W. C. T. U. of Delaware to place the name of their deceased state president, Mrs. Annie H. Martindale, on a tablet in Willard Hall. Annie C. Emery sends $30 in payment of a bequest made to the Temple by Miss Lucy L. Phelps, late of Ellsworth, Me.

***

The W. C. T. U. of Irving Park, Ill., sends $50 on their pledge of $100. The London, Ohio, union send $52.22, which completes their pledge of $100. Mrs. D. Skidmore, Morris, Ill., sends $50, a first installment on a pledge of $100 by the W. C. T. U. The union of Livingston, Montana, sends $25, first payment on a pledge of $100. Mrs. Mary C. Lane sends $22 from the Wallingford, Conn., W. C. T. U. Mrs. Lizzie R. Noyes, Pittsfield, Ill., sends $34, which completes the $100 pledge made by the Pittsfield union. A little union in Ormond, Florida (which we have overlooked before) having only twelve members, sends $26: $4.55 of this was given by the Christian Endeavor Society. All honor to this brave little union; no doubt they will finish raising one hundred. Mrs. R. L. Fite writes: "I send $19, please give the Indian Territory credit for the same on their $100 pledge. Be assured our amount will be paid by the first of May."

***

The silver models of the Temple which have taken so long to perfect, are at last a success. Words of warmest praise come from all quarters in regard to them. Mrs. Marion H. Dunham, president of the Iowa W. C. T. U., writes: "My beautiful Temple inkstand is the most convenient thing in the world for a writing desk. No danger of spilled ink with it. The top makes a convenient pen rack, and it is a constant inspiration as it stands before me. It should be bought by the thousands, and I trust will be." Mrs. L. J. Stapler, president W. C. T. U., Indian Territory, says: "When it did come, as the wrappings were unfolded, the first sight was the spire of the silver model of the Temple inkstand. It is extremely difficult to overrate its beauty and perfection. I displayed it to our white ribbon sisters and friends. Voices all around said, 'Send for one for me, and me.' Please send a dozen by express to my address."

***

Address in regard to these Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, 149 Ashland Boulevard, Chicago.

The Household.

THE VISION OF THE TEMPLE.

BY HARRIET SIGGINS HOWE.

A vision of gracious splendor,
Growing day by day more fair,
A temple whose shining turrets,
Lift high in air.

Its strong foundations are builded
On the Eternal Stone,
And its walls at love's sweet bidding,
Shall Truth enthrone.

And the women cease their toiling,
And the children lift their eyes,
For a look at the glory gleaming
Across their skies.

And mothers sit in the twilight,
Hushing their babes to sleep,
And their eyes light up at the vision—
Sad eyes that weep.

They sing of the rising Temple,
And hear the song again
Of the angels, above its turrets,
"Peace, peace to men."

The lofty towers reëcho
Afar the heavenly strain;
All nations hear the tidings,
That Christ shall reign,

And cruel wrongs be righted,
And prove His promise true;
That for loyal faith in His coming,
The Temple grew.

There is no land so distant,
But for the women there
Shall rise, their hearts inspiring,
This vision fair.

And the women hope in their toiling,
And the children sing and play,
For the "Taj Mahal" of the women
Rises to-day.

STONE THE WOMAN.

BY O. B. BIRD, M. D.

(A True Story.)

One evening as I sat in my office, studying an important case, I heard footsteps approaching at a brisk run, and a man burst in with, "Come quick, doctor; there's a woman shot!"

Two blocks, up one flight and what a scene! On a lounge lay or writhed a woman, pale as a ghost, clothing soaked with blood, hair dishevelled, eyes snapping and sparkling, excited, nervous, in tears, talking rapidly; while about the room in absolute helplessness stood a half dozen companions or neighbors. Pulling aside the covering she showed me a bullet hole exactly in the center of the breast-bone; then another under the right shoulder blade.

Terrible as this wound was, and great as must have been her suffering from it, I saw at a glance that this would not account for her whole condition. It was evident that she was under strong excitement, doubtless from the circumstances surrounding the shooting, whatever they were. I remembered a previous case of a woman shot in the same way, who lay in her bed as quietly as an ordinary invalid. It took but a moment to decide that the patient was not likely to die at once from hemorrhage or other immediate effects of the shot; and as she could not be cared for in that house, there was but one thing to do, and that was to send her to a hospital by the gentlest possible conveyance.

After I had given this order, and provided for her immediate wants, some one said, "Come this way, doctor." I entered the adjoining room, and there upon the floor lay the body of a man, of fine physique, broad, high forehead, handsome features set off by a black mustache, finely formed limbs, and altogether as well made a figure as one would see in a day's journey; but he was dead. A quantity of blood had escaped from his mouth, but had been wiped away. There was a small bullet hole in his once immaculate but now bloodstained shirt-front, which examination showed to be between the third and fourth ribs, a little to the left of the center. Reference to anatomy shows that the aorta, or great blood vessel from the heart, carrying all the blood, after rising a few inches, arches and turns down along the spine. Also that the windpipe divides into two branches behind the breast-bone. The arch of the aorta turns over the left branch of the windpipe; that is, it comes up in front of it and goes down behind it. The crossing occurs precisely opposite the bullet hole. They said the woman had reported that the man had not spoken after the shot, and had fallen almost instantly. My conclusion was that the ball had penetrated the two pipes, which would let a torrent of blood into the windpipe, cutting off all possibility of speech or breathing. It would have caused immediate death to cut into the aorta; but the blood from the mouth showed that the air-tubes had been opened also. Nothing could be done for the case; and as the man was well known, and prominent in various lodges, the friends did not want a post mortem examination.

The coroner's inquest brought out the foregoing facts; but no one was found who witnessed the shooting—and, indeed, that is immaterial to my purpose, as the kind reader who follows me through will discover. My object is to show the difference in the treatment received by this man and woman before and after death.

She had been beautiful, was so still, being not much over thirty. She was reared in a Christian family and her young life carefully guarded. At school she stood in the front ranks and in the social circle was among the most attractive. She had many admirers and a number of honest offers of marriage. All were declined because she was the mainstay of her widowed mother, for whose sake she covered her own desires and hid her heartaches. A few years before the time of which I am writing the mother went home to heaven leaving her dying blessing upon the daughter who had shown such deep, filial love. During those sad days the company and assistance of a certain young man were of the greatest value and comfort to her. She loved him with the deep and sincere love of mature young womanhood, and accepted his attentions with a joy beyond words. And he seemed to be the embodiment of noble manhood. Always respectful, always ready to do substantial service, always kind and sympathetic, his presence was a benediction; and the happiness of their companionship aided in veiling her grief at the loss of her idolized mother.

One evening as he was taking his leave, instead of contenting himself with the usual warm clasp of the hand, he caught her in his arms and kissed her passionately many times. It was so sudden she could not have resisted had she so desired. There was no actual engagement in words, but a tacit understanding seemed equally binding. This outburst, then, was not wholly a surprise, nor an act to be necessarily rebuked. Accepted lovers had been known to indulge in this way, and she felt that it ended any shadow of uncertainty as to their engagement. She trusted her lover implicitly and believed him incapable of sin. At the next parting she was not surprised, as on the first occasion, and even returned his kisses. And then, gradually and almost imperceptibly, reserve melted away.

I need not follow them. He continued to defer the wedding day, urging some excuse which he forced her to think plausible. She clung to him as her only hope, and—not to prolong the account—he failed her. Both were as usual in the church and the social circle. This, of course, could not go on with her, however it might be with him. And so one day she left her home and went to another town under an assumed name, a poor, crushed and withered flower. From standing high among her associates, she found herself in a position which, once known, would place her beneath their contempt. Her offence was far less than his; her punishment infinitely greater. The awful injustice weighed her to the dust. Her happy spirit was bowed down, and suffered far more than less sensitive natures were capable of. We must remember that sensitiveness to joy means sensitiveness to sorrow; that one who is in raptures over sweet music is correspondingly pained by discord. She shrank before her fate like a tender lamb in the blast of winter.

When she left the charity hospital she had no means of support. Utterly alone in the world, afraid to show her face where she would be known, her resolution shaken by suffering, starvation staring her in the face, and, above all, hopeless of regaining her lost estate, what wonder that she accepted a beautiful home with every luxury? And when the giver died, after a couple of years, leaving it to her, what could she do but continue there, leading the same kind of life? To her credit be it said, she was one of the best of her class.

At length her former lover heard of her and wrote a letter full of penitence and promises of reparation. In spite of herself the old feeling came back, and she longed to see him. And further, he promised to take her home in honor with no hint as to the true explanation of her long absence. As her position, like that of a majority, had been forced upon her, she caught eagerly at a prospect of escape. An unutterable longing possessed her to return to the home of her childhood, to renew the vows her sainted mother had led her to make, to wash her soul in the blood of the One who said, "Neither do I condemn thee; go and sin no more," and she wrote him her permission to come.

She knew his footstep, and her heart throbbed wildly with the new joy in store for her. The rapture of that first meeting thrilled her to the heart's core. It meant freedom, life, hope, heaven, all that she had lost; and as she embraced her lover, she thanked God aloud for the coming rescue.

During the visit she referred to their wedding and early departure. He seemed to be absorbed in a street scene at the moment and made no direct reply. Later he spoke of another engagement for that evening, and promised to see her on the following day. He did so, but remained less than an hour, seeming ill at ease and absorbed in something which he did not explain. In the evening he came for the third time, under a promise from her to give the entire time to him. His genial spirit seemed to have revived. He was cheerful, hopeful, affectionate. Without committing himself in words, he led her to believe that they would be married at once. She was happy almost to ecstasy. The time slipped by unnoticed. At length he took her tenderly in his arms, and as she waited to hear again his assurances of love, he whispered words that blistered her heart and cut her soul in twain. She withered in his grasp as a flower cut down by the frost. His hold relaxed, and with scarcely restrained anger he placed her upon a sofa, and stood sullenly watching her. Her eyes opened and her pale lips moaned, "And is that all you promise me?" Turning upon his heel he strode up and down the room, saying, "What more could you expect from a man in my position?" And with a sighing gasp at every word she said, "You offered more. You offered full restoration; and oh! how I have longed for it, and held myself in readiness, anticipating the change!" "Restoration!" he exclaimed, with an emphasis that suggested disgust at the word. "Restoration! Can it be you are not aware that restoration, such as you mean, is wholly impossible? You could not remain unknown; and I should lose the respect of my fellowmen the moment I made you my wife. Such a thing cannot be, and is not what I meant." And as her strength returned, the blood crimsoned her cheeks and brow, while she answered, "And you could not retain the respect of your associates if you made me your wife, but could, if—oh! my sainted mother! can such monstrous injustice go uncrushed of God? Can you see, and does He see, how they are trampling upon your child? Oh! send for me! Take me home! Let me come to —;" and then as the thought that she might not be received, but cast out, rushed over her, she added with a stifled scream, "And you would see me thus! You would crush me under your feet, and retain the so-called respect of your fellows! Respect, indeed! They know, in their hearts that you are the greater sinner. They know and you know that God will look upon the heart and not judge us by the world's standard. You have raised me to heaven's very gate, only to dash me down to the deepest pit. I cannot conceive of a more awful crime than the one you are now committing! It deserves no mercy and shall have none!"

She drew a pistol from a secret nook in the sofa, and fired before he realized her intention or raised a finger to frustrate it. He fell heavily to the floor. One glance told her he was dead; and then in the black frenzy of her wild and eternal despair, she turned the weapon upon herself—and that is where my story began. Was it strange that her appearance was one of strong excitement? And would she have any object in trying to conceal the fact that she fired the fatal shot? She made no secret of it, nor of her reasons.

The man's body was taken home, his place of business closed, crape put upon the door, the lodges notified, and general notice given in the daily papers. The funeral was attended by the several societies to which he belonged, all wearing badges of mourning, and by many citizens in long procession, headed by a minister of the gospel who had delivered an address over the remains, ascribing the death to the "mysterious dealings of Providence."

And the woman? Her poor, bleeding body, beautiful even in its dire distress, the delicate skin stained with her heart's blood, was wrapped in blankets and carried and supported by men who had respect for her, to the hospital. Here she lingered, suffering from the cruel wound, and then from the pangs of inflammation of the lungs, but heeding them not in her fierce despair, moaning and crying for help when there was no help, pierced through and through with the sharp injustice of her position, mourning that she had not died as she intended, calling now upon God for mercy, and again relinquishing hope; and so struggling through the weary, painful days, until the flesh shrunk upon her well-rounded body, the eyes sank into their caverns, and gleamed like coals; the hectic flush on the cheeks showed the consuming power of the fever of mind and body; the intense ravings gave place to low and incoherent mutterings, and at last the torn and lacerated spirit left the frail wreck of a body lying in pathetic helplessness upon the hospital bed. No one stood by at the end, but she cared not. No one spoke a word of hope at the eleventh hour, but she gave no heed. No one folded her once beautiful hands, no one adjusted her delicate lips, no one closed her poor sightless eyes, but she regarded not. The angel of death must have wept over her as he bore her broken spirit away. And the icy silence that fell upon the couch where she had struggled and suffered for nearly three weeks, was broken by a passing attendant calling out, "She's gone; bring on the stretcher." And with no thought of the mighty throes of pain which had rent that poor form, they put it into a pine box, and without ceremony or follower, buried it in the Potter's field.

Thus briefly have I outlined the world's treatment of these cases; what think you was God's treatment? Does any reader suppose that "He, the one true Judge, on that strange day of final fire and flame, will suffer sex to make a difference in sin?" That "He, the searcher of the hidden heart, in His eternal and divine decree," will forget the years of vain regret, the loss of friends and all that made life desirable, the anguish of heart, the pain of body, the deep, dark, hopelessness and the black despair; will He forget all these, and consign her to "outer darkness," as the world had done? Will He who said, "Neither do I condemn thee," then condemn to all eternity? And will He at the same time receive the man with honor, and cover a sin which was never repented of, thus following the world's example in this case also?

Nay, verily. God looketh on the heart and judgeth by its motives; and whatever be His plan of rewards and punishments, it must exceed our imperfect ideas of justice, so that when we learn the mysteries of that upper world we shall all be satisfied.

Vineland, N. J.

UNION SIGNAL
WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

FRANCES E. WILLARD,
LADY HENRY SOMERSET,
MARY ALLEN WEST, } EDITORS.

MARGARET A. SUDDUTH,
MRS. HARRIET B. KELLS, } OFFICE EDITORS.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.
MRS. F. H. RASTALL, Business Manager.
161 La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

DEP'T BOOKS AND LEAFLETS.—ALICE M. GUERNSEY, Editor.

Entered at the Post-office, Chicago, Ill., as second-class matter.

Help us, O God of our salvation, for the glory of Thy name: and deliver us and purge away our sins, for Thy name's sake.—Ps. 79: 9.

"THE EXPOSED CLASSES."

It is a pitiful reflection that any class should be "exposed" after so many centuries of gospel light and liberty. But we must face the fact that large aggregates of population are the jungles of civilization and that tigers and serpents of the saloon, the gambling house, the haunt of shame still growl and glint and spit out venom along the highways of the world's most cultivated cities. Something is wrong when a part of the population is so defended that not even a breeze must touch its cheek too heavily, while another part—equally made in God's image, breathing His free and equal air—is condemned to the greatest outrage that imagination can picture and that is, ignorance; condemned to the prison house of uncleanness and penury and to the ever-present perdition of actual sin.

The shining of the gospel is everywhere; the human face,—were a composite photograph to be made of its best representatives,—takes on in every generation a more kindly aspect. Evils that were tolerated and tolerable once can be endured no longer, and old Humanity is on the warpath for a better state of things.

We read of children "exposed" by the classic nations, if they were not perfectly formed, to be devoured by wild beasts. That was in order that the physical type should come to its highest completeness. We read of other children "exposed" in our own day to be devoured by the man-eaters of the East India jungles or the suffocating mud waves of the Ganges because they were girls and hence a burden and disgrace to their parents; or because some mother would propitiate a cruel divinity that had no existence save in her imbruted imagination.

We hold ourselves vastly superior to those times and regions where such things are possible, and yet our form of civilization not only "exposes" the little one (who is perhaps fortunate to find such speedy exit from the world in which it is unwelcome), but whole classes of men, women and children are as ruthlessly banished and as heartlessly forgotten in the blazing light of science and religion whose radiance and warmth form the joy of our own fortunate and happy heritage.

For ourselves, we leap at once to the conclusion that this world is God's great gift to all men, and to all men equally. We believe that the Declaration of Independence which says, "all men are born free and equal," has in it the percussive force of dynamite; and that it never yet has been understood nor applied save in exceptional instances. We believe that a better, wiser, more Christian method of conducting industrial and monetary affairs, combined with the banishment of the saloon and the enfranchisement of woman, would send the race forward a thousand years in the next decade. We are for the masses every time, and we believe the day is not distant when there shall be no classes. We are interested in the base of the pyramid rather than its apex. We admire not the great trees of the forest that overshadow all the undergrowth, and dwarf the budding sprouts that might have grown to trees, but we would make it our business to open up the forest to the light of knowledge and the warmth of Christianity, that all men's weal might be each man's care.

We believe the time will come when well-to-do people will not be able to sleep in their beds in peace because they will be so haunted by the thought of the "exposed classes," that they will go eagerly "away on the mountain wild and bare," after the missing sheep. We have too long delegated this holy mission to the Good Shepherd. We have sung "The Ninety and Nine," with fervency of spirit, but it has not come to our thoughts as clearly as it is doing in these better days, that each one of us is to be the good shepherd, and if we are not, our Christianity is a misnomer.

THE UNION SIGNAL has a policy—we can state it in a word: "The golden rule in action." That is what we are writing for, publishing for, working for; nothing else is worthy the attention and devotion of the human spirit. We rejoice to feel that one can have this for his motto on a scale commensurate with his powers, be they telescopic or microscopic.

No human being lives in a circle of influence so small but that he can fill that circle with the golden rule radiating from his own character and life. The kindly face, the friendly tone, the warm hand-clasp, the recognition of brotherhood and sisterhood in every human being whose pathway crosses ours, this is possible to each and every one of us. Many who would like "to show forth the Lord Jesus until He come again," do not because their perceptions are not keen; "It does not occur to them" they say. But the perceptions can be sharpened, brightened, clarified. The habitude of attention, deference, considerateness, grows in proportion as it is practiced, and so whether we apply our powers to the smallest details and the humblest methods, or whether they are extended into an influence that moulds and fashions the thoughts of millions, our aim can always be the same, our policy need never vary. We would apply to the individual, the family, society, the church, the state, the nations and humanity at large, those precepts of loving kindness which fell from the Master's lips and were embodied in His life.

If we did not believe that the prohibition of the saloon is one of the beacon lights along the advancing pathway of our Lord, we would not advocate such laws another day; if we did not believe that the advent of woman into larger circles of influence and power meant the greatest good to man and to the whole world, we would never write another line in favor of it; if we did not believe that the nationalizing of the means of transportation and communication would advance the cause of human brotherhood, we would not declare for it in our platforms, our editorials, our lives; if we did not believe that national money would serve the people better than the money now sent out throughout intermediaries; if we were not inclined to believe that the nationalizing of land would help toward the great scheme of human betterment,—did we not think, indeed, that all of these are but the nineteenth century dream of the first century precept, we would never mention them again.

But we solemnly believe that every one of these methods tends to do away with that "exposure" of which so many of our brothers and sisters are to-day the victims. We want no "exposed classes"; we want no aristocratic classes; we want no middle classes, but we want the solidarity of man, and when THE UNION SIGNAL enters any home we would like it to come as the thoughtful, loving prophet of a better time.

THE MEDIOCRE WOMAN.

The mediocre woman has but one reply for those reformers who would help her up the heights. She says invariably, "I have all the rights I want." She has a narrow pride that forbids the admission that she has fewer rights than men; that she is in any wise under control.

Like any other slave she hugs her chains and kisses her master's hand. She secures by indirection what braver and stronger women win by straightforward work. She calls her circuitous route to the end she has in view by the false name of "womanly tact." She is apt to dwell on people's faults rather than their virtues. She has greatest sympathy with the most distant causes and is remarkably nearsighted concerning reforms in her own town and at her own door. Her range of vision is narrow and her sympathies are ditto. She has that infallible proof of mediocrity that never dares to say, "I've changed my mind." She utterly fails to keep in touch with the movements of her age, and dwelling "on the good old times," in contrast to "these radical, degenerate days," she holds her empire over husband and children by catering to their weaknesses, rather than by developing their strength. Take her for all in all, we should be glad no more to look upon her like in any world.

THE MEDIOCRE MAN.

His stock in trade is that he is a man, which goes for nothing when successful women enter the fields of competition.

There is no jealousy so cruel as that felt by the mediocre man towards the successful woman. He stands solidly against all progressive movements that shall make her a dangerous competitor; no man is so arbitrary a husband or so tyrannical a father as the mediocre man; he is always endeavoring to claim by authority that which he cannot command by merit. It is the same in educational, social and governmental life. The mediocre man asserts his prerogative under the ignorance that has insisted on the obsolete principle of an aristocracy of sex. He does this in the face of the new science, the new social gospel and the new teachings of religion; he sees his power slipping away, is conscious of his inability to hold his own on his own merits, and falls back on ye ancient and honorable phrase, "God and my right." Let us pity rather than blame him; he is the prisoner of his own paucity of mind; he would be broader if his powers of thought did but permit.

A specimen of him was found in an Illinois cornfield by a white-ribboner in pursuit of names to an equal suffrage petition; leaning on his hoe handle he read it, and standing upon his tip-toes (he was notably diminutive in stature) and in a voice like that of a saw under the file said, as he handed back the document, "None of that for me;' don't you know that man stands between a woman and her God?"

Another specimen of him was unearthed in New Jersey, where a young man, whose college education had been paid for by a spinster who taught school, preached his first sermon on the subjection of women as taught by Paul.

The mediocre man has survived even until this day. He has worked his way down the valleys of time like the boulders embedded in the slowly thawing glacier, but he is not so plenty as he was. Quite another style of men has supervened. Brawny, brainy and brotherly this new creature comes to the front; the twentieth century man foregleaming at the close of the nineteenth. What is his language as contra-distinguished from that of the mediocre man? "We have no fears and ask no favors; we are unwilling to rule one half the race out of the mighty competition lest there be not places enough to go round. We are abundantly able to take care of ourselves—if we can't hold our own equal place in a fair, untrammeled competition, let us go to the wall."

There speaks out the manly successor to the mediocre man. He it is who opens colleges to us, places the advantages of professional schools at our disposal and believes that the ballot in our hands means prohibition with enforcement back of it.

PEOPLE'S PALACE WORK.

Princes have had palaces from the beginning. It is now the people's turn, and a wonderfully good turn it is; the only wonder being that we should have been so stupid and waited so long.

The Scudder family is well known in this country for its good works; and among its practical efforts to benefit humanity is that of the Rev. John L. Scudder, pastor of the Congregational Church in Jersey City, one of the most God-forsaken localities on this continent. He is a young man of first class talent and accomplishments. Born in India, where his father, Dr. Henry Scudder, and six uncles labored for a score of years as missionaries, he is the elder of ten children, all but one of whom claim India as their birthplace. He graduated at Yale College in 1874 and later from the Union Theological Seminary in New York City. He was known at college for his intense love of athletics, in which he was an expert. His wife, Mrs. Alice Scudder, is as gifted, intelligent and earnest as himself.

These two determined to start a people's palace, by means of which to draw the young men of Jersey City out of the saloons. They set forth their plans in a document entitled: "Our Purpose in Brick," a phrase of rare suggestiveness, since most of our purposes are in mist and never condense themselves into actual results on terra firma. Profoundly interested in the plan of the people's palaces, the editors of THE UNION SIGNAL wrote to Dr. Scudder, from whom the following facts were received, which we spread before our readers with the earnest exhortation to those living in our large cities: "Go thou and do likewise." He says:

In answer to your request for a description of the people's palace, let me say our motto is "Work; roll up your sleeves and do it yourself." Ours is the first people's palace in America, and we are proud of this recent importation of an excellent foreign article. Ours is not a great pretentious institution such as the one in London, and for the encouragement of temperance workers with slender means I am glad that it is not. Our plan has cost us about fifteen thousand dollars, and can be duplicated with ease in every large sized city in the United States; and in the great cities at least one palace should be placed in the precinct of every ward. Please print the next sentence in italics, and I hope it will ring out over the whole land: The best way to cripple the saloon is to provide a real substitute and steal away its constituency before the appetite for drink is formed, by supplying amusements at half price. Let competition be our war-cry for the next twenty-five years. Prayer-meetings are excellent to arouse the saints and set them in motion, but the average young man will not attend them. After his day's labor is over, he wants rational recreation. It is a perfectly natural desire, and he ought to have it. Give him wholly innocent amusements for a fraction of the price charged in the saloon and thus wrest the weapons from the hands of the foe. Conservatives may sneer at this as unpractical, and godly souls may throw up their hands with horror at the thought. Well, throw them up, ye slaves of tradition, and while your hands are helplessly waving in the air our acts "shall help our fallen brother rise," and set him on his feet. We are not idle theorists.

We have demonstrated the truths for which we stand, and you may come and see for yourselves what has been wrought in one city and what can be done in every village in America. We have no time to parley with antediluvians, or even to talk the matter over, as it is merely a waste of breath. Something must be done besides singing psalms and asking the Heavenly Father to do what we can do ourselves and what He never does except by working through us on a practicable every-day basis. Here is a fact which I wish to place before the W. C. T. U.:—We are drawing young men away from the saloon, and keeping them from forming the habit of going there by providing occupation and harmless amusements under church auspices at rates that are ridiculously and constrainingly cheap. We have a library, reading-room, gymnasium, music hall, bathing department, swimming department, outside grounds, lawn tennis, sewing school, kitchen garden, orchestral and choral union. The saloon charges ten cents for a game of ten pins; we charge five. The saloon charges forty cents an hour for billiards; we charge twenty. The saloon charges five cents for a glass of beer; we provide soda, sarsaparilla and soft drinks generally, for three cents. We have a "bar" if you so please to call it; but it is Christ's bar and not a drop of alcoholic drink behind it. Our idea is sure to succeed in America. It takes among our sensible people. We have dozens of visitors every week and hosts of applications as to how we do it.

Now, ye friends of total abstinence, do not criticise this letter, and say how absurd, but get to work and do something practical for the temperance cause. Let the W. C. T. U. take up this movement, and God bless these patient, indefatigable workers; they will deal the severest blow in the boxer's vocabulary. Why would it not be well to form a people's palace branch or superintendency in the W. C. T. U.? If you do not like the word "palace," call them "oases," but for my part I would say, to beat the gin palaces put up people's palaces. It is a Christlike, philanthropic movement to pour sunshine into the lives of thousands who are doomed to lives of poverty and toil. In this day when socialism is rampant, when drunkenness and crime are prevalent and the rabble control our municipal elections, there is no cause that appeals so loudly to a brotherly and generous spirit as this method of uplifting and evangelizing the masses; it appeals to people of no denomination and to people of all denominations, to citizens as well as disciples of Christ. The time has come for the wealthy class to show that capital is not unwholesome and unscriptural, by establishing and plentifully endowing such an institution as I have described. Preaching and praying are vitally important, but they do not cover the whole ground. If the poorer classes are to be lifted up, the church services must be supplemented by services of a practical character which shall be an uplift and a check upon ignorance and crime—a counter-force to the effects of vice which sweep over our cities and towns. In the midst of all this evil, we must establish a wholesome environment; we must set up a competition; we must create oases in the heart of human sin and degradation.

We like the vigorous tone of our Brother Scudder's letter. That we should agree with him as to every detail of the enterprise is hardly to be hoped, but one thing is certain: the general idea that he sets forth is of vital importance. Our young men are going in droves to destruction. The organized mother-love of the nation must do something for them on a more persuasive basis than we have yet attained. Profoundly impressed by this thought, we urge the presidents of local unions in cities and large towns, and smaller ones as well, to read this editorial at the next meeting, and see if they can give a practical bent to the suggestions it contains. The "Do everything policy" is the avowed policy of the white-ribboners.

PERHAPS there is no more hopeful feature connected with the Indian question of to-day than the organization of the Women's National Indian Association, whose honorary president is Mrs. Mary L. Bonney (Rambaut) whose forty years as a faithful teacher in the most popular ladies' school of the Quaker City made her known to the whole nation; the president is Mrs. Amelia S. Quinton, formerly one of our most active white-ribboners. Its western vice-president is Mrs. Gen. John Bidwell, of Chico, California, another of our own leaders. The society has a press secretary, one of the most necessary officers that any society of men and women can possibly have if they wish to bring before the great public the beneficent ideas of which they are the depositories. The subject on which this society is now trying to stir up the pure minds of the people is the removal of the Utes of Colorado, a tribe comprising about one thousand persons, who are asked by our government "to move on" for the reason that their white neighbors want the valuable Reservation where they have lived for their own use. This is a strip of land 110 miles by fifteen in extent, and was promised the Indians by Congressional act. But the removal that is talked of keeps the Indians in constant excitement and suspense. The covenant ought to be respected. It involves a moral obligation, and all good people will heartily sympathize with the men and women who stand between the Indian and the faithlessness of government. It is not necessary to urge white-ribboners to give their sympathy and help wherever occasion arises in the interest of the Indians against the heartless aggressions of the almighty dollar backed up by the everlastingly persuasive rifle and bayonet.

IT IS proposed to have a marble bust of Lucy Stone, made by Anne Whitney, exhibited at the World's Fair, in commemoration of the noble work done by this beloved pioneer in opening educational, industrial, and professional avenues of usefulness for her sex. All who would like to contribute funds for the execution of this purpose may send their subscriptions to Frances E. Willard, care of THE UNION SIGNAL.

Special Difficulties.

PLEDGE.—"I hereby solemnly promise, God helping me, to abstain from all distilled, fermented and malt liquors, including Wine and Cider, and to employ all proper means to discourage the use of and traffic in the same."

Q.—Are unions entitled to representation in convention when no dues have been paid into either county, state or National treasury during the year?

A.—They are not, and for this reason we never get our due recognition as to the totality of our membership, and it is believed that we have at least one quarter more members than are ever reported to the treasurer.

Q.—When and where was the Prohibition party organized? Was it before the W. C. T. U. or was it an outcome of that uprising?

A.—At the sixth national temperance convention, held at Cleveland, Ohio, July 29 and 30, 1868, the following resolutions were adopted:

"WHEREAS, The liquor dealers of our country have declared the traffic in intoxicating liquors to be a legitimate part of American commerce, and deny the right to prohibit or restrict the same, and through their leagues and Congress have repeatedly avowed their purpose to vote for no man in favor of total abstinence, and have constantly used their political power for the continuance of their trade, and have received the countenance of political parties in support of the positions thus assumed: therefore

"Resolved, That in behalf of the public peace and welfare, we accept the issue and will meet them at the polls in resistance of these iniquitous demands."

During the session of the Right Worthy Grand Lodge of Good Templars, at Oswego, N. Y., May 25, 1869, a meeting favoring independent political action for the promotion of temperance was called.

After discussion and deliberation, a committee was appointed to prepare and issue a call for a National Prohibition Convention, to organize a National Prohibition party. The call was issued and nearly five hundred delegates from twenty different states assembled in mass convention in Farwell Hall, Chicago, on Wednesday, September 1, 1869. A central committee of the National Prohibition party was elected, and under call of said committee issued December 9, 1871, and signed by John Russell, chairman, and Gideon T. Stewart, secretary of the First National Prohibition nominating convention assembled in the opera house, Columbus, Ohio, February 22, 1872. The renaissance of the party occurred in August, 1882, when W. C. T. U. leaders were prominent in calling a convention in Farwell Hall, where the name was changed to Prohibition and Home Protection Party, and woman's ballot was made a prominent plank in its platform.

QUESTION:—A brave, true friend of mine who has been an active member of the W. C. T. U. in a city which shall be nameless, is now standing aloof because, as she says, she cannot conscientiously work therewith under the present management of the local union, but she wants "to belong," and writes me to know if she cannot pay dues to the state. Said state, however, receives its members only through local unions. This same friend wonders if it would not be possible to have another department added to the many in the Ladies' Home Journal, namely, "The Temperance Outlook," or something of that nature, so that the great constituency of the paper might be built up along this line of philanthropic work. I have just been reading Mrs. Bottome's beautiful King's Daughters' words in the February number of the Home Journal. She says, "All the names for the Margaret Bottome circle are enrolled in a new book which I keep myself. My first member says there is no circle to which she can belong in the town where she lives, and she joins my circle because, she says, 'I shall feel more than ever that I know you.'" Since the only requisites for a W. C. T. U. woman are signing our pledge and paying the fee, why could there not be one great "local" made up from everywhere? Its personnel to be only known to our wise-hearted leaders, but to include those situated like my friend, those who are remote from any union, those whose Republican husbands object to their joining the local union, etc., etc. Its fees, after deducting the percentage to the National and postage expenses, might form a missionary fund, say, for sending out a missionary, or for gospel temperance literature, and if the innermost heart of the union could have a place in the Ladies' Home Journal as do the King's Daughters, all politics and such like being carefully ruled out, how many might be reached that now see nothing of We, Us & Co.? There! is not that a lovely air-castle? If it does not topple over before it reaches you the privilege may be yours of consigning one more brilliant scheme to the waste basket, but all the same I shall always wish it could be done.

ANSWER.—The Journal plan suggested has often come to our thought showing how apt great minds are to run in the same channel! It occurs to the senior editor that we might have the Isabel Somerset local union, whose habitat should be anywhere and everywhere that this gracious name is loved, and to which all women might belong who were so situated for one reason and another that they could not be members in regular standing. Let this be thoroughly thought over and perhaps some state will take the initiative, in which case it will be easy for others to follow.

The Watch-Tower.

Four of the greatest men that ever lived were born in 1809—Abraham Lincoln, William E. Gladstone, Alfred Tennyson and Charles Darwin.

***

Rose Terry Cooke says of the expletive, "well": "Blessed Yankee monosyllable that means so much and so little; that has such shades of phrase and intention; that is 'yes' or 'no' or 'perhaps,' just as you accent it; that is at once preface and peroration, evasion and definition! What would all New England speech be without 'well'? Even as salt without savor, or pepper with no pungency."

***

General O. O. Howard, when speaking in Atlanta, Ga., at the close of the war, said to a colored school, "What shall I tell them up North about you?" Whereupon a little negro boy arose and cried out: "Tell 'em we're risin'." The report that comes to us from white-ribboners in every country could hardly be more tersely put, "We are rising." Once we did not do our own thinking. We looked to our pastors, our physicians and most of all to that wonderful character whom we had taken for better or for worse, and our reverence for whom was of such a character that he was wont to be designated as simply "him." We always knew to whom a married woman referred when she said "him." But all that has been changed. And every man worthy of the name is glad for his children's sake, if for no other reason, that the mothers of the world have ceased to be its slaves.

***

A famous writer defines journalism as "The collection, corruption and distribution of misinformation."

***

When Miss Julia E. Dickinson, of Fairport, N. Y., president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, of Nassau—Bahamas—came to her burial on that far-off isle, January 10, 1892, six of the native women members of the union begged to carry her precious body, saying, "We want to lift her ourselves, we want to do all for her." And lift her they did along the street and through the lane to the broad spreading Poniciana tree, beneath whose branches they found the open grave.

***

The latest little folks' story comes to us from the governor of Wisconsin, who, at a banquet in Chicago recently, when he wished to praise James Scott, otherwise called "Great Scott," head of the press department of the World's Fair, cited the case of the little girl who was sent to her room to ask forgiveness for being naughty. Returning, she was asked by her anxious mother: "Did you confess to your Heavenly Father as I requested you to do." Whereupon the little maid replied: "Yes; and you'd never guess what he told me. He said: 'Why, Elsie, I've known lots worser girls than you.'"

***

The Woman's National Council has adopted as its motto on the beautiful new seal just announced, the words: "Lead, Kindly Light." Forty different national societies of women were represented at its convention in Washington last February. Mrs. May Wright Sewall, of Indianapolis, is president, and by her vote and that of our National President, as also by the votes of other earnest women, this motto was adopted; a committee having been appointed, of which these were members, to select a motto for the new society, which is to include all other national societies in the republic. We think the choice a good one. It has been universally conceded and practiced (!) that women should be led. They do not deny the soft impeachment, but only announce a change of leadership. When the whole race falls into line with the keynote here set, we shall witness universal brotherhood. May this be more and more the battle cry of nations in the progress of reform: "Lead, Kindly Light."

***

A colored man was carrying brick on his head when a by-stander remarked: "Why do you do that? Take them in your hands and be done with it." Whereupon Sambo answered: "I should like to know what the head's for." Evidently we women are finding out what heads are for. Read the report of the National council of the women recently issued by that incomparable corresponding secretary, Mrs. Rachel Foster Avery. You can have the book by sending her one dollar at Philadelphia. Select readings therefrom for the local unions and start the gospel of equal rights for men and women in every local union by extracts from its pages. The prejudice that makes a Mohammedan believe his mother has no soul, or a Brahman deem himself unclean if he eats with a woman, although she be Princess Royal, is only the deepening of that same kind of selfish prejudice that would, if it could, hinder any woman from doing anything she can do well with voice, or hand or pen.

ON DUTY.

News from the Field.

SOUTH CAROLINA'S CONVENTION.

South Carolina is nothing if not conservative, but one can forgive her when on the ground.

A state that has the odor of Colonial times yet clinging to her garments, boasts of forts with the ball-marks of the Revolution, and houses the timbers and tile floors of which were brought from England when George the Third was king, can afford to look over her shoulder at such historic past.

This explains why the people of the Palmetto state do not always take to new things, and why even such ideas as come with the W. C. T. U. are plants of slow growth. Women on the lecture platform, women in the Prohibition party, women in the General Conference, and women at the ballot box, have each given our work a cold chill in the most conservative portions of the South; have frightened away the timid, offended the prejudiced, and left only the heroic to stand when the new wave of criticism passed by.

It is fitting, since the writer has been much in the South and knows the facts, to say that it is useless to either scold or laugh at the customs and convictions that delay these more abiding populations in a slower step towards what we in the restless Northland call progress; they will not be won that way. Indeed, when one hears the commands on deck of the ship of state, given in any but the American tongue, and sees a crew at the ropes gathered from the beer gardens of Continental Europe, while our statesmen sit meekly down and ride where the wild mob dictates, one feels that we may yet need a stronghold of American conservatism. The time may be near when we shall look for a moss-grown timber lifting from a stormy sea around which to cast a line for safety.

Conditions in South Carolina, which is as intense and self-assertive a commonwealth as Massachusetts, have not given Mrs. Chapin and her co-workers an easy task in these last ten years, while building up the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

That this labor of love has not been vain was proven in the state convention held in Columbia, February 18 to 22. The weather was not the most auspicious, and the large evening audiences braved a sharp-edged wind and rain to be present. The day sessions and two evening meetings were held at Y. M. C. A. Hall, while two other large gatherings were at the Opera House.

Among the guests from abroad were Mrs. W. C. Sibley, of Georgia, and Mrs. McMasters, of Ontario, who, after her husband's death, gave her elegant home in Toronto to found a school for young women.

The Sons of Temperance and Good Templars were represented by their chief officers at the first Opera House meeting, and in the day sessions were white-ribboners from a dozen states, who were sojourners at the South.

One difficulty, perhaps the greatest, has been to find women sufficiently independent and aggressive to take the department work and press it. Reports of prison and jail work, Bible reading, flower mission and other forms of religious work showed a decided tendency towards evangelistic lines of effort, these leading the other departments.

The Y's are ably represented by Miss Mary Yeargin, a teacher in the college, an excellent speaker and leader. The Y evening under her control was very bright and full of variety, one of its pleasant events being the introduction of Hon. L. W. Childs, author and champion of the Childs' Prohibition Bill in the last legislature.

Mrs. Chapin was invited to be a guest at Governor Tillman's, but declined in order to entertain some of her friends at the hotel. Mrs. Tillman invited a company of the ladies to dine at the mansion on Saturday. The Governor was in the toils of La Grippe, and unable to give the address of welcome at the Opera House on Friday evening. He is in sympathy with the opposers of the saloon, and represents the reform forces of the state.

The ministers of the city were present to give their help, and never was a city press kinder than that of Columbia. The reports were not merely complimentary but discriminating, and gave to the reader a just view of the discussions and addresses.

Mrs. Chapin was reëlected president, indeed, there is no other on whom the choice of the white-ribbon women could be united. Mrs. Chapin had felt she must give up the work and lay down the burden borne so long and faithfully, but her constituency thought otherwise.

The writer never spoke to more intelligent and responsive audiences, and in every way the convention seemed to make an excellent, and we believe abiding impression.

A very fine subscription was made for the Southern W. C. T. U. Assembly at Waynesville, North Carolina, and a president's organizing fund provided for to aid in extending the work this year. The outlook is towards progress and success in South Carolina.

MARY T. LATHRAP.

THE PRESIDENT'S ACCOUNT.

The South Carolina convention is over, and despite la grippe, evil prognostications and bad weather, was an undoubted success. I went from a sick chamber, which I had not been able to leave for three weeks. My swollen feet were incased in a pair of men's gaiters, with skirts drawn down to conceal them, so instead of a storm dress I was compelled to wear a train. It was a hazardous experiment to call a convention at the capitol of our state which is the Sebastopol of opposition to our organization "because of its suffrage proclivities" although we have no department of franchise.

The contrast between the late convention in Columbia, and the one four years ago was great. Last summer, by a special dispensation of the National, I worked under their auspices four months, organizing eleven new unions, and visiting almost all the others, and to this, more than to any other cause, is due our successful meeting.

In the unions formed were some prominent women, whom I was anxious to have in the convention. Owing to the low price of cotton, the times down here are very hard, and union after union felt they could not entertain a convention; and I was in despair when God took it out of my hands and settled it for me. Mr. Haskell, Mrs. Lathrap's agent, wrote me that she was coming South, and would probably be in or near my state in February. I knew the Lord had sent her to us in our extremity, so I immediately wrote to secure her for two addresses, and learning what dates she could give us, I called the convention to include them. Among the unions formed last summer was the Columbia union. The president of that union, Mrs. Chas. Stanley, is a consecrated Christian woman, who only asks what God's will is; that ascertained, nothing is too difficult for her to attempt. Her husband stands nobly up to her. It was in his hall we held our meetings in the day, and I think they met at the station every delegate who came.

Our governor's wife invited Mrs. Sibley, Mrs. Governor Felton, and me, to be her guests, and the governor deeply regretted that a serious attack of la grippe prevented his giving us the welcome he had promised. They gave the officials and our distinguished lecturer, a dinner.

The Hon. L. D. Childs, the young knight "sans peur et sans reproche," the author of the Childs' prohibition bill, gave us a ringing, hearty welcome, and was applauded to the echo.

Col. Joel Brunson, Grand Chief Templar, came from Sumter to welcome us for his order, and Col. C. M. Douglas, Worthy Patriarch of the Sons of Temperance, greeted us in a most graceful speech. The first meeting held was a consecration meeting led by Mrs. Gause, formerly of Pennsylvania; now we delight to claim as a resident of our state. After Mrs. Gause's gospel talk on consecration, testimonies were called for and white-ribboners from seven states responded.

Mrs. Lathrap has captured Columbia. The Opera House was packed on both occasions by representative audiences. The newspapers give columns, and are most eulogistic; the morning she left, our most Democratic papers said: "Mrs. Lathrap left us this morning and carried with her the best wishes of hundreds of our citizens to whom she has heretofore been a stranger. She will always be gladly welcomed in our city."

Mrs. Barnes will be delighted to know that Miss Yeargin, whom she and I have been trying for two years to bring to the front, came out at this convention, and I am sure she will make a splendid leader of our Y host. She has all the requirements, and exceptional opportunities for organizing. Mrs. Gause, our superintendent of literature, was given an hour in which to explain the department literature, its importance, etc. Mrs. Tomlinson was sent from North Carolina as a fraternal delegate to bring greetings, and to remind us of the part South Carolina was expected to take in raising the necessary funds for the erection of the Institute at Waynesville, the Southern Chautauqua. Having heard nothing of it by circular, or any other way we had supposed it was abandoned. Mrs. Lathrap came to us direct from Asheville, and was commissioned to state to us exactly how matters stood, which she did. As soon as it was understood what was expected, pledges were given and a number of individual cash contributions were handed in.

Mrs. Wm. Sibley, Georgia's beloved president, was as usual with us, to our delight, for the Savannah river does not separate but unites the unions of South Carolina and Georgia. Our great drawback in this state is that we have no money, and our beneficences languish for want of the means to carry them on. The temperance sentiment was never as high as it is now. The Good Templars realize it and keep organizers in the field all the time and with splendid results. Mr. Demoree is in the state now and has been for some time. Mr. Beauchamp has also been here at work. Every order should have a National organizer's fund, for unless new unions are organized the order must die out. We are encouraged to expect great things from the new element brought into the work. The new treasurer is a lady of influence and great force of character. So although we have been called to take the "long way round" we feel it has led us at last into "light."

S. F. CHAPIN.

OREGON-IANA.

I must begin by correcting a mistake in my last report, which, however, would be observed only by a few local eyes. The unions organized by Mrs. Ada Unruh were in Polk county, not in Yam Hill. She has lately been devoting herself chiefly to Loyal Temperance Legion work, and has been appointed our state juvenile superintendent, our former superintendent having, amid much regret, removed to a distant state. Mrs. Unruh held an afternoon drill in methods, with members from three unions.

At Rickreal, where they met, there is a very live Loyal Temperance Legion, which engaged Mrs. Unruh to speak for them, the union also having her twice. She has likewise spoken at Monmouth, a temperance town, and the seat of a very flourishing normal school; also at Amity and South Yam Hill, joining in a Sunday evening union meeting at Independence in the interest of Sabbath observance.

McMinnville has a Loyal Temperance Legion, ninety-two strong. Many of the children receive at these meetings the only instruction in religion that they have; this is not from lack of churches however.

Polk county (judging from its report) must be our banner county for juvenile work. It has seven companies full-fledged and all doing excellent work. Interesting the children was the first temperance hobby of the county president, Mrs. L. L. Whittaker, and this is the fruit of the well-doing, in which she has never wearied. She hopes to get up a picnic for all the companies when the season is more advanced, which will prove, I expect, a delightful "grand army encampment." Portland reports a Legion of fifty members.

At the reception given our state president on her return to Portland from Boston, an excellent address was made by Mrs. E. W. Allen, member of the Board of Lady Managers of the World's Fair, in which she asked the coöperation of the W. C. T. U. in making a fitting display for Oregon at the Exposition. We had soon after, in Corvallis, a pleasant visit from both these ladies from whom we were glad to hear of the contemplated Congress auxiliary, as well as the part woman's work is to take both in the building and in the exhibits.

I am sorry to say that a copy of the World's Petition with (considering how small is the dwelling place of the senders, viz., Amity, a mere village) a goodly roll of 211 signatures, was "lost in the mail." After reading the late disclosure in the Voice under the same heading "lost in the mail" may have a particular significance.

We are very busy now rolling up another petition in Oregon, viz., one to Congress against the bill of our own Senator Dolph to legalize the saloon in Alaska. I trust a strong feeling will be expressed in this way against such an inhuman and iniquitous proceeding, knowing, as we do, the maniacal effects strong drink has upon the Aleutes and Eskimos. I wish the expression might be taken up generally all over the states, for although Oregon may feel the shame of her senator being the initiator of a deed that is dark, the action will be by the general government. A strong universal feeling against it ought to have power to restrain such a bill from ever becoming law. Such would be the effect in England, as we have seen several times within the last few years. The famous "compensation clause" was smothered before its birth in Parliament at the expression of the people's will. And has the will of the American people no power to sway a government whose proud boast is "for the people and by the people"?

Our state president visited some unions in the southern part of the state at the beginning of the year. Central Point and Gardner gave her a warm welcome, while her visit did them good.

One new union has been organized by Mrs. Delle C. Cox, at South Salem, with Mrs. E. C. Snow, president and treasurer, and Mrs. Rebecca Ruan, secretary.

At the late meeting of our state executive committee, it was resolved to employ home talent until next convention instead of lecturers from abroad, and a plan of work was outlined for the winter and early spring campaign. We deem ourselves fortunate in having the acquisition to our state of Mrs. Cox and Mrs. Unruh.

The Refuge Home, at Portland, is to have the advantage of Mrs. Julia L. Snyder as general instructor to the inmates in sewing and plain dressmaking, while she reads and converses with them on higher subjects. Mrs. Snyder is state superintendent of White Cross and White Shield work; her heart and soul are full of missionary zeal, and she is one in sentiment with our matron in caring for the souls of the poor girls. Money is much needed for building a new Home. It pained the hearts of the ladies to have to turn away two girls on the same evening lately.

The Prohibition party has reorganized in this state under promising auspices, and its friends are looking forward to the lecture tour of Mr. Wolfenbarger, of Nebraska, as being the means of adding to its ranks. It disbanded two or three years ago, in the hope of the Union party taking prohibition as one of its issues, under the leadership of Mr. G. M. Miller, then of Oregon. His soul is still bent on consolidation, I notice, by his visiting the St. Louis convention this week. But here the Union party have been drifting far away from prohibition, so that an independent reorganization of the old third party was warmly called for. Its organ is already in the field, being an able little paper started by the faculty of the Monmouth College.

L. A. NASH,
State Reporter, Corvallis.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

GRANITE GRINDINGS.

Our beloved state president, Mrs. N. H. Knox, is not only dear to her flock of W. C. T. U. workers, but is held in very high esteem as a faithful pastor's wife. This was shown by a surprise party given her on her birthday just passed. Their home in Manchester was filled with friends of their parish, who brought them kindest wishes, as well as substantial gifts.

In the Salem W. C. T. U., Mrs. Fred E. White was chosen superintendent of scientific temperance instruction, and Mrs. R. M. Page, superintendent of hygiene.

The labors of a faithful W. C. T. U. worker of Salem, Mrs. Prudence Adams, are ended and she has passed to her reward and work beyond. Her husband, Deacon Adams, followed her in a few days. It is sweet to think of them as not being separated even by death.

In the Hopkinton union, Miss Mary C. Ager has been appointed superintendent of scientific temperance instruction. Miss Florence E. Goodrich, superintendent of hygiene. Miss Ager's address is Controcookville, N. H.

Mrs. Fred H. Bailey, Hopkinton, has been chosen by the state as superintendent of press work.

At a recent reunion of New Hampshire boys at Chicago, Ill., at which feast about one hundred and fifty sat down, let it be noted to the credit of these men that no wine was upon their table, although the menu was very elaborate.

Mrs. N. H. Knox visited Hopkinton to lecture on "Children's Rights," this being the third lecture in the course conducted by the W. C. T. U. It was a bitter night, the worst of the season, and the audience was small. Despite the weather Mrs. Knox rode six miles after the lecture to be able to meet an appointment at Laconia early the following day.

This appointment was the long hoped for opportunity to bring the subject of scientific temperance instruction in our common schools before the teachers' institute. Professor Patterson secured Mrs. Knox for this purpose, and the heroic woman (rising before daylight to take the necessary train, with the mercury below zero and the wind blowing a dreadful gale) stood before the teachers of Belknap county and presented the subject in an able manner.

The presentation of the subject must have made a favorable impression, as Mrs. Knox was then and there engaged to speak on the same subject at the next institute in an adjoining county.

ew Hampshire is not yet quite aroused to the necessity of this work in the public school; a little of Massachusetts' zeal in this department would be a very fine thing. There is a certain temperance arithmetic used in many of the Massachusetts schools, that is interesting and impressive. I wish it could be adopted everywhere for new beginners.

Those interested in the Mercy Home who sent presents for the Christmas time will be glad to know, at this late hour, the joy those presents brought to the inmates. There was a dinner and tree the day before Christmas at the Home, and on Christmas day the band of eighteen were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Knox, of that city. God is blessing, in a marvelous way, the W. C. T. U. Mercy Home.

Mrs. W. A. Loyen, Jefferson, superintendent of work among lumbermen, is earnest in her work and asks for aid from the various unions throughout the state. It is the purpose to supply the camps, boarding houses and places where men spend their evenings, with good magazines, books and papers, trying, if possible, to uproot and destroy the great evil of reading vile stuff that degrades the manhood and leaves a lasting impression. French books and papers will be very acceptable, as many of the lumbermen can read only their native language.

The last quarterly Strafford county convention was held in Rochester. The secretary being absent, Mrs. John Bates, of Great Falls, was chosen secretary pro tem. The word of welcome was given by Mrs. Burrell, of Rochester, and responded to by Mrs. Shapleigh, of Great Falls. The devotional exercises were conducted in the afternoon by Mrs. Danforth, of Rochester. It was voted, after much discussion, and explanatory remarks from Miss Wendell, that the recommendation from the state in regard to the purchase of land around the Mercy Home be indorsed by the convention.

Miss E. E. Wendell, of Dover, read a very interesting paper on "Scientific Temperance Work in the County and State," and called for a report on this work from the various unions present.

The song, "Here am I, send me," by Mrs. Dexter, of Rochester, was very inspiring. Mrs. Abbott, of Rochester, gave a graphic description of our convention at Boston in November, and Miss Edith Bickford recited a poem. The petition for closing our Exposition on the Sabbath and the "Sunday Rest Law," were then brought before the convention and a motion carried to have them indorsed by the convention and signed officially.

New unions have been formed in Belknap county during the year at New Hampton and Gilmanton Iron Works.

An important W. C. T. U. county convention was held in Milford at which time Mrs. Mary H. Hunt was present. The kindly welcome was given by Mrs. Doane, of Milford and responded to by Mrs. J. H. Hoffman, of Peterborough. Mrs. Heath, of Nashua, presented the topic "Young Woman's Work," and read an interesting paper upon the need of the young women in the work. She suggested that they pause in their rush for pleasure and assist their older sisters in bearing the burden and ministering good to others. It was voted that each union make a great effort to interest the young people in their towns to join the W. C. T. U., even though it did not seem best to form a Y.

When Mrs. Hunt took the platform in the afternoon, she asked the following questions of the delegates regarding temperance instruction in schools: "Are the text-books indorsed? Are the scholars examined for promotion? Is there a special course of study in this department? Are the teachers interested?"

It was found that sixty-four schools used some text-book, but not to any extent. "We fear our teachers in the public schools do not realize the great responsibility resting upon them as educators of the future generation, and that parents do not realize theirs when they choose for a school board men who will not enforce the teaching of these studies," she said. In the evening Mrs. Hunt took up the same important subject. Many valuable thoughts were given in the lecture.

I want to speak another good word for our paper, The Little Gem, published at Melvin Village, by C. H. Shepherd. It is an anti-tobacco paper, just fitted to a family of young boys; twenty-five cents is such a small sum to pay toward securing a good paper and helping on a good work. Send for a sample copy.

The W. C. T. U. rooms in Goodrich block, Nashua, have been kept open as usual doing the year in the afternoon and evening. Religious meetings have been held at the rooms Sunday afternoon, led by the different ladies of the union, at which the attendance has been good, and which have been very helpful in their influence.

Classes have been organized this year in vocal music, elocution, and physical culture, which are well patronized and doing good work. The books show a large number of visitors.

For the continued benevolence of friends in their contributions of literature, fuel, etc., the organization are very grateful. The funds for the support of the rooms have been mostly obtained by personal solicitation.

The younger members of the union have given two entertainments with great success. During the winter a course of lectures was given by Dr. Baylock which were well attended and of a very interesting and instructive nature. More money was realized from the lecture course than from any other project hitherto tried, and great thanks are due to Dr. Baylock for thus contributing so freely of her time and thought. The holding of the state convention there last fall proved a great awakening.

To Mrs. H. L. Wellington, state superintendent of Sunday-school work, we are indebted for the following figures: There are 559 Sunday-schools in the state of New Hampshire of all denominations with a membership of 62,882. This is a gain of 27 in the number of schools and 6,000 in membership during the year. In the United States there are 108,989 schools with a membership of 9,800,471.

The Granite State Outlook contains in the February issue letters of great interest from the following superintendents: Mrs. Elena L. Hoffman, Peterboro, "Narcotics"; Mrs. W. A. Loyne, Jefferson, "Lumbermen's Work"; Mrs. Josephine Austin, Littleton, "Demorest Medal Contest"; Mrs. H. L. Wellington, Keene, "Sunday-School Work."

There is not a member of the W. C. T. U. that can afford to be without this valuable paper, valuable to them in its power of conveying to their minds the amount of work being done in our state. Aside from the good to be derived, they really owe it as a duty to the state to support a temperance paper of our own, through whose columns the voice of our people can be heard and the progress of our work reported.

MRS. FRED H. BAILEY,
State Reporter, Hopkinton.

NEW YORK STATE NEWS.

New York white-ribboners are feeling that his Satanic majesty is abroad in these days, horns, hoofs and all. We have needed, and still need all the Christian "grace, grit and gumption" at our command to fight him. The bills which have been introduced in our state legislature have been of such a nature that we blush for shame to think of them, and yet the women have gone out with petitions and protests, forgetting self for the general good, and these petitions and protests have been rolled in upon our senators and assemblymen with, we hope, good results.

Nor has other work been neglected; everything is moving steadily onward, and in spite of everything unfavorable, we feel encouraged.

Clinton county held its fourteenth annual convention at Plattsburg with a fine attendance and great interest throughout. A short discussion on parlor meetings in which several ladies took part, brought out many helpful thoughts, and showed that such meetings reach many who have no interest in a more public meeting. An essay on "Our Difficulties, and how to Surmount Them," was read by Mrs. Lewis in an impressive manner, and an original paper on "Tobacco," by Miss Kinsley, who is school commissioner, proved so interesting that by vote of the convention it will be published in the county papers. A paper on "The Y; its Work and its Aims," was read, followed by a report of Y work at state convention. An interesting letter was read from a former secretary who now resides in Montreal, giving an account of work done there.

The Boston Convention was well reported by the county president, Mrs. Frances D. Hall, of Plattsburgh, for which a rising vote of thanks was given, and at the evening meeting Mrs. Hall was presented with a beautiful basket of flowers from her loyal followers.

Miss Elizabeth Greenwood, of Brooklyn, superintendent of the World's and National evangelistic department, was with them and gave a most eloquent address on "Home." Miss Greenwood's power is well known, and her presence in this convention was productive of good. Her Bible readings seem always to lift her hearers into a higher and purer atmosphere. The papers gave highest commendation of her evening address. Miss Greenwood also addressed a large audience at a union service on Sunday evening, "The Duty of the Church to take up Temperance Work," being her theme.

The January issue of Union Echoes, the official organ of Suffolk county, is as usual, a storehouse of good things. Impressions of the World's and National Convention occupy the greater share of space, followed by plans of work for future days.

Splendid revival work is being done in Elmira through the labors of Rev. W. H. Boole and his wife, Mrs. Ella A. Boole, A. M., our state vice-president. Many are turning to Christ for refuge, and the hearts of the workers are gladdened by this harvest of souls for the Master. Last fall P. A. Burdick conducted meetings in Elmira for two months and a half, followed by the Silver Lake quartette, who remained two weeks, all under the auspices of the W. C. T. U., with the result that hundreds signed the pledge. The reformed men and pledge-signers formed themselves into a temperance league and opened a reading-room. Dr. and Mrs. Boole have held special meetings in this room, and have been the means of turning some to Christ; at one meeting seven men publicly took a pledge to give up tobacco. God is blessing the work of His servants and their hearts are filled with joy.

Alleghany county held its semi-annual convention late in January at Alfred Center, and owing to the extreme cold and the "grip," the delegation was small, but it made up in enthusiasm what it lacked in numbers. The program could not be fully carried out, so many being absent, but their wise president, Mrs. V. A. Willard, provided for emergencies. Reports of state and National conventions and a report of the State Suffrage Association were well received, the latter being given by Mrs. A. A. Allen, wife of President Allen of Alfred University. Other time was well occupied by reports of committees, plans of work, and discussions on the same, after which a memorial service was held for those who, having "finished their course," had passed on to receive the crown of righteousness which the Father has prepared for those who love Him. Rev. Anna Shaw delivered one of her matchless addresses in the evening to the pleasure and profit of all present, and to the encouragement of the workers. This county has recently made Mrs. J. B. Bradley a life member of the state W. C. T. U.

The Catholics at Pompey have fallen into line and have organized a large total abstinence society, and so the work widens and broadens.

Orleans county met in convention at Clarendon, February 4. They report a fine time and a goodly gathering. Mrs. E. M. Burgess, of Highland, was present and proved herself a host in every way. Her lecture was one which will long be remembered, while her replies to questions during the time given to the question box were full of pith and point, and will be of benefit to many in the carrying forward of our work. Recitations and music—reports of state and National conventions,—the children's hour, and many other interesting things filled up the time. The memorial service was very tender and uplifting, and closed with an article from THE UNION SIGNAL, "We did not know that death could be so beautiful." Mrs. Hewitt conducted a parliamentary drill, and a discussion on Loyal Temperance Legion work. Fair work will be more thoroughly done this year than ever before, and the whole tenor of the report is "progress."

Niagara county held its convention at Dickersonville February 4 and 5, and although many things occurred to disappoint us, yet at the close of the two days' meeting it was generally conceded that it had been one of the most profitable conventions ever held in the county, and we had only praise and commendation for the brave women of Dickersonville, who under trying circumstances had so bountifully entertained us. Being off the line of a railroad, they were obliged to press the brothers into service, and very willingly they did their share, driving several miles to the station to "fetch and carry" the delegates. Sickness interfered with this convention to a great extent, not only keeping many delegates at home, but also depriving us of our speaker, Mrs. C. J. A. Jump, of Albany. We had looked forward to her coming with much pleasure, but were obliged to do without her, and right willingly did the county workers fill in all vacant places, that there might be no breaks. Mrs. Dietrick, of Lockport, took charge of the Bible Readings, in place of Mrs. Jump; Mrs. Graham took the Y symposium, and at the evening meeting, in place of the address, we listened with pleasure to a report of the Boston meetings, from the county president, Mrs. Ruth A. Frost, which was supplemented by a report of the Y evening and the banquet by the county superintendent of Y work who also attended the Boston Convention. Mrs. Frost's report was received with enthusiasm, and she was given a Chautauqua salute at the close. One gentleman remarked: "It was a poem from beginning to end." The Loyal Temperance Legion gave us a charming exercise, and we had a choir constantly on hand ready for any emergency, besides other singers. Several recitations were given by Miss Fisher and Mrs. Perry, both of whom appeared to be favorites with the audience. Local unions reported, plans for future work were discussed, a canvass was made to obtain subscribers for THE UNION SIGNAL and the state paper, and much routine business done. The literature table occupied a conspicuous place, and was well patronized. Beautiful weather, cold but clear, was given us, and when we separated to go to our homes it was with a feeling that each one had contributed her best toward the success of the meeting.

Cattaraugus county comes next, their meeting being held at Franklinville, February 9, 10, with a large attendance, and deep interest manifested. All reports were good, new departments taken up and superintendents appointed. Delegates to state and National conventions reported satisfactorily to all. Several good papers were read and during the last afternoon the children from the schools were in attendance, and were addressed by Miss Yates, of Maine. Miss Yates also addressed the evening meeting, her subject being "The Modern Hercules." Her address was forcible and eloquent. Perfect harmony in all things pervaded the meetings. The next convention goes to Randolph.

Orange county has been stirred up lately by the newly-elected county president, Mrs. Lucy H. Washington, who has made a tour of the county, visiting each local union. She addressed ten evening meetings, and held four informal afternoon meetings. The collections taken were given to the county treasury, and amounted to a goodly sum. Mrs. Washington delights her audiences and not only that, but interests and instructs them as well. Added to natural ability and culture is the priceless experience of years of active work as National organizer. Mrs. Washington is also a writer of much merit, and her book of poems, "Memory's Casket," is receiving well deserved approbation.

RESCUE MISSION WORK.

Through the instrumentality of the W. C. T. U. of Watertown, Jefferson county, Col. H. H. Hadley and the Silver Lake Quartette were secured for the last week in January to inaugurate rescue mission work. The week's work was entirely satisfactory and resulted in a permanent mission, well under way before Colonel Hadley left the city. This mission, sustained by pledges of the citizens, and superintended by a reformed man, Mr. Harry Mack, who, well known in the place, is doing a magnificent work for God, in reaching and bringing hardened men, bound by the appetite of strong drink, to Christ, that they may accept His salvation which makes them free men indeed. Many souls have been saved and more are coming every night.

This was a work of faith on the part of the W. C. T. U. and they praise God for each step they have taken. These men were engaged without knowing just where the money would come from to pay them, but faith triumphed. The expense for the week was $330 and before the week ended they had in their hands from collections $400, and yearly pledges toward the support of the mission of over $700 more, and for the encouragement of other unions who may desire to do some such work, when the way seems hedged in, they are glad to give this testimony. Remember that the silver and gold, aye, even men's hearts, are at God's command, in whose name this work was accomplished.

NO-LICENSE VICTORIES.

Owego, Tioga county, scored a success recently, in electing a no-license commissioner. This was made possible, largely through the efforts of the W. C. T. U. who held gospel temperance meetings for two weeks previous to town meeting day. They engaged P. A. Burdick, of Alfred Center, N. Y., to work with reference to this end, and found him just fitted for the work. This fight for a no-license excise commissioner has been made before but with different results—the majority going for license one year by 500; now they gain the victory by a majority of 222 for no-license, the greatest victory ever known in that town. Next year they hope to gain one more commissioner and that means no-license in reality.

In referring to Mr. Burdick, Mrs. Stone, the president of the union, says: "Mr. Burdick is a speaker of great power. Hundreds listened to him each evening with much interest. We consider him equal to Bain, and that is a broad statement. He is very logical, convincing, not afraid of the truth, yet presenting it in such a beautiful way that he wins his hearers every time."

Ilion, Herkimer county, has been engaged in this same work, with the result that it, too, elected a no-license commissioner. Much of the success was due to meetings held at different points, thus reaching all the voters in the outlying districts. Mr. Burdick addressed two of these meetings, the others being in charge of the local clergy and other prominent men who did excellent service. Of course the W. C. T. U. did efficient work during this campaign, and were untiring in their efforts. Much of the preliminary work was planned and successfully carried out by them, and they feel a just pride and satisfaction in the result. On town meeting day they served refreshments to a large number of voters at Temperance Hall.

FRANCES W. GRAHAM,
State Reporter, Lockport.

LAKE BLUFF CONVOCATION AND SCHOOL OF METHODS

Offers most unusual attractions to our W. C. T. U. workers, dates July 14 to 24. Miss Willard and Mrs. Woodbridge will occupy the two Sundays, and will each spend several days during the school. Mrs. Esther Tuttle Pritchard will give a Bible Reading each day, and Mrs. Addie Northam Fields will hold a children's meeting every morning. Y conferences are arranged for under the state superintendents of Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana and Ohio. Four evenings will be devoted to parliamentary drill, under Mrs. Benjamin, and on two evenings there will be first-class entertainments. A Demorest gold medal contest will be held. The Delsarte instruction, which has always been so marked a feature, will be under the best instructors. Every effort is being made for comfortable and inexpensive entertainment. Faith Cottage, rooms from $2.50 to $3.50; Centenary Cottage, rooms $2.50 to $3 per week; Ada Street Cottage, rooms $1.50 per week; all of these have the privileges of light housekeeping; the rooms can be arranged for two or more persons; in some of them the parties are expected to furnish their own towels and bed linen. Numbers of cottages rent furnished rooms either with or without light housekeeping privileges. Lake Bluff House, $1.50 per day for room and board; Chautauqua and Mrs. Fowler's cottage, each $1 per day for room and board. So we trust the needs of all may be met, and that there may be the greatest rallying of the clans in this campaign year that we have ever known.

All the speakers are positively engaged; only a providential interposition will prevent their attendance.

ESTHER PUGH, Pres.

THE NATIONAL TEMPERANCE HOSPITAL.

The following statement is from the report of Dr. Chas. G. Davis, the head of the medical staff:

"Every day sees some new triumph for our anti-alcoholic treatment. Cases in which a few years ago alcohol was considered indispensable, are now being treated much more successfully than under the old régime. In looking over the medical department, our attention is called to a typical case of typhoid fever, which was brought to the hospital in an almost moribund condition. The patient, twenty-one years of age, showed a frail constitution, almost exhausted and delirious. Shortly after admission, severe hemorrhages from the bowels began, and continued at intervals for several days, until he was almost pulseless. Under the old treatment, alcohol would have been given him in large quantities, and the result would have been almost certain death. But no alcoholic liquors were administered, he grew better, and after a few weeks has been discharged from the hospital, cured.

"But in the surgical department is found the greatest record for encouragement. Some years ago (and even now with some surgeons) it was considered dangerous to perform a surgical operation of any gravity without first drugging the patient with whisky, brandy, or some equally strong alcoholic liquid. Our hospital has demonstrated the absurdity and danger of this. Many valuable lives are undoubtedly sacrificed every year through the error of administering alcohol during surgical operations. Alcohol is a depressent to the heart, blood vessels and nervous system. The patient is compelled to bear the burden of both the operation and the alcohol. We find on the records of the hospital, notes of a recent case of ovarian tumor. The patient was a woman thirty years of age, the tumor was very large, and she was almost exhausted from a long illness. Before and during the operation, the pulse was scarcely perceptible at the wrist, but under the use of non-alcoholic stimulants, she rallied; the tumor which weighed thirty pounds was removed, and she has gone home cured and happy.

"Every week sees some triumph like this, and the hospital is daily gaining in popularity. Patients are coming from all over America, for surgical attention and medical treatment, not through any advertising that has been sent abroad, but alone through the merits of the institution. What a great field this is for temperance work! When the principles advocated by the National Temperance Hospital are fully demonstrated, then the battle is won, and temperance has become an established fact. Let the good work go on!"

Mrs. Islen of Englewood, read a very interesting paper on "The Modern Woman" at the Sunday afternoon meeting held at the hospital, February 21.

The following donations were received the first of November: South Side flower mission, one box grapes, one dozen bananas, one-half barrel apples, cut flowers; Baraboo, Wis., W. C. T. U., fifteen cans fruit, six glasses jelly; Adaline, Ill., W. C. T. U., one dozen glasses jelly, one dozen cans fruit, four pounds dried fruit, two cakes soap, children's undergarments, one-half dozen towels, two packages oatmeal, one crumb cloth, two quilts, three pairs sheets, three pairs cases, one flannel gown, one woolen spread, old linen and cotton; Peru, Ind., W. C. T. U. sent twelve cans fruit, thirteen glasses jelly, one peck dried fruit; Mrs. Carrie Johnson, Elburn, Ill., sent one barrel vegetables; White Pigeon, Mich., W. C. T. U. sent two boxes honey, thirteen cans fruit, eight glasses jelly, old cotton; Rock Falls, Ill., sent six cans fruit, thirteen glasses jelly; Dowagiac, Mich., W. C. T. U. sent thirteen cans fruit.

Official Communications.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

The General Officers of the World's W. C. T. U. have apppointed the following on the World's list of lecturers: Mrs. Mary Clement Leavitt, Miss Frances E. Willard, Lady Henry Somerset, Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge, Miss Jessie Ackerman, Dr. Kate Bushnell, Mrs. Elizabeth Wheeler Andrew. For Bible readings: Mrs. Hannah Whitall Smith, Miss Elizabeth W Greenwood. As lecturers for the children: Mrs. Helen G. Rice and Miss Anna Gordon. As fast as practicable it is intended to swing out into the World's W. C. T. U. with all the departments of the National that its manifold work may develop in every country under the sun.

(Signed) WORLD'S OFFICERS.

NARCOTIC DEPARTMENT.

An anti-cigarette bill has been introduced in Congress. Now is the time to rush in petitions forbidding the manufacture of cigarettes. I urge every one interested in this department to go to work at once securing names to petitions. The state superintendent and state secretaries will be furnished with petitions by me free of charge. Please secure them and get as many names as possible. Time is short.

MRS. E. B. INGALLS,
Nat. Supt. Dept. of Narcotics.
St. Louis, Mo., 4119 Westminster Place.

WORLD'S W. C. T. U. MISSIONARIES.

[We must steadily extend our territory. No other course is worthy of a live organization. Mrs. Leavitt, Miss Ackerman, Dr. Kate Bushnell and Mrs. E. W. Andrew are now in foreign lands by our appointment, and the white ribbon is being unrolled around the world. In Boston we appointed, as superintendent of World's Missionary work, Mrs. Mary Sparkes Wheeler, a missionary worker of first rank, who has raised large amounts in her own church (the Methodist) and here she gives us her plans. Let us read, mark, inwardly digest and outwardly act.—EDS.]

Doubtless many of the readers of THE UNION SIGNAL in reading "The First World's Convention" in the DAILY UNION SIGNAL, noticed the following as part of "The Plan of Work" submitted by our round-the-world missionary, Mary Clement Leavitt:

"That in order to complete the organization of the World's W. C. T. U. in all countries, at least six missionaries shall be appointed as soon as practicable, with proper salaries, whose traveling expenses shall be paid, to work in the following countries: One in Japan, one in China and Siam, one in British India, one in South Africa, one in West Africa and one in Egypt, Syria and Asiatic Turkey. And in order to make this practicable, a superintendent of World's Temperance Missionary work be appointed, whose duty it shall be to raise money to carry out the above plan, and to look for ladies qualified to take up the work, and recommend them to the World's Executive Committee for their approval."

The superintendent desires to enter upon the work at once, and most earnestly solicits your aid and hearty coöperation in this new departure. How wonderfully God is leading His white-ribbon army, not only in our own country, but in every land! As the representatives come up from the ends of the earth, and sit together in council, planning for the advancement of Christ's kingdom, and the overthrow of his enemies, we seem to hear "a sound of a going in the tops of the mulberry trees." Our hearts are assured of victory, and triumphantly we sing:

"Glory, glory, hallelujah!
Our God is marching on."

One has said, "Statesmanship is the art of finding out in what direction Almighty God is going, and in getting things out of His way." Our God is going to conquer the world; "As I live, saith the Lord, the whole earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of God." We want to get the whisky and opium out of His way.

In the call for these missionaries we recognize the voice of Jesus saying with renewed emphasis, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, and, lo, I am with you alway, even to the end of the world."

Sisters, we must heed the call. These missionaries must be sent. It is our privilege to send them. Are we ready for the work? I believe we are. May the Lord help us to espond cheerfully and generously. Freely ye have received, freely give. Let every W. C. T. U. woman resolve to give something, and the work will be accomplished.

With your aid, sisters, we propose to organize a "World's Temperance Missionary Society," by forming missionary bands wherever possible (of not less than ten persons, and as much larger as practicable) in all unions in all countries; terms of membership, one penny a week. You can go outside of your union if you so desire, to solicit members to this band. Gather in both men and women, young and old. Let some active, energetic woman begin at once in each union. After securing the names, appoint a president to superintend the interests of the band, and we would advise that two collectors be appointed who shall call upon the members monthly or quarterly, for the money. Try to increase the amount by holding, once a year, an anniversary, either missionary, temperance, literary, musical or social, as your judgment shall dictate. In this way, perhaps, you could make some of your friends life-members.

The payment of twenty dollars constitutes a person a life member. One hundred dollars constitutes a life manager. Three hundred dollars constitutes a life patron.

I am sure some of you are already so thoroughly imbued with the missionary spirit that you will gladly become life patrons, life managers or life members. Who will be the first? or who will volunteer to send one missionary by giving six hundred dollars? Who can estimate the amount of good accomplished by so doing? The wave of influence set in motion by your gift will roll on with accumulative force until it breaks on the shores of eternity!

We shall be glad to answer any questions, or render any assistance by correspondence or otherwise if desired.

Mrs. Ella F. M. Williams, of Montreal, Canada, is treasurer of the World's union. Please send the money to her and she will forward a receipt to you. Also be sure to furnish the superintendent with report of money sent.

MARY SPARKES WHEELER,
Supt. of World's Temp. Miss'ry Work.
Phoenixville, Chester Co., Pa.

A LAST WORD ABOUT THE SUNDAY CLOSING PETITIONS.

Where are yours? Forty-two thousand names were reported from the different states for my annual report in October; if half these went to Congress, there would still be 21,000 to commissioners, yet Mrs. Carse reports but 23,000 names received. I have sent out 26,000 headings for the commissioners alone; where are they? Thousands more will be sent in soon, but evidently hosts of unions have done nothing, yet the result may hinge on our efforts, and we shall pay better if our work is well done. Sickness is less prevalent now, and there is still the eleventh hour. Perhaps your own church has not indorsed it, then secure that by a vote, and send on giving number of members. All that can reach Mrs. M. B. Carse, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, by April 4 will be in time, and those for Congress should all be in by the same time at latest. Send these to your own members or to Mrs. M. E. Catlin, 1736 13th St., Washington, D. C. Please do not send either to me.

Now for letters. Have you written any for Sunday closing? If our plans have been carried out as we hope they have, each state president has sent a special memorial to each House of Congress and to each of its state commissioners as well as one for my use at a symposium before the commission. Now I want a broadside from the unions. We must not fail, and we shall not if we all work. Let every local president in the land, within two days, if possible, after reading this, secure without fail one written letter, if possible a half dozen, from the most influential people within reach, urging Sunday closing and no liquor at the Fair. Let private members do the same; get two copies of each letter if you can and have one sent to "Columbian Commission, Chicago, Ill.," the other to your Senator or Representative at Washington. Let us overwhelm both bodies and we shall have our way. Need I say more? Let no one delay, unless willing to bear the responsibility of a failure. Yours in service,

JOSEPHINE C. BATEHAM.
Asheville, N. C.

PURITY IN LITERATURE AND ART.

Twenty millions of children and youths of these United States are in greater danger from vile pictures, impure books, theatrical bills, posters, and vicious newspapers, etc., than all the other evils combined.

Our royal host will arouse themselves into action when they understand fully how to attack this enemy to the rising generation. This work is separate from the purity department. I would urge upon each state and territorial president to call a special executive meeting as this work is so pressing no section can be left out in selecting a superintendent. The heads of this department must be Christian women, above reproach, wise and discreet, and of moral heroism, with strong faith and reliance upon the power of prayer. Valor without discretion is harmful in this work. Rather be wise as "serpents and harmless as doves," not afraid to unearth vice and crime though there may be things on the face that shock the refined nature of our womanhood; but for the sake of the innocent children the disease must be laid open and the remedy applied.

The first duty of the superintendent is to examine carefully all the laws of state, city and borough, or district in which she resides, which relate to the circulation of impure books, papers, pictures and exhibits of show bills, posters, theaters, "dives," and casts exhibited in art galleries. Not having access to published laws, or not knowing how to obtain the desired information, then apply to the Attorney-General of your state, or to the public prosecutor of the county, city or borough, whose duty it becomes, by virtue of his office, to give you information as to all laws upon the subject, and the best plan for the securing of evidence and the enforcement of existing laws.

Where laws need strengthening, legislatures must be appealed to. Where there are no laws on the statute books, I recommend a copy of the laws of the state of New York on this subject as being among the very best. A copy of this law can be had on application to Anthony Comstock, secretary of the society for the Suppression of Vice, Times Building, New York, or to myself. City and borough laws require to be enacted. Public sentiment must be aroused, and people educated and shown how the twin monsters, impurity in literature and art, are undermining the lives of

(Continued on Page 13.)

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

our young, and that the crime breeders must be stamped out by sound and wholesome laws.

PURITY IN THE ART EXHIBITS AT THE COLUMBIAN EXHIBITION.

Decided protests must be lodged at once with the committee upon fine art exhibits at Chicago, against the exhibition of paintings and other pictures of a shameless character, such as would not be decent for a lady and gentleman to scrutinize together. Protest must also be made against the "nude subjects" in plaster and marble, which appeal only to the sensuous and immoral, such as should not be tolerated in any public gallery. The art exhibits will be viewed by hundreds of thousands of young men and women, boys and girls, from pure homes. Are their innocent natures to be corrupted by these vile and sensual displays of so-called "high art"? God deliver us from copying after the lowest and vilest of Parisian indecency! I would suggest that our white-ribboners from one end of this land to the other, write letters at once, not only to the committee of fine art exhibits, but to the commissioners of their own states and other influential officials who are connected with the Columbian Exhibition.

Let no white-ribboner, after carefully reading the contents of this letter, say "This is not for me." Surely, what affects the twenty millions of children and youths must appeal to you.

The following important bill is now before Congress: H. R. Bill. 120, to amend section 3893. Revised statutes, now pending before the committee on post-offices and post-roads.

This bill is an amendment to the present postal law, including "Every obscene, lewd, filthy, indecent or lascivious book, pamphlet, picture paper, letter writing, print or other publication of an indecent or filthy character, or devoted to the publication or principally made up of criminal news, police reports, or accounts of criminal deeds, lust or crime etc., etc. The postmaster-general shall have full authority to declare what matter is non-mailable under this act so far as the transportation of mails is concerned. Upon the continued mailing of newspapers or periodicals containing advertisements or other articles or items, forbidden by this act to be transmitted in the mails, the postmaster-general is hereby authorized to declare said publications, including future issues thereof, non-mailable."

The above extract from the bill shows it to be a much more stringent measure than that embodied in the present law—section 3893.

Letters come to me from all over our broad land and Canada imploring me to do something to stem this flood of vile and corrupting matter that is passing through the mails. If our white-ribboners could see what these cancer planters are sending throughout this country they would rise en masse to put down this monster evil. Our time for action is at hand. Appeal to all good people. Those who are voters to write to their representatives in Congress to urge the passage of this bill. Reader, do not fail to write yourself. Do it at once; every such letter will help. If we do our duty there will be influence enough to lift this bill out of the committee of post-offices and post-roads, and pass it through both Houses of Congress.

Let no woman who does not do her duty to the utmost towards securing the passage of this bill ever complain if no stop is put to the vile traffic, as the responsibility lies at our door.

EMILIE D. MARTIN,
National Superintendent.

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., reports a new local W. C. T. U., named Highland Park Union.

ANOTHER aged saint and temperance worker, Mrs. Emily Gleason, of Sedalia, Mo., passed away February 2.

MRS. CLARA COLBY, editor of the Woman's Tribune, lectures on Wyoming, an interesting theme which she presents most worthily.

THE report of the evangelistic committee of the Reno, Nev., W. C. T. U. is exceptionally good, showing much work accomplished.

THE corresponding secretary of Iowa W. C. T. U., Mrs. O. M. Crawford, has removed to Hooperstown, Ill. Iowa's loss is Illinois' gain.

THE first Demorest medal contest in the state of Louisiana was held not long ago in Morgan City; other unions will doubtless follow their good example.

THE temperance cause has suffered the loss of a staunch friend in the death of Rev. J. S. McIntire, a beloved Methodist pastor of Davenport, Ia.

A GOOD friend of the Greenwich, N. J., W. C. T. U. was Mr. Sheppard, husband of its president, whose sudden death on February 12 was severely felt.

A LETTER concerning a valuable manuscript, but giving no address other than S. P. Morrison, will be answered if the post-office address is furnished this office.

MINNESOTA'S sixteenth district has received the inspiration of a series of successful lectures given by the Hon. James P. Pinkham, of Minneapolis.

A SUNDAY evening temperance mass-meeting at Orange City, Fla., recently was addressed by Mrs. Irene G. Adams, under the auspices of the W. C. T. U.

A COMMITTEE of the W. C. T. U. have arranged with the Pastors' Association of Davenport, Ia., to hold one temperance meeting each month on a Sabbath evening.

THE great "choir invisible" has been increased by the departure from earth of Mrs. Maria Gower Sargent, of Sargentsville, Mo., a noble W. C. T. U. worker in all reforms.

THE McLeansboro, Ill., union has been invaded, and its ranks depleted by the death of two members, Mrs. Kipp, on December 6, and Mrs. Kate H. Sharp, February 11.

MISS ELIZABETH W. GREENWOOD, the World's and National evangelist, has been conducting a series of Bible expositions and addresses in Rochester, N. Y., which have been largely attended.

MRS. ELIZA COLEMAN TOMPKINS died January 20, at her home near Thorp, Wis. The resolutions, in memoriam, passed by the local W. C. T. U. amply testify to the regard and esteem in which this valued member was held.

THE Florida Congregational Association has entered its protest against the legalized liquor traffic in a set of splendid resolutions pledging its own influence and recommending the work of the W. C. T. U. to all Christian believers.

A YOUNG white-ribboner at school in Livingston, Ala., writes that their school has been benefited by a visit and talk from Mrs. Dr. Bryce as a result of which many of the young people have adopted the badge of total abstinence.

MRS. M. H. HENNON, president of Hawesville, Ky., W. C. T. U., at her own expense is publishing and editing The White Cross, a monthly paper in white ribboninterests. It is a thoroughly awake sheet, and deserves the support of the clientel.

THE Mission Home at Knoxville, Tenn., is a practical Christian philanthropy which is doing much good. During 1891, 126 women, girls and children were received and given both material and spiritual benefit. Mrs. J. R. Lauritzen, a consecrated W. C. T. U. worker, is the president.

THE two evangelists, Misses Anna Downey and Elizabeth M. Boyd, are commended to our local unions by the National W. C. T. U. Consecration, ability, experience, all characterize the words and work of these white-ribbon sisters, who will go out together or separately as desired. Address them at Geneva, N. Y.

RECENT reports place the number of Sunday-school scholars in this country at 9,438,318. If every one of these should carry home and read a copy of The Young Crusader with its charming temperance stories and quarterly temperance lessons, with notes by Miss Willard and notes for primary classes, its attractive special programs, what a seed-sowing that would be! Only 17,492 as yet receive a copy of this, our Sunday-school temperance paper.

THE growth of the Kendrick, Idaho, W. C. T. U. typifies that of many other earnest workers who find that their efforts have been "blessed beyond their expectations." Their little union of four members has grown to twenty-four and the six saloons have been decreased to three during their single year of existence; also much good work accomplished by mothers' and gospel temperance meetings and in the Loyal Temperance Legion.

ON the evening of March 10, Lady Henry Somerset and Miss Willard addressed the young women of the college in Evanston, Ill., two hundred and fourteen of these fair and hopeful ones being present, each with a white ribbon worn in various fashions, by some on the shoulder, by some as a tie, by others attached to the watch-chain, etc. Flags, English and American, were draped in the handsome chapel; bouquets of lilies and other flowers were presented, and Mrs. Emily Huntington Miller, principal of the college, introduced our editors in her most graceful style.

All Grocers sell GOLD DUST WASHING POWDER.

N. K. FAIRBANK & CO., Sole Manufacturers,
CHICAGO, ST. LOUIS, NEW YORK, PHILADELPHIA, BOSTON, BALTIMORE, NEW ORLEANS, SAN FRANCISCO, PORTLAND, ME., PORTLAND, ORE., PITTSBURGH AND MILWAUKEE.

The 1892 Model of the Remington is now on the Market.

Wyckoff, Seamans & Benedict,

175 Monroe St., Chicago.

Constant improvement has characterized the history of the Remington Standard Typewriter.

The new model presents no startling novelty and involves no radical departure from the principles of construction which have been approved by twenty years' experience.

The changes introduced into the 1892 Model represent the carefully tested results of expert study of various points deemed capable of improvement.

Old users of the Remington will find advantages in the quality of the work, and ease as well as convenience of operation. New ones will soon discover that the 1892 Model will increase the prestige of the STANDARD WRITING MACHINE OF THE WORLD.

OUR GOODS ARE SOLD IN ALL THE PRINCIPAL CITIES OF THE WORLD. SEND FOR AN ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE.

Temple Trust Bonds
FOR THE
WOMAN'S . . CHRISTIAN . TEMPERANCE UNION . . .

I am now ready to fill MARCH ORDERS for these most desirable and popular BONDS. Denominations $100 and $500.

Date, July 1, 1891. Due, July 1, 1901.
BONDS PAYABLE TO BEARER, and TRANSFERABLE INTEREST PAID TWICE A YEAR—JAN. 1st, JULY 1st.

Address all orders and inquiries for further information to

H. C. SPEER, Banker,
237 La Salle St., - Chicago, Ill.

FREE IT WILL COST YOU NOTHING:
Send us your address on a postal and you will receive the finest catalogue of PIANOS and ORGANS in the world. It will show you how to SAVE $100. Satisfaction guaranteed before you pay. CUT THIS OUT and mail it to us. You will be surprised at the result. But you must do it NOW. Write to CORNISH & CO. (Established 25 Years.) WASHINGTON, New Jersey.

VAN HOUTEN'S COCOA

MR. MICAWBER.

"Best & Goes Farthest."

"Something has Turned up! The Golden opportunity Has arrived. The Tide of fortune is At the flood. The-in Short, Wilkins Micawber is the sole Agent for VAN HOUTEN'S COCOA In the southern Hemisphere."

PERFECTLY PURE.

The Standard Cocoa of the World.
A Delicious Beverage.
Stimulating and Invigorating.

VAN HOUTEN'S PATENT PROCESS utilizes in the highest possible degree all the flesh forming elements, while highly developing the flavor and aroma.

Sold in 1-8, 1-4, 1-2 and 1 lb. Cans. If not obtainable enclose 25 cts. to either VAN HOUTEN & ZOON, 106 Reade Street, New York, or 45 Wabash Ave., Chicago, and a can, containing enough for 35 to 40 cups will be mailed. Mention this publication. Prepared only by VAN HOUTEN & ZOON, Weesp, Holland. A4.

PERFECTION

KEEPS FLOUR PERFECTLY DRY AND FREE FROM DIRT VERMIN ETC.

COMBINES BIN SIFTER PAN & SCOOP. AERATES AND PRESERVES FLOUR FROM MOLD

FLOUR BIN AND SIEVE

Avoids the great inconvenience of reaching into a barrel or sack. No scattering. Saves time and waste. Once tried you would not be without it for many times its cost. Send for circular.

Prices to hold { 25 lbs. $2.50 / 50 lbs. $3.00 / 100 lbs. $4.00 } Your dealer sells them or ought to. If he does not please write to us.

SHERMAN & BUTLER, Manufacturers, 26-28 W. Lake Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

"WHAT I EAT, THAT I AM."

GRANULA

AN INCOMPARABLE FOOD

Discovered by JAMES C. JACKSON, M. D., Founder of the Famous

DANSVILLE SANATORIUM,

Being the life-giving principle of WHEAT. Easily digested; readily assimilated by all. "A universal favorite wherever known."

Trial Package 36 cents, by mail postpaid. Send for our Pamphlet (free).

GRANULA MFG. CO.
DANSVILLE, N.Y.

PEATS THE

WALL PAPER

MERCHANT CHICAGO

Retails all grades of WALL PAPER of the newest designs and latest colorings in small quantities; many patterns cheaper than your home dealer can buy them.

GOOD PAPER, 3c. GOLD PAPER, 5c.

Handsome parlor paper 10—12½—15c per roll with wide border and ceiling to match.

If you intend to use any WALL PAPER whatever send 10 cents for postage on samples and his guide "HOW TO PAPER" will be sent free. Agents sample books $1.

See his samples before you buy.

ALFRED PEATS, Wall Paper Merchant, 136-138 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

ALUMINUM SOUVENIR

Charm (dime size) with the Lord's Prayer coined in smallest characters, and strung on blue silk ribbon, sent free to any one sending 10 cents for sample copy of The FREE St. Louis Magazine. Aluminum is the wonderful new metal, bright as silver, light as wood, strong as steel, will not tarnish.

St. Louis Magazine, 901 Olive St., St. Louis, Mo.

MILLER'S HOTEL New York City, 39 West 26th St. A Prohibition Home. Patronized by W. C. T. U. workers visiting New York. Turkish, Electric, Roman Baths.

Publisher's Notes.

Observe.

The price of The Young Crusader is now 15 cents per year; twenty-five copies or over in one package at 1 cent per copy.

Take Notice.—We do not send twenty-five copies per year for 25 cents, but twenty-five copies one time.

It is an exceedingly cheap and desirable paper at this price, and is rapidly growing in popularity.

Now Ready.

The revised edition of "Thumb-nail Sketches," including Miss Willard's pen-outline of Miss Ames and her picture. The work has been reproduced under the direction of Miss Hood, Miss Ames' companion and friend, who will devote the proceeds to the Anchorage Mission, Miss Ames' favorite charity in Chicago. Orders sent will be promptly filled. Price 30 cts. per copy.

Address

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Clearance Sale.

There are some copies of Miss Willard's annual address still in our store-room that should be doing missionary work all over the land. To make this easy we have determined to offer them as follows:

1 copy	2c
10 copies	15c
25 copies	40c
50 copies	75c
100 copies	$1 25

The supply is limited, and every copy will soon be taken at these ridiculously low figures. First come, first served. Do not delay, or you may be disappointed.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Red Letter Day Calendars.

These useful little calendars are indispensable to W. C. T. U. workers, and excellent for souvenirs and to send to outsiders not interested. We will send any quantity at 5 cents each, or $4 per 100.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Take Notice.

Special editions of THE UNION SIGNAL are prepared for all special days, and extra numbers can be secured by ordering in advance. For rates on large numbers address

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Sample Copies.

Demorest's Monthly Magazine has won an enviable reputation as a home journal. It is clear and clean and true. The subscription price is $2 per year, but we will send it and THE UNION SIGNAL (price $1 per year) for one year for $2.25 only. A limited number of sample copies of Demorest's Monthly Magazine will be sent to any person who will agree to use them faithfully in securing new subscribers.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

A Good Cause.

The Humane World, a twelve page, handsomely illustrated monthly, published at St. Paul, Minn., is accomplishing much good in preventing cruelty to animals and children. Their method of working is to present the teamsters and drivers throughout the country a year's subscription to their paper free of charge. In so doing, it reaches the hand of those having the care of horses and animals, and will have a tendency to arouse a humane sentiment and awaken a humane feeling toward the brute creation. Last year over 100,000 copies were distributed gratuitously to teamsters and drivers.

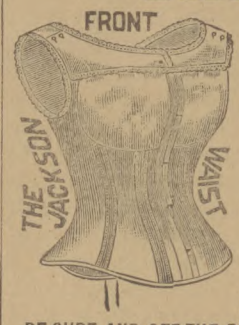
Any one wishing to help this work so deserving the support of all Christian men and women, can do so by sending fifty cents for a six months' subscription for themselves, and an extra copy will be furnished some teamster or driver free.

Address of this publication is,

THE HUMANE WORLD

Send for Color Samples and Price List. Patented February 23, 1886. Examine closely. Stamp on inside of Waist.

TAKE NO OTHER.



THE GENUINE JACKSON CORSET WAISTS

ARE MADE ONLY BY THE

JACKSON CORSET CO., Jackson, Mich.

The manufacturer's name is printed upon the boxes, and stamped upon inside of clasp in each waist. They are the most popular articles of the kind now on the market. You should have one of them.

BE SURE AND GET THE RIGHT THING. IF YOUR DEALER HASN'T IT, SEND $1.25 FOR SAMPLE.

One-third Your Life is Spent in Bed!

The Art of purifying Feathers for Bedding purposes has been the subject of close study for many years, and has reached its highest development in the COLD BLAST PROCESS, by which all foreign matter, dust and the causes of odor are eliminated, and the Feathers rendered pure, clean and sweet, as well as permanently buoyant, while retaining their Feathery softness. FEATHER PILLOWS MADE OF THESE ARE HEALTHFUL. Watch for Trade Mark. Your dealer probably keeps them. If not, address

THE COLD BLAST FEATHER CO.
MAKERS OF Faultless Bedding. CHICAGO.

FREE

For 30 Days. Wishing to introduce our CRAYON PORTRAITS and at the same time extend our business and make new customers, we have decided to make this Special Offer: Send us a Cabinet Picture, Photograph, Tintype, Ambrotype or Daguerotype of yourself or any member of your family, living or dead and we will make you a CRAYON PORTRAIT FREE OF CHARGE, provided you exhibit it to your friends as a sample of our work, and use your influence in securing us future orders. Place name and address on back of picture and it will be returned in perfect order. We make any change in picture you wish, not interfering with the likeness. Refer to any bank in Chicago. Address all mail to THE CRESCENT CRAYON CO. Opposite New German Theatre, CHICAGO, ILL. P. S.—We will forfeit $100 to anyone sending us photo and not receiving crayon picture FREE as per this offer. This offer is bonafide.

MASON & HAMLIN

Examine the new Mason & Hamlin Piano and Organ catalogues, sent free to any address. The Mason & Hamlin Grand and Upright Pianos are constructed on an Improved Method of Stringing, invented and exclusively used by Mason & Hamlin, by which remarkable purity of tone and great durability are secured, and phenomenal capacity to stand in tune. The Mason & Hamlin SCREW-STRINGER was patented in July, 1883, and is a veritable triumph for American ingenuity, being pronounced by experts "the greatest improvement of the century" in pianos. American Pianos and Organs are superior to all others. Mason & Hamlin Organs have long been the Standard the world over. The Mason & Hamlin Piano is fast becoming as famous as the Mason & Hamlin Organ, and illustrates that HIGHEST STANDARD OF EXCELLENCE which has always characterized the latter won for it Highest Honors at all great World's Exhibitions since Paris, 1867. Illustrated catalogues free.

ORGANS

PIANOS

Without under-estimating the improvements effected by others in pianos, the Mason & Hamlin STRINGER is claimed to be the greatest improvement of them all, and without it the highest attainable excellence is simply impossible.

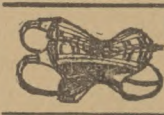
MASON & HAMLIN ORGAN AND PIANO CO.
BOSTON. NEW YORK. CHICAGO.

LITTLE GEM FOLDING BAG.

The above cut represents a Folding Bag, so small when done up that it may be concealed in the hand or carried in the pocket, and strong enough to carry fifty pounds weight. Price, 50c. $3.50 per doz. Agents Wanted.

THE WORLD'S SPECIALTY CO.
Manufacturers of Novelties and Patented Articles.
ROOM 504 78 DEARBORN ST., CHICAGO

"DELSARTE" Corset Waists and Braces are the best selling goods made. Sold by Agents only. Exclusive territory. Agents Wanted. DELSARTE CORSET CO., 142 W. 23d St., New York. Also 111 State Street, Chicago, Ill.



LADIES without business experience are making immense sales of Mme. McCABE'S CORSETS AND WAISTS. Send for agents' terms St. Louis Corset Co., St. Louis, Mo.

BABY CARRIAGES

We manufacture to sell direct to private parties at factory prices, and deliver free of charge to all points in United States. Our new Catalogue free. Address
C. T. WALKER & CO., 199 E. North Ave., Chicago, Ill.

MY WIFE SAYS SHE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT FOR THE MONEY. $12 Buys a $65.00 Improved Oxford Singer Sewing Machine; perfect working reliable, finely finished, adapted to light and heavy work, with a complete set of the latest improved attachments free. Each machine guaranteed for 5 years. Buy direct from our factory, and save dealers and agents profit. Send for FREE CATALOGUE.
OXFORD MFG. COMPANY, DEPT 20, CHICAGO, ILL.

$525 Agent's profits per month. Will prove it or pay forfeit. New articles just out. A $1.50 sample and terms free. Try us. Chidester & Son, 28 Bond-st, N.Y.

LADIES Send to the Stevens' Dish Washing Machine Co., Cleveland, for descriptive circulars of this wonderful invention. No dish or wiping cloth used; truly a great blessing to the household. Agents wanted.

LADY Agents make big wages every day With our Ladies' and Children's Specialties. Over 100 different articles. Indispensable. Catalogue Free. G. L. ERWIN & CO., Chicago, Ill.

LADIES Send only five cents and receive a Large, Elegant Fashion Catalogue and how to secure 50c. worth of dress patterns, FREE. Add. Young Lady's Bazar. 230 La Salle St. Chicago.

LADY wanted, on salary, to sell Roses, Shrubs, &c Brown Bros. Nurym'n, Rochester, N.Y. & Chicago

HOUSEHOLD NECESSITY. Agents make big profits. Catalogue (A) and particulars free. Cline Mfg. Co., 67 W. Washington St., Chicago.

LADY AGENTS CLEAR $10 PER DAY selling my garments for ladies & children Mrs. L. E. SINGLETON, Box 665, Chicago, Ill.

LADY Agents $5 a day sure; new rubber undergarment. Mrs. N. B. LITTLE, Chicago, Ill.

"Why stand ye all the day idle?"

10 DOLLARS PER DAY

is not easily made in these times, but it can be made working for us in any locality. We have agents that have made more than $25 per day, the whole secret is we have something that every housekeeper wants and will buy at sight without any urging. If agents prefer will pay a straight salary of $75 per month and expenses. Full particulars sent free to all points where we have not already secured an agent. Exclusive territory given. Can refer to any express company in Boston as to our integrity. Address, (in full,)

STANDARD SILVERWARE CO.,

DON'T WEAR STIFF CORSETS.

Thomas' Good Health Corset Waists BY MAIL. Ladies $1.50 Misses 1.25 Children. 60

Best for Economy, Health and Beauty. Buttoned or to clasp in front. Long or short waist. Material the very best.

Thousands mailed in the last year, with entire satisfaction to Patrons. Money cheerfully refunded if not satisfactory.

Agents wanted everywhere.

H. A. Thomas & Co., Mant'f's 465 W. Van Buren St. Chicago.

MISS BEACH'S Curling Fluid

Keeps the hair in curl for days Innocent as cologne. A toilet necessity. Not sent on trial.

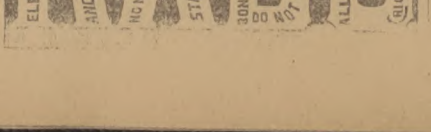
30,000 Ladies have Endorsed It

At druggists or prepaid 50c. LADY AGENTS wanted. DENISON CHEMICAL CO., 56 (H) LaSalle St., Chicago.

ESPEY'S FRAGRANT CREAM.

Cures Chapped Hands, Face, Lips, or any irritation of the skin. Is a scientific food and tonic for the skin and complexion. Prevents tendency to wrinkles or ageing of the skin. Keeps the face and hands soft, smooth and plump. CELIA CONKLIN'S CURLING CREAM warranted to hold the Hair in Curl, Bangs and Frizzes. Is absolutely harmless. Both preparations for sale by dealers everywhere. Inclose 2-cent stamp for free Card Case to P. B KEYS, 405 State St., Chicago, Ill.

FOR MANY LADIES THE



Our Children.

TOTTY'S TREE TALK.

[An Arbor-day Rhyme.]

BY M. B. B.

Tree, what makes you grow so high?
Are you climbing to the sky?

Do you try to touch a star,
When you throw your arms so far?

Do they freeze when they are bare,
Swinging in the frosty air?

Would you like to have some sleeves,
Made of pretty summer leaves?—

Leaves to hide a cunning nest
That might in your branches rest?

Do you fear the woodman's blow,
Lest with axe he lay you low?

Tree! you've answered not a word,
Though I'm sure you must have heard!

I was thinking—had you spoke—
You might be "The Talking Oak."

Xenia, Ohio.

GRANDMA'S STORY.

BY IDA PRESTON.

We all love to look at pretty pictures, and to me a home scene always possesses charms far above all others; but it must have a "Grandma" in it. So the picture which I have for "Our Children" has a real "Grandma" sitting in an arm-chair.

On Fifth Avenue in the city of —— stands a very elegant stone residence. It is a cold, rainy evening without, but within all is sunshine—for love dwells there. The walls are beautifully frescoed, the wainscoting, with its deep cut oak panels, glistens in the gaslight, the coal in the well-kept grate throws a warm glow over the room, and a huge cat reposes on the rug.

The center-table has been drawn nearer the fire; and at its side in the most luxurious of easy chairs, sits that blessed grandma. The father who has laid aside the busy cares of office life for the day and donned dressing gown and slippers, occupies the other side while he reads aloud; and the beautiful young mother sits in a low willow rocker near, holding precious baby Ben in her arms. Soon baby's dear little eyes close in sleep, and his curly head is nestled on a thin, soft pillow in the crib.

Papa lays away the paper, for he thinks papas ought not to read newspapers all the evening; mamma strikes a little silver bell; a pat, pat, patter is heard on the stairway; the sliding door is rolled back, and three bright, happy, rosy-cheeked children enter.

Tom runs to papa who catches him, gives him a half dozen high jumps in the air, and a ride on his foot; Alice and Sadie draw their little chairs up in the circle, and nurse sits beside them.

A hush falls on all as papa reads from God's holy Book, and then each little head is bowed in prayer.

In this systematic home the children are governed by rule, and so only a short half hour will elapse before the nursery claims them.

Grandma takes off her spectacles, wipes them on her silk handkerchief and puts them away. Oh, what a sweet grandma she is! Her hair is streaked with gray, her face calm and happy, and although many a loved one has been taken away, God's love has comforted and helped her to keep bright and cheerful for those whom He has left. She is the dear center of attraction in this loving home. If Tom is hurt, grandma is the one who cares for him, and if Alice or Sadie put an unsightly rent in their new dresses, her willing fingers are the ones which darn it so nicely that they can scarcely find where it was. So to-night they draw around her and beg for a "story."

"Grandma," says Alice, "tell us a real story."

"Well, I will tell you one to-night about a little girl I knew, and when I finish you all may guess who it is," smilingly answers grandma.

"Please," said six year-old Sadie, "begin 'once upon a time.' All your nicest stories begin that way, and it always sounds more like a story, you know."

Papa and mamma laugh, and Sadie settles back in her little arm-chair, looking very demure, feeling that she has helped grandma a great deal.

"Well, 'once upon a time,' " commenced the dear old lady, "there was a family, consisting of father, mother and three little daughters, living in a large city——"

"And one of them got stole by the gypsies, didn't they, grandma?" put in impatient little Sadie.

"Come here, Sadie," said papa, "and sit on my lap. Now, whenever you interrupt grandma, I will toss Alice and Tom a sizable cream drop and give little Sadie none."

"And," continued grandma, "when the third daughter, whom I will call Topsy, was a wee baby, the mamma came into possession of a large plantation in an adjacent county on which was situated the old homestead. This homestead had descended from one generation to another, and of course was built very many years ago.

"The irregular, pointed roof, with its curious little dormer windows; the high mantel pieces; the paneled wainscoting and deep cut cornices looked very quaint compared with the stylish city house."

"That old house is like our new one," again broke in Sadie, and papa tossed the cream drops saying, "One."

"Yes," commenced grandma again, "those old styles have come back, Sadie, and I am glad they have for I like them. But to continue: The old house had been occupied by tenants and was sadly in need of repair, so a great deal had to be done to make it habitable. After everything had been done to make it ready for the city family they went there to live. They were met by Miss Nancy, the housekeeper, and duly shown about the beautiful old place. It was while they were thus engaged that something very funny happened to little Miss Pry, the second daughter. She was only four years old and very apt to get into mischief. Slipping away from her nurse she walked into the fowl-yard through the open gate. Never having seen little biddies before, she was delighted and seized one in her little chubby hands. This made the mother hen very angry, who flew at Miss Pry and snapped at her ear and lip. How the little girl screamed, and what a fright poor mamma had!"

(Concluded next week.)

FRUIT AT THE ELEVENTH HOUR.

A ragged school teacher was telling, in a street of Philadelphia, that he was afraid he would have to discontinue the school, as he had seen no fruit whatsoever of his labors. At the moment a little ragged boy came up and asked him if he would come and see his brother who was very ill. He said he would come next day; but the boy said his brother was very ill indeed, so he went with him down into one of the lowest streets of the city. On entering the room he was struck with the supreme misery of it. The father and mother were both drunk, and the sufferer lay on a mere heap of rags in a corner. Going up to him the teacher said, "My poor boy, what can I do for you? Shall I get you a doctor?" "Oh no, Cap," said the boy. "Shall I find you a nurse, and have you removed to a nice bed?" "Oh no, Cap, not that; but tell me, tell me, did you say that Jesus died for everybody?" "Yes, I did." "And that He will receive any one who comes to Him?" "Yes, indeed, I did, dear boy." "Well, Cap, I know that He has received me," and after shedding a few tears the boy dropped back on the bundle of rags—dead.—Selected.

OUTDONE BY A BOY.

A lad in Boston, rather small for his years, works in an office as errand boy for four gentlemen who do business there. One day the gentlemen were chaffing him a little about being so small, and said to him: "You never will amount to much; you never can do much business; you are too small." "Well," said he, "small as I am, I can do something which none of you four men can do." "Ah, what is that?" they asked. "I don't know as I ought to tell you," he replied. But they were anxious to know, and urged him to tell them what he could do that none of them were able to do. "I can keep from swearing," said the little fellow. There were some blushes on four manly faces, and there seemed to be very little anxiety for further information on the point.—Selected.

"HULLO!" said the chestnut to the robin; "what are you?" "I'm a little bird," said the robin; "what are you?" "I'm a little burred, too," said the chestnut.—Harper's Young People.

MY POWERS.

I have two hands, a right and left,
And fingers, ten in number;
Out of the palms' end they are cleft,
With naught their use to cumber.

Two eyes to see, two ears to hear
All sights and sounds, whatever;
A tongue to speak good words of cheer,
But lies and bad words never.

A heart and brain to feel and judge,
Two feet, which none may fetter;
These powers I'll use without a grudge,
To make the world grow better.

—Advance.

What Shall We Call It?

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:—Every mail brings me your welcome and interesting letters which are opened and read with such pleasure. And this pleasure is always increased when I see the words, "I am a temperance boy" (or girl), "I mean to do all I can for temperance." Such sentences are glowing ones and if every boy and girl in the land felt and acted them out, the dawn of the brighter, better days would be here.

The words you say and write, the thoughts you think, the things you do are a part of you. You reach out and influence other boys and girls through your words and actions. You can help them to be better, or you can help them to be worse than they are. But in some way surely, you are helping somebody else. Shall it not be always for the better?

To be a temperance boy or girl means to be a helper of somebody else; and when you say, "I mean to do all I can for temperance" or "I am a temperance boy (or girl) and am going to be a temperance man" (or woman) you are putting away all selfish thoughts and aims, and are devoting yourselves to helping others, you are going to be your "brother's keeper." Let us all think real hard about this and say, "This is true, and I am going to always help some one to do right, by doing right myself."

In our "What shall we call it?" column next week, we will publish the long list of names that have been sent in answer to the question. Our choice will be made soon after, and, before long, we will have the pleasure of a name all our own, and feel "right at home" on our own page.

Affectionately yours,
AUNT JANE.

DOES NOT WANT THE BOYS TO GET AHEAD.

I saw Ralph M. H.'s letter in THE UNION SIGNAL and thought I would not let the boys get ahead of us girls, so I thought I would write. I think the name he suggested for our corner a very appropriate one. I look very eagerly for the coming of THE UNION SIGNAL each week; I enjoy reading it so much! I go to school and I am progressing very rapidly in my studies. This is my first attempt to write to any paper. I guess I had better close, as I expect there are other girls who do not want the boys to get ahead of them. I remain (wishing success to our headquarters),

MAGGIE H. KING.

Cuero, Texas.

Thank you, Maggie.

MISSED THE PUZZLES.

I am very much interested in puzzles and missed them very much when you stopped having them in THE SIGNAL. I hope my answers are correct. Yours truly,

KATHRYN.

Lumberton, N. J.

I am glad, Kathryn, that you enjoy the puzzles, and that so many others have written the same. Your answers are correct.

SOFT-SHELLED NUTS.

16.

NUMERICAL ENIGMA.

A 3, 5, 9, 4, 8,
An evil of recent date
Is that which I'll relate.

My whole you should not smoke,
All kinds and sorts of folk,
Should shun of what I've spoke.

If you wish for stuff to drink,
To the rumshop never sink;
Of my 7, 6, 4 please to think.

The best of drinks to-day,
The best for ever and aye,
Is 2, 1, 9, water, I say.

SOLON.

17.

PROGRESSION.

(Example: tame to tart in two moves, changing one letter at each move. Tame, tare, tart.)

Change cold to heat in five moves.

CAROLINE L. HAWKE.

18.

PROHIBITION PI.

1. Gkin llooach utms og.
2. Soosaln smtu og.

WATT.

Answers to these puzzles given in three weeks. Send all replies and original puzzles to Puzzle Editor, UNION SIGNAL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Correct answers: Fred C. DePuy; Caroline L. Hawke; Luella Coale; Hugh M. Jones.

ANSWERS TO PUZZLES PUBLISHED FEBRUARY 25.

7. Lady Henry Somerset.

8.
LOVE
OPAL
VANS
ELSE

9. Meat, eat; drink, rink; bread, read; milk, ilk; orange, range; cream, ream.

Van Houten's Cocoa, pure, soluble, economical.

Special Offer to Ladies.—If you secure a Life Insurance policy in the American Temperance Life Insurance Association before January 1st, you pay no membership fee. Write at once for particulars. Geo. E. Godward, Sec'y, 187 Broadway, N. Y. City.

Wanted.

Car builders, Car repairers, laborers to handle lumber, and other laborers that have been accustomed to work every working day. THE HARVEY LAND ASSOCIATION, 819 The Rookery, Chicago, Ill.

Hot Springs, Arkansas.

Until further notice a double daily line of sleepers will run between St. Louis and Hot Springs, in connection with Wabash morning and evening trains out of Chicago. For a quick, comfortable trip to Hot Springs, take the Wabash. Berths in our compartment sleepers reserved in advance.

Refreshing Retreats.

Summer days are fast approaching, and now is the time that excursionists, pleasure-seekers and sportsmen should figure out a route for their summer vacation. In doing so, the delightfully cool summer and fishing resorts located along the Wisconsin Central Lines come vividly to view, among which are Fox Lake, Ill., Lake Villa, Ill., Mukwonago, Waukesha, Cedar Lake, Neenah, Waupaca, Fifield, Butternut and Ashland, Wis. Wisconsin has within the last five years become the center of attraction for more pleasure seekers, hunters and fishermen than any other state in the union, and each visit increases the desire to again see the charming landscapes, breathe the balsam fragrance that is a part of the invigorating atmosphere, wander through the colonnades of stately pines, and hook the speckled beauties with a hand-made fly.

For pamphlets containing valuable information, etc., apply to GEO. K. THOMPSON, C. P. & T. A. Wis. Cen. Lines, Chicago, Ill., or JAS. C. POND, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, Chicago, Ill.

EVERY SUBSCRIBER

OF

THE UNION SIGNAL

IS ENTITLED

to a copy of our new, enlarged and illustrated book, "Successful Home Dyeing," the best and most practical book ever published.

Explicit directions are given for coloring over all kinds and colors of goods, with the 45 different Diamond Dyes, giving over 100 named colors and 300 shades, warranted fast, to light and washing.

A Handsome Birthday Card for the baby sent to any mother giving baby's name.

Every person who wants to know how to make over old garments, to color yarn, carpet, rugs, feathers, or anything that can be colored, needs this book. Send at once.

WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Burlington, Vt.

ASTHMA—CURED DR. TAFT'S ASTHMALENE never fails; send us your address, we will mail trial BOTTLE FREE
THE DR. TAFT BROS. M. CO., ROCHESTER, N.Y.

☞ See Name "EVER READY" on back of each DRESS STAY you buy. Take none but them.
YPSILANTI DRESS STAY MFG. CO., Ypsilanti, Michigan.

GOOD SENSE CORSET WAISTS have tape-fastened buttons—won't pull off; cord-edge button holes—won't wear out, ring buckle at hip—secures hose supporter.

RUPTURE A Positive Radical cure at Home. (Sealed) Book giving full particulars sent free. Write Dr. W. S. Rice, Box U Smithville, Jeff. Co., N. Y.

PILES CURED FREE. New, Painless, Certain. Gives instant relief and lasting cure—never returns. To prove it we will send a trial package FREE, to any address. PYRAMID DRUG COMPANY, Box 35, ALBION, MICHIGAN.

LINCOLN TEA. Guaranteed to cure Constipation, Liver and Kidney trouble. Blood and Complexion Purifier. Send for sample. Sold by all Druggists.
McCLURE DRUG CO., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

VOSE & SONS PIANOS
EXCEL IN BEAUTY, TONE AND TOUCH.

COE & CONVERSE, Fort Atkinson, Wis.
Offer a large stock of best Fruit and Ornamental Trees, Vines and Plants adapted to the cold Northwest. Also choice Seed Potatoes. Send for descriptive priced Catalogue. Established 1879.

ASTHMA
WORST CASES CURED TO STAY CURED IF UNCOMPLICATED BY ORGANIC DISEASE. Incurable cases declined.
WE WANT NAME OF EVERY ASTHMATIC. Examination free by mail.
P. HAROLD HAYES, M.D.
BUFFALO, N. Y.

Publisher's Notes.

The Sunday-school Temperance Lesson for May 22 is in hand and is a very attractive one. Written by Mrs. Helen G. Rice and Mary Lowe Dickinson, and beautifully illustrated, it will be in great demand. Send in your orders early so that they may be promptly filled. The work so well begun in January must be continued if we desire to reap a harvest such as we should expect. The following liberal terms are offered: 100, 50 cts.; 500, $2; 1,000, $3.50; 2,000, $6; 5,000, $12. Add postage at the rate of 12c. per 100. The Young Crusader and the Lesson will be sent on the following terms: 100, $1; 500, $4.75; 1.000, $9; 2,000, $15; 5.000, $35; 8,000, $48, postpaid. Let us get an entering wedge on this occasion which will help in the future. Address all orders to

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION,
161 LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

Pointed

Glimpses of Fifty Years;
Childhood, Its Care and Culture;
Selling fast;
Agents Making Money;
Outfit Free of Cost;
We Loan it
To Trustworthy
Ladies and Gentlemen.
Your Business.
Send for Terms and Details of "New Plan."
SUBS'N BOOK DEP'T W. T. P. A.,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Helps for Workers.

The one publication we can name which is the greatest, "all-around" help we have to recommend is

The School of Methods Manual, which tells how to begin and how to prosecute the work of every department. The executive committee of one state has said it is the one thing needed by all new unions to give them a start, and by all old unions to help them to stronger and better work. Every W. C. T. U. should have a copy. Price 25 cents; 10 copies for $1.

Golden Keys, a manual for kindergarten work. It is helpful alike to parent and teacher even when kindergarten work in the strict sense is not desired. Price 25 cents per copy.

Our Toiling Children depicts the evil that is fast coming to immature humanity, especially in large cities. It is a cry for help. Should be generally circulated. Price 10 cents per copy; per 100, $8.

An Instructive Game.

The "BOOK OF BOOKS" will be found very helpful in every home as under the guise of amusement the order of arrangement of the books in the Bible is readily memorized. It is planned on the order of "authors,"—one card for each book in the Bible. Eminent ministers all over the land commend it and heartily endorse the idea of thus inducing to better and more thorough knowledge of the framework of the Scriptures. The following testimonials are given that you may see for yourselves what they say.

"The exercise has already attained its well-deserved popularity, and we are glad to add our word of approval. Teachers and parents will do well to buy it for the children in their charge."—Rev. F. E. Clark, Editor Golden Rule.

"It is an ingenious and interesting Scriptural exercise."—Rev. P. S. Henson, Chicago.

"It will be a help in rendering Sunday enjoyable by the children."—The Congregationalist, Boston.

We could add dozens of other testimonials but it is not necessary—the game is so cheap that you will doubtless not need much more urging to send for it. The price has been reduced to 30 cents and when six or more are ordered at one time a reduction of 5 cents will be allowed, making the net price for six $1.50. We have tried the game and assure you it is both enjoyable and instructive.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N.
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE ROLLERS
Beware of Imitations.
NOTICE AUTOGRAPH OF Stewart Hartshorn ON LABEL AND GET THE GENUINE HARTSHORN

A Treasure and a Wonder in the Horticultural World!

Splendid! Delicious! Excellent! are the exclamations from those who have fruited the Green Mountain, the earliest and best of all grapes. Ripens in August, yet of most delicate texture and exquisite flavor. Be not misled into buying this grape under other names. Every genuine vine is sealed with our trade mark seal as above. Send for circular giving full information. Price of 2 or 3 year vine by mail, $1.00 each. Address
STEPHEN HOYT SONS, New Canaan, Ct.

SYLPH CYCLES RUN EASY
Hollow Tires.

Perfection of cycle manufacture, no need now to ride springless cycles or depend on tires alone for comfort. SYLPH SPRING FRAME destroys vibrat'n. Light, simple, strong. Cata. free
Rouse-Duryea Cy. Co.
77 G St., Peoria, Ill. Agts. Wanted

BABY CARRIAGES

Shipped anywhere to any one at WHOLESALE PRICES,
Latest Styles. A $5.50 carriage for $2.95
A $12.50 " " $6.95
A $18.50 " " $9.75
Send for 40-page illustrated catalogue free.
CASH BUYERS' UNION, 362 Dearborn St., B 27 Chicago, Ill.

PURE GUM RUBBER GOODS
Of Every Description; also,
Mackintosh Clothing;
also, Japanese Tissue,
For Mending Without Needle or Thread,
ELASTIC TIP CO.,
Headquarters 152-154 Lake St., Chicago

BAKER'S COCOA
IS ABSOLUTELY PURE. Unlike the Dutch Process, no Alkalies or Dyes used

DRUNKENNESS cured by using BOSTON DRUG. Absolute secrecy guaranteed or money refunded. Price $1. All druggists, or by mail, W. R. BROWN & CO., 105 Chauncey St., Boston.

A LADY WANTED
in each locality to manage Toilet Parlor at home; write, obtain names, send circulars. $5 to $15 weekly. Our Toilet Art Book Free. Send stamp. SYLVAN TOILET CO., Port Huron, Mich.

103 E. ADAMS ST. BORSCH-OPTICIAN CONSULT US ABOUT YOUR EYESIGHT SATISFACTION GAURANTEED

READ THIS TWICE

We desire to call your attention to THE SAFEST INVESTMENT you can now make. The opportunity will not be long offered, as the small amount now unsold will soon be taken We refer to the stock of the

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association

It has an established business. Capital stock, $125,000.

ABSOLUTELY NON-ASSESSABLE
DIVIDENDS PAID ANNUALLY

Price per share $25.
Address all inquiries to

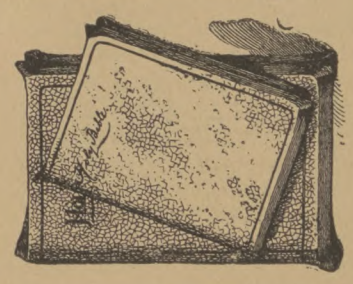
WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION,
161 LA SALLE STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

OUR MARCH OFFER

READ AND ACT

DO YOU WANT A BIBLE?

For yourself or any member of your family, for a friend or a member of your Sunday-school class? Then here is a SPLENDID OPPORTUNITY to secure one. Read carefully and see.



By special arrangements with a book dealer we are able to supply for a short time, two fine Bibles on excellent terms, and have decided to offer them under the following conditions to our subscribers:

1.—A Teacher's Bible.

Ruby, with reference maps, concordance, and all helps usually found in a Teacher's Bible, with Oxford circuit binding and gilt edges, 11x7¼ inches from edge of flaps, reduced retail price, $1.75. We will send this Bible and THE UNION SIGNAL one year for $2.25.

2.—A Bagster Bible.

Minion, reference maps, and all helps usually found in a Bagster Bible except concordance, with Oxford circuit binding and gilt edges, 9x13 from edge of flaps; reduced retail price, $2.75. We will send this Bible and THE UNION SIGNAL, one year for $3.25.

3.—How to Mark Your Bible.

We will send with either of the above Bibles and THE UNION SIGNAL one year, "How to Mark Your Bible," by Mrs. S. Menzies, with introduction by D. L. Moody, cloth, price 75 cents, for 50 cents additional.

RECAPITULATION.

Offer 1. THE UNION SIGNAL one year, and Teacher's Bible, $2.25.
Offer 2. THE UNION SIGNAL one year, Teacher's Bible, and "How to Mark Your Bible," $2.75.
Offer 3. THE UNION SIGNAL, one year, Bagster Bible, $3.25.
Offer 4. THE UNION SIGNAL one year, Bagster Bible, and "How to Mark Your Bible," $3.75.

Tell your friends what a splendid chance they can take advantage of, or get them to subscribe and add the amount necessary to secure these valuable books for yourself.

We said the time was limited. To take advantage of this your order must reach us by April 1. Address

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association,
161 LA SALLE STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

THE UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION — FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Vol. XVIII.—No. 12.] CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, March 24, 1892. [Price $1.00 per Year in Advance.

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

Queen Victoria left Windsor Castle, March 19, for a visit to the south of France.

Yale College has voted to admit women to its post-graduate courses on the same terms as men.

The platform of the Republican state convention in Iowa makes no allusion to prohibitory law.

A dispatch from London speaks of Dr. Arthur K. Pierson as the probable successor of Spurgeon in the Metropolitan Tabernacle.

The Austrian government has agreed to appoint a commission of women to promote the display of women's work at the World's Fair.

The "Indiana," the steamer loaded with flour and provisions for the Russian famine sufferers, was received with great enthusiasm at Libau.

The place of meeting of the Prohibition National Convention has been changed from St. Louis to Cincinnati, but the date remains the same, June 29-30.

Senator Hill has returned to New York from his recent trip through the South, impressed with the conviction that he will be the next President of the United States.

The seventeenth anniversary of the Chicago Central W. C. T. U. was observed with unusually interesting exercises on March 17. This union is one of the oldest in the country, having been organized before the state and National unions existed.

The State Prohibition Convention of Michigan met in Grand Rapids, March 17 and 18. Under the lead of Professor Dickie the convention declined union with the People's Party. Among the delegates appointed to the National Prohibition convention at Cincinnati in June are Mrs. Mary T. Lathrap and Prof. Rena Michaels.

THE dates for the annual convention of the British Women's Temperance Association have been fixed for May 3, 4, 5 and 6.

EXCELLENT photographs of our lamented co-laborer, Miss Julia A. Ames, are now ready for sale, having been skillfully reproduced by an Evanston artist from the English negative. They are of cabinet size, and cost but twenty-five cents each. This special announcement is made for the accommodation of the large circle of friends and admirers of this noble young woman, who have requested the privilege of purchasing a photograph.

THE UNION SIGNAL has always endeavored to interest its faithful readers among the little folks by giving them a whole page to themselves, and introducing into it some special feature. Just now a series of Aunt Jane's letters and puzzles is attracting a ready sympathy and keen appreciation from our little friends who have already sent us more than one hundred grateful thanks and appropriate names for the new column. Hereafter the children will find their special department on page 14.

THE Young Crusader is rapidly growing in popularity, and its subscription list was increased nearly 6,000 during last month. A very interesting Sunday-school temperance lesson will form the supplement to the May number It will be beautifully illustrated. The design will be to emphasize the manliness of godliness. Mrs. Mary Lowe Dickinson will assist Mrs. Helen G. Rice in its preparation. Orders for this are already being received, and superintendents of Sunday-school and juvenile work should devote themselves to securing its general use. The illustration helps wonderfully. Where Sunday-school officers fail to secure it, the W. C. T. U. cannot do better work than will result from supplying it without cost.

THE testimonials published in this issue of THE UNION SIGNAL respecting Sunday closing at the Columbian Exposition are but a small part of those in hand, which shall be given wings another week. It is a knotty question, but should find an answer in the presentation and exposition of the American Sabbath as an institution of the land. The saloon clamors for the closing as otherwise it will be despoiled of a large part of its prey. It is not the first time the church and the saloon have "reasoned together," this time, fortunately, toward antagonistic ends.

JOSEPH RHODES BUCHANAN, of Boston, one of the most remarkable men of our time as a scientist, experimenter and original thinker, has views worthy of serious consideration. We hope our readers have given special attention to his recent article on woman suffrage in which he took exception to the present limitation upon masculine sovereignty in view of the fact that men are allowed to vote for none but men, whereas they ought to have the widest range of choice. The position is highly tenable and is most ingeniously maintained. See THE UNION SIGNAL of January 28.

THE annual leaflet this year has been prepared by Miss Esther Pugh, and is now ready. Send to her for it at Evanston, Ill., enclosing stamp. The first pages would make an excellent paragraph in the local press, for they in a condensed form set forth the history and methods of our white ribbon movement, while each of the superintendencies, as to its spirit and plan, is described in the little pamphlet, thus affording much information useful to any who may not have a fair idea of the breadth and meaning of our work. Every white-ribboner ought to circulate this leaflet as one of the best means of advancing the cause.

LADY HENRY SOMERSET and Miss Willard, accompanied by Miss Gordon, left Chicago March 16. Their first meeting was in Pittsburg, on Thursday, before an audience of Welsh miners. The strong, sturdy hearts of the dusty coal delvers were stirred as they listened to the vivid pen-pictures of the distinguished English speaker, who referred to the lonely firesides in the old homes of Wales, and the unflagging love that had followed them over the sea to the New World. Descriptions of the wrongs and ruin wrought by the drink traffic were pathetically and powerfully set forth, and, from the moist eyes of the "brawny" men, apparently met with hearty response. This meeting was the fruition of a promise made by Lady Henry Somerset before she came to America. The three ladies are now resting in the East, preparatory to their large meetings in Portland, Me., and Boston, Mass.

THE Municipal Order Committee of the World's Congress Auxiliary, under the woman's branch, has called a mass-meeting of the citizens of Chicago at Central Music Hall, for Sunday evening, March 27. Invitations were sent to forty-three clubs, without sex discrimination, and to the various chiefs and boards of the city government. Judge Graham will preside and Rev. Jenkin Lloyd Jones will make the opening address, followed by city officials and women of the Municipal Order League. This association has been permanently organized, Miss Ada Sweet being unanimously elected its president. The president's address at the organization of the League evidenced a thorough acquaintance with the laws of the city government; its dirt and weaknesses, its political spoilsmen and those who "farm out" offices, are already under the lenses of the League. The broom in the hands of the women has become an object of awe, and the world will do it reverence next year when a purified Chicago demonstrates to the nations that only a sexless city government can be a clean one.

ONCE more we urge special attention of white-ribboners everywhere to self-denial week, beginning Easter Sunday, April 17, to the 23d. Each white-ribboner is asked to deny herself something not necessary, that its cost may be sent to the local, state, National or World's W. C. T. U. treasury, as her conscience may decide.

AMONG the suggestions that the Boston Convention formally adopted are the following from the department of scientific temperance instruction: "We would respectfully ask all Christian ministers in this and other lands to pray for pupils and teachers of the public, and all schools in their prayers on every Sabbath morning in the sanctuary." The amazement is that this should ever be forgotten. As Christians, we know that the audiences gathered twice every weekday in the school-houses of this nation are receiving instructions that shall carry this cause of Christ and human brotherhood up into success or down into defeat. The future is being organized, preëmpted, captured in the public schools. THE UNION SIGNAL respectfully urges this request on all those good men and women who stand before the people in the house of God, asking them to remember the rising generation when they pray.

"LIFE is the gift of God and is divine." It cannot be trusted to unskilled hands when disease has laid hold of the body. Science is revealing new truths and these lead to new methods in the care of the sick. The professional and non-professional man must have his years of instruction before he is prepared to undertake the duties of his chosen work. The nurse whose duty it is to minister unto the sick and dying needs instruction and preparation for her work, for she in these later years has gained a place second only to that of the physician. The National Temperance Hospital has its Clara Barton Training School for nurses, and this year graduates a class of bright young ladies. An interesing program will be rendered at the graduating exercises for the nurses, which take place March 29 at the South Park M. E. Church, corner 33d street and South Park Avenue, Chicago. The public is cordially invited.

REV. DR. CHARLES H. PARKHURST, pastor of the Madison Square Presbyterian Church, New York City, sets forth truths so valuable that we place them before our readers. He says: "It is a great fact that remains untouched after all palliating words have been spoken, that every effort which is made to improve character in New York City, every effort to make men respectable, honest, temperate and sexually clean, is a direct blow between the eyes of the mayor and his whole gang of subordinates in this sense, that while we fight iniquity, they shield and patronize it; while we try to convert criminals, they manufacture criminals, and they have one hundred dollars invested in manufacturing machinery, to our one dollar invested in converting machinery, and there is no scheme in this direction too colossal for their ambition to plan and push. There is now hardly the shadow of a doubt that the court and some of its subordinates at any rate, stand in with the gamblers and becomes the criminals' protectors and guardian angels. To convict a man of keeping a gambling hell in New York, you have got to do it in spite of the authorities, and not by their aid. In short, the municipal life of our city is fairly rotten. Every step we take looking to its moral betterment, has to be taken directly in the teeth of the damnable pack of administrative bloodhounds that are fattening themselves on the ethical flesh and blood of our citizens." This is a stalwart confession of the failure of the government of the largest city on the continent under the administration of man. Could the witches' broth that they have made be worse with the women's ballots dropped in as one ingredient more? Might not those ballots prove the healing branch in the waters of Marah?

Contributed.

ISABEL SOMERSET.

BY E. M. OLMSTED.

Dear Lady Somerset, thy name we speak
And claim thee heart-guest with as fond a tone,
As if, indeed, thou wert our very own,
With that pure English rose upon thy cheek.
Daughter of dukes and mother of an earl,
Thy noble lineage all understood,
We see upon thy brow but one fair pearl,
The peerless gift of Heaven,—thy womanhood.
By virtue of this talisman divine,
The weary, tempted, fallen ones of earth
Become thy kindred in that wondrous birth,
Where God the Spirit sets His seal and sign.
As came our Saviour, not to rich and great,
So thou to lowly lives art wholly consecrate.

Le Roy, N. Y.

*BLESSED ARE THEY WHO WORK FOR GOD.

BY EMILY HUNTINGTON MILLER.

O Friend and Master! at whose feet
Her costly offering Mary poured;
Those lips, with words divinely sweet,
Hushed the low murmur at the board.

The precious ointment shed for thee,
Filled all the room with odors rare;
Type of the love that needs must be
Free as the sunshine and the air.

Still, in thy night of sorrow set,
Shines Mary's deed with purest flame;
And the sweet fragrance lingers yet
Like breath of flowers about her name.

And still, as in the days of old,
Love at thy feet her treasure lays
And brings her silver and her gold
Embalmed in precious prayer and praise.

Not for thy burial, strange and sad,
Her hands to-day anointing bring,
But for that morning, calm and glad,
When angel voices hailed thee King,

Blessed are they whose gifts prepare
The ways by which thy feet may go;
And send the breath of heavenly air
Through the foul murk of sin and woe.

They pass from sight, yet living still,
In blessed deeds that cannot die,
They swell the hosts who do thy will
Here on the earth, as they on high.

*This hymn was sung on Founder's Day, March 4, 1892, at Garrett Biblical Institute, Evanston, Ill., where Lady Henry Somerset and Miss Frances Willard spoke by invitation. Mrs. Eliza Garrett was the author of this noble work.

RECOLLECTIONS OF NOTED MEN AND WOMEN.
VI.

BY THE DUCHESS OF BEDFORD.

Elizabeth Fry in a New Aspect.

[Before leaving Chicago I had the great pleasure of visiting one of its most interesting institutions, the Woman's Temperance Hospital. Miss Willard and I were introduced by Dr. Ousley to a bright band of young nurses, thirteen of whom were to take their diplomas the following week. The sight of their sweet, fresh faces brought vividly to my mind the immense progress that this age has made in the whole system and spirit of hospital work. An institution which demonstrates that disease can be successfully treated without alcohol is a very tangible outcome of the reform which has so deeply influenced every branch of philanthropy. It has occurred to me that a short article written by my sister, the Duchess of Bedford, might, therefore, be of interest. Mrs. Fry's exertions on behalf of reform among sick nurses are hardly realized and it will perhaps be a pleasure to many to know how wide-reaching were the benefits conferred upon humanity by that noble life.—ISABEL SOMERSET.]

Fifty years ago the noble woman whose name is universally honored, Elizabeth Fry, set the example which has since been followed through the length and breadth of England, by gathering together a few devoted women who were willing to give up their lives to nursing the sick and poor.

When I attended a committee at the hospital founded by Elizabeth Fry, the other day, I was sitting opposite to her picture, and I thought how commonly it happens that when a name is a household name, and a word is constantly repeated in our hearing, it loses its force through sheer familiarity. It is very natural that it should be so, but we miss a great deal by taking for granted that we know those things with which we are well acquainted by name.

I can illustrate this out of my own experience. I lived for many years in a house where there was a beautiful gallery of portraits. I had occasion to pass through this gallery three or four times a day, and I grew very familiar with the sight of the pictures, although I could not have given you any real or accurate information about them or the persons they represented.

At last I woke up to the fact that this was very foolish and very ignorant, and I set to work to learn all I could about them, and now when I pass them the spirit of some brave man or noble woman seems to speak through the quiet eyes and silent lips, and I feel the uplifting sense of fellowship and strength which comes with the knowledge of the best side of human nature. I have referred to the fact that we are liable to be ignorant of the things that touch us most nearly, because, as I sat looking at the picture of that great foundress, I wondered whether her memory was a living influence in that house, and I thought that a few words regarding her life and character might interest many who are to-day engaged in similar work.

It is just one hundred and ten years since Elizabeth Fry was born. These years have seen the wonderful changes that have passed over the England of her day and transformed it into the England of our own time. It is difficult to exaggerate the extent and importance of those changes. It would be impossible to enumerate them here. In picturing to ourselves England in the year 1780 (to speak only of the lesser things), we must discharge from our minds the idea of railways, telegrams, penny post letters, steamers, electric lights, telephones, and countless other things which seem to us to form part of the necessaries of life.

It was in the quiet, steady-going, old-fashioned county of Norfolk that Elizabeth Fry passed her early years. Her father's family (the Gurneys) was a very old one and they were deeply respected by their neighbors. Her mother died when Elizabeth, her "dove-like Betsy" as she fondly called her, was only twelve years old.

Elizabeth grew up into a singularly pretty, attractive, high-spirited young woman, and notwithstanding the fact that the Gurneys were Quakers, she contrived to have a considerable share of the enjoyment which the generality of healthy young creatures love, as she flitted round the country in a red riding-habit or tripped about in a favorite pair of scarlet shoes.

But under the pretty fair curls an active brain was at work, and a heart that was full to the brim of high aspiration could not be satisfied with a gay dress. She loved pleasure, but she early perceived that joy was a higher thing and was not to be found in mere pleasure seeking. She felt with profound sincerity that she could not serve two masters; and a very real struggle took place between her inclinations and her convictions. At this time a celebrated American preacher, William Savery, visited Norfolk; the Gurney family attended his meetings, and Elizabeth was deeply moved. She records in her diary that she had been much troubled with a dream in which she saw herself on the seashore, exposed to the fury of the waves, which dashing up against her, presently engulfed her. The same dream recurred once only after she had, as she expressed it, "found real faith." She was in the same place of peril and the waves stormed and swelled all around her, but they could not reach her, she was safe. She had planted her feet upon a rock, and from thenceforth God established her goings.

When only nineteen years old she began a child's class in a laundry, and taught the little, rough, ignorant creatures with the utmost earnestness to know and love her Saviour and theirs.

In the following year, 1800, she married Mr. Joseph Fry, a Quaker like herself, and went to reside in London. The first thirteen years of her married life were outwardly most uneventful, though we cannot doubt that she was being prepared within for the life-work which was ordered for her. During these years eight children were born to her, and she occupied herself incessantly with their training and education. But in 1813 an event occurred which was destined to change the whole current of her life. Four members of the Society of Friends had occasion to visit some criminals in Newgate prison. They were so much shocked by the state of the prison and by the sufferings and degraded state of the prisoners that they persuaded several women of the community, among whom was Elizabeth Fry, to visit it also. This visit took place in February, 1813. It is impossible to describe the hideous and disgusting state of things which prevailed in prison life at this period. Mrs. Fry mentions the fact that three hundred women and children were crowded into four rooms, without classification, and without employment, superintended night and day by two men. Spirits were freely drunk and the most horrible language prevailed; in short, the place was like an abode of evil spirits in human shape.

Four more years were destined to elapse before Mrs. Fry could put into systematic action any plan for the amelioration of this state of things. In 1817 she opened a school for the prisoners' children, and received permission to visit the condemned women. As time went on her influence wrought good in manifold ways. She obtained proper clothing for the prisoners, the sale of liquor was abolished, and public attention was by degrees drawn to the state of the prisons. A committee of the House of Commons was appointed to inquire into the subject, and Mrs. Fry gave evidence before it. The accuracy of her statements and the dignity and tenderness of her demeanor predisposed all who heard her to lend a willing ear to her representations.

It is difficult for us in these days to realize how wide a gulf separated different classes of men from each other at that time. A saying of Dr. Porteous, Bishop of London, was often quoted with approbation by Mrs. Fry. "Indifference," he said, "will cease to be the prevailing and oppressing sin." That it has been so is largely owing to the example of your foundress and of the noble band of like-minded men and women whom God raised up to awaken the national conscience to the weight of its responsibility in this and kindred matters. I cannot linger in any detail on the numerous developments of the love and energy of Elizabeth Fry. She formed three associations for the care of prisoners, instituted schools of discipline, visited the Continent in order to introduce reforms into the prison system abroad, initiated libraries for coast-guardsmen, and the system of district visiting, hitherto unknown, and last but not least, she founded, in 1840, an institution for Nursing Sisters, an order called into existence by the needs of everyday life. Her manifold occupations prevented her from herself training a band of nurses, but this work was carried forward by her sister-in-law, Mrs. Samuel Gurney, and the system then organized has remained, as far as I know, unaltered to the present time.

The many devoted nurses who are to-day tending our hospitals are thus, in a sense, every one of them her descendants, born in her brain, the offspring of her quick spirit and most loving heart. I congratulate them on their noble ancestry, as well as on their holy vocation! I often think how great and sacred that employment is which keeps a man or a woman near to human joys and sorrows, so that they do not come to them as strange and unfamiliar crises, but as the looked-for and recurring events of daily life. Some people manage to forget the great mysteries of sorrow and death, they stop their ears against all unpleasant or harrowing facts lest the current of their smooth existence should thereby be disturbed. That is a fatal state of things to which those who follow a sick nurse's walk in life are not likely to be exposed. But there is a danger, and a very real one, in becoming too familiar with the scenes of suffering, sorrow and death which they see around them. It is no doubt right and necessary that the nerves should become, to a certain extent, hardened in order to meet emergencies. But it is sad to see that long habit, as often happens, has effaced the sense of awe with which every human being should regard the time which precedes and follows the passing of the soul behind the veil. A passage in one of Mrs. Fry's diaries, written while she was engaged in nursing a beloved sister, runs as follows:

"Such seasons are to me of real conflict spiritually and naturally; spiritually to know what in the way of religious service may be required at my hand, and also close sympathy with those in trouble; naturally, from my acute sense of suffering . . . . I know few things that occasion me a deeper feeling of impotence and unworthiness than attending on the sick."

She deeply felt the pressure of human sorrow and suffering, notwithstanding her long acquaintance with misery in every form.

This tenderness of spirit is not a mere easy sentimental frame of mind which would only disable those who are engaged in a special ministry from performing its duties, it goes much deeper than that, and touches the springs of the whole being. Do we not see it in Him who sighed over the dumb, who touched even the leper with His hand, and would allow no clamor in the room of the dead girl? He felt the pain, even while He removed it. It is part of their beautiful and sacred work to soothe, to cheer, to relieve, but this work will be very imperfectly done if they are out of tune with those holier offices, which they need not step one bit out of their places to perform. Do we not know the power of the silent influences that are around us every day? Such a sweetening spirit should live within the nurse that the patient cannot fail to recognize in her one who is secretly consulting the Heavenly Physician about his soul, as well as the earthly physician about his body. The opportunities for the highest ministry in the nurse's life are endless.

They come into contact with hearts softened with sorrow and anxiety, when the noise of the world is hushed for a while, and the yearning for God is unchecked by the stir and bustle of daily life. The soil is prepared for the living seed to be dropped into it.

There are, no doubt, peculiar difficulties which beset the nurse herself, in the way of spiritual opportunity. She is not always able to attend the services of the church, she is obliged to forego many things that would be a strength to her spiritual life, meetings, Bible readings and the like. We all know the power which comes from Christian fellowship, from acts of devotion performed together, or from the stirring and uplifting words of those who know how to kindle afresh the smouldering embers of love and zeal. But a nurse must not depend on any of this. She goes out alone. She works alone, sometimes it may happen, in houses where God is not honored or His laws obeyed. How shall she stand? A post of duty which involves spiritual isolation is often a call to come up higher and live in a holier atmosphere than we have done hitherto. To use once more the words of Mrs. Fry: "Those who are thus drawn aside need a 'very, very deep baptism,' they need to know in their own experience the meaning of the words which perhaps they have often uttered with their lips—'The Lord will provide.'" He has a store for all our needs, we have only to draw upon it, believing that He is more willing to give than we are to receive, and that He knows what we want before we have even found the words in which to utter our desire.

No life has exemplified this truth more than that of Elizabeth Fry, for her, difficulties ceased to exist; she "could do all things through Christ." We know her life as we have read and pondered about it in the prison cells of Newgate, surrounded by the outcast, the criminal and the forlorn. We can think of her, however, in our homes in a new aspect, and feel that her motherly hand has smoothed the pillows of our sick beds, when her large-souled charity inspired her to establish training homes for sick nurses.

Her last earthly words breathed out after a long period of earthly trials, were the expression of her life, "Love, all love, my heart is filled with love to every one."

"DARKNESS AND DAYLIGHT IN NEW YORK."

BY B. V. CUSHMAN, M. D.

The dark side of life in great cities has been the favorite theme of sensational writers of all classes. It is perhaps never more disgusting or productive of evil than when delineated by injudicious, would-be philanthropists, who make their debut in "the slums" with note-book and kodak, flash through a dozen different phases of nether society in a night, and by the end of six weeks have "gathered material" for a book, worthless, and as unhealthy as ship-fever.

"Darkness and Daylight in New York" is made of different stuff. It is the joint production of Mrs. Helen Campbell, who has given freely the best of her life for the "prisoners of poverty," having been a city missionary in New York for many years; of Col. Thomas W. Knox, a trained journalist, accustomed from boyhood to newspaper work in the metropolis, possessing powers of observation and delineation not otherwise to be acquired; and Chief Inspector Thomas Byrnes, thirty years ago a patrolman, now at the head of the most efficient detective bureau in the world, having worked all the steps between. Poverty, vice and crime long ago lost their sensational features for this experienced trio. They see and describe the dull, hard facts. They know the needs of the great submerged parish; they also know by long observation what means are best adapted to those needs, and every page breathes an unwritten appeal to the prosperous "other half of the world" to come to the rescue. The illustrations, two hundred and fifty in number, are fairly alive, being "flash-lights" of actual situations.

The book is wholesome enough to lie upon the table of any home to be read by all. The first and largest part is by Mrs. Campbell, describing the tenement and crime-breeding quarters, "as seen by a woman."

The deepest of the darkness, and that which most fully eclipses the daylight, is strong drink. This fact is not shown ostentatiously to point a temperance moral, but rather incidentally to adorn and account for the tale of want and woe. It is mentioned that of the 82,000 arrests annually made in New York, 30,000 are cases known in police court circles as either "plain drunks" or "embellished drunks." Besides these, 17,000 are arrested for disorderly conduct, of whom probably not one per cent are absolutely sober at the time of arrest. In company with a woman physician from the Water Street Mission, Mrs. Campbell takes us, by a way familiar to them, into an alley lined with tenement houses. Here in one room a family of eleven exists. Seven of them are boarders, each of whom is entitled to a certain space upon the floor. Many of them live by picking up odd jobs on the docks. They lay off as often as once a week for a spree, and are never really out of their cups.

In another room is a woman about to die of consumption who has persistently refused to go to the hospital where she could have care, because she "thought she might keep her husband from drinking himself to death." The love that endures all things has not wholly forsaken "Slaughter Alley." If you doubt that it is an immortelle, go into a room in the cellar, furnished with a dirty bed, rickety stove, three-legged table and one broken-backed chair upon which a woman sits, with a deep gash in her cheek, a baby on her lap and five children huddling about her. On a shake-down in a corner lies an old woman groaning, and on the bed in swinish sleep is the husband and father. As the doctor dresses the cut the woman talks: "I wouldn't hav yez see the eye on me if I could help it, for Mike's as kind a cratur whin the drink's not in him as ye'd want to see, but he came in mad loike, an' the first thing was up wid his fist an' hittin' me.'" Then she told how he had worked all week at good pay, getting his wages that night, and going straight to the saloon where she followed him, begging for a dollar, because none of them had had anything to eat that day. He swore at her, and the saloon-keeper pushed her out. When the man was put out "what he hadn't swallyed they'd tuk from him."

Then in one of those quiet sentences that contain volumes, Mrs. Campbell remarks upon "human beings living contentedly a life hardly above that of the maggot in a festering carcass." There is the trouble, they are content. Should the new Jerusalem out of heaven settle down upon them in their filth, degradation and contentment they would befoul it in an hour. Some influence must come upon them as individuals—one by one—to awaken divine discontent. The Water Street Mission does this where its beneficent power is felt, but remember there are hundreds of saloons in that region and but one Mission.

Now we are in a garret room visiting one of the gentle doctor's patients—poor as the others, and emitting the awful odor of cancer, yet something is different there. A man addresses the doctor: "She's prayin' to be released and I'm tryin' to be willin'." The tender physician does her work, encouraging the poor sufferer that it will only be a day or two to wait. The husband kneeling shakes with sobs, while the prayer for patience and strength is offered, and we are told that neither of them would consent to have her go to the hospital. She must die and they would stay together. Both had been converted at the Mission. He worked hard on the docks during the day and tended her at night, tenderly as a mother. Sometimes they talked of the bright journey just before her, but it broke his heart to have her go. Ah, this is "daylight"!

I must not fail to note the points which unlettered but discerning Jerry McAuley quarried out for himself. Three times he fell after that marvelous conversion in prison and the two years spent in trying to lead fellow prisoners to Christ. Remember that, oh, worker, prone to discouragement when the man who signed the pledge breaks it. Jerry had friends, and more, he had the purpose to lay aside every weight. His first trip was over lager beer, when he came out of prison, which he thought was no more hurt than root beer. In a week or so he wanted something stronger. Again he rallied, and again fell. In his own words: "Do you know what did it the last time? Tobacco. That's why I'm down on tobacco now. Chew and smoke and there'll be a steady cravin' for somethin', an' mostly it ends in whisky. A man that honestly wants the Spirit of God in him has got to be clean inside an' out."

But most is being suffered by the children, as seen by Mrs. Campbell. Much—though little when compared with the need—is being done for them. The account of the origin of the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children tells both sides: "Mary Ellen began it." The story runs in the exquisitely simple style of the book. Mary Ellen was dying of consumption on the top floor of one of the most wretched tenement houses in the fourth ward. To the city missionary who visited her she said: "Oh, can't you do something for that poor little girl next door? I can't die in peace while they beat her so." The missionary visited the police station, but they had no law to warrant an arrest. Various benevolent societies approached were helpless as the police. Still the dying woman cried: "I can't die till something is done. They are murdering the child by inches." In despair the missionary appealed to brave, tender Henry Bergh. He consulted with his friend and able counsellor, Elbridge T. Gerry. They could find no law on the side of the child, but the time had come when such law must be, and they decided to make this a test case. They obtained a warrant by assuming all responsibility, and the child was removed. When the case was called, Mr. Gerry, tall and elegant, announced that he was present with his client. Stepping to a table in a conspicuous part of the crowded court room, he unrolled the blanketed object and showed a child of six, with matted hair, alive with vermin, and her starved little body a mass of livid bruises. There was no need of other witness. The child was given into the custody of the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and the papers spread the news of the result. Then cases came in as a flood. Mothers sought protection for their little ones from drunken fathers, bringing the bruised and often maimed children in evidence. A society was soon incorporated. This was in 1875. It has done much for childhood in the slums, almost wholly suppressing juvenile opera troupes and the acrobatic performances so dangerous to life and limb. Child beggary is no longer the paying business it used to be, and the infamous system of selling Italian children bought of the peasants and brought to this country in troops, is destroyed. Two of these little exiles who had managed to pick up enough English to understand, hearing of the society, appealed for themselves, and then the whole horrible trade was brought to light to be exterminated.

For a while the public thought they were deceived by sensational artists, the faithful portable camera came, and the sun himself helped the little ones. There was no gainsaying the photographs taken on the spot from which the arrests were made.

Child labor is still a great evil in spite of the law and penalty for hiring children under thirteen years. Parents falsify as to age, and hundreds of children under ten years to-day are working in factories, while those who sit all day cramped over work done in the wretched homes are unnumbered.

Mrs. Browning's "Cry of the Children" is not more touching, chaste and poetical than these chapters of child-life in the cellars, garrets and sweating dens of the proud city. There is daylight however in the work for newsboys which provides homes and evening schools, and sends an average of three thousand children a year to western homes, where many of them are adopted and educated as sons. Not more than six annually are returned east. Of these Mrs. Campbell says: "Among over twenty-one thousand children sent west in the early years of the work, but twelve became criminals. No work done for children compares with this in importance. The good accomplished by the Children's Aid Society is amazing. Twenty-one industrial schools, twelve night schools, two free reading rooms, six lodging houses for girls and boys, four summer homes, and the crippled boys' brush shop, are the record plain to all; but who shall count the good that no man has recorded, but which has rescued thousands from the street and given them the chance which is the right of every human soul?" The best sign for lost humanity is that those most acquainted with it are most hopeful of it. They know that in all these festering masses some jeweled souls are to be had for seeking.

There is not a note of despair in this book. Like the gospel, it lays bare the need, but it also tells of hope and help, of love and light.

"SOW BY ALL WATERS."

BY MARGARET B. PLATT.

One of the great divisions of our work as white-ribboners is educational. If we wish to win, we must educate as well as agitate; the two must go together. Thousands will not go to hear the spoken word, they must be induced to read it. It is positively necessary that the ideas which we wish to see prevail shall be planted in the minds of the people, that they may blossom out in their lives and bear fruit in the formation of a correct public sentiment, which, duly ripened under the concentrated light of a quickened and educated conscience, shall presently be garnered at the ballot-box. Now what better way by which to reach these non-listening thousands than by the free use of our literature? Let our printed pages, those silent but powerful speakers, pour convincing arguments and pathetic appeals into their souls by way of their visual organs and see what the result will be. Neal Dow has said that "Maine was not carried for prohibition until the state was sown knee deep with temperance literature," and I venture the assertion that if every white-ribboner would at once begin careful systematic literature work in her own immediate locality, and keep it up for one year, more would be accomplished for total abstinence and prohibition than has been accomplished in the last five years.

Now, further; every woman can reach out into and influence, to a certain degree, a circle of friends and acquaintances that is not similarly influenced by any other woman. Let every white-ribboner begin her work, among her own neighbors, in her own Sabbath-school, her own church class, her prayer-meeting, her missionary society, her Aid Society, her Relief Corps, her King's Daughters, her social calls, her correspondence, and any other circle which she can reach, and see what will be the result. By persistent importunity compel attention to this great question. I am so thankful for the parable of the importunate widow; it has given me encouragement many a time. Only by persistent labor can we ever succeed.

Work in the Sunday-schools. Once a month give to every teacher in your school one of our leaflets especially prepared for teachers or helpful to them. Once a month give to all scholars a leaflet, instructive, helpful or stirring, according to their ages. See to it that once a month some one of our best leaflets is distributed at the church door, every person leaving the church getting at least one copy. Enlist some of your Christian Endeavor friends and place our literature in their hands for use in that aggressive and growing army of Christian enthusiasts. Carry into your missionary meeting for free distribution such leaflets as "The Liquor Traffic and Foreign Missions," "Free Rum on the Congo," "The Drummer's Story," "A Saloon Keeper's Temperance Lecture," etc., etc. See that your pastor has THE UNION SIGNAL, and ask him every week if he has read such or such an article in THE SIGNAL. If he does not read it at first, he will after a few weeks or months of such treatment. If you know a family where wine, beer, cider or tobacco is used, and you cannot reach them in any other way, make the United States mails a medium for presenting them with the choicest gems of our total abstinence literature. We have plenty of such gems. Don't be afraid of exhausting the supply. You can find something suitable for every occasion; and something that, if rightly used, will tell for good. A few years ago a lady placed THE UNION SIGNAL in a home where wine and other liquors were considered necessaries. Now, that is a total abstinence family. The mother is a white-ribboner, the children are Loyal Temperance Legioners, the father is a pronounced temperance man. The printed page did its silent work faithfully and well in that family. So it will elsewhere; only give it the opportunity.

We have an abundance of leaflets well calculated to slip into an envelope, every white-ribboner should be supplied with a variety of these, and enclose one in every letter she writes. Depend upon it they will be as bread cast upon the waters; it may be many days, aye, you may never see the result, but the word has gone out, the influence is at work, and whatever be the outcome you have done your part.

A white-ribboner who allows herself to be deprived of the stock of information and inspiration to be gained from THE UNION SIGNAL, is like a soldier going into battle without his ammunition. She may be willing enough, she may be earnest in the conflict, but if her magazine of information be empty, she may as well retire from the field, for ten to one she will be worsted in a wordy battle. A white-ribboner ought no more to be without her UNION SIGNAL than as a Christian she ought to be without her Bible. The two should lie side by side upon her table along with her accredited church paper.

This work should never be left solely to literature superintendents; every woman of us should consider herself a committee of one to distribute our literature, but should keep account of pages used and report to her superintendent.

Lastly, don't hand any one a leaflet apologetically, as if you yourself were afraid of it, or ashamed of it, or didn't more than half believe it. Give it heartily, enthusiastically, believingly. It has benefited you, it will benefit another. Make people feel that you are doing them a favor by putting such good reading matter in their way, and that by reading it they will both please you and benefit themselves. They will read it because you asked them to, and the ideas once lodged will stick; and if you have no reward for your importunity here, you will have it over yonder—it lies in the "Well done, good and faithful servant."

Sisters, "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge." Let us all be educators that we may save our homes and nation, and help to win the world for Christ.

Washington, D. C.

RAILROAD TIES.

VII.

BY JOHN G. WOOLLEY.

It was perhaps inevitable that Lady Henry Somerset would discover more or less of imperfection on acquaintance extending to the second half-year, but her great defect was not realized even by the most critical—though doubtless it has often jarred vaguely upon those nearest to her and most fond of her—until the great meeting at Central Music Hall last Saturday evening.

. . . . . .

It is an ungracious thing to speak of the faults of distinguished people, and I should not do it, had this not been frankly avowed in public by this splendid woman, in a tone too that suggested not only her consciousness, but her readiness to make defense of it. . . . Whatever else it might be, it is safe to say that her excuse would not be any lack of attention on the part of our people . . . and it is hardly possible she would assert against us any lack of heart, even in our impoliteness, for we have appreciated her—which is only another way of saying loved her—we do yet, and that is one thing we do well in America.

Other noble guests have come to us from over seas—titled, traveled, lettered, powerful, beautiful, but no visitor since the Marquis de Lafayette, was loved as much or by as many, as she has been and is.

. . . . . .

Which of course makes this disappointment all the greater.

. . . . . .

Truth to say, however, this unpleasant souvenir of this most charming visitor ought not to provoke resentment in our minds, for beyond question it is free from any trace or taint of arrogance. If all were known, much would be found in the traditions, atmosphere and surroundings of Eastnor Castle to explain away the least hint of willfulness, if not to mitigate our sorrow.

And I say, we all say, God bless her heart, her hands, her home, her hopes; answer her prayers, accomplish her desires, broaden still more her gracious ministry; bless the sea for her, and England, and give His angels charge over the "Teutonic" to keep her in all her ways!

. . . . . .

And the grievance? Oh! let the lonely blemish stay with her sweet ways! It is, perhaps, the most we ought to pray for, it is so becoming to her—that she may yet repeat it many times, and give us, with her own hand, full many a cup, so like herself, of blessing spiced with pain! What is her fault? . . . Going!

Lake Shore Railroad, Mar. 14, 1892.

TAXATION AND THE POOR.

I.

BY REV. C. H. ZIMMERMAN.

The Indirect Tax.

Adam Smith's rule for a just system of taxation is that citizens "ought to contribute to the support of the government as nearly as possible in proportion to the revenue (income) which they respectively enjoy under the protection of the state." This is the principle of the graduated income tax demanded in the platform of the People's party. All political economists and statesmen recognize the equity of this principle, but the exigencies of government in time of war and the difficulty of ascertaining what a dishonest citizen's income is, have led to the adoption in this country of just the opposite system, that is to say, one that is not most nearly proportioned to the means of individuals, simply because it is most easily assessed and collected. Such is the character of our direct and indirect taxation. The latter is a tax on consumption. It is imposed without any regard to the poverty or wealth of the consumer; but while it is an intolerable burden to the poor, it is scarcely felt by the rich. It takes from the more thrifty and prosperous poor nearly all their savings, forces them to reduce their consumption to the lowest possible amount and prevents a majority of wage-workers who have families to support from saving anything. As Edward Atkinson says: "It finds them poor, keeps them poor, and may even reduce them to pauperism." It is one of the principal causes of the poor becoming poorer and the rich richer. It is a tariff on imported commodities for the protection of the manufacturing industries of the country, which enables the manufacturer to enrich himself at the expense of the public.

To see how our indirect or tariff taxation affects the poor as compared with the rich, take as the basis a tariff tax of twenty per cent on imported articles of consumption, which is less than the average in this country for thirty years. Suppose the industrious poor man, with a family to support, to have an income of $350, which is above rather than below the average annual earnings of wage-workers in this country. Allow to that family $250 for the cost of living on untaxed commodities. Their savings would then amount to $100. Now add twenty per cent tariff tax to that cost, or $50, which is fifty per cent of what they might have saved but for the tax, and fourteen and two-sevenths per cent of their total income. If by reason of sickness, strikes or drunkenness, or other causes of suspension of labor the income were reduced to $300, that indirect taxation of $50 would consume all their possible savings. If for the same reasons the income were reduced below $300, or the expenses raised to $300, the tariff tax would reduce the family to want or pauperism.

Now compare this with the case of the rich man whose income is $10,000, representing a productive property of $200,000. Allow him $5,000 for the support of his family on untaxed commodities; that would leave him $5,000 savings. Add the twenty per cent tariff tax to his expenditure for living, or $1,000; which is twenty per cent of what he would have saved but for the tax as against the poor man's fifty per cent, and ten per cent of his income as against the poor man's fourteen and two-sevenths per cent. But after the tax is paid he has $4,000 left of his income to add to his fixed capital, or to meet contingencies of sickness, a bad year, etc., as against the poor man's $50. If his income were $100,000 and his living cost the same, he would pay out one per cent indirect tax out of that income, and have $94,000 to add to his capital. At the same expenditure for living, a million dollar income would contribute but one-tenth of one per cent to the national revenue.

Enough has been said to demonstrate the inequality and injustice of our system of indirect taxation, in that it bears oppressively upon the poor and tends to prevent any improvement in their condition, while the rich go on increasing in wealth without contributing their proportional share to the national revenue. Advocates of the tariff attempt to defend it on the ground that it protects home industries and thereby increases wages. But so long as unrestricted, or inadequately restricted immigration is allowed to crowd our labor market and compete with the present labor supply for employment, protective tariffs cannot prevent wages falling to the lowest competitive rate. The only protection that can enhance wages is protection against the influx of foreign labor. When two or three laborers are competing for one job, wages must fall to the lowest rate on which the laborer can live and work.

Our system of direct taxation is quite as oppressive and unjust to poor householders and farmers, not because it is wrong in principle, but because it is unequally administered; is chiefly imposed upon property in sight, and does not reach a very large part of the property that ought to be taxed and that it is intended to reach. But as the limits of this article do not permit a description of the operation of the direct tax, it is reserved for another paper.

Evanston, Ill.

THE TRUEST WORD OF ALL.

In a personal letter Mrs. Zerelda Wallace makes the anvil ring with the purest tone yet struck out of it by anybody. Here it is—the key-note to the grand harmonics that shall sometime replace the groans with which the whole creation travaileth:

"What a mistake the Labor party made at St. Louis. It is too late in the day to hope to build a party in the interests of a class. What a misnomer to call themselves the People's party when they refuse to recognize one-half of the people. Why, they give the lie to their first utterance, 'equal rights for all, special privileges for none.' Their defeat is only a question of time.

"What gave the Democrats control of this government for twenty years? They stood for the liberty of the poor white man, and secured it. Then the Republican party held control for twenty years because it stood for the right of all men to the ownership of themselves. Now the successful and permanent party of the future must stand for universal liberty and suffrage for woman. Thank God His purpose for humanity is growth and progress. Liberty is essential for the accomplishment of that object. Let us work for it."

THE ST. LOUIS STRUGGLE.

BY REV. D. C. KELLEY, D. D.

I have just read THE UNION SIGNAL'S report of "the struggle at St. Louis"; having watched that conflicts for the greater part of the time I am prepared to say that the details are accurate and the conclusions just. At one time I opposed bringing prohibition before the convention, though it was plain even before the first day closed that what THE UNION SIGNAL reports was true, viz.: "that two-thirds of the delegates were for prohibition." The grounds on which I based my opposition were verified in the result—as stated by me at the time; they were to the effect that while the liquor men are vastly in the minority, they are of the ruder class and the minority will shout you down. THE UNION SIGNAL now says: "The rank and file and most of the leaders desired it, but were outplotted and out-throated by the minority." Again I said: "While the Southern Alliance men are as truly for prohibition as any men you have, it is not their purpose to declare for a third party, but to work for the capture of the Democratic party in the South; to this purpose prohibition would be fatal; for this reason alone you cannot count on the Southern delegates." THE UNION SIGNAL'S report says in the opposition was found "Southern members who, while personally in favor of the plank, insisted that with it they would but antagonize their constituencies;"—to have been frank, instead of saying, "their constituencies," they should have said the Democratic party. These men were neither true to their constituencies nor to the Democratic party. This false and reprehensible position defeated prohibition before the convention.

Perhaps it is best that it was defeated. When Miss Willard's name was hailed with much enthusiasm and she was made both a voting member and vice-president, I was for a day led to believe that this honor was given to the cause for which she has so long and nobly stood; but now I know it was the woman more than the cause they thus sought to crown—the best loved and most potent woman in the world to-day. Why may it have been best that the minority report was defeated? Simply because a better labor platform can be framed than the one adopted at St. Louis; the whole field is therefore open to the prohibition convention which is to meet in St. Louis June 29, to make a better platform and invite the workingmen to join with us.

There were many men of brains and honor in the St. Louis convention; were it not invidious it would be a pleasure to mention some of them, but they had not so matured their views as to attain the best possible results. When they propose government ownership of railroads, telegraphs and telephones, they have not paused long enough to consider the effect upon a country governed by parties as is ours. The appointment of so great a number of employés by the government would enable any party, no matter how corrupt it might become, to perpetuate its rule—liberty might pay the penalty. Again all corporations may be inimical to a just distribution of wealth; what is needed, therefore, is the control of all corporations rather than the ownership of those mentioned. Let there be no corporations save for public uses; let these be controlled by commissioners armed with suitable laws. This is not theory, Massachusetts has already led the way and solved the problem.

Too much space is given to the kind and amount of currency in the St. Louis platform, when the great evil is the unjust distribution; this they have failed to meet wisely; this we must do. If we do this as we ought we will either win them or drive their leaders from the field. We must be truer to the workingman than their own leaders have been—for here rests the most momentous question of our Christian civilization.

Springfield, Tenn.

IMPORTANT OPINIONS ON THE SUNDAY CLOSING OF THE COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION.

REV. JOSEPH COOK,
Editor of Our Day, Boston, Mass.

Chicago lies in a very strategic position. At the time when we have 200,000,000 people in this republic, 100,000,000 of them will be found between the Alleghanies and the Rocky mountains. That central mass of voters will govern the land. You will have 50,000,000, perhaps, on your Atlantic slope, and 50,000,000 on your Pacific slope. But your 100,000,000 in the Mississippi valley, if they can be unified, will rule the republic. Chicago is likely to be the brain of the 100,000,000 people who will live between the mountains of the rising and those of the setting sun. Chicago is coming of age. Are you to allow her, just at this critical time when she is crystallizing, to set a fashion of Lord's day lawlessness that will poison the whole body of which she is to be the brain? Chicago is lawless enough, New York is lawless enough, any one of our great cities is lawless enough, but to open the World's Fair on Sundays, to give traffic to all the railways that center in Chicago, now the most important railway center in the world, to give business to all the street lines of communication, business to all the dram shops, business to all the gambling hells, business to all the brothels—what will this be but to poison Chicago, now just entering upon her great career of intellectual and social and political leadership of the central portion of the republic? It is of vast importance that the brain of the West should be kept sound and devout. The Jewish Talmud has a legend concerning Titus, the conqueror of Jerusalem, to the effect that when he had reached the shore safely after a storm on the Mediterranean, he forgot his indebtedness to the powers of heaven, and the gods sent a gnat which ascended his nostrils and grew larger and larger in his brain. The legend says that when Titus died, this gnat was found to be the size of a bird, with beak and claws of iron, and that it produced insanity. Lord's day lawlessness is the gnat ascending the nostrils of all our American municipalities, and growing larger and larger. Do you want this gnat introduced now to mature in the nostrils of Chicago? Will you have her coming of age celebrated by the nestling of this pest in her brain? When Chicago has five or eight millions of people to what size will this gnat have grown? The beak of the bird to which it will enlarge, will be the Sunday liquor traffic; and the brothels will act as mandibles to tear to shreds multitudes of victims; the talons will be the railways, and the wings the Sunday newspapers. Kill the gnat before it ascends the nostrils!

Municipal prudence protests against the Sunday opening of the World's Fair at Chicago.

Sunday opening with the saloons in full activity, with many kinds of traffic going on, and with all the lawlessness that is concentrated in a great town, is likely to multiply vice and make Chicago a pandemonium. The saloons are very sure to be left open on Sunday in Chicago. To take the halters off from Sunday, some one has said, is to take the halters off from hell.

MRS. ZERELDA WALLACE,
Cataract, Ind.

You ask my opinion as to the manner the Lord's day should be observed on the Columbian Exposition grounds. I has but one, and that is that it should be closed on that day. Not only from a religious standpoint, or because God commands it, but because the highest and best interests of humanity demand its observance, as far as practicable, as a day of absolute rest. The lust of the eye and the pride of life are the dominant sins of this nation. To keep the Fair open on the Lord's day will only pander to these vices. In our worship of mammon, and mad pursuit of wealth, we have lost sight of the apostolic declaration that "coveteousness is idolatry." Let us remember that the sin of the ancients was the worship of the golden calf. Is there not some significance in this fact for us upon whom the end of the ages have come? To my mind there can be no stronger evidence of the divine origin of a day of rest than the fact that even with our boasted Christian civilization and philanthropy, the avarice of men and their love of pleasure would deprive poor, tired humanity, wearied by the constant care and toils of life, of even one-seventh of time for rest. I say rest, not pleasure or even education in the secular sense of that term, but rest, that man may stand up in the presence of God and his fellows and feel that he calls no man master, and that he is something more than a hewer of wood and drawer of water. There is a profound philosophy in the thought that he may feel he has this right by no human enactment, but by gift of God. One other argument for keeping the Lord's day inviolate as a day of rest and as a gift from God is the fact that the individuals, communities and nations who thus observe it occupy a higher plane of morals than those who habitually disregard it. I am aware that every question has two sides, and that there are arguments brought for the opening of the Fair on the Lord's day, but it seems to me that any good which might possibly result from their being open on that day for either profit or pleasure, would be far overbalanced by the evil, and I think the weight of evidence is on my side.

Let the commissioners allow intoxicants to be sold on the grounds, disregard our Christian Sabbath, and what an object lesson to the world of the effect of our free institutions! The bare possibility is enough to make Christian women, men and angels weep.

REV. JOHN L. WITHROW, D. D.,
Pastor Third Presbyterian Church, Chicago.

Let the Columbian Exposition buildings be closed on Sundays. Any attempt to open them in part will justify the opening of all of them. And to open them all will not only compel thousands of the working classes to labor without a day of rest, but will give vice and crime an encouragement greater than ever our city has given. Chicago is too great and grand a city to be humiliated before the world as the champion Sunday desecrator.

HON. T. C. RICHMOND,
Madison, Wis.

Let the grounds be open at least a part, if not all, of the day, and, if thought best, at reduced rates of admission, especially for the benefit of the laboring men whose means are limited and whose time, during the working days of the week, is not their own.

Since the Sabbath was made for man, give him an opportunity to get all the rest, pleasure, moral elevation and spiritual instruction possible during the hours regarded as sacred.

This cannot be done by closing the Fair grounds during the only hours the laboring men can claim as their own. It is expected that attendance at the Columbian Fair will be, to those who are fortunate enough to be there, a liberal education.

The reasons usually given for closing the grounds on Sunday are, first, that to open them would be to violate God's law; and, second, it would offer an opportunity for the roughs and the saloon element to hold high carnival.

In answer to the first, I would say that man, by seeking needed rest and recreation in strolling through beautiful grounds and viewing the wonderful works not only of God, but of man, cannot possibly be charged with violating any higher law. As well make it a crime to laugh or a misdemeanor to be happy.

In answer to the second reason given for closing the grounds, it may be said that the saloon element is active every day, is, in thousands of ways, injuring the laboring man; and it would be a monstrous injustice to those whose only spare hours are during the first day of the week, to close the Fair grounds because of the difficulty of restraining the lawless or suppressing disorder.

Open the grounds at least a part of the day. Provide, if necessary, instructive lectures and religious exercises. Keep perfect order, if to do that it is necessary to seal up every saloon and jail all who create disorder.

The Fair grounds are not too sacred, nor is the Sabbath too holy for the quiet, orderly visitor to enjoy the wonders of the one during the hours of the other.

LADY HENRY SOMERSET,
President of the British Women's Temperance Association.

As regards this great question, I am in sympathy with all the feeling expressed by the National W. C. T. U., but as I am on the eve of my departure, it would be difficult for me to enter at length into the question of Sabbath observance at the Columbian Exposition.

REV. F. A. NOBLE, D. D.,
Pastor Union Park Congregational Church, Chicago.

Let the Fair be closed on Sunday just as any other business concern is closed, or ought to be, on Sunday. This, in my judgment, is all the nation need to do towards securing the observance of the Sabbath on the Columbian Fair grounds. But to do this would be to render a service of inestimable value for all time to come.

JOHN V. FARWELL,
Chicago.

As the Fair is a national institution, to which our government has invited all nations as participants, I think it eminently appropriate that we exhibit an "American Sabbath" as a day of rest along with our multiform products of labor on the other days of the week—not a French Sabbath with no distinction from other days. We owe it to ourselves and to that Providence which gave us our national existence, in the interests of God's laws as connected with human governments.

RT. REV. CHARLES EDWARD CHENEY,
Christ Church, Chicago.

I am profoundly convinced that while we invite to the World's Exposition the representatives of every nation on the face of the earth, it is our duty to remain true to American principles in so doing. If we have anything superior to that which European nations possess, we ought to be willing to make the Fair an education to them in the matters in which we excel them. I cannot imagine how any American, educated to a belief in the conservative and refining influence of the American Sabbath, to say nothing of its religious character, can be so unpatriotic as to desire to adopt, during the visit of so many of other nations, the European method of keeping the Sabbath day. I am well aware that in Chicago Sunday is less observed than in many of our Eastern cities, but nevertheless, even here Sunday has a far more reverent observance than in most of the great capitals of Continental Europe. It is our business to show, by a preservation of this American idea, that we believe in our own institutions, and would be glad to impart them to other peoples. For this reason, and many others which I could give if time allowed me, I am thoroughly opposed to the opening of the World's Exposition on Sunday.

REV. ANNA H. SHAW.
Boston, Mass.

I would keep the Exposition grounds open for those who need them for healthful, virtuous living—for the poor; also the art gallery or any of the buildings which would help to educate men and women physically, morally or spiritually. I would have the great auditorium filled with the world's needy to hear the truth from the world's best and wisest teachers, truth of any sort, moral, physical, social or spiritual. I would like to hear the best philosophers, scientists, moralists, sociologists and theologians teach the truths of life.

REV. J. B. GAMBRELL, D. D.,
Meridian, Miss.

It would be a most inharmonious thing for the great American Exposition which is designed to represent American life in its fullness and at its zenith, to throw open its doors on the Sabbath. To do so would be to become European at once rather than American. And no one need be deceived on this point. It is the foreign and foreignized sections of our population which are clamoring for this breach of the immemorial American Sabbath. No religious question need come into consideration in settling on the proper policy. Let the American civil Sabbath, which coincides, as to time, with the religious Sabbath of most of the people, be duly considered. The government does not pretend to dictate any religious worship. But the government was founded by a race of people who believe in the Sabbath both as a civil and a religious institution. It has been fostered and brought to its present great glory by people of that faith. On the other hand, the people who would violate the Sabbath are from lands which they themselves judged inferior to ours. Not for a day should we consent to be led by that unenlightened part of our people who are as yet unprepared to appreciate the sources of our greatness. An American Exposition with no Sabbath is a monstrous libel on America. The Exposition should, of course, conform to American laws, ideas, sentiments and institutions.

KATE TANNATT WOODS,
Salem, Mass.

The "right Sabbath observance at the Columbian Exposition" will be that which includes the largest liberty without vulgar license.

I believe devoutly in giving our working classes every possible opportunity for culture and improvement, and, therefore, I have urged opening the art galleries and museums on the Sabbath, and I wish heartily that the poor men and women who toil all the week in shops and factories could have a grand sacred concert every Sabbath during the Exposition. The museums and galleries which we now open in our eastern cities are filled every Sunday with men and women who are quiet, orderly and appreciative. One man told me "that he had worked in Boston for twenty-five years, and until recently had never had an opportunity to visit any art collection." He felt that this consideration for the working classes would do great good.

REV. B. M. PALMER, D. D.,
Pastor First Presbyterian Church, New Orleans, La.

I reply to your note by simply saying, "The nation should observe the Sabbath on the Columbian Fair Grounds," on the lowest view, as a day of complete rest, that being the law at the creation.

REV. D. C. KELLEY, D. D.,
Springfield, Tenn.

I have a strong sympathy with the desire of workingmen to have the opportunity to see the Exposition on the only day they can call their own—but a very great fear that should the Exposition be thrown open to them it would go very far in the future toward depriving them of their only day for home and rest and worship.

If, however, liquor is excluded, halls for preaching afforded and the Exposition closed, except such halls, from 10 a. m. until 1 p. m. on Sunday, it might pay the working classes a debt we owe them.

Long ago our Christian civilization should have made it possible for men who work to earn comfort and secure time enough for self-improvement; this we have not done, having failed of our duty we should not bind them to dwarfage on account of our neglect.

Man's legitimate needs are above the law of the Sabbath. It is possible that two hours closure would preserve in the minds of all the higher meaning of the day, if attractive opportunities for worship were afforded within the buildings or grounds.

REV. H. W. BOLTON,
Pastor Centenary M. E. Church, Chicago.

Let there be no compromise! Close the gates and provide for religious worship elsewhere.

RT. REV. SAMUEL FALLOWS, D. D.,
Reformed Episcopal Church, Chicago.

Close the entire Exposition on Sunday, every department. Let a pavilion be erected outside, seating ten thousand persons. Let the most prominent divines of the world, men and women, and speakers on all moral questions here occupy the pulpit for religious and philanthropic service. If any portion of the Exposition buildings be opened this tabernacle should be within the ground. In either case the services should be non-sectarian, under the control of a committee representing all churches.

THE MISSISSIPPI W. C. T. U.
Memorial to the Legislature of 1892.

If the Commissioners decide to keep the Fair open on Sunday in violation of the moral and Christian conviction of our great country, we earnestly plead that our beloved state have no part nor lot in desecrating the Lord's day, and that you make no appropriation whatever for the Fair. We represent that the demand for "Sunday opening" comes mainly from the foreign element in the United States who are not in sympathy with the institutions held dear by all true Americans.

REV. FLOYD W. TOMKINS, JR.,
Rector of St. James Church, Chicago.

I am convinced, after long and thoughtful consideration that the Fair grounds should be entirely closed on Sunday. My reasons are: 1. Because the Lord's Day—Sunday—has applied to it the spirit of the fourth commandment and we must keep it holy. 2. Because America has always distinctly stood as a nation observing the Lord's Day. For us to go away from such a standard on so national an issue would be ruinous. 3. Because to open the Fair would cause many to work hard for the benefit of a few who could just as well visit the grounds some other time. 4. Because it would bring to our city the very people we do not want on Sunday—and make our day of rest a day of turmoil.

REV D. R. BREED, D. D.,
Pastor of the Church of the Covenant (Pres.), Chicago.

It is my earnest conviction that the Columbian Fair should be closed—or rather should not be opened at all, in any way on the Lord's Day. The question is a bigger one than that of mere "rest"—viz: that of the honor due to Almighty God.

HON. EDWIN C. PIERCE,
Providence, R. I.

I advocate the opening of the Columbian Fair on Sundays at noon for the rest of the day. Let the machinery department be silent all day, as the hum of productive industry is everywhere silent on the American Sunday; but all the art galleries, and everything of that nature, everything which is in repose or is naturally growing should be open. The national feeling does not sanction the sale of intoxicating liquors at the Fair, on any day of the week and it should not be tolerated.

W. JENNINGS DEMOREST.
New York City.

I am strongly impressed with the desirableness of closing the Columbian Fair on Sundays. There are several good reasons for this but the most important one is the respect we owe to the feelings of those who regard the day with a religious interest.

REV. DAVID SWING,
Central Church, Chicago.

I think the Sunday is based upon the mental and physical wants of man and should therefore be held sacred by the government. Galleries of art, libraries, gardens and parks should be kept open on Sunday afternoon. No saloon or race track should be open. No wheels should move, no work be done, wheels of local travel being excepted. The United States cannot establish a religious Sunday, but it must enforce a day of rest and soberness. The Christian Sunday ought to have its hours of religious and benevolent work and hours of mental and physical rest.

LOUIS BOEHRICH, PRES., CH. GALAPIA SCHAUB, VICE-PRES., F. DELNZ, SEC.
International Federation for the Observation of Sunday, Executive Committee, Geneva, Switzerland.

Mr. President and Gentlemen Members of the Committee Organizing the Chicago Exposition:—Allow us, inhabitants of the European continent, both in the name of the committee which we represent and in that of our numerous adherents, to apply to you in favor of closing on Sundays the grand Exposition which you are preparing for next year.

On our old continent we are well aware of the inconveniences brought about for the workingman and his family by his being deprived of that blessed rest which, every seventh day, restores the strength of the body, refreshes the mental faculties, satisfies the aspirations of the heart. And this is why we advise you upon the present occasion to uphold firmly the standard of the Lord's day of rest exactly as it was preached by the people of the United States during the preceding expositions of New York and Philadelphia.

Although in your great country there exists a complete separation between church and state, and although the observation of the Sunday may nowhere be enforced as a legal exterior obligation, still you will concur no doubt in our belief that whether to consider the matter from the point of view of civic liberty, or from that of the requirements of family life, or of social necessities, there will be plenty of lofty motives found to justify the measure which we expect you to carry out courageously.

By acting thus you will proclaim aloud religious liberty for thousands of your co-laborers, who ought to be enabled to perform the duties intrusted to them without their religious feelings being hurt, and you will thereby give also a token of respect to the moral and Christian principles upon which your legislation has ever been based and which have constituted the greatness of your country.

It is quite certain that your decision in this respect will have considerable influence in our old Europe. If your decision is affirmative and conformable with our wishes the noble example once more given by your country to the entire world will contribute to the advancement of the cause of humanity and Christianity, to which we devote our efforts.

TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS.

BY MATILDA B. CARSE.

And he said unto them, Why are ye so fearful? How is it that ye have no faith?

The stone-cutters are busily at work on the Monroe street entrance to the Temple; they have chiseled out a ribbon on the granite over the door; it is very cleverly done; they are now carving the words "Willard Hall" on the ribbon. Men are also at work and have been for weeks on the grand entrance on La Salle street, turning the rough granite into a work of art by their patient chipping. On each side of this entrance there are two great panels hewed out of the granite and beautifully carved in oak leaves in conventional style. A plain space is left in the center of the panel; on this will be cut "The Temple." Underneath will be the cabalistic letters which bring consternation to the liquor dealer, and joy to all true white-ribboners, "W. C. T. U."

***

What a time that good man, Nehemiah, had in building the walls of Jerusalem. It was not alone the herculean task he and his people had to perform in building the wall, but the necessity to be constantly on the defensive and guard against the enmity and jealousy of those who opposed; half his strength had to be given to this. The world is not very much advanced in this respect; no great thing was ever yet begun for the world's weal, but it has had to pass through the fiery furnace of persecution. The greater the object the more intense the opposition. The building of the Temple has been no exception to this rule. As soon as one canard has been silenced another is started. Last week a letter was received, stating that it was reported the Temple was covered with advertisements of liquor houses and they wished to know the truth in regard to it. Another letter is received this week from Boston, asking, "Is it true that no insurance can be placed on the Temperance Temple an account of its height?" The Temple has been insured for months; so strongly and well is it built, that we have been enabled to get the insurance at a very low rate because the risk from fire is considered so slight. We have one insurance on the building, another on the plate glass and a third on accidents which might arise from the explosion of boilers or the bursting of steam-pipes. In this connection we wish to say the Temple is not considered a marvel in height, as it is but thirteen stories high and there are scores of other buildings in Chicago going up which are from fourteen to twenty stories high; however, the height of buildings hereafter is to be limited, none to be higher than ten stories. In regard to liquor advertisements being on the building, the idea is so preposterous, it is not worthy of an answer, only that some innocent, earnest soul believed it. To such persons we would say we would destroy the building rather than allow it to be so debauched.

***

We wish we had more room to tell how the "littles" for the Temple are gathered in. We will cite a few cases, the large proportion of them, however, we will be forced to leave for Miss Pugh to report. Mrs. Lewis E. Morley, of Rochester, N. Y., is engaged in a noble work. She is at the head of an organization known as the "Boys' Union;" it was established three years ago for the benefit of the poorest class of boys in Rochester. A grand work is being done. Two meetings are held each week and not one meeting has been omitted since it was started. Mrs. Morley has enthused the boys in regard to the Temple and they are greatly interested in it. Those dear little fellows from their poverty have sent $20 to help build our "House Beautiful." Eight dollars of this amount they sent three months ago, and a few days ago they sent $12 more. We should not be surprised to yet see the name of their society carved on a marble tablet in Willard Hall.

***

Mrs. I. A. Harrington, state superintendent of Temple work for Iowa, is wide awake, and has sent out a capital circular calling on all unions in the state to take up the Temple work this year with great vigor. She has set a noble example in her own local union, which numbers less than twenty members; they have pledged $100 and sent $25. Of this amount Mrs. J. S. Davis, aged eighty-six, the oldest member of the union, gave $10, and Mrs. J. M. Christy, aged eighty, gave $5. The union is planning a fair and festival for the benefit of the Temple the 29th inst.; they hope soon to make up the desired amount.

***

The promise of a photographic group consisting of Miss Willard, Lady Somerset and Mrs. Carse, with their autographs attached, to be given to all persons who fill a mite-box ($3.65) during the year, from April, 1892, to April, 1893, has called forth a perfect avalanche of orders for mite-boxes. We have been asked if persons who fill mite-boxes which are credited to unions can receive a picture. At first this was not contemplated, but we have decided to let all have the benefit.

***

The following note will show Lady Somerset's opinion of the silver model of the Temple:

"Among the many treasured souvenirs of some of the happiest days of my life which I take back with me to the old country, none will be more valued than the beautiful Temple inkstand. With pride and pleasure I shall show it to the women of England, as a proof of the God-given inspiration and devoted faith of one true-hearted woman. A monument of the spirit which has burned here so brightly since the days of the Crusade fire."

***

All checks and post-office orders should be made out in the name of Miss Esther Pugh and sent to her at Evanston, Ill. Orders for Temple Trust Bonds should be sent to H. C. Speer, 237 La Salle St., Chicago. A two cent stamp will secure a Temple mite-box and all documents in regard to the Temple including circular giving prices of silver models. Address in regard to these, Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, 149 Ashland Boulevard, Chicago.

The Household.

JOY.

"Take joy home,
And make a place in thy great heart for her,
And give her time to grow, and cherish her.
Then she will come, and oft will sing to thee
When thou art working in the furrows; aye,
Or weeding in the sacred hour of dawn.
It is a comely fashion to be glad;
Joy is in the grace we say to God."

THE DEAD WREN.

BY GEORGE HORTON.

Dead on the walk, my little wren,
Never to sing again?
Never to flit on airy wing
Amid the leaves of spring;

Never again your mate to hear
Trilling his love notes clear,
Nor chirp him welcome, bringing food
To sate your gaping brood.

But yesterday on yonder spray
You twittered all the day;
Last night, chilled through and stunned with sleet,
You fluttered to the street.

God marks the sparrow's fall, 'tis said,
Yet here I find you dead;
What is this wondrous thing, "To Be,"
Granted to you and me?

You sang and wooed and built your nest,
And fell when He deemed best.
I sing and build in other ways
And wait the day of days.

I take you in my hand. Behold,
How still you lie and cold!
Where has it fled, the sacred flame
That warmed your tiny frame?

No right have I to say that spark
Went out in utter dark;
Infinity of nothingness
Am I, you were no less.

The Mind a million suns that lit
Made you to sing and flit,
And I could rule the starry skies
Could I relight your eyes.

VI'LET ANN, OR "IF I HED ONLY 'A' KNOWED."

BY VIRGINIA D. YOUNG.

"Yes, doctor, Vi'let Ann is a-going to peg out, I do believe. 'Pears like she don't git no better. She can't tend ter her bizness no more. Everything here is a-going to the dogs."

As if to emphasize his speech Jefferson Smart kicked old Rover, who was standing in the doorway, and threw a quid of tobacco from his cheek. Ths doctor's observant eyes noted the dirty floors, soiled bedding, the hearth strewed with walnut hulls and sugar cane shucks, and as he glanced at the unkempt and dismal-eyed woman sitting drearily on the side of the unmade bed, he mentally decided Jefferson was right and the end not far off. The dark and dirty house and yard did not look like a rich man's premises, but its owner paid taxes on eight hundred acres of rich cotton land, had money in bank, and railroad stock, several mills and mortgages besides, so that his neighbors accounted him "one of the best off" among them. He had accumulated property by "hard licks," as he was wont to say. Up before day in the morning, eating his frugal breakfast by a tallow dip, at the plow with the dawn; such had been his life habit, and everything about him was driven with the same tight rein and exacting spirit. His diligence never relaxed, even on Sunday, which day he spent in walking over his fields, planning work for the next week.

The sharer of all his toils and savings was Vi'let Ann, his wife, the two having entered into wedlock at nineteen and eighteen years respectively. Vi'let Ann was the daughter of a well-to-do farmer, and might have had some education, but she was indifferent to such opportunities, and falling in love with Jefferson Smart's handsome face, she ran away and married him.

He proved an unmitigated Turk in his masterful assumption of absolute ownership. His wife he regarded as a piece of property to bring in revenue, as much as his milk cow or plow mule. She had worked side by side with him for years, no flinching, no flagging on her part. She was physically as strong as he, and turned back from no burden laid upon her in tending the crop, or keeping the house. A fortnight at farthest, often a week only, after the coming of the baby, Vi'let Ann would be out, plowing, hoeing, washing, milking, scouring, or "making garden." She was quite content, too, with her narrow life and insulated ideas. So seldom did she look at printed matter she almost forgot how to read and could scarcely write her name. Like Jefferson, she was very ambitious to be rich, to lay up a store of money for the fast coming children. To help her husband make and save, she wore the coarsest clothes and lived on the cheapest food.

Notwithstanding Jeff's domineering temper and ill-natured tongue, Vi'let Ann took much comfort in his handsome face and fidelity to her. She often said she "could stand anything so long as he did not make her jealous." Her first boy, whom, like many a better educated mother, she considered perfection, was about ten years old when one cold winter day, Jeff brought home a keg of whisky which he stowed carefully in the closet, and locking the door put the key in his pocket.

"What's that?" the wife asked, with a suspicious look at her husband's flushed face.

"Nothin' but whisky." he answered shortly. "None of your bizness, is it? The doctor sez I 'needs a tonic to keep off chills,' and I'm gwine to put cherry tree bark in it and drink it myself, and give you a little and the boys, too. 'A little won't hurt,' the doctor says."

So Vi'let Ann acquiesced in the dicta of her master, and said nothing when she saw her husband falling into the habit of taking a dram at dinner, and after a while "a drop in the mornin'," and then another drop at night "to keep off the ager." Sometimes he offered her a glass, when she put sugar and water with it and swallowed the "dose" without a word, and was also silent when little Sam, then Bob, and at last "Jeems" were invited to drain the sugared dregs in the bottom of the glass.

Vi'let Ann was an honest, hardworking woman in those days, but love had not yet opened her eyes and selfishness blinded her to the nature of the evil thing she was letting take foothold in her home. Ignorant as she was, she thought when she toiled and saved eighteen hours out of the twenty-four for sons and husband she was doing her whole duty. Her first awakening was when her oldest born, Sam, was brought home from Holly Hill, the Fourth of July, in a state of insensibility. Though he was heavily charged with the fumes of whisky his mother chose to call it a "bad fit of the dumb chills," and nursed him through it faithfully. But she asked him when he got better to promise her never to drink again. For some months Sam kept his pledge, and his father would go slyly to the closet and take his dram behind the door.

Jefferson had not become what you would call a drunkard in all those years. He drank a little every day, worked hard, lived in the open air and was abstemious and simple in the food he ate. But though he kept on making money, and did not altogether lose his good looks, he "suffered in his bones," for a dreadful rheumatism had attacked him, and gave him no ease night nor day; his heart, too, was giving him trouble. But these monitions from his abused body did not deter him from what he called "a Christmas frolic," which poor Vi'let Ann had discovered meant such an increase of drams as "turned Jeff a fool." Sam couldn't see pap "get tight" and not come in for his share of the "fun." Such an orgy was to the wife and mother, as she expressed it, "torment," a word she pronounced in lowered tones as she might speak of the evil one. Said she, "I'd jest as lief been in torment as to see Jeff and Sam doing like they was plum gone mad."

Alas! this was the beginning of a frequent experience. A few weeks of work and comparative quiet, the latter enlivened by the father's angry remonstrances and ferocious threats and Sam would be drunk again, Bob joining with him and then little Jeems. In those intervals of abstinence and sulky industry, poor Vi'let Ann would plead with her boys, but if Jefferson Smart heard her he would shut her up with curses and accusations of being the author of it all. "If you hadn't never drinked it yourself nor let me bring it in the house, all this here ruination wouldn't never 'a' come." The words sank deep into the mother's heart. She was so accustomed to think whatever he said was true, that her conscience tortured her as the author of her boys' ruin; and before any one suspected the failure of her powers, the strength of this Samsoness suddenly gave way. "I ain't got no heart to do anything," she said to a sympathizing friend, who tried to cheer her. "'Tain't no use now. If I hed only knowed the natur of whisky I might have saved my boys; but they is done passed saving,—their promises ain't nothin', they breaks 'em fast as they makes 'em and I can't stop 'em. I'm all wore out and nothing to show for the work I've done. My Lord! if I hed only 'a' knowed!" And with this plaint on her lips the miserable mother passed away, her life closing in blackest shadow, while yet it should have been high noon.

SOME WAYS OF SOME WOMEN.

II.

On a narrow gauge railway between two chief towns in a great state, an important looking woman took a seat in the ladies' coach, and at the same time a keen scrutiny of her fellow travelers. It was not many moments till she essayed a conversation with two tall women in front of her. Dwellers along that line felt a kind of proprietorship in the road, so the "free and easy" tone, and distinctness of utterance of these women caused but a quiet glance and the shrug of an eyebrow in the rest of the passengers. In a few minutes the bold and skilled fire of the new-comer had made everybody at her end of the car aware that the tall women were just returning from a two months' begging tour of the state in the interests of a Catholic Orphan Asylum.

"Is that young widow, Amanda Morrison, living in your town yet?"

"Yes."

"Do you know her?"

"We see her sometimes."

"Does she have much company?"

"She seems to have a good deal."

"Men or women?"

"She's very popular and has much attention from gentlemen."

By that time everybody was listening, for the young widow mentioned was a member of a well-known family in that part of the state, a fine, bright girl who had lost her husband under circumstances which had enlisted universal sympathy for her and for her young husband's family.

"You know," continued the important woman, "her father didn't want her to go to town, but she would—wasn't going to stand the dullness of the plantation, and just left her father and mother by themselves—and she's there enjoying herself."

The fact of the case was that this high-spirited young woman, full of capabilities, with not a cent of income of her own, felt that she ought to become self-supporting and had bravely gone to work, with noble self-respect, to bear her share of life's burdens. Nobody else in the car seemed to wish to talk, but there was a rustle of restlessness in the air that spoke volumes.

"She's pretty gay, pretty gay! Is anybody special paying her attention?"

"Yes, several, I've heard, but one gentleman in particular."

The interrogator leaned forward, and with a nauseous intensity of curiosity, asked: "Is he a married man?"

There was a pin-dropping stillness for a moment; then, just in front of this talker rose a slender woman with eyes ablaze; turning to her she said: "I'm ashamed of my sex. 'The poison of asps is under their lips.' I've never seen that young woman, but I know her own and her husband's families, and 'a sweeter woman ne'er drew breath' than she is esteemed to be. I won't sit still and see women dishonor themselves and slander another woman without my protest."

There was a clapping of hands all over the car. Just then the train stopped, and the "important woman" slunk off with "a flea in her ear." She was not a wicked woman, but an inexpiably careless, irresponsible one, and the results of weakness are the same as those of wickedness.

No man would dare to give vent to his idle thought in a public conveyance as did that woman, because a man is held strictly accountable for his words, and caution governs him when principle may not.

The most irresponsible creature on earth is a college boy, and next to him a thoughtless woman who has not been made to realize that every woman's name should be her sacred charge. There is a sort of free-masonry among men that challenges admiration; they are very true to each other, and women would do well to copy masculine silence as to the faults of their kind.

Woman in general has been much occupied with the petty cares or frivolities of life. Nothing is helping so much to correct the dwarfing processes in her nature as the associate life she is entering in literary and benevolent societies, woman's clubs and the W. C. T. U. The empty places in her soul are filling with large things and she is breathing some of the freer air that makes a man's life broad as the wide world. H. B. K.

If you would confirm an opponent in his opinions argue with him. Cicero's rule was the true one: "First conciliate your audience; next reach them impersonally with your principles and methods."

The Salvation Army has made it absolutely fashionable to work among the most degraded, so that it has become a cant expression at the West End, in London, "Let us go slumming," by which they mean "Let us work among the slums of London."

UNION SIGNAL

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

FRANCES E. WILLARD, LADY HENRY SOMERSET, MARY ALLEN WEST, } EDITORS.

MARGARET A. SUDDUTH, MRS. HARRIET B. KELLS, } OFFICE EDITORS.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.
MRS. F. H RASTALL, Business Manager.
161 La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

DEP'T BOOKS AND LEAFLETS.—ALICE M. GUERNSEY, Editor.

Entered at the Post-office, Chicago, Ill., as second-class matter.

W. C. T. U. COURSE OF STUDY—APRIL READINGS

Bible.—Wisdom. Frances J. Barnes.
Responsive.—"Wherewithal shall we be clothed?" Mrs. Frances J. Barnes.
Topical.—National Leaflets No. 53. Our Bondage. Leaflets for Mothers' Meetings No 5, Dress and Vice; No. 9, Bad Hygiene vs. Virtue. Social Purity Series No. 4, Simplicity of Attire. Glimpses of Fifty Years, pp. 631–635. Childhood, Its Care and Culture, pp. 48-51.

For God is not unrighteous to forget your work and labor of love, which ye have shewed toward His name, in that ye have ministered to the saints, and do minister.—Heb. 6. 10.

HOW TO MAKE OUR CONVENTIONS A SUCCESS.

PREPARATION.

One of the main points is to have the convention, at least in its surroundings, character and conduct free from the distinctive features large conventions conducted by men. If women can bring no flavor of personality into their work, and most of all into their conventions, then they are but imitators. Let the home thought, that was the germ of our great endeavor, be everywhere manifested in the decorations of our building. Especially should the platform present the aspect of a parlor, rather than retain the bare, forlorn look usually noticed in conventions of men. Make it attractive with clear light, graceful ferns, flowers, fruits, pictures, mottoes, banners, bannerettes and flags. The white-ribboners have brought this branch to such perfection that it is the charm and wonder of those who attend. The Boston Convention excelled all others in these particulars.

Convenience should be carefully studied. Have ample accommodations for the officers. Let their tables be large and with drawers that lock, thus enabling them to avoid carrying important papers back and forth. Provide an abundance of waste paper baskets, and if a waste paper bag could be furnished for each pew, it would do much to diminish the execrations of the janitor. Have a committee on ventilation, so that the presiding officer shall not be obliged continually to cry out for fresh air.

Each delegation should be indicated by a little bannerette bearing the name of the county, district or state from which it came. The tables of the different secretaries should be indicated by little placards thus: Recording Secretary, Corresponding Secretary, Treasurer, Railway Secretary, Press Superintendent, etc.

If possible, have the convention lunch in or near the building where it assembles and furnish some hot dishes. It has been reported by delegates to some of our minor conventions that they wonder how they lived through the convention with its long hours, unventilated auditorium, food taken hastily on the run and often less nutritious than the home tables furnish.

Open the largest possible number of churches to the delegates on Sunday. This is a most valuable means of education. For this purpose appoint a committee with experience and rare conciliatory powers. Sixty churches were occupied by our white-ribboners at the Boston Convention. A printed form should be made out containing the name of each speaker and the church to which she is to go, and stating when and where escort or carriage will call for her. Every convention should hold over Sunday, that meetings may be thus arranged for and also for the higher reason that more spiritual power is developed in the convention that includes the Sabbath day.

USE THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Provide amply for the press. It is surprising that after all these years our good women seem to have so little appreciation of their duty to the general public by way of sending out Associated Press dispatches each day, giving a summarized account of their proceedings. This would go to tens and hundreds of thousands, sometimes to millions, while the proceedings inside the auditorium will be known only to a few thousands. It seems to us a sin that through carelessness no effort should be made to reach the great public which is satiated with murders and other horrors through the daily press. If we can turn one pure rill of light and sympathy into those columns, it is as much a duty as going to prayer-meeting. Select, then, one of your best women who can write rapidly, clearly and wisely. Let her agree to furnish the points to the Associated Press agent of the town where the convention is held. She should ascertain the latest hour at which it will be safe to take her manuscript to this important purveyor of news. Whatever else fails, be sure to have the facts concerning the convention go out over the wires each day. This cannot be too strongly emphasized for there is hardly another oversight among our workers so general and so greatly to be regretted.

COLLECTION.

Let the collection be called the "free-will offering." This phrase is not outworn, is instructive, pleasing and uplifting to the spirit. Let the explanatory remarks be brief and pointed, and have one set of your collectors begin at the front end of the audience room, and the other at the rear so that between the two no guilty man or woman shall escape. It is customary to divide the collection at state conventions between the state and local unions on a basis mutually agreed upon by the officers of the two societies. As both have combined to bring about the conditions that make a convention possible, it would seem fair that these receipts be equally divided.

OPENING AND CLOSING EXERCISES.

To open the convention it seems to us the best method is to have the officers on the platform repeat in concert the first verse of the Crusade Hymn, or the 146th Psalm, the first Scripture read in connection with the great uprising in Hillsboro, read in responsive verses, all having in hand the same printed on slips for that purpose. Then let all join in singing the first hymn sung by the first praying band, "Give to the winds thy fears, hope and be undismayed." Then let some one lead in prayer, closing with the Lord's Prayer in which all join. This is an historical order and an inspiring way of opening the convention.

For the closing exercises a responsive reading is desirable, When this is over, let all join in singing, with clasped hands all over the house, "Blest be the tie that binds," and then after prayer, "God be with you till we meet again," after which the president or the officers on the platform, or the entire convention might well unite in repeating that beautiful verse: "The Lord bless thee and keep thee; the Lord make His face shine upon thee and be gracious unto thee; the Lord lift up His countenance upon thee and give thee peace."

When this is over, we have sometimes seen the officers arrange themselves, either on the platform or in front of it, and the convention in an orderly manner, beginning at one side, pass around the church, shaking hands with each officer, meanwhile both officers and delegates singing an appropriate hymn to a martial tune, by which an audience can march. This is a most simple, sympathetic and satisfactory way of closing the convention.

MOTTOES.

Among the excellent mottoes that have been given by women by which the convention can be made interesting, some of our leaders have sent the following; "Stick to business; don't consume too much time with introductions." "Induce some of our women not to speak so often and give the new ones a chance." "Agree to disagree." "Be sure to have a clock that strikes the hours near the platform, that the officers and convention may thus be reminded how fast time flies. It will also be a reminder of the noontide hour of prayer." "Rejoice in all good work done by others; but don't feel that you must report for all of your own." "Stick to the program so far as possible." "Exclude book agents from the platform."

ORDER.

All other questions sink into comparative insignificance in the presence of the question, "How shall we preserve order?" Officers are obliged to communicate with their advisers, and are continually solicited through messages and notes until it is well-nigh impossible for them to give proper attention to their duties. To obviate this let us make the following suggestions as the result of eighteen years uninterrupted attendance at conventions, county, district, state and National:

1. Appoint a woman of level head, good disposition and deep ringing voice as sergeant-at-arms, the very first thing after the convention reaches its business hour. In large conventions there should be one for each aisle. This year we decided in Boston that we would also have a sergeant-at-arms for the platform, whose duty should be to intercept notes on the way to the president and other officers, attending to the requests therein if possible, and who would do her utmost to prevent whispering among that large group of visitors who are invited to the platform, who feel no responsibility for the convention and who would naturally be inclined to indulge in conversation, not always whispered, with whoever is seated near them. It is a delicate matter to call such to order, but if the sergeant-at-arms can quietly suggest in a half-playful way that the convention takes its cue from the platform, it will be an immense advantage.

2. Let each state president preserve order in her own delegation. This would apply to district presidents in a state convention, and to local presidents in county conventions. Those from the same locality should always sit together and select a chairman of their delegation. If she would then use her persuasive powers upon her members, the president would be free to preserve order in a general way and to attend to her onerous duties.

3. Let each delegate realize that it is her duty, as well as her right, to see that the rules of order are enforced. Let each be a committee of one on listening, also on speaking whenever she feels that she has something valuable to say. Good order will thus be greatly promoted, and the convention will not fall into the error, almost universally observed, of giving up the time to a dozen women, all the rest "sitting by" and saying to themselves that they "wonder those women speak so often," yet never themselves do anything to subdivide the time on a more democratic basis.

INTRODUCTIONS.

A good deal of criticism has been made because so many are introduced at our conventions. To be sure, much time is thus occupied, but we must remember that it does an immense amount of good. In the last eighteen years hundreds of men and women who did not know about our work have been made friendly to us by the courtesies extended in this way. Lines of fraternity have thus been sent out in all directions. It inspires the convention to see men and women of whom they have long heard, and we are sure that to do away with introductions would be most unwise. The best method we have ever found is to appoint early in the first session a committee on courtesies, with one local member and two from a distance. The local member, of course, would be inclined to present too many persons, and her judgment must be modified by that of the two from a distance, the responsibility is also thus taken from her, as she is out-voted. Everything depends upon the judgment of this committee. An ideal chairman will ask the president to invite all other delegates to the platform at once, and all those whose names were on the program. She then consults with her committee and carefully makes out a classified list, which she hands to the president, after having first arranged with those who were to be presented, that they were to come forward in the order in which their names were called. This shortens the exercise greatly, and gives it point and system. The convention should rise as the presentations are made.

SINGING.

We have now reached a high standing in the National, having appointed Mrs. Alice J. Harris as our precentor, and prima donna par excellence. This would be an excellent arrangement in all state and other conventions, and in local unions. The precentor reminds the presiding officers when things are beginning to drag a little that it might be well to have music, and is ready without a moment's delay, if she has good sense, to start some of the grand old songs, dear to the hearts of the women and which they can sing without books. And by way of variety she will also have at each session one solo of the most inspiring character. We can all remember what a thrill went through the audience when our precentor in Boston sang "Victory," which by the way was a song of her own composing, and ought to be introduced everywhere among our workers. Home songs, like "The Old Oaken Bucket," "Gently, Lord, oh, Gently Lead Us," "Home, Sweet Home," are inspiriting and restful to the convention and may well be sung without accompaniment.

IMPORTANT ACCESSORIES.

The local union should appoint a committee of one on music, one on entertainment, one on Associated Press and the press generally, also a telegraph operator and messenger, and a committee on taking care of the packages that are sure to arrive for the convention some days beforehand.

The question-box will be a valuable feature of the convention. Produced when the convention is half over, it will make a pleasant variety, and bring out many questions that were in the hearts of the women and which they greatly desired to hear answered. The question-box has perhaps no greater merit than that it enables the women in the convention to add their thought to the sum total of thought which is set in motion by the convention, for it should be said by the presiding officer that questions are invited from men and women in the audience as well as from the delegates.

All requests for prayers should be sent to the platform and read by the leader of the devotional exercises.

Organizers of young women's work and juvenile work should be on the platform with the other organizers and give their reports. They should also be regular members of the convention. The work they have done warrants this.

Each superintendent should work up a meeting in the interest of her department, holding this, perhaps, on Sunday, if she cannot do it at any other time, and should have at least one conference with the workers who especially desire to ask her questions. She should also be responsible for seeing that the announcements of these meetings are duly made through the press and from the platform.

A table with papers, envelopes, pen, ink, postal cards, reporters' note-books, pads, etc., should be furnished for the gratuitous use of the delegates, if the local union can afford this, which it can if the local stationers will aid and abet, as they are wont to do.

CONCERNING WELCOMES.

The National Convention has been much criticised for having too many welcomes, and this, perhaps, has been true. But when the governor of the state, or some one of its most prominent men, the mayor of the city, leading representatives of the pulpit and press are induced to speak and thus show an interest in the work, the welcomes become most significant, and greatly help in the formation of public sentiment. The white-ribbon representatives have been from the different sections of the country, because we wished to bring out the wideness and variety of our work. A careful study of the significance of welcomes should be had and a decision made accordingly.

MEETINGS.

A gospel temperance meeting should be held in some opera house on Sunday afternoon at an hour that does not interfere with church services and this meeting should be an established institution of every convention. This is surprisingly neglected and we sustain a corresponding loss in the reënforcement of our numbers as the years go by. The same is true of a meeting for young people, which might be held on Saturday evening, as we now hold the young women's meeting of the National W. C. T. U. A purity meeting should be held at every convention and addressed by some one who can handle with great care and delicacy this vital but difficult theme.

LITERATURE.

An immense amount of literature is sent to our convention in these days. Tables should be provided in the vestibule or vestry but no buying or selling should be carried on in the auditorium where the convention is held, as it entails more real loss than gain by reason of the confusion thus introduced. Our own publishing house should have the right of way as to location, others coming in for the second place.

In the convention it is well to vary the program by inviting ten minute addresses from a few experts who are not of our guild. Subjects thus treated by leaders in reform, education and literature will add to the general interest. The number of minutes to be occupied by each speaker should be decided at the executive session preceding the opening of the convention, and a small bell should accentuate the expiration of the time prescribed. Mrs. Hannah J. Bailey, of Maine, has served us well in this capacity.

NOONTIDE HOUR OF PRAYER.

From eleven to twelve o'clock daily should be set aside for a religious service. Nothing will do more to build up our workers in our most holy faith. This should be under the care of an evangelist, rather than any sect or denomination, and should be closed with the noon hour services. Miss Greenwood, our National superintendent, has done admirable work in planning and carrying forward this service.

So much in the way of suggestion. We shall be glad to receive questions and further hints and helps from women of experience.

ALCOHOLIC LIQUORS AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

New occasions teach new duties. America has a new atmosphere. No matter if more liquor is sold than at any previous time, that simply shows that we have a large and constantly increasing percentage of immigration from other countries that is as yet without knowledge of the scientific, economic, and other well-reasoned arguments against the use of poisonous drinks. The forcible classes in America are gradually becoming clean from this habit.

As the years pass by, the number of wine banquets given by railroad, professional and business men diminishes; the number of wine-glasses on hotel tables decreases. Lady Henry Somerset, who has been in many first-class hotels during the first six months of her trip to America, says that no feature of our national life has impressed her more strongly than the absence of wine from public tables. When the Pan-American Commission was in Washington, and Mrs. General Henderson, wife of the chairman of the commission, entertained them in her costly home, and when she was thanked by white-ribbon leaders for offering no wine, she wrote that her action was not singular, as wine at dinner tables in Washington was now often conspicuous by its absence. The Knights of Labor, by their pledge not to use intoxicants at their entertainments, have strongly demonstrated the improvement among those from whom such a reform was not expected, but who are doing more to honor the temperance cause than is understood by those who are not students of the temperance and the labor questions. Railroads and other corporations have immensely increased the power of the total abstinence propaganda by their rules prohibiting beer and other intoxicants to their employés. Scientific temperance instruction is now required by law in the public schools of every one of the forty-four states except nine, and in all the territories and schools supported in whole or in part by the United States. Students of natural law are ranging themselves in a well-nigh solid column on the side of purity in daily life, as a prerequisite of the best and happiest manhood. The youth who does not use tobacco or alcoholic drinks stands a much better chance of securing employment, and of rising in the world. This is universally admitted, and carries with it a force that is impelling the potent classes in this nation along the path of total abstinence beyond any direct efforts made by reformers or philanthropists. "Be good to yourself" is a motto that is well-nigh compelling in this thrifty Yankee nation. The great emphasis now being placed upon physical development and education, the prominence given to athletics for both sexes, the universally admitted fact that specialists in these exercises must let intoxicants alone, all prove the power of that enlightened public opinion which has made America the foremost total abstinence nation of the globe.

We have more responsibility than in the centennial year, when liquors were dispensed at the World's Fair, and we believe it is our duty for these reasons to dispense with them in 1893. We believe it to be unscientific, inappropriate and un-American to put upon the public tables of the Exposition, beverages whose attractive ingredient is alcohol, when we know that alcohol is the most subtle of brain poisons, and the chief deteriorator of those thinking powers of the human race which have evolved the Exposition. Let us, then, provide for youth and maiden, boy and girl, tables where they can sit down in security and peace. For these reasons, the white-ribboners of every state and nation, and the world at large have combined in the request respectful, earnest and prayer-considered, that the board of managers, and the ladies' board of managers shall, by their votes, exclude intoxicating beverages from the World's Fair.

The following communication was sent from the World's officers last week:

To the Directors of the World's Columbian Exposition:

We respectfully and most earnestly request that the sale of intoxicating liquors as a drink may not be licensed or in any wise permitted on the Exposition grounds. We urge this for many reasons, founded in patriotism, philanthropy and the Christian religion that has made this nation great. But as home makers and guardians of children and youth, the women of the white ribbon societies would intercede for the inexperienced, untaught and tempted, that the danger of drink be not placed before them in café and restaurant where they must go for refreshments, and where those who have never before been thus exposed must, if alcoholics are permitted, meet dangers from which their youth pleads for protection from the wise and experienced men and women who manage the World's Fair. Yours, on behalf of the World's W. C. T. U., with the earnest hope of success in this plea,

FRANCES E. WILLARD,
Pres. World's W. C. T. U.
ISABEL SOMERSET,
V. P. at large of W. W. C. T. U.
MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Secretary.
ANNA A. GORDON, Ass't Sec.
ELLA E. F. WILLIAMS, Treasurer.

MICHIGAN W. C. T. U. is ever alert on current issues, as witness the following letter addressed to each Congressman of the United States:

Dear Sir:—We address you in the name of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Michigan, and ask you to use your influence and official power to reverse the recent decision of the Local Managers of the World's Columbian Exposition, by which they permit the sale of intoxicating liquors upon the grounds, and become partners in such sale by accepting a revenue therefrom. We make earnest protest against the easy moral sentiment in very high places, which says: "The people of the world are coming to see us and must have what they want." As we claim a higher civilization than any in the family of nations, let it be illustrated at its best. We also unite with the highest Christian thought in urging that the Exposition be closed on the Sabbath. This republic should refuse to lower its ideals, or abrogate its laws, to satisfy the clamor of either greed or viciousness, since all we are in the outgrowth of principles entirely opposed to that which lies back of such clamor. In behalf of twelve thousand white ribbon women of Michigan,

MARY T. LATHRAP, Pres.
EMMA A. WHEELER, Sec.

The Watch-Tower.

Labor: All labor is noble and holy. "My father worketh hitherto, and I work." This utterance forever dignifies the toil of the humblest man or woman who has that crown of sweat on their forehead which God sends. "Be not simply good; be good for something." Let us not be drones in the great human hive, but happy and helpful gathering honey-bees.

***

It is my deliberate conviction that men have carried the higher civilization just as far as they can alone. They vainly attempt to play the part of the mother to a half-orphan world. They can no more do this in the state than in the home.

***

A bright little girl said a few days ago: "We are all Prohibitionists at our house, but we do not do any harm or good." When asked to explain this state of things she said: "Mother is a Prohibitionist and cannot vote for it; father is a Prohibitionist and won't vote for it; so it don't do anybody any good or anybody any harm." That little girl was a philosopher.

***

One of America's leading journalists makes the following very sensible remark: "It is a striking commentary on our conception of the meaning and privileges of life that we all fall to and marvel that Lady Henry Somerset who, if she choose, could simply dine and dance and make money, should deliberately choose to live a spiritual rather than a merely physical life. Do we believe then that the higher happiness lies in mere material self-indulgence?"

***

One of the best definitions of liberty is this, from the poet Coleridge: "Liberty is universal license to be good!"

***

A French gentleman, Paul de Rouissers, has just published a book entitled "American Life," in which he unconsciously pays a high tribute to our nation, in the following sentence. He says, "The first impression of a stranger is that there are no sexes in the United States. Girls and boys walk to school side by side; they sit on the same benches; they have the same lessons and go about the streets alone." This simple fact shows how far we are in this country on the road to that blessed consummation, a white life for two.

***

From Japan comes a pink covered pamphlet whose cabalistic characters would be utterly unintelligible, but for the lines of English on the cover saying, "Temperance Training in the Home, by Mary Allen West, translated by Sho Nemoto." This shows it to be a chapter out of "Childhood: Its Care and Culture," whose world-wide application Sho Nemoto has recognized and utilized.

***

Bishop Whipple, that genial Christian, while traveling throughout the Northwest, says that he once met a man—a scholar—who told him that he had read every book that he could get which assailed Christianity, and he should have become an infidel but for three things:

First. I am a man. I am going somewhere. To-day I am a day nearer the grave than I was last night. I have read all that these books offer me, and they shed not one solitary ray of light or hope upon the darkness. They shall not take away the only good I have ever known and leave me blind.

Second. I had a mother. I saw her go down into the dark valley where I am sure to go. She leaned upon the arm that was invisible to me, as calmly as a child goes to sleep on its mother's breast.

Third. I have three motherless daughters. They have no one but myself. I would rather kill them than leave them in this world if you drop out from it the teachings of the gospel.

***

It is said that Mr. William Waldorf Astor was talked of at a cabinet meeting some time ago in connection with the mission to China, and Secretary Rusk wittily remarked: "Excellent! A China Astor, by all means."

***

Another occupation has been added to those entered in by women. For the first time in the history of Chicago, it has a woman bridge tender, Mrs. David Power, an intelligent woman of about thirty-five years of age, whose husband, long and faithfully employed as a bridge tender, has lately died. She is thus able to honestly support her three children, and the city has shown its friendliness towards woman. It goes without saying that there were no end of applications from men, but, for the reasons stated, the position was given to a woman—to one who it is well known, will be faithful, and has had experience in the work to which she is now suddenly called.

ON DUTY

News from the Field.

MARYLAND MOVINGS.

"There's a light about to break,
There's a day about to dawn;
Men of thought and men of action,
Clear the way!"

An interesting and suggestive report of the first month of evening work among men, at state headquarters, Baltimore, has just been made by Mr. Louis Cassard, Jr., the devoted leader of this movement. Mr. Cassard says, in part, "Best of all, we have had 'God with us,' and in no former effort in which we have been engaged has He so honored His work. The meetings have been held on Tuesday and Thursday evenings, and have been preceded by a light lunch. The plan for an open room every night was under consideration, but we found we were not quite ready for this. We have been surprised to find that we could furnish twelve pint cups of coffee, with sugar, for fifteen cents. The expenses have been more than met by the Young People's Monday night class at Mt. Vernon M. E. Church, and the effects of this work are being felt in some of our churches. One important church has offered us its entire edifice, including the main audience room, but we believe 'headquarters' is the place for 'fishing,' and we look to the churches to take care of the 'fish.' Seventy-two men have signed the pledge, and employment has been obtained for about forty."

The importance of obtaining work for men who need it is dwelt upon in the report, and also the "positive blessing" in the numerous dairy lunch rooms opened in Baltimore in the last few years. "We believe," says Mr. Cassard, "in the good time coming, when hot coffee, tea or chocolate will be furnished at such moderate figures that the dram-shops will lose much of their hold on these people."

A similar belief is held by Mr. Lawrence Turnbull, of Baltimore, an ardent Prohibitionist of wealth and culture, whose various plans to forward this work must result in much good. Mr. Turnbull's thought is that the establishment of attractive places for the sale of non-alcoholic drinks of different kinds in the immediate vicinity of saloons, would do much to offset the influences of the saloon; that numbers of such small places would be of far more value than the establishment of one, or a few large places; that this work could be done by churches or associations, or individuals, each, for instance, establishing one, and that such places would be self-supporting eventually. This appears to be a most practical effort toward solving the problem that has consumed much attention here for some time, "How shall we reach the masses?"

Another valuable suggestion by Mr. Turnbull is that laws relating to the issue of liquor licenses should be so amended that the applicant should be required to secure the signatures to his petition of a majority of the qualified voters residing within two squares, in each direction, from the premises for which a license is asked; and also that a printed notice of the application and date of hearing should be served at every house and store within two squares, in each direction, from the premises in addition to the advertisement in the papers.

Interest in work for the masses in our large communities has been aroused to greater activity here through the recent annual meeting of the Baltimore Society for the Suppression of Vice. Mr. Herbert Welsh, of Philadelphia, secretary of the Indian Relief Association, and prominently identified also with the Law and Order League, and Rev. John L. Scudder, pastor of the Jersey City Tabernacle, and president of the People's Palace Work in that city, were the principal speakers. Mr. Welsh spoke on "Features of the Moral Growth of an American City," and among many admirable things said that "the essential and most conspicuous obstacles in the way of an immediate, healthful and vigorous development in the moral life of our cities in which, be it remembered, their material development is also involved, are the almost complete subserviency to party prejudice, which controls the voter, and the indifference on the part of large numbers of the best people, which withdraws them from all concerned in the performance of political duty, or keeps them in ignorance of the essential facts and truths. Ours is the problem of breaking this slumber and of opening the eyes of the really good citizens to shirked responsibilities, unperceived privileges and false lines of action. This is the first step to be taken and it is the one which costs.

Mr. Scudder's topic was "Unpractical Piety the Cause of City Immorality." "An excessive growth of immorality," said he, "is our own fault. We get just what we want, for the respectable people are in the majority. Unpractical religion is the reason for this immorality. We divorce our politics from our religion. To fight vice we want the two brought closer together. We are almost wearing our knees bare, praying to God to help us when we can do what we want by our own efforts. Another exhibition of unpractical piety is the division that exists among Christians. Another, that we work largely on the principle of cure rather than prevention. Are we competing with vice? If we will be practical and wish to defeat immorality by making men moral, we must give them some substitute for the saloon."

The regular quarterly meeting of the Baltimore city union, comprising twenty-four local unions, was held at the Boundary Avenue Presbyterian Church.

Miss Lydia J. Newcomb, of Michigan, and Mrs. Mary A. Livermore, of Massachusetts, were among the attractions. Miss Newcomb gave an interesting talk on "The Religion of the Body and its Relation to the Temperance Cause." Mrs. Livermore gave several brief and bright talks on various phases of the work, mainly in connection with the conventions of the World's and National unions in Boston. Mrs. Livermore stated that the temperance work there had been set forward twenty-five years through having these conventions in Boston; that the tone of the papers, previously unfriendly, had changed completely, and that having the convention would be the best thing Maryland could do to advance the work here. Impressions of the convention were also given by several others.

The securing of police matrons was discussed, and a committee appointed to take charge of this work. A matron for the Central Police Station was secured some years ago through the efforts of members of the union. The union was favored in having also Mrs. F. E. W. Harper, National organizer of work among colored people. Mrs. Harper spoke of the work principally in connection with that she was about to begin in Baltimore.

Mrs. Livermore was the speaker of the evening, and her subject, "The Responsibility of Christians for the Drink Traffic," was treated in her well-known admirable manner.

A lecture was given during the week following this meeting, under the auspices of this union, by Dr. Kate Mitchell, of London, England, with whom the members were much pleased. Extremely inclement weather interfered sadly with the success of this meeting.

A drawing-room tea, given by the Woodbridge Y. W. C. T. U. of Baltimore at the beautiful home of Miss A. Louise Baldwin, must be noted among recent interesting events. Miss Katherine Pearson Woods, the author, gave a studious and telling address on "Woman's Influence," embodying the thought in the words of Faust, "The woman's soul leadeth us upward and on." Brief talks were given also by Mrs. Baldwin, Mrs. Robinson and Mrs. Lake. Miss Katherine Willard, of Berlin, rendered most expressively a charming "Lullaby" and other musical selections added greatly to the enjoyment of the occasion. "The power of thought; the magic of the mind," was suggested by a remark made by one of the young ladies; "the girls here look so much prettier than those you generally see at afternoon teas." A more admirable method than this for influencing girls in society could scarcely be devised.

A Demorest medal contest, held by the Y. W. C. T. U. of Mt. Washington, must also be recorded. The program was well selected; the church was prettily decorated, and the audience large. Miss Fannie Brenize was awarded the medal, a silver one. This is the second contest held by the Mt. Washington union.

The Chestertown union rejoices in having opened a room for headquarters, centrally located in the business part of the town, on the main street.

The teaching of sewing in the public schools of Baltimore, for which the W. C. T. U. and other philanthropic bodies have petitioned, has been decided upon by the school board, and an appropriation of money for this purpose asked of the city council. The importance of having women on the school boards has been clearly demonstrated in this connection.

Miss E. W. Greenwood, of Brooklyn, N. Y., will begin a series of Bible readings in Baltimore shortly.

M. A. L.,
State Reporter, Mt. Washington.

NEW JERSEY.

SEASONS OF REFRESHING.

The month of February has been full of good things to the W. C. T. U. No. 1 of Trenton. First came Dr. Kate Mitchell, of England, in two most clear and logical lectures on the use of alcohol from a scientific standpoint, proving most convincingly that alcohol is neither a heat-producer nor tissue-maker, but only a waster of all the functions. The scope of these lectures has been most clear and helpful, just what "our folks" need to make them intelligent instructors to the youth who will in the future outlaw the saloon.

Closely following came the sixteenth anniversary exercises in Taylor opera house, which has a seating capacity of two thousand. Yet even then standing room was at a premium. As our eyes took in the situation and compared the then and now, we could but exclaim, "What cannot persistent work do with God's blessing?" For we clearly recall the ways devised to attract the people to our anniversaries in the time not so long ago; and this crowded enthusiastic house seemed a realization of work accomplished. Prominent business men and ministers, with members of the union filled the platform. The decorations were beautiful and appropriate.

Dr. Studdeford, of the Third Presbyterian church, read most impressively from the Bible, the story of the prodigal son. Dr. Joseph Smith, of State street Methodist Episcopal church, offered prayer, not a perfunctory prayer, but one that carried each individual and the temperance cause right up to the very throne of God.

Miss A. T. Baily, secretary, read a most interesting and exhaustive report, from which we gather a few items. Five thousand four hundred and fifty-six tracts, and 5,079 papers have been distributed at prison, almshouse, jail and public meetings. Good work has been done in Loyal Temperance Legion, also among district messenger boys, newsboys and boot-blacks. Christmas dinners were sent out in baskets to families of the worthy poor, and thus 375 persons had a bountiful Christmas feast.

Although educational effort has been largely a prominent feature of work, yet public sentiment has not been allowed to lie dormant for lack of noted speakers, among whom were Mrs. Hoffman, Mrs. Chapin, Mrs. Barney, Layah Barakat, of Syria, and our own promoted leader, Mrs. S. J. C. Downs, of whom the secretary says: "Not one has left a more lasting impression upon those who knew the earnest and whole-hearted service she gave to the cause." Through the work of this union the only public library in Trenton is successfully carried on. Over 19,000 readers have come to the rooms, exclusive of those who came to exchange books. The report of the treasurer showed receipts to be $2.804; disbursements, $2,732.

Mrs. C. H. Wevill, of Philadelphia, at different times, sang in a voice both strong and sweet, several very fine selections. The corresponding secretary of the state, Mrs. M. B. Ellis, was the speaker of the evening, and gave as stated in the morning daily, "one of the most touching appeals to the human heart against intemperance ever heard in this city, and at the close was accorded the heartiest applause." Following this, Mrs. Ellis gave a series of meetings during the week in Library Hall, at the prison, and in the churches, which were highly appreciated.

One delightful feature of the week was the "afternoon tea." Cards were issued to the members, with the request that they bring a friend; about one hundred were present. After an informal talk by Mrs. Ellis, on the joy of service in the temperance work, a social hour with light refreshments was enjoyed, and twenty-eight new members were gained. As one after another passed out they expressed themselves as "delighted and profited." Indeed, so far as I can learn, all are agreed that nothing has done us so much good for a long time as this week's visit of Mrs. Ellis. God speed her.

The supreme court has declared as unconstitutional, the law which robbed boroughs of the right to grant licenses, and although an appeal has been taken to the court of errors before final decision is reached, temperance folks regard victory as sure.

Morality was aroused as never before, when the most infamous race track bills were introduced in the House. Twenty-five hundred men and women crowded the assembly chamber, representing a constituency of many thousands of our very best law-abiding people, to protest against the passage of said bills, and by their presence and enthusiasm raised such a storm of indignation that the bills are said to be doomed. And yet, the friends of the measures, after several days of reflection, assert that long before this demonstration, these bills had been dead, because so ordered by the political bosses, and that the protest of the good and moral people was practically unnecessary. Ah, well! we can believe as we choose!

Apropos of protests, we could but pray for another indignant uprising, and that against the liquor oligarchy, for all that was said against the race bills could be applied to the liquor curse. All the while the refrain kept running through brain and heart, would God they could see as we see, and enter their protest in November, then there would be no need of such a grand demonstration later on. Now, as then, our law-makers are but the reflection of their constituents, crystallizing their wishes into law. But as I am to write history and not to prophesy I forbear.

N. L. CAMINADE,
State Reporter, Trenton.

INDIANA.

CHEERY NEWS.

The month of February has been a busy one for Indiana W. C. T. U. women. The faithful rank and file, with busy hands and minds, are actively planning and carrying out their different lines of work, and from all parts of the state come cheery news of work accomplished.

Mrs. Ellen Denny, president of Knox county, writes of a new union with twenty-five members at Sandborn. Stewartsville reports excellent union meetings and Demorest medal contests. Scottsburg sends its list of newly elected officers, and speaks in high terms of the visit Miss L. S. Ayers made to them. The members of the West Side union, Terre Haute, each made a Christmas present to their treasury. I make note of this at this late date for the benefit of unions whose treasuries are at a low ebb.

Miss Hay attended the National Woman's Suffrage Association Convention in Washington. Mrs. Balch writes from Frankfort that Mr. D. F. Maish presented the pledge to his school on temperance Sunday. Seventy-two were present and fifty-four signed the pledge. Lyons has just given its third Demorest medal contest, Miss Emma Ross being the successful competitor. The Economy union some time ago served a banquet which was largely attended, and which awakened much interest in their work. Westfield speaks in high praise of Miss Farley's and Miss Palmer's visit. Sheridan union is alive and prayerfully active.

Frances Willard union, of Terre Haute, has increased its membership from ten to twenty-two. They have moved into new quarters at 30 North Fourth street, where they have a free reading-room and employment office open from nine a. m. till nine p. m. each day, except Sundays. A nicely kept fruit and candy stand help to defray necessary expenses.

Mill Grove has an L. T. L. of thirty-one members. Hartford City reports their L. T. L. work in a flourishing condition. College Corner union is urging its people to object to the location of a new saloon in the midst. Union county expects Mrs. Nichols to lecture before their teachers' institute next summer. Let other counties arrange for the same. The Meridian union of Indianapolis are arranging to hold a series of Demorest medal contests among their colored people. Plummer writes encouraging words. Bloomfield keeps seven wall pockets filled with literature for the benefit of the public. Rockport sends a most encouraging report. They lately gave an entertainment at which they cleared $33.85. Rochester writes of Mrs. Nichols and Miss Palmer's visit to them.

The Kokomo union lately held an interesting meeting in the parlors of Mrs. L. E. Richmond, a gray-haired veteran; an excellent paper, prepared by Mrs. M. Sharp, entitled, "Why the W. C. T. U. was organized, When and Where," was read and discussed. A selected poem, "She hath Rowed a Row" was also read. Manilla union celebrated its anniversary at the home of Mrs. C. E. Trees. Mrs. Rhoda Hare, county president, was present. Mrs. Nichols was at Winchester February 12 to speak before that union. La Porte lately had lectures by Mrs. Woodbridge and Mrs. Nichols. Mrs. Balch is again in the field and the counties which sent her a delegate to the Boston convention will soon have the pleasure of a visit from her. Mrs. Nichols has been quite busy in the northern part of the state during the month. Miss Palmer has been at work in Henry and Marion counties the last two months. Mrs. Denny lately held a series of meetings in Dana, Vermilion county. Miss Farley also spent the month in the northern part of the state.

Miss Weeden collected $100 at Vincennes for the Industrial School. Lafayette W. C. T. U. contemplates the erection of a temperance temple. Mrs. Trish organized a colored union at Vincennes. Miss Farley's visit to Eaton resulted in an L. T. L. Marion union holds gospel temperance meetings once a month. Berne union gave an oyster supper to raise funds to send for our state president.

Brookville union has been favored by an address upon scientific temperance, by our state superintendent, Mrs. Harrell. Chalmers union gives a report of busy work done. At Sims the union places its work before the people because each department superintendent lays her plans before the public. Plymouth speaks highly of Mrs. Trish's work there, and of her lecture at an evening meeting. Mrs. Nichols was with them over Sunday, and occupied the pulpit of Rev. Raymond, of the Episcopal Church, both morning and evening. Scottsburg, in a letter to the Organizer, tells what a "Clothes-pin Social" is. Mrs. Cowan, in her report, tells what our women are doing at Fair Oaks, Medaryville, Galveston and Wabash. Mrs. Nichols was engaged for Johnson and Fulton county conventions March 8 and 17, and lectured in Detroit, Michigan, March 10 and 11.

At the De Pauw oratorical contest, Miss Jean Nelson won first honors. Fowler has had the services of Mr. J. B. Stanley; four hundred signed the pledge. Mrs. Nichols recently lectured for the Thorntown union. Her itinerary for January, prepared by herself, shows active work among the women. We feel once more that we have a leader who will come in contact with her constituency. Let every local union send for our state president. Anderson has started an L. T. L. Miss Farley organized an L. T. L. at Milford of twenty-three members.

The death angel has visited us, and among "our loved and lost awhile" we number Mrs. Mary S. Niles, of the La Porte union; Mrs. E. A. Edmondson and Mother Rebecca Egner, of Kokomo; Aunt Hannah H. White, of the Westfield union; Sadie Daglish little daughter of Bro. and Sister Daglish, of the West Side union of Indianapolis; Mrs. Mary Putnam Lemen, mother of our Mrs. Ellen Denny, of Vincennes; Brother Dr. Thomas Mayall, of the Connersville union; Mrs. Jennie E. Walker, daughter of Brother and Sister Robb, of the West Lebanon union, and Baby Victor, little son of Mrs. Dr. Haus, of the Sellersburg union.

Y'S GIRLS.

Misses Dickson and Hay spent Friday, February 12, in Richmond. Mrs. F. T. McWhirter, after Miss Palmer's visit to Greencastle, organized a Y of eighteen active members and fifteen honoraries. This union is named the Lady Henry Y, and will hold its meetings in the Philo Hall, in East College, De Pauw University. Miss Dickson, state superintendent of Y's, organized a Y at Greensburg, February 7, also one of eighteen members at Shelbyville. An honorary member of the New Castle Y is arranging a Bible reading on "Communion Wine." The Franklin Y writes words of commendation of Miss Dickson's visit to them. The Indianapolis Y gave "Ye Hatchet Partie" on the 24th. Miss Hattie Glezen spent about a month in Indianapolis soliciting funds for the Noon Rest. Miss Farley organized a Y at La Grange.

L. T. L. WORK.

"Lame Richie and His Story," is the title of a story written for the L. T. L.'s, by Bessie O. Cushing.

Little Bessie Townsend Robinson, of Selvin, Indiana, aged ten, writes the following for the L. T. L. column in the Organizer:

ST. VALENTINE'S DAY.

St. Valentine comes with his frosty air
His scattering treasures, look out for them, dear!

Here, says one, see what I've got,
Here are my treasures, there's such a great lot!

Here is a cupid, lovely and bright;
There are some doves of a snowy white;

Here is a little bird singing away
From earliest dawn to the close of day.

But here, says one, is the sweetest of all—
A little bird singing, "Don't touch alcohol."

Mrs. Straw's letters to her workers are full of interest and information.

The work among miners this month includes a series of meetings at Oxford Chapel which resulted in the organization of a Total Abstinence Society of one hundred and thirty members. I also assisted Rev. Stump in a series of gospel meetings at Newberg which numbered thirty-four conversions.

SADIE B. WHISTLER,
State Reporter, Terre Haute.

IDAHO.

COUNTY CONVENTION AND OTHER NEWS.

The third semi-annual convention of Ada county W. C. T. U. met at Nampa on the evening of February 17. In the absence of the president, Mrs. Domskin, the convention was called to order by the corresponding secretary, Mrs. Wentz, of Boise City. After devotional exercises the choir sang, "Be ye strong in the Lord." Mrs. Huff, of Nampa, gave a very cordial address of welcome. Mrs. Strangham, of Boise City, responded in well chosen words, gracefully complimenting Nampa for her hospitality.

The choir sang "Handwriting on the Wall," after which Captain Van Etten was introduced. He was greeted with applause; most of the audience had heard him before and were anticipating an eloquent and stirring address. Their expectations were fully realized; he showed very plainly that there are only two sides to the question of temperance and that this contest with the liquor traffic is one of self-preservation.

Thursday morning the convention met in the Presbyterian church. The increased number of members since the last convention was very encouraging, showing that temperance work in Ada county had made great strides the past six months. There were present twenty-eight delegates; one union was not represented.

The reports from the local unions showed that the union at Star has made rapid advancement, part of the secret of their success is the fact that this union meets every week; most of the members live from two to five miles from the place of meeting. Mrs. McDowell's paper on "Scientific Temperance Instruction" showed much thought in preparation.

Mrs. Black, state president, and Captain Van Etten took part in the discussion of this subject. The noontide hour of prayer was observed. A lunch was then served in the church, affording time for friendly greetings, making this a most enjoyable occasion.

At 2 p. m. there were devotional exercises led by Mrs. Barber of Hunter, followed by a very interesting mothers' meeting conducted by Mrs. Stevenson, state superintendent of mothers' meetings and social purity. She took for her subject, "The Mother of Jacob and the Mother of Moses," making a very interesting talk, which was listened to attentively.

Recitations were given by Misses King and Walling, of Nampa. Then came a parliamentary drill, by Mrs. Black, of Nampa, which was ably given.

Among the resolutions adopted was the following:

Resolved, That we, as a convention, representing the unions of Ada county, do appreciate Captain Van Etten's work and thank him most heartily for his untiring and unselfish efforts.

Four new departments of work were taken up, and superintendents appointed. An invitation from Star union that the next convention in June meet there, was accepted. After singing "God be with you till we meet again" the convention adjourned.

The state executive committee met at Boise City February 9 at the residence of Rev. J. H. Barton; nine members were present; the session lasted from 10 a. m. until 3 p. m. At noon a delightful lunch was spread.

Our state organizer, Mrs. Mitchell, labors on in the northern part of the state, meeting with good success. A new union has been organized by her at Volmer, Latah county. Can we, dear sisters, sitting around our firesides in our comfortable homes, appreciate fully the work of these untiring missionaries who first plant the white-ribbon banner? They go to "prepare the way."

MARY E. MCGEE,
State Reporter, Nampa.

OHIO.

IT'S IN THE AIR.

. . . . . Power
Is deed when duty strikes the hour.

"School Suffrage for Women" is the foremost question in the thought and effort of Ohio white-ribboners and equal suffragists to-day. To secure the passage of our school suffrage bill, we have joined hands with the purpose and persistency characteristic of women who are determined to accomplish something because it is right—to be free because God wills it! This bill was introduced to the legislature by Representative Doty, the worthy son of a noble mother. If we win in this struggle we will "thank God and take courage" for the next step. If the bill is lost, we will try, try again, more times, if need be, than were even suggested by the little poem in McGuffey's old Third Reader.

Under the auspices of the Dayton central union, Rev. Dr. Work of that city recently gave a free public lecture on equal suffrage. Lady ushers, each wearing a white rose tied with white ribbon, met and seated the crowds that soon filled the pleasant Y. M. C. A. auditorium. Scripture reading by the president of the West Side union; prayer by a sister from union No. 1, and a fine solo preceded the address. Dr. Work is noted for his humor, sound logic and beauty of expression. The subject was handled in a masterly way. He showed that the woman's rights movement has, from the beginning, been abreast of the temperance reform and the abolition of slavery; that equality in citizenship is right from a Bible standpoint. He quoted from the utterances of eminent statesmen, Lincoln, Sumner, Seward, Chase and Garfield, and such able jurists as Coke and Story, most forcefully showing that by no process of reasoning can women be rightfully excluded from the ballot.

Ohio unions desiring a convincing lecturer on woman's rights should, if possible, secure Dr. Work for one or more addresses. A well-rendered solo, followed by the benediction, completed the program.

Good word comes from Medina county, whose ten unions are wide awake on the Sabbath observance question. Every minister in the county has been requested to preach a sermon on the subject during the month of April, and much suitable literature has been distributed. The county convention was held in the Methodist Church at York. Several unions have made marked advance in membership and interest, and all are helping on. Excellent papers were read by Mrs. Frazier on "The Mercy Department," and by Mrs. Hawley on "Alcohol as a Medicine." Mrs. Hammond's address, "Women and the Bible," was full of good points. This convention voted to raise, if possible, $100 before the first of May, for the Temperance Temple. Upon learning of this action, Miss Lydia Hatch, who was not present, made an early call at Medina W. C. T. U. headquarters, and left five dollars toward the amount.

Mrs. Barnes, National and World's superintendent of Y work, visited the Cleveland Y's in February. Her admirable addresses on "Individual Responsibility," and "Temperance in Literature, Music and Art," were heard with closest attention. A delightful reception was tendered her by the Y's. The music furnished was especially fine. On this occasion a sweet little maiden ten months old, daintily clad in white silk, played a part of her own, not on the program. The child's grandmother, our own Mrs. J. T. Foote, was a Crusader, her parents are members of the Central Y, which Baby Florence Foote wanted to "join." It is needless to say she was accepted, all rising to welcome this reënforcement to their ranks. Mrs. Barnes tied the white ribbon round her arm and, with a kiss knighted her "a white bud of purity." Yes, indeed, let the little ones in! The work of the future must be done by the dimpled hands of to-day.

Dr. Kate Mitchell, of London, at call of Cleveland W. C. T. U. gave two addresses, one to ladies only, subject, "Effects of Alcohol upon Women and Children;" the other was to the general public on "Woman Suffrage." Both were highly appreciated.

Our state president urges prompt activity in behalf of Sabbath observance at the World's Fair. Surely every Christian man and woman should take decided ground on this question. Ohio's exhibit should be closed, even though the gates of the great Exposition swing wide on the Sabbath.

The second annual report of the mercy department is out in leaflet form. Mrs. Lydia A. Irons, state superintendent, has been seriously ill since our state convention. From her invalid room she writes: "Things I wanted to do and plans for my work have been whistling through my head continually, but the inability to put them in practical shape has added to my torture." Those of us who know the zeal and devotion of this warm-hearted worker, can in some sense realize how hard it is for her to turn aside and rest awhile.

All colors lose themselves in white,
God pencils every shade of chance;
O'er stepping-stones of circumstance
He leads the soul into the light.

Toledo unions—each actively engaged in pushing department work—all unite when a large load is to be lifted. For some time they have been battling with existing powers for a padded cell at the station house, and for separate rooms for the sexes in cases under the police matron's care. Up to the present time all suspected persons have been kept in one room. The contest has been long and bitter and the end is not yet. Those opposing these reforms seemingly desire all that is undesirable to women. The White Ribbon Messenger, published in the interest of the W's and Y's of Toledo, has for its editor, Mrs. Maud E. Dutton, one of the brightest and best white ribbon workers in that city of grand good women.

BUCKEYE BITS.

Five new unions and two Y's are reported this month.

The recent session of the mid-year executive board of the Ohio W. C. T. U. was held at Lima.

The Delaware White Ribboner has a new editor, Miss Ruth Shank. Long life and abundant success!

A Rescue Home for fallen girls is to be established in Cleveland. Ballington Booth and wife addressed large audiences in its interest last winter and secured the money with which to begin the work.

The annual meeting of the Ohio Woman's Suffrage Association will be held at Salem, May 25, 26, 27. Miss Susan B. Anthony and Rev. Anna Shaw will address evening audiences. One evening will be devoted to Ohio women, who will do all the talking on that occasion.

HANNA A. FOSTER,
State Reporter, Berea.

FLORIDA.

AN INSPIRING CONVENTION.

The ninth annual meeting of the state W. C. T. U. opened at Winter Park, March 2. The reception committee met the delegates and visitors from all parts of the state most cordially, and escorted them to the attractive homes of Winter Park, at Rollins College, and at the hotels. The church was profusely trimmed with flowers and foliage.

The executive committee consisted of state officers and superintendents, and at its meeting decided to incorporate the state union. The convention was presided over by Mrs. E. A. Hill, state president, and opened with devotional exercises. Then followed the report of the committee on credentials, and the introduction of fraternal delegates.

A most excellent paper on temperance work was by Mrs. Elizabeth Scott, an evangelist from Norfolk, Va. Miss Emily Borden, of Attleboro, Mass., followed, representing the Y's. This was a most encouraging report of the Y work, and aroused fresh interest in that very important branch.

At 2:30 p. m. a memorial service was held, led by Mrs. M. C. Post, of Gainesville, after which the committees on resolutions, plan of work, courtesies and finance were appointed. The convention then listened to an address by Mrs. Brown, of Fort Reid, delegate to the National Convention. This was well worthy the enthusiasm with which it was received, and a motion to have it published was passed unanimously.

"Loyalty," was the subject of a fine paper by Mrs. E. S. Thorpe, of Sanford. The recording secretary, Mrs. Glenn, of Tampa, was instructed to correspond with the Florida Columbian commissioners, commending those who opposed the sale of liquors, and remonstrating with those who favored their sale at the Columbian Exposition. A petition to his excellency, Governor Fleming, asking that he use his influence to prevent the introduction of barmaids at Pensecola, or anywhere in Florida, was unanimously ordered; also a resolution condemning the iniquitous practice of employing barmaids and minors for the sale of liquor.

The evening devotional exercises were followed by an address of welcome by Mrs. H. Ford. This, and the response by Mrs. Rich, of Limona, were both graceful and cordial. An original poem was read by Mrs. May Anderson, of Winter Park, entitled "The Wine of the Master." The annual address of the president closed the exercises of the day, and was a comprehensive effort.

The second day's session was full of interest, and included cheering reports of the departments of work by the superintendents, and a talk by Mrs. Mary T. Lathrap, of Michigan, who led the noontide prayer. The assembly then listened to an able address by Miss Frances E. Griffin, of Alabama, National organizer, during which she spoke of new schools of methods, desiring the Florida unions to become interested in its progress.

The evening session was opened by prayer by Reverend Missildine; then came a vocal solo by Howard Van Sickle, Miss Peck presiding at the organ. The event of the meeting was Mrs. Mary T. Lathrap's address. Taking for her subject, "The Divine Side of Government," this lady, who has come to be known as the Daniel Webster of the W. C. T. U., held her audience closely for over an hour, as she told of the utter failure of all governments that had not recognized the ruling hand of God in their acts. It was one of the ablest and most eloquent addresses ever listened to by a Winter Park audience, and the picture which she drew of the certain decline of our government, unless we followed more closely the examples of the founders, was one calculated to make the most thoughtless think seriously of the tendency of our times. A collection was taken up by Mrs. Dr. Phillips, of Sanford, and with the benediction by Mrs. Lathrap, the meeting adjourned.

The exercises of the closing day were opened as usual with Bible reading and prayer, led by Mrs. Wright, of Jacksonville. Then followed a spirited discussion of a plan for selling the book called "Three People," to liquidate the state debt of the union. Miss Griffin again presented the plan for building a school of methods at Waynesville, N. C., called a training and assembly school, which plan was, on motion, unanimously recommended. A very able drill on parliamentary usage was then led by Mrs. Rich, of Limona, followed by the election of officers: President, Mrs. E. A. Hill, Orange City; corresponding secretary, Mrs. M. L. Herrick, Orange City; recording secretary, Mrs. S. Glenn, Tampa; treasurer, Mrs. Mattie Crippen, Ft. Reid; vice-president at large, Mrs. Webb, of De Land; vice-president, first district, Mrs. M. Spencer, Pensacola; second district, Mrs. W. Gwynn, Sanford; honorary vice-presidents, Mesdames E. L. Goodhue and L. W. Haskins, of Jacksonville; organizer of Y's, Mrs. E. R. Seivir, Tampa.

Demorest medal contests and evangelistic work were discussed and superintendents elected for the different departments of work. Committee reports were heard and the report of the committee on resolutions thanking the citizens, transportation officials and others were unanimously passed. Delegates to the National Convention were elected: Mesdames Arnold, of Daytona and Webb, of De Land. An interesting paper on temperance missionary work was read by Miss M. A. West, of Winter Park, a returned missionary from Turkey, and after miscellaneous business the last day session closed.

The last evening meeting of this important convention was exceedingly interesting, being in the form of a Demorest medal contest. Some of Mr. Demorest's best selections were presented. "Eli Perkins on Prohibition," was recited by Mr. Howard Van Sickle, the prize winner, who received the medal from witty Miss Griffin, of Alabama. Taking all things into consideration, the convention was a grand success, inspiring all to work as they had never worked before for the betterment of humanity.

MRS. E. L. ROBINSON,
State Reporter, Orange City.

Official Communications.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

President—FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Sec,—MRS. C. B. BUELL, Evanston, Ill.
Recording Sec.—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Ravenna, Ohio.
Assistant Rec. Sec.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Treasurer—ESTHER PUGH, Evanston, Ill.

For presidents of states and superintendents of departments, see Annual Leaflet, which will be sent by Mrs. Buell on application, inclosing a two-cent stamp.

THE WORLD'S PETITION.

The World's Petition has received a million signatures, but before the first of April, 1893, we hope for a second million, and would rejoice were the present number to be trebled or quadrupled.

We want millions of signatures that we may say to rulers of every land as we present the Petition, "Herein and hereby the will of the people is expressed."

1. We want the names of women who are the petitioners.

2. We want the names of men (on another copy of the Petition), who approve and indorse this effort of the mothers and sisters of every land.

3. We want an expression of approval from public assemblies, organizations, societies, orders, etc. First, to call the attention of the people to the endeavor of the World's W. C. T. U.; second, to prove that the general trend of public opinion is in harmony with it.

4. Only persons over twenty-one years of age should sign.

5. We are thoroughly constitutional, inasmuch as the right of citizens to sign this Petition "shall not be denied nor abridged on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude." We would welcome the signature of the president of the United States, or the ruler of any nation, and their humblest subject.

6. Will each person sending for blanks give the number desired? Each canvasser must have two copies, one for women, one for men; thus, when ordering, multiply the number of canvassers by two, and send us the result as the number of copies needed for your locality.

7. With the date of your letter or card please give the name of your town (or city) and the state, as Boston, Mass.

8. Many have written: "If there is any charge and you will inform us, we shall be happy to remit." There is no charge, but the expense is great, and those who wish to lighten the financial burden of the World's W. C. T. U. can do so by sending postage with the order; one cent for four or six blanks, two cents for double the number. When circulars, reports, or literature are to be added, the postage is somewhat increased. This is a small amount for each local union or individual, but in the aggregate, a large sum for the World's union.

9. All blanks, however, to be used are of the same form, but easily adapted to all proposed uses. At the close of some of the Petition blanks are the words, "The above Petition is heartily indorsed by." When the Petition is circulated for signatures of women (they being petitioners, not indorsers), run your pencil through those words, in all other cases let them stand. Where these words are not found they can be added on Petitions to be circulated for indorsement. First, for signatures of leading men (against whose names should always appear their profession or occupation). Second, for indorsement of churches, societies, etc. In places of ordinary size (not large cities) all churches can place their indorsement upon one blank, as:

The M. E. Church, Burlington, Vt.	300 Members, M. E. Jones, pastor.

This will fill but two lines, and other churches may follow, each taking the same space, and if more room is required, paper can be pasted across the bottom of the sheet.

10. It will be impossible to transport the immense roll of signatures the wide world over, but we can first, display every foot of it at the Columbian Exposition at Chicago, in the most advantageous manner; and second, copies of the petition in sufficient number can be printed on linen, to which can be appended the names of the highest officials in each nation who are petitioners, with the exact number of women in the land who join with them in the plea; a record of the societies and a number of their membership who indorse the Petition, also of government officials, of ministers, lawyers, merchants, physicians, etc., etc., and the aggregate of all these for the world. But to have these of convincing power, the Petition itself must exceed anything before known, and we believe the W. C. T. U. is the organization through which such victory will be achieved.

(The above is the method of presentation now proposed which will, however, without doubt, expand as the days go on, and if we, with those who indorse our effort, "pray without ceasing," have we not reason to hope, that as leading Christian women stand face to face with the rulers of the earth, pleading for the protection of their homes, the Spirit of the Lord will move royal hearts to grant the request?)

11. Send all Petitions, when signed, to Miss Alice Briggs, office secretary of the World's W. C. T. U., Evanston, Ill., and send for blanks to

MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE,
Ravenna, O. Sec. World's W. C. T. U.

FRANCHISE DEPARTMENT.

A personal letter will be issued at once from W. C. T. U. franchise headquarters to state superintendents, also a manual containing "Suggestions for Franchise Superintendents," local, county or state. Will all superintendents help us, that our directory in this department may be complete? We need your names and addresses to help you push the work. Four principal ways are recommended, viz.: through the press, public meetings, literature, personal influence. The National superintendent takes special interest in recommending The Woman's Journal, Boston, the veteran paper in this reform.

L. C. PURINGTON, Supt.
3 Park St., Boston, Mass.

TO COFFEE HOUSE SUPERINTENDENTS AND MANAGERS.

I most earnestly ask all managers and superintendents of coffee houses in the United States to write to me as soon as possible, all they can regarding the success, management, the good they are doing, in a word, all they know about coffee houses or restaurants. I want to learn how many, where they are, and the status of every one in the United States under the W. C. T. U. management. Write to

MRS. E. A. RUSSELL,
Nat. Supt. of Coffee Houses.
16 Fourth Street, S. Minneapolis, Minn.

WOMAN'S LECTURE BUREAU.

MRS. R. A. EMMONS, SEC.

LECTURERS.

Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge.	Mrs. F. W. Leiter.
Mrs. Marion B. Baxter.	Miss I. C. DeVelling.
Rev. Henrietta G. Moore.	Mrs. Caroline M. Woodward
Mrs. E. T. Scott.	Mrs. Helen L. Bullock.
Mr. A. G. Wolfenbarger.	Prof. A. B. Huckins.
Hon. John P. St. John.	Rev. A. A. Phelps.
Mother Stewart.	Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman.
Miss Ida Clothier.	Maj. E. T. Scott.
Rev. E. O. Taylor.	Mrs. S. M. Perkins.

EVANGELISTS.

Rev. C. H. St. John.	Rev. Eugenia F. St. John.
Mrs. S. M. I. Henry.	Mrs. Mary Sparkes Wheeler
Mrs. Harriet D. Walker.

MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN

speaks at Delavan, Wis., March 27 and 28. Eaton Rapids, Mich., 29, Reading, 30.

REV. HENRIETTA G. MOORE

speaks at Cadiz, O., April 1, Waverly, 3, Piketon, 4, Jackson, 7.

MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE

speaks at Sterling, Col., April 4, Loveland, 7, Ft. Collins, 8, Boulder, 10.

REVS. C. H. AND E. F. ST. JOHN will be in Kansas for April.

REV. E. O. TAYLOR

is available for Illinois during March and April.

MRS. MAUDE L. GREEN is available for Illinois during April and May.

WOLFENBARGER AND HUCKINS

are to be in Illinois during April and May. Their trip through the mountain and Pacific coast states was very successful. They raised over $3.000 in cash and pledges for the National organizing fund for 1892. Over $2.000 of the above amount was paid in cash and the work of raising it covered only a period of seventy days.

MRS. MARY SPARKES WHEELER

has some vacant dates in April, so will be available for Pennsylvania during that time. Let applications be made at once that a consecutive route may be made.

For dates and terms of the above address

WOMAN'S LECTURE BUREAU.
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Our Library Table.

EXQUISITE in their dress of white, relieved by touches of gold and tiny wild-wood violets, come to our Library Table three booklets by E. S. Elliot, bearing the respective titles, CONFLICTING DUTIES, EXPECTATION CORNER, and DO WE BELIEVE IT?

The theme of each is the spiritual life of the Christian. We quote a few choice sentences:

"From that week Mrs. Stanton's was a changed life. More listening, less struggling; less attempted, more effected; a communion sustained rather than interrupted by everyday calls and occupations; outer work often abridged that soul-work might have room; the current of life deepened rather than widened; rest found in service as well as rest received for service; the peace of God entered into as an inheritance having for its title deed peace with God."

"What we want to realize in the whole plan of our lives is, that if Christ's religion, if conversion, if heaven and hell, if eternity mean anything they mean everything. They mean what the infidel deemed they should be regarded by us to mean, who said to the Christian 'If I believed what you believe, I should be on my knees day and night.' They mean that we should walk 'as seeing him who is invisible.'"

Published by Thomas Y. Crowell & Co., New York City.

THE POT OF GOLD, by Mary E. Wilkins, one of the bright writers of the day, holds between its covers a treat for little folks who, in spite of all the real delights with which life furnishes them, love to people their world with "fairy folk," and other charming habitants of the realm of fancy. Fifty exquisite illustrations beautify the volume, and make it a possession to be coveted by boys and girls. Published by D. Lothrop & Co., Boston, Mass.

SHALL I? SHORT SCRIPTURAL STUDIES, by Harold F. Ayles, is a book that will prove of value to every Bible student, and be of especial help to those who teach advanced classes in Sabbath schools. It treats of questions of practical living from a strictly biblical standpoint, handling with skill such topics as "Christian Reading," "Sunday Sinning," "Social Gossip," "Business and Its Dangers," etc. Published by The Evangelical Pub. Co., Chicago. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

WIMODAUGHSIS COOK BOOK, a collection of tried recipes, contributed by the wives, mothers, daughters and sisters of America. Many names familiar to white-ribboners are appended to these recipes for practical, appetizing home-cookery. The busy housewife need not, in using this excellent book, keep her eyes open to avoid recipes that depend upon brandies and wines for their final "toothsomeness," for the collection is loyal to W. C. T. U. principles, and numbers in its list directions for making a "white ribbon cake."

Edited by Mrs. E. M. S. Marble, 1105 6th street, N. W. Washington, D. C. Price 25 cents.

THE FALL OF THE STAINCLIFFES, by Alfred Colbeck, with an introduction by Charles Kingsley, is a prize tale on the evils of gambling, showing in a story of more than common interest what a subtle enemy of morality this deplorable habit is, and how by the least suspected agencies the seed of lifelong sin, disgrace, and final ruin is sown.

Fleming H. Revell Company, Chicago.

Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney, whom girls, and women in whose hearts the girl-spirit lives, hold so dear, has added to her well-known list of books, A GOLDEN GOSSIP. It is a rare treat and truly soul-refreshing to meet in the book-world a gossip who turns whatever she breathes upon into golden truth, killing the germs of disease and death which "gossips" of the despised kind nurture into lively development. If every reader of THE GOLDEN GOSSIP will emulate her spirit of truth, Mrs. Whitney will one day reap a rich harvest of reward.

Houghton, Mifflin & Company, Boston and New York. Price, $1.50.

WHAT MUST I DO TO GET WELL, AND HOW CAN I KEEP WELL, BY ONE WHO HAS DONE IT, is a suggestive little book, published by William A. Kellogg, New York City, No. 1023 Sixth Avenue. The relation of alimentation and malarial diseases and other kindred subjects, are especially treated of. It is a book that offers no nostrums to the patient but applies perfectly natural remedies. The book is highly spoken of by Mr. and Mrs. John C. Martin, leaders in our temperance work. We pass the knowledge along in the interest of those who suffer from chronic difficulties incident upon lack of exercise and violation of the laws of diet.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

RECEIPTS FOR TEMPERANCE TEMPLE.

Arkansas—Little Rock: Mrs. A. E. Giles, $1.75; Batesville: W. C. T. U. $35.

California—Ceres: W. C. T. U., $2; B. of H., $4.

Carolina, South—Beaufort: Mary S. Hamilton, $3.

Colorado—W. Denver: W. C. T. U., $21; Sterling; H. C Sherman, Mrs. M. J. Sherman, $5 each.

Connecticut—Hartford: Mrs. John G. Parsons, $100; Wallingford: W. C. T. U., $22.32.

Dakota, South—Columbia: Per Mrs. E. L. Atkinson, $2; Madison: Mrs. L. A. Kelly, $4.

Dakota, North—Drayton: Mrs. L. M. Wylie, $5.

Delaware—Wilmington: Sarah Binghurst, $2; State W. C. T. U., $100.

Illinois—Rochelle: W. C. T. U., $4; Bushnell: Miss L. A. Morris, $5; Englewood: Rev. Florence Kolloch, $5; W. C. T. U., $20; Morris: W. C. T. U., $50; Hinckley: Mrs. F. Lentz, $3.30; Oak Park: Mrs. I. J. Davis, $5; W. C. T. U., $7: Chicago: Abbie Jones, $1; Gertrude Stannard, $4. Harold Warr, $4; Austin: Eddie Gibbs, $2.03; Olney: Baby Band, $2.10; Wyanet: Ruth Ewers, 20 cts.; De Kalb: Mrs, C. J. Dow, $2; Pittsfield; W. C. T. U., $34; Roscoe: Mrs. E. A. Lundy, $3.65; Peoria: $30; Irving Park: W. C. T. U., $50; Hoopeston: Mrs. A. B. Kenyon: $3.75; Lincoln: W. C. T. U., $30.19; Stillman Valley: B. of H., $5.25; Rock Falls: Good Deeds King's Daughters, $23-.82; Pana: Mrs. Ann Paddock, $10; Inka: W. C. T U., $2; Fulton: Mrs. J. A. Hudson, $8; Greenville: Sammy Johnston Price, $1; Weldon: W. C. T. U., $5; Harristown: W. C. T. U., $40.50; Evanston: W. C. T. U., $26.17.

Indiana—La Grange: Mrs. R. S. Hubbard, $25; Portland: per Mrs. Lizzie Moon, 85 cents; Huntington: W. C. T. U., $16.45; Juvenile Templars, $1.50; Kokomo: Mrs. Dr. Richmond, $2.50.

Iowa—Winterset: Mrs. E. McCaughan, $1.30; Humboldt county: Sabbath-school, $2.42; Mrs. E. M. Lorbeer, $1.70; Algona: per Mrs. C. A Ingham, $2.50; Morning Sun: W. C. T. U., $7; Ida Grove: Mrs. E. H. Symons, $1; Waterloo: F. C. Breed, $3.65; Sioux City: Central W. C. T. U., $10

Kansas—Frankfort: Mrs. M. A. Brown, 52 cents; Newton: Laura J. Rooney, 10 cents; Ft. Scott: Lillie M. Bissell, $5.

Kentucky—Livingston: Band of Hope, $1; Mayfield: Mrs E Fitzgerald, $1; Madisonville: L. T. L., $5.

Maine—Ellsworth: Miss Lucy L. Phelps, $30; Union: W. C. T. U., $10; Foxcroft: Mrs. A. L. Chamberlain, $2; Hallowell: L. T. L., $1.39; Minnie Morse, 50 cents; mite-boxes, $10.71; Orono: W. C. T. U., $55.

Maryland—Level: H. J. Bailey, $3.50; Baltimore: C. L. Wellsworth, 60 cents; Havre de Grace: Mrs. H. T. Woodrow, $2.

Massachusetts—So. Hanson: W. C. T. U., $2; Lowell: Miss Gilson and Mrs. Nichols, $5 each; Burlingame: M. S. L., $4; Boston: Mrs. C. P. Stanton, $2.05; Sarah Grant, $3.50; Bellingham: Mrs. H. E. Barbour, $3.65; Northbridge: Helen M. Taft, $3.65; West Cummington: Mrs. C. A. Hubbard, $1; Woodville: Mrs. D. Cunningham, $1; Lawrence: Baby Band, $3. Cochituate: Mrs. Candliss, $1; Dorchester: Katie Jackson, $4.

Michigan—Riverside: Don Edwards Bishop, 10 cts.; Ionia: Mrs. E. A. Merritt, Mrs M. S. Taylor, Mrs. W. F. Scammel, Mrs. A. E. Grant, $1 each; Detroit: L. F. Hutchins, $1; Grand Rapids: Mrs. J. D. Wilson, $1; Norwood: Mrs. A. S. Richardson, $1; Ionia: Mrs. E. A. Kennedy, $50; Vassar: Mrs. E. J. Ripley, Mrs. H. Shepherd, Miss L. M. Shepherd, $1 each; Benton Harbor and Niles: W. C. T. U., $2; Big Prairie: W. C. T. U., 21 cts., Mrs. C. N. Barton, $1.34; Yates: six children, 30 cts; Little Lake: W. C. T. U., $1.75; North Muskegon: W. C. T. U., $10.79; Fisher Station: Mrs. J. I. Cutler, $3; Lee's Corners: Mrs. J. A. Lewis: $5; Onondaga: Mrs. Laura Washburn, 50 cts.; Erie: W. C. T. U., $5

Minnesota—Oak Center: Mrs. Nancy Bartlett, $5; Mrs. Mary Rider, $1; St. Paul: Hamline W. C. T. U., $5; Janesville: Mrs. S. A. Cobb, $4; St. Cloud: W. C. T. U., $5; Dodge Center: Hattie Houghtaling, $1 50; Levi Leighton, $1; Stella Gillman, $1; Sunday-school class, $1; Wabasha: Willet Chamberlain and sisters, $5.

Missouri—Palmyra: Mrs. S. J. Lundy, 25; Thayer: Bertie Jolly, 10 cts.

Mississippi—Vaiden: Eva Nye, $3.65; Mrs. F. E. Bain, $3.65: Mite Society, $1.55; Harriston: Mrs. E. J. Coulson, $2.

Montana—Livingston: W. C. T. U., $25; Fort Logan: Mrs. Jennie K. Lewis, $9.30; Glendive: per Mina T. McLain, $4.

Nebraska—Fremont: two sisters, $1.15; York: state superintendent Temple work $25; Columbus: Mrs. B. C. Gerrard, $5 Arapahoe: W. C. T. U., $2; Mapleville: Mrs. H J. Goff, $5; Rising City: W. C. T. U., $25.

New Hampshire—Bradford: Mrs. Dr. L. W Peabody, $3.65; Cornish: Carrie A. Williams, $3.65; Derry Depot: Mrs. S. T. Moore, $4; Tilton: W. C. T. U., $5; Chichester: W. C. T. U., $2.

New Jersey—Trenton: Miss A. Sulgar, $3.70; Mullica Hill: Stokes W. C. T. U., $7; Cedar Grove: Anne Applegate, 10 cts; Medford: Mrs. Rev. E. J. Lippincott, $4; Patterson: Hannah Crill, $4.

New Mexico—Albuquerque: baby, 10 cts; Socorro: Florence Robinson, $1.50.

New York—Mechanicville: W. C. T. U., $5; Havana: Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Hopkins, $10; York: Y. W. C. T. U., $5; New York: Miss C. M. Winslow, $2; M. C. F. Warren, $100; Dr. Amelia Barnett, $4.22; Yonkers: H. M. Pratt, $2.70; Rochester: Boys' union, $12; Oneonta: Mrs. T. K. Taylor, $3.80; Sennett: W. C. T. U., $5; Panama: Edith Davies, $2; Mohawk: W. C. T. U., $10; Ellenburgh Depot: L. T. L., $1.20; Olean: Mrs. M. M. Mallory, $10; Medina: Mrs. G. J. Lund, $5; Savona: Mrs. J. W. Davis, $3; Almond: Baby Band, $1.40; Niagara Falls: Mrs. J. G. Shepard, $5; Cayuga: M. E. Baldwin, $5.50; Morrisville: Mrs. L. A. Dana, $4; Mrs. H. P. Mead, $4; W. C. T. U., $3.65; So. Edmeston: Lelia Williams, 60 cts; Grace Vidler, 18 cts; Mrs. E. H. Spicer, $2.

Ohio—South Charleston: W. C. T. U., $10: Alliance: Lucy Hayes W. C. T. U., $3.65; Oberlin: Mrs. Stephen Coates, $4; London: W. C. T. U., $52.22; Savannah: W. C. T. U., $1; Berlinville: W. C. T. U., 77cts; Mrs. Gorman, 32cts; Mrs. Waite, 78cts; Mrs. Hook, $2.18; Mrs. Dimick, $2.04; Zanesville: L. T. L., $3.65; Monroeville: W. C. T. U., $5; Westerville, Mrs. V. H. Dixon, 51cts; Delaware: W. C. T. U., $5; Wyoming: W. C. T. U., $10; Youngstown: W. C. T. U., $2.54; Collamer: W. C. T. U., $10; Georgetown: W. C. T. U., $5, Mayfield: Mrs. M. A. Akins, $10; Hamilton: W. C. T. U., $5; Moravia: E. C. Hanley, $3.65; Washington county: W. C. T. U., $25; Morley: W. C. T. U. $7.

Oklahoma—Lexington: E. J. R., $1.

Pennsylvania—Montoursville: W. C. T. U., $8; Manheim: Mrs. E. J. Reist, $3.75. North Jackson: S. A. Capron, $1; Mrs. F. L. Whitney, $5: Cross Creek Village: A Friend, $5; New Castle: Mrs. J. V. Boyles, $3.65; Oxford: L. T. L., $1; Pt. Marion: Mrs. E. Van Norman, $2.30: Philadelphia: Harry and Lew Blend, $1; Mrs. S. K. Wilson, 10 cts: Emlenton: Ella Bailey, $1.20; Baby Band, $1.20; Pittston: White Ribbon Army M. E. Church, $2.65; Harrisburg: W. C. T. U., $4.99; New Brighton: W. C. T. U., $1.85.

Rhode Island—Olneyville; Abby Keach. $3.65; Providence: Mt. Pleasant W. C. T. U., $20.

Virginia—Richmond: West End W. C. T. U., $5; Norfolk: W. C. T. U., $5.

Washington—Bickelton: E. J. Flower, $2; Alberta: Davisburg postoffice, Mrs. Bertie Starkey, $3. Sales models, $29.75; sales mite-boxes, $5.10; Chehalis: Walter Reynolds, $1.70; Melbourne: S. Maria Goss, $1.60; Walla Walla: W. C. T. U., $1.50.

Wisconsin—Racine: W. C. T. U., $40; Verona: W. C. T. U., $2.75; Rochester: W. C. T. U. 78 cts.; Hammond: L. Rich, $5; Merrillan: Mrs. E. Purnell, $4.99; Sharon: W. C. T. U., $30; Superior: $1.

Canada—Ontario: W. C. T. U., $50; models, $7.50. For mite-boxes, $8. In last receipts $19.29 credited to Mrs. R. Follett should have been W. C. T. U., Hazelton; $5 credited to W. C. T. U., Harrisburg, Pa., should have been Mrs. Agnes Kemp, Harrisburg, and $4 to W. C. T. U., Princeton, Wis., should have been to Mrs. S. Jeannette Baily, Princeton.

ESTHER PUGH,
Custodian Gift Fund.

THE Illinois superintendent of Demorest medal contests is Mrs. Ada H. Kepley, of Effingham. She has issued a stirring circular inviting the coöperation and contributions of Illinois workers who should cordially respond, and send to her for information and supplies.

A VERY complete annual report is that of Labor Commissioner Robinson, of Michigan. From it we glean the following interesting facts regarding women. Average wages for women in the state, 79 cents per day. The lowest wage was $1 per week, the highest $18.75 per week Only a very few receive these amounts. Of the 13,436 canvassed, 181 were under twelve, while 8,676 were between thirteen and eighteen; 10,541 were single, 444 married and 480 widows. Five commenced work at eight years of age, and one at fifty-eight. Some of the women also report whether they wear corsets, and whether they must reach up in doing their work or stoop over. The latter questions were instigated by female physicians.

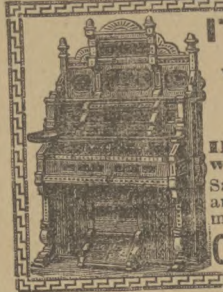
It's Very Simple

Drs. Starkey & Palen's COMPOUND OXYGEN works no miracles, though it works miraculously. There is only one justification for our claim, and that is our experience. The human mind is closely linked to the visible. It requires an effort to realize that something that you cannot taste in your mouth, or put in your stomach is really a medicine. Nevertheless it is true that our COMPOUND OXYGEN is a marvelous healer. It's natural, too, after all. The air we breathe is the base; much more oxygen is added; then its effectiveness is multiplied by magnetism. That's the means. The method is natural also—nature's own. You breathe it.

What will this do? Better read what others say of our 23 years work for sick and diseased humanity. A 200-page book will tell you. Will you have it? Free for the asking only.

Drs. STARKEY & PALEN, 1529 Arch St., Philadelphia.

120 Sutter St., San Francisco, Cal. 864 Broadway, New York. 66 Church St., Toronto, Canada.



IT WILL COST YOU NOTHING.
SEND US YOUR ADDRESS on a postal and you will RECEIVE THE FINEST CATALOGUE OF PIANOS AND ORGANS
IN THE WORLD. It will Show you how to SAVE $100
Satisfaction guaranteed before you pay. CUT THIS OUT and mail it to us. You will be surprised at the result. But you must do it NOW. Write to CORNISH & CO., (Established 25 Years,) WASHINGTON, New Jersey.

PILES CURED FREE. New, Painless, Certain. Gives instant relief and lasting cure—never returns. To prove it we will send a trial package FREE, to any address. PYRAMID DRUG COMPANY, Box 35, ALBION, MICHIGAN.

DIAMOND DYES give the fastest, brightest, handsomest colors, and make the old clothes look like new. They are the original and only reliable package dyes. Sample card free. WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Burlington, Vt.

WOMEN wanted for a WOMAN'S ENTERPRISE. An early reply may make you rich, either as an investor or active worker. For particulars address
THE WOMAN'S LAND ASSOCIATION,
114 and 116 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

FLOWER SEEDS FREE To introduce our 20-page home monthly we will send it 6 mos. for 15c. and give each subscriber one large 10c. pkt. of choice mixed flower seeds. WESTERN HOME MAGAZINE, Box K 12, Watertown, South Dakota.

EARN BETTER WAGES

By attending, day or night, the INSTITUTE OF TECHNOLOGY, 151 Throop St., Chicago, Ill. Any person taught any study any time by professors. Leading Chicago School. 1,000 students last year Open to both sexes. Admirable arrangements Low tuition. Installments taken. Satisfaction guaranteed. Send for Catalogue.

A Treasure and a Wonder in the Horticultural World!

Splendid! Delicious! Excellent! are the exclamations from those who have fruited the Green Mountain, the earliest and best of all grapes. Ripens in August, yet of most delicate texture and exquisite flavor. Be not misled into buying this grape under other names. Every genuine vine is sealed with our trade mark seal as above. Send for circular giving full information. Price of 2 or 3 year vine by mail, $1.00 each. Address
STEPHEN HOYT SONS, New Canaan, Ct.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints. Having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, and desiring to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who wish it, this recipe in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper. W. A. NOYES, 820 Powers' Block, Rochester, N. Y.

WHY DO MOTHERS put stiff Corsets on growing girls? We beg of you, Don't do it Try the "GOOD SENSE" Corset Waist—fit all ages.

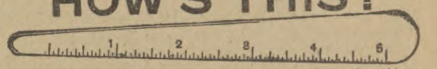
RUPTURE A Positive Radical cure at Home. (Sealed) Book giving full particulars sent free. Write Dr. W. S. Rice, Box U Smithville, Jeff. Co., N. Y.

YOUR NAME on 25 LOVELY CARDS, 1 RING, 1 LACE PIN, 1 PATENT FOUNTAIN PEN, 1 FORGET-ME-NOT ALBUM, 400 other Versatile, with the New and Popular Monthly, WAYSIDE GLEANINGS, THREE MONTHS FOR 10c. LAUREL CARD CO., CLINTONVILLE, CONN.

COMPOUND OXYGEN Price reduced. For information address DR. A. H. HIATT, Central Music Hall, Chicago

AGENT made $71 in four days selling my Electric Corsets and Specialties. 100 PER CENT. profit and Cash Prizes. Sample free. Dr. Bridgman, B'way, New York.

HOW'S THIS?



Reliable inch measure, letter opener, leaf cutter. Made of Aluminum, the wonderful new metal. Light as wood. Strong as steel. Cleaner than silver. Will not tarnish or corrode. Six inches long. Just right for vest pocket. Elegant for desk or library. You want one? 25 cents, please. Stamps will do. R. S. Thain, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.

Freight Paid. McMULLEN WOVEN WIRE FENCE CO., CHICAGO

Special Offer to Ladies.—If you secure a Life Insurance policy in the American Temperance Life Insurance Association before January 1st, you pay no membership fee. Write at once for particulars. Geo. E. Godward, Sec'y. 187 Broadway, N. Y. City.

A Tale of Two Cities.

Three weeks ago La Grippe attacked me,
Like the dickens, too, it racked me;
In the ice they would have packed me,

But for the trifling circumstance that I had sense enough to get on a Wabash train and go to Hot Springs, Arkansas, where I speedily regained my health. By the way, if you make this trip go via the Wabash. I bought my sleeping-car ticket right through, and had no worry about reservations.

Refreshing Retreats.

Summer days are fast approaching, and now is the time that excursionists, pleasure-seekers and sportsmen should figure out a route for their summer vacation. In doing so, the delightfully cool summer and fishing resorts located along the Wisconsin Central Lines come vividly to view, among which are Fox Lake, Ill., Lake Villa, Ill., Mukwonago, Waukesha, Cedar Lake, Neenah, Waupaca, Fifield, Butternut and Ashland, Wis. Wisconsin has within the last five years become the center of attraction for more pleasure seekers, hunters and fishermen than any other state in the union, and each visit increases the desire to again see the charming landscapes, breathe the balsam fragrance that is a part of the invigorating atmosphere, wander through the colonnades of stately pines, and hook the speckled beauties with a hand-made fly.

For pamphlets containing valuable information, etc., apply to GEO. K. THOMPSON, C. P. & T. A. Wis. Cen. Lines, Chicago, Ill., or JAS. C. POND, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, Chicago, Ill.

CALIFORNIA.

California is the most attractive and delightful section of the United States, if not of the world, and its many beautiful resorts will be crowded with the best families of the East during the entire winter. It offers to the investor the best open opportunity for safe and large returns from its fruit lands. It offers the kindest climate in the world to the feeble and debilitated, and it is reached in the most comfortable manner over the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé Railroad. Pullman Vestibule Sleeping Cars leave Chicago by this line every day in the year, and go without change or transfer through to San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego. This is a feature not offered by any other line.

Write to John J. Byrne, 621 Rialto Building, Chicago, Ill., if you desire any further information as to the country and the accommodations for reaching it.

Our Children.

"PRAYER SHALL BE MADE FOR HIM CONTINUALLY."

BY D. H. BEAN.

A little white bed in the corner
All ready for Mollie dear;
Tiny clothes daintily folded,
Lie on a small chair near.
There she stands in her night-robe,
Dearest of dear little girls!
Brown eyes looking so tired
Under the golden curls.

"Mamma, I'm really quite ready
To say my prayer right away;
For oh, I'm so sleepy and tired,"
I hear the little one say.
Then down she drops on the carpet,
Like a feather so soft and light:—
"Dear Heavenly Father, forgive me
But I'm going to be quick to-night.

"Thank you for all the nice times
You've let me have, to-day:
And forgive the times I was so bad
As to go and disobey.
And please, dear God," the voice sank low
In childish penitence,
"Forgive the time I acted so,
And went outside the fence.

"Please bless my family, one and all,
And all my playmates, too;
You know the name of every one—
I'm very sure you do.
But, God, there's something new to-night
I want to pray to you—
It is—" the little face grew bright,
"That you'll bless Jesus, too.

"Of all my little Bible texts,
The one I like the best,
Is one we call the 'Golden Rule,'
And so as Jesus blessed
The little children, while on earth,
I thought I'd like, you see,
To do to Him as I would like
To have Him do to me.

"So, dear God, please bless Jesus Christ,
Yes, over 'n' over again;
I guess that's all I want to say
To-night, dear Lord. Amen."
And as I turned and went away
Low to myself I said,
"For Him shall prayer by infant tongues Continually be made."

Stanford, Conn.

GRANDMA'S STORY.

BY IDA PRESTON.

(Concluded.)

"The family were soon settled in their lovely country home, and greatly enjoyed its beauties and pleasures, and I come now to the serious part of my story, which I must tell because it is a real one.

"Ingleside had a large vineyard filled with choice grapes, and was situated in a vinegrowing region. Grapes were so plentiful that mamma followed the example of her neighbors and made her own wine, which she used very freely on all occasions.

"One summer an old friend came to visit her, bringing an only child, a boy somewhat older than Topsy. This little boy, Teddie, had never drank any wine; but seeing it always about he and Topsy would get it every day, and drink it freely. In this way he learned to love it.

"When he went home he asked his mamma to make some. Realizing the strong taste he was acquiring, and the great danger in his path, his careful mother instructed him in regard to the poisonous effect of anything that contained alcohol. She prayed with him that God would take away that love for wine, and received Teddie's earnest promise not to drink it any more.

"Years passed; Teddie had been through college, graduated and become a man. Of course, by this time Topsy was a grown-up young lady. On a certain night when Teddie drove up to the gate at Ingleside, many elegant carriages had preceded his. The house was beautifully illuminated, the floors newly waxed, the great brass andirons polished, the silver candlesticks burnished, and everybody dressed in their best attire. Topsy looked very beautiful in a long, white veil trimmed with orange flowers. After she and Teddie had stood before the minister, who spoke some solemn words to them, everybody looked pleased and happy and, how she blushed when they called her Mrs. Teddie McNair.

"Then followed the wedding supper; everything procurable to tempt the taste and please the sight was displayed, and no effort had been spared. One thing they had, however, of which Topsy and her mamma often afterwards thought and wished they had left it out. It was in glasses and had something that looked like snow all over the top. It looked so pretty that Teddie took one glass, and then another; there was wine in it, fine white wine that had been made specially for the wedding.

"Topsy and her mother did not realize the danger which is in the taste for liquor, and so did many thoughtless things in the next few years. Whenever Teddie felt badly a glass of the home-made wine was given him. After a while he would feel badly just to get the wine, for he could not smother conscience enough to take it at any other time, and his appetite constantly increased. One day when their little girl was a year old what do you think happened?"

"Grandma, go on, what makes you look so sad? It is just a tale, you know."

"Oh, but, Sadie, it is a horrible tale, for that night Teddie McNair was carried home drunk, and he, when he became sober, told Topsy that she and her mamma taught him to drink, and that now she must bear the consequences. I cannot tell you all she suffered, how one thing after another went to satisfy his thirst. To make the story short, in a few more years their sweet little home was sold, and Topsy took him and her two little children back to her old home, Ingleside. You may be sure they made no more wine there. Ah! too late they had seen the danger.

"Topsy's mamma wept, and prayed God to forgive her and show her in some way how she might undo the work of her own hands, and her prayer was answered, but in a very sad way.

"One cold December day when the ground was covered with snow, the angel of death hovered over that ancestral home. Topsy's little girl went to heaven. She looked so pure and sweet, robed in white with lovely flowers in her tiny hands. With his heart filled with grief her father went alone to the death chamber and knelt beside the pulseless form of the child whom he loved so dearly. There he gave his heart to God, and a loving Saviour washed it so white that the wicked love for drink was taken away. He made a vow to consecrate his life to God's service, and prayed each day thereafter that his little boy might never be tempted to drink wine. Kind friends encouraged him, and after a few years he had bought back both his and Topsy's own home. The first day they occupied it he had a minister come to dedicate it and all he possessed to God.

"To-night he is in heaven, but God is still answering his prayer, for his little boy has never tasted wine."

"Grandma," said Alice, "I believe you belong somewhere in that story, because you cry."

"Yes," said papa, "she is Topsy, and I am Teddie's boy, and by God's help I never will taste wine. I pray He may answer my prayer in behalf of my boys, and my little girls too, that they may never tempt any one to drink wine in any form."

THE SIMPLICITY OF PRAYER.

Prayer should be simple in its spirit. Self-importance destroys the true spirit of all asking for favors or blessings. It should be simple in its desires and petitions. Simple, child-like conditions of mind are what God is pleased with, and such a mind will only ask for simple blessings at the hand of God. Prayer should be simple and confident in its faith. Like the children of whom Dr. Newton speaks, we should be as simple as a child.

A mother one morning gave her two little ones books and toys to amuse them while she went up stairs to attend to something. A half an hour passed away, when one of the little ones went to the door of the stairs, and in a timid voice cried out:

"Mamma, are you there?"

"Yes, darling."

"All right," said the child, and the play went on. After a little time the voice again cried:

"Mamma, are you there?"

"Yes, darling."

"All right," said the child again, and once more went on with her play.

And this is just the way we should feel toward Jesus. He has gone up stairs, to the right hand of God, to attend to some things for us. He has left us down in this lower room of the world to be occupied here for a while. But to keep us from being worried by fear or care, he speaks to us from the Word, as the mother spoke to her little ones. He says to us, "Fear not; I am with thee." Jehovah Jireh—"the Lord will provide."—Selected.

What Shall We Call It?

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:—Here is the list of names taken from your own bright and interesting letters. Are they not good names? Which do you think should be the chosen one?

Little White Ribboners' Corner.
Twilight Talks.
Aunt Jane's Correspondence.
The Children's Corner.
Auntie's Talks with the Children.
Bright Ideas.
Heart to Heart Corner.
The Coming Army.
The Fold.
Sunshine.
The Hide, Seek and Find Corner.
Sparks for Little Sparkers.
Sunbeams Abroad.
The Long, Long Thoughts of Youth.
Jolly Times for Young America.
Nutcrackers' Corner.
Hide and Seek Column.
Blue Ribbon Company.
Faithful Corner.
Bird's Nest.
Querydom.
Under the Lamplight.
Good Cheer.
The Crickets' Corner.
In Our Snug Little Corner.
The Young Folks' Postoffice.
Temperance Fireside.
Little Workers' Column.
Children's Garden.
The Thinking Garden.
Children's Christian Temperance Headquarters.
Our Curious Cabinet.
The Children's Well.
Children's Page.
Temperance Talks with Temperance Children.
Among our Little Men and Women.
Aunt Jane's Sunny Corner.
Auntie's Helpful Corner.
The Children's Happy Corner.
Chats in our Cozy Corner.
Cold Water Circle.
Happy Thought Corner.
Little Helpers' Corner.
By the Firelight.
Temperance Sunshine.
Our Little Men and Women.
Hand to Hand Corner.
The Children's Letter Box.
Children's Chatter Corner.
The Puzzler's Retreat.
Gay Times with the Little Folks.
The Children's Hour.
Condensed Sunshine.
Children's Own Corner.
Just Aunt Jane and Ourselves.
The People of To-morrow.
Young Solvers' Corner.
Helpers for the Right.
Loyal Temperance Legion Corner
The Happy Hour.
Quizdom.
Bells of Thought.
For Children at Home.
Children's Hunting Ground.
Cozy Corner.
Chats with Aunt Jane.
Children's Delight
La Grippe Corner.
Around Auntie's Easy Chair.
World's Garden.
Kitties' Corner.
Headquarters.
The Camp.
Aunt Jane's Hearthstone.
Ring-a-Round-a-Rosy
Pleasant Talks
Aunt Jane's Campfire.
Bright Things for Bright Eyes.
Young Ravellers' Corner.
Our Rally Corner.
Little Workers.
Aunt Jane's Pure and Delightful Thoughts.
Just Among Ourselves.

Send in a name within a week, if you have not already done so. Then our choice will be announced, and under whatever title it may be, we will be really and truly at home in our corner. Affectionately, AUNT JANE.

A BUSINESS-LIKE BOY.

While looking over our delightful page in THE UNION SIGNAL I saw to my delight a notice of a new attraction, the puzzles, and with this I send one, which I hope will find its way into the paper. I have chosen printing for my business; but as this will keep you from your business, I will only say I am ten years old.

So good-bye,
LON C. RICE.

Paxton, Neb.

Your Aunt Jane finds in this letter of yours, Lon, some words which make her think you will grow up to be considerate and thoughtful of others. The rebus you send is a good one and will be published.

A TEMPERANCE FAMILY.

I have read the little stories on the children's page. Mamma has taken THE UNION SIGNAL for many years. I like to read the little letters from the little boys and girls. I would like to send a name for children's corner; it is Cold Water Circle. I am nine years old next month. I have one sister and brother older and two sisters and one brother younger than I am. We all help mamma to work for temperance all we can. Your little friend,

ELLA MAY FOX.

Plainfield, Wis.

Hurrah for the boys and girls who "help to work for temperance" all they can.

SOFT-SHELLED NUTS.

19.

ALPHABETICAL ENIGMA.

1. My 1, 14, 14, 1—7, 15, 18, 4, 15, 14 is the name of a lady who loves little children.
2. My 3, 15, 12, 4—23, 1, 20, 5, 18 is Heaven's beverage.
3. My 6, 15, 21, 14, 20, 1, 9, 14 a jet or flow.

The last two should be erected in honor of the lady named in the first. I. P. M.

20.

In love, not in hate,
In ink, not in pen,
In quick, not in slow,
In duck, not in goose,
In God, not in Christ,
In rat, not in mouse,
My whole is the root of great evil.

ELMA L. W.

21.

TEMPERANCE ANAGRAMS.

1. Cohtu otn; estta tno: ahnlde ton.
2. Dan reevy nam ttah shrettiv rof teh yamster si etarmpeet ni lal ghnits.
3. Dloc trawe; lodc wrtae fro em.

ELVA G. WILCOX.

Answers to these puzzles given in three weeks. Send all replies and original puzzles to Puzzle Editor, UNION SIGNAL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

ANSWERS TO PUZZLES PUBLISHED MARCH 3.

10. Do not smoke or drink.
11. Ural, Nero, Idly, Okra, Null, Sail, Idle, Gang, Nisi, Agio, Lean. Primals, UNION SIGNAL; Finals, Loyal Legion.
12. Cold water.

Correct answers have been received from Willie R. Snyder, Anna Cheney, Mercury, Hattie Wolfe, Elva G Wilcox.

STRONG WORDS

I. "I could quote a thousand men who, when everything else failed them, found in Granula the very food their systems needed."—JAMES C. JACKSON, M. D., founder Dansville Sanatorium.

II. "Granula has saved my life on several occasions. I now carry the article with me as a sort of life preserver."—WM. GILLETTE (the actor).

III. "The Judge (A. W. Tourgee) has been crazy ever since he was in Dansville about the delicious Granula."—MRS. A. W. TOURGEE.

FOR THAT "PERFECT HEALTH FOOD"
GRANULA

GRANULA CO., Dansville, N. Y.
Pamphlet free. Trial box, postpaid, for 36 cts.

ALUMINUM SOUVENIR
Charm (dime size) with the Lord's Prayer coined in smallest characters, and strung on blue silk ribbon, sent free to any one sending 10 cents for sample copy of The FREE St. Louis Magazine. Aluminum is the wonderful new metal, bright as silver, light as wood, strong as steel, will not tarnish.
St. Louis Magazine, 901 Olive St., St. Louis, Mo.

PEATS THE
WALL PAPER
MERCHANT CHICAGO

Retails all grades of WALL PAPER of the newest designs and latest colorings in small quantities; many patterns cheaper than your home dealer can buy them.
GOOD PAPER, 3c. GOLD PAPER, 5c.
Handsome parlor paper 10—12½—15c per roll with wide border and ceiling to match.
If you intend to use any WALL PAPER whatever send 10 cents for postage on samples and his guide "HOW TO PAPER" will be sent free. Agents sample books $1.
See his samples before you buy.
ALFRED PEATS, Wall Paper Merchant,
136-138 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Unlike the Dutch Process
No Alkalies
—OR—
Other Chemicals
are used in the preparation of
W. BAKER & CO.'S
Breakfast Cocoa

which is absolutely pure and soluble.

It has more than three times the strength of Cocoa mixed with Starch, Arrowroot or Sugar, and is far more economical, costing less than one cent a cup. It is delicious, nourishing, and EASILY DIGESTED.

Sold by Grocers everywhere.
W. BAKER & CO., Dorchester, Mass.

MASON & HAMLIN
Examine the new Mason & Hamlin Piano and Organ catalogues, sent free to any address. The Mason & Hamlin Grand and Upright Pianos are constructed on an Improved Method of Stringing, invented and exclusively used by Mason & Hamlin, by which remarkable purity of tone and great durability are secured, and phenomenal capacity to stand in tune. The Mason & Hamlin SCREW-STRINGER was patented in July, 1883, and is a veritable triumph for American ingenuity, being pronounced by experts "the greatest improvement of the century" in pianos. American Pianos and Organs are superior to all others. Mason & Hamlin Organs have long been the Standard the world over. The Mason & Hamlin Piano is fast becoming as famous as the Mason & Hamlin Organ, and illustrates that HIGHEST STANDARD OF EXCELLENCE which has always characterized the latter instrument, and won for it Highest Honors at all great World's Exhibitions since Paris, 1867. Illustrated catalogues free.

ORGANS PIANOS

Without under-estimating the improvements effected by others in pianos, the Mason & Hamlin STRINGER is claimed to be the greatest improvement of them all, and without it the highest attainable excellence is simply impossible.

MASON & HAMLIN ORGAN AND PIANO CO.
BOSTON. NEW YORK. CHICAGO.

FOR MANY LADIES THE BALKS
PERFECT COMFORT WITH NO POSSIBLE INJURY TO THE SKIN
NO METAL EYELETS TO PULL OUT OR CUT STRINGS
EASY THE FIRST DAY
NEVER BREAK OR ROLL UP
BONES EASY
FIT AS WELL AS BUT NEVER VARIES
CORSETS & CORSET WAISTS FOR OTHERS THE
KABO
ELEGANT SHAPES AND MANY OF THEM
NO METAL EYELETS TO STAIN YOUR CLOTHES
BONES POSITIVELY DO NOT BREAK OR ROLL UP
FULLY GUARANTEED BY THE CHICAGO CORSET CO.
CORSETS ARE THE ONLY ONES GIVING ENTIRE SATISFACTION.

Publisher's Notes.

The Sunday-school Temperance Lesson for May 22 is in hand and is a very attractive one. Written by Mrs. Helen G. Rice and Mary Lowe Dickinson, and beautifully illustrated, it will be in great demand. Send in your orders early so that they may be promptly filled. The work so well begun in January must be continued if we desire to reap a harvest such as we should expect. The following liberal terms are offered: 100, 50 cts.; 500, $2; 1.000, $3.50; 2,000, $6; 5.000, $12. Add postage at the rate of 12c. per 100. The Young Crusader and the Lesson will be sent on the following terms: 100, $1; 500, $4.75; 1.000, $9; 2,000, $15; 5.000, $35; 8,000, $48, postpaid. Let us get an entering wedge on this occasion which will help in the future. Address all orders to

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION,
161 LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

Wanted.

More space in which to tell you how many, many helpful things we have for you, to aid the different departments of your work and in social interests of your lives.

We must take space now to tell in as few words as possible that the book,

How to Mark Your Bible,

advertised in connection with the Bibles in our March Offer should not be confused with "Hints on Marking," issued some years since by the same authors.

"How to Mark Your Bible" contains nearly two thousand "Railway Connections," thousands of special "Marginal Notes," and nearly one thousand outline Bible readings under the head "Groups and Jottings."

Your Bible will become a new book to you—it will be a very cyclopedia of suggestions if this plan be followed.

Mr. D. L. Moody says: "I heartily trust this plan will be carefully studied and extensively used."

"This is a most valuable book to the students of the Bible. This plan of marking will stimulate an interest in its study and also greatly help to a proper understanding of it."—Indiana Baptist.

"Those who have made use of Mrs. Menzies' Bible marking plan and the numerous suggestions she has published will be greatly pleased to have them in one book. In 'How to Mark Your Bible' there is an almost inexhaustible number of suggestions for marginal notes and markings. It is a book every Christian worker will do well to have among his Bible helps."—Young Men's Era.

"Mrs. Menzies has long been known as an adept in the use of the Book. Her hints and suggestions have already appeared in one form or another, though in briefer compass. Here the effort is to give something larger and completer."—Standard.

For price see "Our March Offer" on another page.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Take Notice.

Special editions of THE UNION SIGNAL are prepared for all special days, and extra numbers can be secured by ordering in advance. For rates on large numbers address
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N.
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Send for Color Samples and Price List. Patented February 23, 1886. Examine closely. Stamp on inside of Waist.

TAKE NO OTHER.

THE GENUINE
JACKSON
CORSET WAISTS
ARE MADE ONLY BY THE
JACKSON CORSET CO., Jackson, Mich.
The manufacturer's name is printed upon the boxes, and stamped upon inside of clasp in each waist. They are the most popular articles of the kind now on the market. You should have one of them.

BE SURE AND GET THE RIGHT THING. IF YOUR DEALER HASN'T IT, SEND $1.25 FOR SAMPLE.

YPSILANTI Dress Reform UNDERWEAR
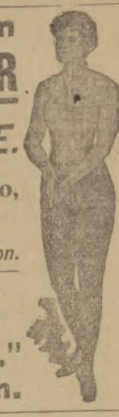
SPRING GOODS REDUCED IN PRICE.



Sanitary Balbriggan, Sanitary Lisle Thread, Sanitary MERINO, SILK and Sanitary Balbriggan, Silk and Cashmere mixed.
For SPRING and SUMMER WEAR. { The ONLY Sanitary Underwear, and Endorsed by the leading medical profession.

Send for new Catalogue, Samples, and revised Price List. If your dealer cannot supply them, they can be obtained of the manufacturers.

DON'T BE DECEIVED.
See that each garment is stamped with our Trade Mark—
"Ypsilanti Health Underwear."

HAY & TODD MFG. CO., Ypsilanti, Mich.

One-third Your Life is Spent in Bed!

NO ODOR — COLD BLAST — NO DUST — NO QUILLS — CHICAGO

The Art of purifying Feathers for Bedding purposes has been the subject of close study for many years, and has reached its highest development in the COLD BLAST PROCESS, by which all foreign matter, dust and the causes of odor are eliminated, and the Feathers rendered pure, clean and sweet, as well as permanently buoyant, while retaining their Feathery softness. FEATHER PILLOWS MADE OF THESE ARE HEALTHFUL. Watch for Trade Mark. Your dealer probably keeps them. If not, address
THE COLD BLAST FEATHER CO.
MAKERS OF Faultless Bedding. CHICAGO.

FREE For 30 Days. Wishing to introduce our CRAYON PORTRAITS and at the same time extend our business and make new customers, we have decided to make this Special Offer: Send us a Cabinet Picture, Photograph, Tintype, Ambrotype or Daguerotype of yourself or any member of your family, living or dead and we will make you a CRAYON PORTRAIT FREE OF CHARGE, provided you exhibit it to your friends as a sample of our work, and use your influence in securing us future orders. Place name and address on back of picture and it will be returned in perfect order. We make any change in picture you wish, not interfering with the likeness. Refer to any bank in Chicago. Address all mail to THE CRESCENT CRAYON CO. Opposite New German Theatre, CHICAGO, ILL. P. S.—We will forfeit $100 to anyone sending us photo and not receiving crayon picture FREE as per this offer. This offer is bonafide.

MENDING MADE EASY BY THE USE OF GUM TISSUE
Used for repairing all kinds of clothing, from the very finest silk or satin to a buckskin mitten. Kid gloves and umbrellas mended without sewing, quicker, neater, and stronger than ever before. SAMPLE 10cts. to intending agents, F. Cassgreen Mfg. Co., 134 Van Buren St., Chicago, Ill.

$22. FIRST CLASS CURTAIN DESK Four and a Half feet long. Unlimited variety in stock and to order.
American Desk & Seating Co.
270-272 Wabash Av., CHICAGO, U.S.A.

PARENTS CANNOT AFFORD
To let their children grow up without the amusement and physical training which the World's Parlor and Lawn Game gives. ELASTIC TIP CO., 152 and 154 Lake Street, Chicago.

LADIES without businesses experience are making immense sales of Mme. MOCABE'S CORSETS AND WAISTS. Send for agents' terms.
St. Louis Corset Co., St. Louis, Mo.

See Name "EVER READY" on back of each DRESS STAY you buy. Take none but them.
YPSILANTI DRESS STAY MFG. CO., Ypsilanti, Michigan.

HOTEL FREDONIA. Washington, D. C. H St., between 13th and 14th. ELEGANT, QUIET, HOMELIKE & STRICTLY TEMPERANCE.
G. H. La Fetra, Prop.

MILLER'S HOTEL New York City, 39 West 26th St. A Prohibition Home. Patronized by W. C. T. U. workers visiting New York. Turkish, Electric, Roman Baths.
Address. CHARLES H. HAYNES, Prop.

YOSE & SONS PIANOS ESTABLISHED IN 1851.
Celebrated for their Pure Tone, Elegant Designs, Superior Workmanship, and Great Durability. Sold on easy terms. Old instruments taken in exchange. Write for catalogue and full information.
170 Tremont St., Boston, Mass.

'DELSARTE'
Corset Waists and Braces. Send for Price List.
Agents Wanted. Also
DELSARTE CORSET CO.,
142 W. 23d St., New York.
111 State Street, Chicago, Ill.

R YOU Looking for a HOME or an investment where you can double your money? ELLSWORTH the new temperance suburb of Chicago offers both. Write to ELLSWORTH LAND ASS'N, Room 41, 81 Clark St., Chicago.

MY WIFE SAYS SHE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT FOR THE MONEY. $12 Buys a $65.00 Improved Oxford Singer Sewing Machine; perfect working, reliable, finely finished, adapted to light and heavy work, with a complete set of the latest improved attachments free. Each machine guaranteed for 5 years. Buy direct from our factory, and save dealers and agents profit. Send for FREE CATALOGUE.
OXFORD MFG. COMPANY, DEPT 20, CHICAGO, ILL.

$525 Agent's profits per month. Will prove it or pay forfeit. New articles just out. A $1.50 sample and terms free. Try us. Chidester & Son, 28 Bond-st. N.Y.

LADIES Send to the Stevens' Dish Washing Machine Co., Cleveland, for descriptive circulars of this wonderful invention. No dish or wiping cloth used, truly a great blessing to the household. Agents wanted.

LADY Agents make big wages every day With our Ladies' and Children's Specialties. Over 100 different articles. Indispensable. Catalogue Free.
G. L. ERWIN & CO., Chicago, Ill.

ROCK BOTTOM Prices on Dry Goods, Groceries. Everything you eat, wear or use. Send for FREE Illustrated Catalogue to
J. R. EAGLE & CO., 68 Wabash Av., Chicago, Ill
We do not sell liquors in any shape.

LADIES Send only five cents and receive a Large, Elegant Fashion Catalogue and how to secure 50c. worth of dress patterns, FREE. Add. Young Lady's Bazar 230 La Salle St. Chicago.

LADY wanted, on salary, to sell Roses, Shrubs, &c Brown Bros. Nurseries, Rochester, N.Y. & Chicago

HOUSEHOLD NECESSITY. Agents make big profits. Catalogue (A) and particulars free. Cline Mfg. Co., 67 W. Washington St., Chicago.

LADY AGENTS CLEAR $10 PER DAY selling my garments for ladies & children. Mrs. L. E. SINGLETON, Box 665, Chicago, Ill.

LADY Agents $5 a day sure; new rubber undergarment. Mrs. N. B. LITTLE, Chicago, Ill.

"Why stand ye all the day idle?"
10 DOLLARS PER DAY
is not easily made in these times, but it can be made working for us in any locality. We have agents that have made more than $25 per day, the whole secret is we have something that every housekeeper wants and will buy at sight without any urging. If agents prefer will pay a straight salary of $75 per month and expenses. Full particulars sent free to all points where we have not already secured an agent. Exclusive territory given. Can refer to any express company in Boston as to our integrity. Address, (in full,)
STANDARD SILVERWARE CO.,
Order Dept. 127. Boston, Mass.

Kernels.

The best thing out—a conflagration.

The baker is busiest when he is loafing.

It is when the turkey is in the oven that the cook studies Browning.

Something happens every day to serve as an excuse for the man who does not do his very best.

One of the most fascinating occupations is watching other people work, but only a foreman can make it pay.

Mr. Feeder—What's that awful thumping out there?

Waiter—Dat's de cook. You ordered a tenderloin steak, didn't yo', sah?

Poet.—"I have a little poem here, sir, that has been indited—"

Editor.—"Well, sir, I would be glad to see it convicted, but I can't try it."

The emperor of China is learning to speak English. Well, when he comes to pronounce such words as bough, cough, dough, and the like, he will find it tough.

Janitor (to artist returning from a vacation): "There have been so many callers since you left that I have been obliged to wash the names from the slate twice to make room for others."

Mrs. Youngthing: "How long have these eggs been boiling, Bridget?"

Bridget: "Eighteen minutes, mum."

Mrs. Youngthing: "Why, I told you to boil them only three minutes!"

Bridget: "Oi know that; but the kitchen clock is fifteen minutes slow, mum."

"I'll never publish another book anonymously as long as I live," said a poet on Christmas morning. "Why not?" queried a friend. "Because I have already received five copies of my own book from my admirers, with the compliments of the season."

Never fear that your wants are forgotten because the boundless creation sends up a cry to its common Father, and He has an infinite family for whom to provide. Were you His only creature alive, He could not think of you more constantly and tenderly than He does now.—W. E. Channing.

Dr. Cuyler tells the story of a little boy, the son of good Presbyterian parents, who was asked the question in the catechism, "What is man's chief end?" and he answered it, "Man's chief end is to glorify God and annoy him forever." There are too many men, says Dr. Cuyler, who act as if that were their chief end.

An amusing story is reported from a cathedral town on the coast of England. For many years half a dozen devout old ladies have been in the habit of going, in fine weather or foul, to the early morning service in the cold minster. Recently it was decided to warm the church; and the old ladies, with one voice, protested against the innovation. "We shall be suffocated," they declared. "We shall be carried out fainting." One morning, when they arrived for their devotions, they found half a dozen stoves set up in different nooks and corners of the cathedral. In the course of the service, therefore, three of the old ladies fainted. "We knew how it would be," they afterward said to the dean. But the dean confounded them by assuring them that the new stoves had never been lighted.

SHE WHO IS MINE.

She who is mine, whose soul is all mine own,
As mine is hers, long loved and early known,
With what warm hands, with what a loving face
She gives me welcome to this quiet place,
This cottage hearth, where we two dwell alone.

We have the poor for neighbors; we are one,
Content with simple duties simply done;
And she, at least, of no ambitious race,
She who is mine.

Ah, yes! Life's vain results have come and gone;
And the dry heart, like a cold kernel stone
Within its withered pulp and shrunken case,
Might well have lost such fullness and such grace
As once it had, but for this love full grown
And resolute and pure, that she hath shown.
She who is mine.

—Academy.

Van Houten's Cocoa—The Standard of the World.

Publisher's Notes.

Bargains in Books.

Space on our shelves is exceedingly valuable on account of the ever increasing size of our stock. It is necessary therefore to remove all slightly soiled books and we make this an opportunity by which you can obtain our publications at about half the regular prices. The cover is generally all that is soiled, the inside is just as good as in new books. You can send for some of these to lend out to the neighbors, and thus do much good. Why not?

Bound in cloth or stiff covers	Reg. price.	Red. price.
Hygiene of the Home	$1.00	$ .50
Stories of the March	.75	.35
Marble Cross	.60	.35
How to Win	1.00	.60
The Year's Bright Chain	.50	.30
Frances Raymond's Investment	.50	.25
Driftwood	1.00	.50
High Caste Hindu Woman	1.35	.75
In paper covers:
Drill Manual	.20	.10
Helps for Health Meetings	.10	.06
Hints for "Y" Entertainments	.10	.06
Driftwood	.50	.25
Questions Answered	.25	.12
Purity Crusade	.25	.10
May Women Speak	.25	.12
Crusader Programs	.25	.15
Prohibition Program	.10	.06
Helping Hand	.10	.05
Chalk Talk Hand Book	.10	.06
Woman in the Pulpit	.25	.15
Duties of Women	.25	.15
Free Rum on the Congo	.25	.15
Crusader Series, Nos. 1, 2, and 3, each	.10	.06
Life of General Fisk	.15	.05
Prohibition Amend't Guide	.25	.15
Marching Songs, No. 2	.10	.06
Ye Hatchet Partie	.15	.05
Songs for Y. W. C. T. U.	.25	.20
K. D. Souvenir	.10	.06
Drink Chart	.10	.04
Temp. Annals	.25	.15
W. C. T. U. Order Book	.25	.15
Lesson Manuals, assorted	15 for	.25
Golden Keys	.25	.15
Bugle Notes for the Home	.10	.06

Postage prepaid. The supply is limited.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Worth Reading.

SHOREHAM, VT., Feb. 26, 1892.

As an Evanston "Old Timer," personally acquainted with its character and history for fully thirty years, allow me to express my gratification that the W. T. P. A. has given to the public that interesting and suggestive book, "A Classic Town."

Miss Willard's personality is impressed on every page, and weaves the facts she has gathered at the cost of much time and painstaking into imperishable garlands, every leaf and flower and bud of which possesses interest for the whole world. The evolution of this town, from the time when the Indian canoe floated on the unfurrowed lake, and the smoke of the wigwam rose in silence above the trees of the college campus, though less than forty years, to the present when the turrets of University Hall and the spires and towers of its churches rise above the tree-tops, and happy homes nestle beneath them, has lessons for all, especially for every new and growing community in our land.

It is an object-lesson in the study of the new civilization. Abstract theories become real as we note what has here been wrought through the partnership of morals and intelligence. "What God has joined together, let not man put asunder." Underlying the truest prosperity of this town is that clause in its University charter, which, from the beginning has thundered forth the fiat: "Thou shalt not sell vinous, spirituous or fermented liquors under license or otherwise" within its territory. The celebration of the fourth centennial of civilization in the New World can hardly make more notable contributions to the philosophy of history than the thoughtful reader of this book may gain from pondering long and deeply the suggestive story of "A Classic Town."

Yours,
M. B. NORTON.

Thousands are Waiting for this book, and we must have 500 agents who will order a sample copy at about half price and postage, and go to work at once. The book is full of good ideas and common sense.

A Characteristic Volume,

☐Write for terms and territory to

SUBS'N BOOK DEP'T W. T. P. A.,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

READ THIS TWICE

We desire to call your attention to THE SAFEST INVESTMENT you can now make. The opportunity will not be long offered, as the small amount now unsold will soon be taken. We refer to the stock of the

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association

It has an established business. Capital stock, $125,000.

ABSOLUTELY NON-ASSESSABLE
DIVIDENDS PAID ANNUALLY

Price per share $25.
Address all inquiries to

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION,
161 LA SALLE STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

THE PATHWAY TO EASTER

SEVEN WORDS FOR THE SEVEN DAYS

BY ROSE PORTER

To which has been added an Easter poem written for the W. C. T. U. by MARY LOWE DICKINSON. This consists of an elaboration of the utterances of Christ from the cross, and is peculiarly appropriate for Easter tokens. It is printed on excellent laid paper, and bound in embossed bristol. We make this an Easter specialty, and offer it at the exceedingly low price of 25c. per copy, 6 for $1.25, 12 for $2.25.

Send orders to WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION,
161 La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

DO YOU WANT FACTS?

And do you desire others should know the facts in regard to the liquor traffic? You cannot do better than by securing a copy of that wonderful book,

The Temperance Movement

By Ex-SENATOR BLAIR.

It discusses

Alcohol and Health,
Alcohol and Crime,
Alcohol and Poverty,
License or Prohibition?
Alcohol and Wealth,
Alcohol and Labor,
The Forces Against Alcohol,
Temperance Organizations,
The Church.

It is a very valuable compendium of information. Every thinker and every leader in all causes should read it. It is a book of 583 pages, beautifully illustrated. We offer it, bound in cloth, at the ridiculously low price of $1.25 postpaid.

Address WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

NEARLY 2 FOR 1

THIS PAPER AND DEMOREST'S FAMILY MAGAZINE

COMBINED.

The only one of the "Great Monthlies" that is run on Prohibition Principles.

Superior to the $3 and $4 Magazines.

Combines the Essentials of all others.

Our Great Combination.

We have made an arrangement whereby you can get Demorest's Family Magazine in combination with THE UNION SIGNAL, both for only $2.25 year. The cost of the Magazine alone is $2.00 a year. Subscribers to this paper who have paid for the current year, can subscribe now for another year in advance, from the expiration of their present paid subscription, and have the Magazine commence at any time. This great offer holds good for only a limited time. Call the attention of your friends to this offer, and thereby co-operate with us in the dissemination of Prohibition literature.

Double The Cost Refunded.

Each subscriber to the Magazine can, during the year, receive in actual money value double the cost of the two publications. If you want to see how, send your address on a postal to W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, Publisher, No. 15 East 14th Street, New York, with whom we have arranged to send to all of our readers who write for it, a sample copy of Demorest's Family Magazine, Free. Subscriptions at this low club-rate must be left at or sent direct to this office, and be paid in advance.

THE UNION SIGNAL

WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION — FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Vol. XVIII.—No. 13.] CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, March 31, 1892. [Price $1.00 per Year in Advance.

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

Thursday, the Maryland legislature voted to appropriate $60,000 for its exhibit in the Exposition.

Walt Whitman, the "good, gray poet," died at his home in Camden, N. J., March 26, aged seventy-three.

Chicago is to have an immense temple of music, resembling the Trocadero of Paris, during the Columbian Exposition.

Local option adopted by the Iowa Senate has been defeated in the House, and prohibition is still the watchword in Iowa.

The legislature of Mississippi on Friday defeated the bill appropriating $50,000 for the state display at the Columbian Exposition.

Senator Edwards' bill giving women the right to vote for school commissioners passed the Senate last week by a vote of twenty-five to one.

A lighted match on board a vessel loaded with petroleum, anchored at Barcelona, Spain, destroyed seven vessels in that harbor, March 27.

The British government has announced that it will clearly define its position in regard to the Bering Sea matter during the present week.

An enthusiastic mass-meeting in Central Music Hall, Chicago, on Sunday last listened to a patriotic discussion of reform in municipal government, notably in the matter of clean streets and alleys for the World's Fair city.

The New Jersey legislature passed, with but three dissenting votes, a bill to close the state exhibit, and requested the closing of the Columbian Exposition gates on Sunday. This makes five states that have responded to our women's earnest pleading.

The District of Columbia has determined, through a mass-meeting of her citizens in Washington, March 27, to contribute and solicit an amount of provisions sufficient to load a vessel for the famine districts of Russia. Contributions should be sent to T. A. Beall, New York Produce Exchange, New York City.

THE liquor traffic dies yearly and is only resuscitated at the polls by the men who vote for license.

THE address of the headquarters of the British Women's Temperance Association in London, is 57 Gordon Square, and not 15 Gordon Square, as given in the World's Minutes.

THE World's Fair commission is to convene April 6, and all petitions indorsed at the meetings April 3 must be sent in promptly. Petitions are now coming in rapidly to Mrs. Carse and encouraging reports come from Miss Catlin, petition secretary at Washington.

LADY HENRY SOMERSET had the misfortune to lose a traveling bag containing important manuscripts, notebooks and letters on her recent trip to Pittsburgh and New York. She hopes any correspondents who fail to receive replies to their letters will accept this as the explanation, as she is unable, so large was the number, to recall the names and addresses thus involved.

THE American Coffee House is the next great subject that THE UNION SIGNAL will bring forward by an illustrated history of such as have been eminently successful. More and more certain is it that this movement shall become the applied gospel for the tempted, and the scientific demonstration that shall antidote the saloon. The series will begin by a sketch of Mrs. E. A. Russell, and the great W. C. T. U. Coffee House of Minneapolis, which she has made the most splendid test of the practicality of this work, and will be followed by the New England Kitchen of Boston.

"THE Dollar Meeting" is a success, throwing the "Dollar Store" far in the shade. We hope it will go round the world. Send us accounts of "How You Made Money," comrades, near and far, for "what woman has done woman can do."

WE HAVE been asked the origin of the motto of the World's W. C. T. U., "For God and Home and Every Land." Great minds are apt to act in concert but so far as we know its name was suggested by some of our Michigan white-ribboners who sought to find a motto analogous to the one we already had, and it was moved in the Minneapolis convention by Mrs. Benjamin that we suggest this as the motto of the World's W. C. T. U., which was done by vote in 1886.

THE Central W. C. T. U. coffee house, of Minneapolis, has opened a branch lunch room in the heart of the saloon district of that city. A recent letter from Mrs. Russell, the superintendent, says: "We have been running only two days, but served over one hundred meals the second day. Our front door is directly opposite the big mirror of a gilded saloon across the street, and our sign is handsomely reflected therein, so that the proprietor must either remove his mirror or give us a free advertisement. Do encourage the people to open coffee houses." This is just what THE UNION SIGNAL is proposing to do. Look out for future numbers.

A COMMITTEE has been appointed on literature for the World's W. C. T. U. of which Lady Henry Somerset has been made chairman, with Miss Guernsey, Mrs. Rastall and Miss Pugh as her associates. A different style of literature is necessary for the cosmopolitan uses to which the white ribbon movement is becoming gradually adapted; that is, the best utterances of scientists and political economists must be put in cheap and popular form for general circulation; special thought must be given to literature for Sunday-schools in different parts of the world; the quality of the stories furnished must be improved, and every effort made to make the temperance standard as high as that attained by any department of philanthropy and reform.

THE ministers in Chicago have recently organized what is called a pastoral alliance, the object of which will be to fight sin during the World's Fair. It is probably the strongest organization for that purpose ever formed in Chicago, and its promoters are among the representative religious men. About two hundred gentlemen were present at the initial meeting, representing all the religious sects. The Hon. C. C. Bonney, chairman of the World's Fair Committee on Congresses, religious, philanthropic, etc., held that the great Fair would expose the public to more than the ordinary temptations of vice, and that it was therefore necessary that Christians, irrespective of denomination, should prepare to meet the temptations; all great institutions are to be represented at the Fair, and he thought it would be well that the church would not be absent; the Religious Congress, representing every variety of faith, would make a good fight against infidelity, and would show that Christian denominations had ceased to fight with one another. The Rev. Dr. Barrows, who is at the head of the committee on Religious Congresses, held that the moral and spiritual effects of the Fair would exceed its material results. He spoke of the Congress as a parliament of religions, and considered the objects to be to bring together for the first time the leading representatives of all the great religions of the world, to show men how many truths these religions hold in common, and promote and deepen the spirit of true brotherhood among religions; to set forth clearly the present condition and outlook, to discover what light religion has to throw on the great problems of the age, and to bring the nations of the earth into a friendly fellowship, in the hope of securing permanent national peace.

TO LABOR leaders, temperance leaders, one and all, we have to say: Be of brave heart, ye eager scouts of humanity's vast army. Strike out into the forest and blaze the trees. Slowly we march, we of the rank and file, but we are following straight behind you. Don't you catch sometimes away ahead there the muffled music of our coming feet? Oh, yes, the human biped is a timid creature who loves to march in platoons rather than to strike out swiftly and alone, but he carries a jewel here behind the forehead, and is therefore the single sentient creature concerning whom there is hope. You can change his opinions though they are bone of his bone, flesh of his flesh, and dearer to him than his own right eye. There are forces that can disintegrate from the igneous rocks of his prejudice the broader stratifications of a righteous law. What with "line upon line, precept upon precept, here a little and there a little" of persuasion founded upon justice, the work is done.

THE platform adopted by the Prohibitionists of Michigan doubtless foreshadows that which will be indorsed by the National Convention, to be held in Cincinnati, June 29 and 30. It demands that the saloon's power be pulverized, and that the sale and manufacture of liquor be made a public crime; that the suffrage be regardless of sex; that gold and silver and paper all be made legal tender, and that none but the government issue money; that trusts and combinations be prohibited by law; that the tariff be revised on business principles, by experts, on a revenue basis only; that railroads, telegraph, telephone and express companies be owned by the government; that paupers and criminal emigrants be excluded, and foreigners be not permitted to vote until one year after taking out papers. It was further declared that the Prohibition party cannot entertain any proposition to coöperate with any reform party which does not antagonize the liquor traffic as earnestly as it does any other monopoly or any other form of vicious legislation. It demands that individual and coöperative ownership of land be limited, and favors a per diem pension law.

OUR energetic superintendent of work for the promotion of purity in literature and art, Mrs. Emilie Martin, of New York City, is compassing sea and land to secure the passage of House Bill No. 120, introduced by Congressman Henderson, forbidding the transmission in the mails of obscene books, pictures, articles, and all papers containing advertisements of nostrums to cure secret diseases, or to produce criminal results; also papers principally made up of criminal news and stories of immoral deeds. Naturally those who have a miserable financial interest in advertising and selling the aforementioned abomination are privately appealing to the proprietors of the papers to oppose the bill in the interest of their advertising profits. As an offset to this, we must earnestly appeal to good men and women to prove that noble motives may give birth to as great zeal as the ignoble motive of making money out of bad practices. We ask that all these good party people of the better sort write at once to the Congressmen of their respective states, urging them to vote for the passage of this bill. There is no time to lose. Every state president in the Union, and every one of our forty National superintendents, has been written to entreatingly by Mrs. Martin. She has sat at her desk hardly stopping to eat, that she might do her part. The National Y. M. C. A. not only gives her its sympathy but has taken energetic action in favor of the bill; the Christian Endeavor Society and the women's executive committee of Home Missions of the Presbyterian Church are heartily coöperating with the immense individual opinions of the friends of decency in every state, by means of letters to those who are their legal representatives at the Capitol. No law of more importance to the mass of the nation can possibly come before Congress. To act promptly is to act with power.

Contributed.

LENT.

BY ANNABEL MORRIS HOLVEY.

Not for a little season, Lord,
Would I be drawn apart
From all that leads away from Thee,
And wounds afresh Thy heart;
Not for a stated little time
To give up fleshly lust,
Not for a few short weeks, alone,
To teach my heart to trust
In Thy undying love; nor seek
By my unwonted zeal,
Just for a little season's rest—
To make religion real.

No, Saviour, I would give to Thee
My undivided heart,
Nor keep from service in Thy cause,
From any day a part.
Teach me to shun whate'er in life
Thy presence may not bless,
Nor fear, before a sinful world,
Thy mercies to confess.
Dear Lord, I would that I might lose
My all of self in Thee,
And in Thy service ever find
My greatest joy to be.

And it is sweet to come apart
E'en for a season short,
And warm us in the radiant glow,
That shines Thy cross athwart;
To feel Thy presence nearer drawn,
To walk alone with Thee,
E'en though our feet must tread the way
To dark Gethsemane;
To wait with Mary at the cross,
To catch the precious flood,
To wash and be anew made clean
In Thy redeeming blood.

Yes, Lord, it is a precious boon
Thou gavest to Thine own,
To wait with Thee, till angel hands
Shall roll away the stone;
Then shout the Alleluia song,
A risen Lord proclaim,
Till every heart shall catch the strain,
And glorify His name.

Pittston, Pa.

*RECOLLECTIONS OF NOTED MEN AND WOMEN. VIII.

BY LADY HENRY SOMERSET.

Louisa, Marchioness of Waterford.

Fifty years ago in the most exclusive and fastidious society of Europe, two women stood almost beyond all others by their celebrity for talent and for beauty. A reputation was not so easily made in those days for either quality. The "four hundred" who constitute the society elect of New York City or the heterogeneous assemblies which form the so-called society of London have established a lower standard. It is easy now for any fashionable woman to be called a beauty who is photographed in an eccentric gown and whose portrait is exhibited in the shop windows side by side with the favorite actress or the notorious singer of the music hall. An entré to any society is to be bought by a cellar of the finest wine and the services of a celebrated chef.

Genius and talent, intellect and beauty guarded in those better days the charmed circle of society like an Eden defended by the swords of cherubims; its qualities were the best excuse for its existence; to all who had achieved its doors were open, and from its formative influences the nation gained a true concept of nobility.

Louisa and Charlotte Stuart, daughters of Lord and Lady Stuart de Rothsay, were women whose appearance in society marked an epoch and whose influence left its stamp on their generation. Their father occupied a leading position in diplomacy at many courts. When he was appointed English Ambassador, in Paris, his daughters had opportunities of studying art under the best masters, and there developed that surprising talent which made Lady Waterford the most famous amateur artist of her time.

At an early age she married the Marquis of Waterford, and went to live upon his estates in the south of Ireland. At this time the landlord was usually execrated as an absentee, and the foundations were being laid for the great political controversies that harass statesmen now.

The charm and beauty which had made Lady Waterford welcome in London society were turned to an even greater advantage in the cottage and the hovel; at a time when such occupations were rare, she read to the sick, instructed the children and brought comfort and blessing to the poor and sad. In order to pursue that ministry of love she was obliged to have clothing set apart for the purpose which was instantly changed on returning to her home.

Lord Waterford, known as the wild Lord Waterford, from the exuberance of his Irish spirits and his daring feats of horsemanship, was the leader of a gay band whose delight it was to indulge in practical jokes; repainting the signs from village inns and skillfully removing the door-knockers of his sedate neighbors, were among their frequent escapades. He was renowned not only as an intrepid rider, but as the most skillful horse breaker of his time. On one occasion for a wager he brought his favorite hunter into the dining room at Curraghmore and cleared the table without disturbing a single glass. Shortly after their marriage, Lady Waterford nearly met her death as the result of an accident caused by her husband's inability to control a pair of wild young horses. She was thrown violently on her head, and during the time that she lay unconscious with concussion of the brain her long hair had to be cut off; now the heavy chestnut braid frames her beautiful portrait on the walls of her ancestral home.

The gentle and reforming influence that she exercised over the peasantry of Waterford was not, however, destined to be of long continuance. It had been foretold by one of the old crones on the estate, that Lord Waterford would meet his death following his favorite pursuit. Such prophecy, however, seemed a myth to those who saw him in the pride of his splendid physique as he set out surrounded by hounds and huntsmen on the fatal day of its fulfillment. The sport was over, the horsemen were dispersed, and as he turned his horse's bridle homeward, in order the sooner to make his way, he cleared a small and insignificant fence with a loose rein and inattentive eye. The animal barely rose, caught his foot in a bough, and in an instant horse and rider lay on the ploughed field, the latter never to rise again. That night as the wind moaned and the twilight merged into darkness, the wife waited in vain for his return. His lifeless form was borne home at last by faithful tenants, who had found him on the highway, across the courtyard that he had crossed in the morning full of manly strength and vigor.

LOUISA, MARCHIONESS OF WATERFORD.

According to the law of English entail, Lady Waterford could no longer remain on the Irish estates; as she had no children they descended to the next male heir. Her home henceforth was the dower house of the family, an old castle situated on the borders of Northumberland and Scotland, and here she began the characteristic manner of life for which she became so highly revered and deeply loved. The drawing-rooms of London saw her no more, but she gathered around her at rare intervals the company of a few cultivated and congenial spirits. Living, however, in the depths of the country her days were passed in almost unbroken solitude, and I have often heard her say that for weeks when the heavy snows covered the north country hills she spoke to no one but her servants and the village folk. Her retirement, however, did not pass in idleness. The old castle in her hands was transformed into a thing of beauty, and the stamp of her artistic genius was impressed on every stone.

The schoolhouse at Ford was decorated by her hand with life-sized frescoes from Old Testament subjects. The splendid Giorgionesque coloring, and the fine composition was not their only merit; there was a tender reverence for the sacred stories, and an evident desire to impart their lessons to the children gathered in the school that was as pathetic as it was unusual.

Her portfolios contained the most complete evidence of her really great imagination; the varied subjects and their unhackneyed treatment were the admiration of such critics as John Ruskin, Sir Frederick Leighton and G. F. Watts.

Her forte was perhaps her interpretation of child-life. Many will remember the exquisite conception of her picture of fate, representing the dying child watched by its mother, who could see nothing but the three fates spinning, holding and severing the slender thread—while above, unseen by her, was the true fate, an angel waiting with outstretched arms to carry the sweet soul to heaven. Again, another drawing represents the little king of Spain seated on gilded throne, his baby hands weighed down with globe and scepter, wistfully gazing at his happier sisters romping in merry, childlike play.

I saw her in the prime of her great beauty, a perfect jewel in a perfect setting—the ideal chatelaine of her border castle. Tall, stately, with features absolutely Greek, a head shaped and poised like the Venus of Milo, one never forgot her beauty save when under the spell of her intellect. She remains a present picture, treading the autumn fields of Flodden with her bright winsome smile and her elastic step. During the solitude of the long winter evenings she had stored her mind with the thoughts of the great philosophers, statesmen and poets; she was delightful in conversation although her extreme shyness made her somewhat reticent in general society. Her power, however, and real scope of intellect were fully apparent when she was in the company of my father, who was not only congenial to her in taste and occupation, being himself a remarkable artist and skilled in antiquarian lore, but a near kinsman and lifelong comrade.

On her mother's death Lady Waterford inherited the estate of Highcliffe, situated on the sea-coast opposite the Isle of Wight. Her father, Lord Stuart, had caused an old castle to be removed from Brittany and rebuilt stone by stone on a cliff overlooking the sea. After many years the ground springs threatened to undermine this historic structure and the sandstone cliffs along the coast began to give way before the steady encroachments of the sea. An extensive sea-wall was planned and erected under the supervision of Lady Waterford. It was, I believe, at this time when constantly thrown in the company of the workmen employed on its construction that she first commenced her active temperance work. She took the pledge and wore the blue ribbon from that day until her death, a period of not less than sixteen years. Regardless of the scorn in which the cause was then held she was loyal to its principles and devoted to its extension. This was, however, not the only unpopular cause embraced by her, for, contrary to the prevailing opinion of her class, she was a firm adherent of home rule, and thoroughly in favor of the progress and emancipation of women.

When I made my first temperance address in 1885, hers was the only letter that came to me from those with whom I had been accustomed to associate. "I do not know," she said, "when anything has given me keener pleasure than your speech as reported in a daily newspaper."

Doubtless she never realized what those words meant, coming to me in my novitiate, from one whose opinion I held in so much reverence. Would that we were all as ready to send a word of cheer to those who in timidity and against fearful odds are putting forth their first faint efforts in a holy cause.

Lady Waterford never spoke in public, for so great was her difficulty in overcoming her innate reserve that two years before her death, which occurred in 1891, at the age of seventy years, with almost pathetic simplicity she told a friend that she had at last gained courage to open her mothers' meetings with extempore prayer; only those reared in the Church of England can appreciate her difficulty.

The monuments of friendship are raised to most when they have passed beyond knowledge of the loving appreciation that thus seeks to commemorate their characters, but the friends of Louisa, Lady Waterford, wished to immortalize in marble that rare beauty of face and form. A statue of her by the famous sculptor, Sir Edgar Boehm, stands in the entrance hall at Highcliffe, presented as the inscription reads, by those who admired and loved her. Her life and character illustrate in full measure the Laureate's lines:

"Kind hearts are more than coronets
And simple faith than Norman blood."

*Copyrighted.

IMPORTANT OPINIONS ON THE SUNDAY CLOSING OF THE COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION.

(Concluded.)

REV. JOHN H. BARROWS, D. D.,
Chicago, Ill.

In my judgment the nation should close the Columbian Fair grounds on Sunday, giving the vast army of workmen, assistants, exhibitors, etc., the day of rest which they need. I would not open the grounds to the public as a park. I would divert attention from material things that day in order that the public thought may be directed to things intellectual, moral and spiritual. Sunday should be made for six months in Chicago the great day of the Fair by the attractions it will offer to those who are gathered here. In the churches the greatest preachers of the world should be heard. The American Sunday-school should be on exhibition in the afternoon. The great problems of the age should be discussed from a moral and religious standpoint in the spacious halls of the city already built or yet to be erected. In connection with the evening services in the halls and churches, the best music should be offered to the people. In this way Sunday will not be a day of demoralization, of lawlessness, of excursions, of tumults, of grinding toil, but a true American Sunday, contributing to the higher forces which are essential to our national well being.

REV. H. G. JACKSON, D. D.,
Pastor of Marshfield Avenue Church, Chicago.

The only way the nation can observe the Sabbath at the Columbian Exposition is to close the gates of admission to the public, stop the machinery and all active operations, and preserve the utmost quiet possible during the day. Any attempt to hold religious services within the inclosure will prove a failure; for, in the first place, the representatives of the government, as such, have nothing to do with religion or religious services; and, secondly, if the gates are opened, ostensibly for religious services, thousands will take advantage of that fact, simply to get in, and it will result practically in opening the Fair on Sunday, which ought not to be done under any circumstances. The closing of the Exposition absolutely on Sunday will be to all the most impressive lesson on Sunday observance that can be given. I think the churches of Chicago ought to make special arrangements for services on Sundays during the Fair, at convenient places, so that all may have ample opportunity to spend the day in an appropriate manner; but such services should be entirely independent of the management of the Exposition.

O. C. DICKERSON,
Godfrey, Ill.

On Sunday morning, within that national domain, the Great Fair, let all world's show, work and amusement cease, and that sweet, holy, restful Sabbath, to which America owes so much, come to the front (under adequate police protection). We cannot better serve and honor our world guests than by crediting them with the culture implied by such provision. Let us provide them from near and afar, with the best procurable talent for pulpit, altar and orchestra.

For the thousands who may find it inconvenient to leave the grounds on that day, let full tables of this celestial fare be served, even as in Acts 2:6, 7. America owes this munificence to her Maker, her neighbor and herself. We would place on exposition our best treasures and institutions—assuredly our Sabbath

REV. HERRICK JOHNSON, D. D.,
McCormick Seminary, Chicago.

Observe the Sabbath on the Columbian Fair grounds by closed Exposition gates and silence profound throughout the vast area.

My reasons for this opinion are:

1. Provision will be amply made for every kind of religious service outside the Fair grounds. Representative men from every part of the world will be heard, not only in our pulpits, but in all our great assembly rooms and public halls.

2. Religious service inside the Fair grounds on the Sabbath will only be a lame excuse for a great rush of people to the Fair grounds on Sunday, vastly increasing travel and compelling labor.

3. It will be an open door to dissipation.

4. It will help swell the Sabbath gate receipts and the income of restaurants, which is hardly the way to promote vital godliness.

5. A Sabbath-breaking crowd and a Sabbath-observing crowd, pressing together to the Fair grounds, will be a sorry spectacle.

6. The implied sanction it will give to all against which almost the entire church has been protesting, viz.: to Sunday opening of the Exposition—will be as lamentable as it will be unavoidable.

7. This Christian nation will give the mightiest testimony of the century to Sabbath rest and worship, by having the World's Fair gates closed to everything on Sunday.

ALFRED A. WRIGHT,
Dean of Boston Correspondence School.

The opening of the Columbian Exposition on the Sabbath would prove disastrous to every interest for which Christianity stands.

In the presence of the commandment interpreted in the light of all historic examples, it is sure that the opening of these iron gates would invite the lightning bolts of wrath. God must smite and blight any civilization that ignores His statutes.

MRS. MAY WRIGHT SEWELL,
President National Council of Women.

One of the first evidences that a nation is Christian is its perception that under Christianity the spirit has destroyed formalism; that the hard day devoted to eternal observance of rites, which is suggested by the word Sabbath, has passed away; that it was rejected by Christ himself when he declared "The Sabbath was made for man, not man for the Sabbath." Much is said of the American Sabbath; happily, there is no such thing; it is a phrase which implies, first, the ceremonials of Judaism; second, the rigidity of Puritanism, and misrepresents the actual character of the American Sunday. The feeling of the ancient Sabbath survives in the English Sunday to a degree quite foreign to the more cheerful American Sunday.

I should be glad to have all the churches in Chicago open during the summer of 1893. The influx of strangers will bring plenty of men and women to supply the pulpits of settled pastors, who are enjoying their usual vacations. The new administration will be as helpful to the various congregations as the opportunity to minister to new people under new conditions will be quickening to the visiting preachers. The city will be full of celebrities, the announcement of whose names would fill churches with unaccustomed listeners even though their powers be inferior to those of the regular minister.

But granting that the city utilized all its means for instructing and entertaining its own inhabitants and its guests, there will be thousands of people to whom every Sunday from May to October will be a season, either of lawless dissipation or of stupefying listlessness, unless the managers of the great Exposition make its finest resources available to the public on that day.

I would have Machinery Hall and the Mines building, and all the divisions of the Exposition which present the manufacturing, the commercial and mere material business interests of the world, closed; both because the army of attendants necessary to keep these parts of the Exposition open, need their Sunday, and it would be impracticable to have two sets of attendants with alternating terms of service; and also, because if there were no practical obstacle to keeping the whole Exposition open on Sunday, I think it preferable to direct the mind to the contemplation of other than its material interests.

Horticultural Hall, the department of the fine arts, including the educational display, the galleries of sculpture and painting, demand a relatively small number of attendants, and a supply of extra attendants for Sunday service is not impracticable. I think these and all kindred departments of the Fair should be open on Sundays, and that extraordinary inducements, by way of reduced admittance fees, comfortable, cheap refreshments, etc., should be offered, to secure a large attendance of working people who must visit the Exposition on Sunday, if at all. Moreover, I think programs of fine music, sacred music, oratorios if you will, should be provided every Sunday at merely nominal prices, in the auditorium of the Woman's Building, and in other public halls that may be on the grounds. I would have meetings arranged for every Sunday, open free to the visitors who might be induced to enter where the most interesting, eloquent, and artistic speakers, clerical or lay, readers and singers should consecrate their gifts to awakening and feeding the higher natures of those for whom the popular church makes little provision, and who would not enter it though the door to every other building were closed.

I believe that only by this thoughtful, judicious Sunday use of the extraordinary facilities of the Columbian Fair for the refined instruction and entertainment of the masses, can the extraordinary Sunday temptations with which Chicago will overflow during the months of the Exposition be forestalled or counterbalanced.

REV. E. P. GOODWIN, D. D.,
Pastor First Congregational Church, Chicago.

The best way in my opinion for the nation to observe the Sabbath on the Columbian Fair grounds would be to keep all the doors fast locked and to hang across them bannerettes with the Fourth Commandment inscribed in golden letters.

We are wont to extol, and rightly, the noble character of our ancestors. Let us not disgrace them and proclaim to the world our degeneracy, both in statesmanship and morals by repudiating one of the cardinal principles of their political faith. The constitutions of all the colonies without exception, not only recognized Christianity, but declared it to be a part of their organic law. Some of these constitutions would indeed furnish improved creeds to not a few churches of our time. The favor of God was in that early day the nation's supreme hope. And by no condition was that favor held to be more vitally determined than by the observance of the Sabbath. The action of the Provincial Congress of Massachusetts in June, 1775, is fairly representative of the universal sentiment. They speak first of the calamity of the war (the Revolution) and of the fear of further judgments which are only to be averted by sincere penitence and a hearty return to the paths of obedience to God, and then continue:

"And as among the prevailing sins of this day, which threaten the destruction of this land, we have reason to lament the frequent profanations of the Lord's Day, or Christian Sabbath; many spending their time in idleness or sloth, others in diversions, and others in journeying, or business which is not necessary on that day; and as we earnestly desire that a stop may be put to this great and prevailing evil, it is therefore,

"Resolved, That it be recommended to the people of all ranks and denominations throughout this colony, that they not only pay a religious regard to that day, and to the public worship of God thereon, but that they also use their influence to discountenance and suppress any profanation thereof in others."

Let the Directory of the Fair pass and publish preamble and resolution like that and the great Exposition will become such a potential witness to Christianity and the free institutions begotten and developed by it, as the world has never seen. But if they trample on God's law, let them—let the people—remember that "The nation and kingdom that will not serve Him shall perish."

"DARKNESS AND DAYLIGHT IN NEW YORK."

II.

BY B. V. CUSHMAN, M. D.

As might be expected, a wide-awake reporter of the daily press sees the degradation and misery of a great city at a different angle from that of a city missionary. If her view appeals most to the heart of the reader, then that of Col. Thomas W. Knox supplements it with a great supply of thought—food for the head.

Plainly the motive in the mind of the writer is to stir social scientists and philanthropists to seek the underlying cause and most prolific sources of this great aggregation of crime and wretchedness. He is open-eyed as to the part liquor plays in it all, declaring first that the most prolific and fundamental source of crime is intemperance, "for drink is generally the foundation of pauperism, and underlies nearly all other sources of crime of every name and nature." Again he says: "The worst cradle of crime in New York City is the tenement house district, a region given over to pauperism and misery, the greater part of which was primarily induced by intemperance."

It is shown that necessity is the connecting link between drink and theft, the author parenthetically referring to it as "the inevitable sequence" of the former. "If one suffers from cold and hunger, and can neither buy nor beg food, fuel and clothing, he must perforce steal it, for necessity is master over human action." It will be seen how close this comes to the motive of all crime. Swindling in legion forms and murder even may become tributary to theft. Drunkenness in the parent means beggary for the child, who passes through the stages of petty thieving and finally graduates in a felon's cell. The aristocracy of Mulberry street are thieves, while the "common people" tramp or beg. "A hundred saloons, open twenty-four hours a day and seven days a week, to one mission Sunday-school, open one hour a day and one day a week,—is it surprising that pauperism and crime live and thrive, and that both soon become professional?"

This knight of the press tilts his quill fearlessly against both magnate and ecclesiastic: "The man of wealth will pay an exorbitant price for a lot which he does not want, merely to get some shanties and their occupants out of his neighborhood. The church, of which it should be the glory that 'the poor have the gospel preached to them,' sells its hallowed shrine for a warehouse and rebuilds miles away as soon as the poor hive in any numbers around its doors. This massing of wealth involves the massing of poverty and tends to vice at both ends of the social scale. . . . Fifth Avenue and the slums grow evermore hopelessly apart. Fifth Avenue despises the slums and the slums hate Fifth Avenue." This sentence is a weather-vane showing the direction for the reforming thought. Practical Christianity is beginning to apply the old test to the church. Not "Is the gospel preached to the poor at your expense?" but "Is the gospel preached to the poor by you?"

The Good Book never said, "Go preach to every creature—or hire it done!" It is to the honor of many of New York's prosperous business men that Sunday night finds them in the missions, but even that will not suffice. The church must give her best, her very self, even as her Master gave himself.

Of the influence of rum in city government Col. Knox says:

"Nine bar-rooms in ten, we might fairly say nineteen out of twenty, are the property of local politicians or are managed in their interests. Usually the liquor dealers are in the majority on the board of aldermen, or if they appear to be in minority it is in appearance only, as they are sure to be represented by men whom they have elected from other occupations."

Passing from the political aspect of the bar-room to the criminal: "Many of the owners and many more of the assistants in bar-rooms are closely connected with violations of the laws against felony. If justice were done to liquor dealers, many of the situations of bar-owner or bar-tender would be vacant in consequence of the involuntary absence of their present occupants to 'do the state some service' at Sing Sing or other prisons. Numerous bar-rooms throughout the city are well known to the police as haunts of thieves, and training schools where young candidates receive their initiation into crime."

If known to the city authorities, why are these kindergartens of hell continued? Ah! here is the answer—it is estimated that the liquor traffic, reaching out upon so many other trades, influences, in round numbers, 100,000 votes, and the total vote of New York City in 1889 was 197,789. See?

A chapter of great interest is the one treating of the police department which costs the city nearly five million dollars a year. About sixty per cent of the force are American born. There are more than two hundred rules to govern their conduct as patrolmen, and new appointees are required to pass through a school of instruction. Afterward they are drilled like soldiers, singly and in squads, companies and platoons, finally taking a course of training by a surgeon, so that they may know what to do in sudden emergency cases before a surgeon can be obtained. Every applicant must make oath that he has never been convicted of crime, and woe betide the man who is caught lying about it! One of the most dramatic passages in the book is the ejection of a patrolman from the force for this cause. Superintendent, commissioners, inspectors, captains are present; all the sergeants, roundsmen and patrolmen connected with headquarters are drawn up in line. With severe comments the president of the board reads the sentence and discharge, for it is no trifling matter that a man commissioned to prevent crime shall himself prove a criminal. "Then with a knife he cut button after button from the uniform of the culprit until not one remained. As each button struck the floor the sound it made was audible to every one, so complete was the silence. When the last one fell the man was ordered from the presence of the commissioners and handed over to be tried for perjury on account of the oath he had taken to secure his appointment."

On the whole, Colonel Knox's criticism of the present force is to their credit. He declares that owing to their vigilance, crime has in the past few years perceptibly decreased among professional thieves. But this does not admit of relaxation toward the criminal classes, for if the old thieves have disappeared a new crop of young criminals on the stage to-day are more reckless as they are more inexperienced. In 1890 the total number of arrests was 84,556, of which nearly 20,000 were women.

There is also a fine review of the fire department beginning with the old volunteers of the first of the century, to which the best young men of New York belonged. There were some rules in those days which could be profitably revived. For instance the old record shows that in 1829 a member was reported for chewing tobacco in the engine house, and again another for smoking a pipe, while spirituous liquors were forbidden there, although allowed at fires, showing that the objection to it had not yet come to a scientific basis.

These chapters abound in interest for young men, and the farmer boy in the long evening of winter or the bright "nooning" of a summer day, may learn more definitely the organization and conduct of these most vital institutions than the city-bred youth who daily passes a score of policemen and improves every opportunity of going to a fire. So healthy is the tone of it all that it is as safe reading as history, or political economy, and by its clean and unsensational exposure of every form of fraud and swindling it forearms by forewarning against the wiles of the "confidence man," the "bunco-steerer," and all their tribe. Perhaps after all the best safeguard is the high honesty that has no desire to "get something for nothing," which alas is exceeding rare! The whole iniquitous snare of the gambler is laid bare. Runners are out in the guise of well-dressed, obliging gentlemen, who watch for non-residents anxious to see the sights of the city. The first place visited is sure to be a bar-room, where the new friend insists upon "treating." Finally they reach the high-class gambling house. Ushered into the parlors by a negro in evening dress, the runner who knows every one introduces the guest. The proprietor invites him to "take something" at the elegantly equipped sideboard. The choicest liquors and cigars are there for the patrons without charge, and no visitor is urged to play. The midnight supper is elegant. It and the wines served with it are free of charge. By the time that is over the visitor feels that he must play a little; not to do so would be to scorn the princely hospitality shown him. Then is the opportunity of the ghouls. Some young millionaires have been known to part with fifty, and in rare instances a hundred thousand dollars in a single night. The honest thing is to keep away from such haunts, whether gilded or not. Worse if possible than the one who plays, is the young man who accepts the favors of the house and goes his way.

In the lower class places a man is never allowed to get away while he has any money about him. If he is too wary to risk heavily at table, liquor is freely supplied until he becomes reckless; or, failing in that, he is drugged and relieved of all valuables, then carted to some distant part of town and left on a doorstep. Gambling is scarcely less enslaving than drinking. Within the past ten years more than fifty defalcations of trusted employés in the city have been traced to the gaming tables. Like the saloon, the gambling den is graded to all classes. In some localities there are policy shops, where bets of one cent are taken.

Through all forms of vice, crime and destitution runs the black stream of the liquor pest, making all tributary to it; even the pawnshop, in the majority of cases, has a door opening into the dramshop, and Colonel Knox says, "Take from the pawnbroker's business all the money that his patrons spend for drink, and the sign of the three gilded balls would disappear from half the shops that now display them."

No more practical temperance literature has appeared of late than this sketch of the metropolis, "by a journalist."

ONE OF OUR NEW DEPARTURES.

BY FRANCES E. WILLARD.

"A home for every homeless child, and a child for every childless home." This is the practical and beautiful motto of the new department given into the care of Mrs. M. T. W. Merrill, of Portland, Me., securing homes for homeless children.

Among all the new departures of the W. C. T. U. none appeals more directly to the universal heart, or is likely to grow into a greater power. We do not propose to interfere with, much less to antagonize any other method of working out the great problem of demand and supply between the little unfortunate ones and the empty arms of good men and women who ought to care for and shelter them. Our purpose is to coöperate with each and all through the appointment of a Mother Harvard woman in every local union, who shall make it her business to seek out and report to the different societies that apply for the homeless little ones, the homes that are willing to receive them; also to seek the children themselves, reporting them in the same manner. To the new and difficult position of National superintendent, who will have for her coadjutor a state superintendent in every commonwealth and territory, we have appointed Mrs. Merrill.

It is most interesting to trace the history of this great-hearted woman, who for more than a generation has been a central figure in all the philanthropies of the beautiful city of Portland, and who, now at the age of seventy-five, has just been chosen president of a council of women, including representatives from all the societies in which they are engaged. She went to the Boston Convention, attended all its meetings, not only surprising but frightening her relatives there by the late hours she kept in order to get all of the convention. Her namesake granddaughter, Margaret, a beautiful young woman, usually accompanies her. On one state convention occasion, when Mrs. Merrill was attending to her department work so closely that she took no time for food, Margaret remonstrated saying, "What will Auntie H—— say when she knows this?" and with a sweet, gracious smile she said, "Who is to tell her, you?"

The earliest home of Mrs. Merrill was not many miles from Plymouth Rock. On one side her pilgrim pedigree has been disputed, but not her Puritan descent on the other. Her father was educated for the ministry, but in preparing for that position he felt in doubt of some of the Calvinistic tenets, and it was a sore disappointment of his mother that he adopted the profession of law, but he remained loyal to his church home—with reservations. At thirty-four years of age he married a beautiful woman seventeen years his junior, who was his only love; she was attractive in person, winning in manner, and the equal in natural capacity and executive ability of any woman of her time. Her parents were members, as her ancestors for generations had been, "in good and regular standing" of the Second Church organized in the "New England settlement." Her early religious training in the home by precept and example was supplemented by the "meeting," Sunday-school and Bible class. In her quiet home one of the exercises that most developed her character was reading aloud to a dearly loved grandmother,—the Bible and hymnbook being always favorites, and the coming of the two religious magazines most in use in the Congregational church to which she belonged, entitled the Missionary Herald and the African Repository, was eagerly anticipated and the reading carried out with unfaltering interest from beginning to end. How the work in foreign lands enlarged and spread until it is to-day a modern miracle has always been understood by Mrs. Merrill because of the deeply rooted desire that took possession of her childhood from such readings as have been mentioned.

At the close of her fifteenth year, this young New Englander was placed under the care of Miss Dorothea Dix, then a teacher of some note in a neighboring city, and later, the well-known philanthropist. She fascinated her young pupil from the first, and had her generous and affectionate admiration—but for this the three years' separation from all home ties which her school life involved, could never have been endured. From this time on Miss Dix exercised a controlling influence over her pupil's thoughts, opinions and purposes. She was, it must be confessed, very arbitrary, and sometimes seeing the effect of this upon her pupil, but attributing it to homesickness, she would say, "Go home, my dear, to your mother for a day or so, it will do you good." She made her older scholars the companions of her visits to the charitable and reformatory institutions of the city in the neighborhood, and from these the young ladies began to learn somewhat of the sufferings of the poor and wretched in whose close proximity they were leading such happy and protected lives. Miss Dix gratified their desire "to do something" by fitting up the stable chamber for a schoolroom, and collecting some poor children to whom, in leisure hours, her pupils taught reading, sewing and other exercises. This was the beginning of the "Hope School" mentioned in the recently issued biography of Miss Dix. The pupils did not neglect their studies for this work, but the course laid down in those days was not so exigent as now. This close association with a woman truly great came to an end the year of Mrs. Merrill's marriage and removal to a distant state. Twelve years thereafter, when Miss Dix had entered broadly on her work, she found her former pupil, and from her home often took her departure for journeys through the South in the pursuit of her great mission for the amelioration of the lot of the insane. In intervals of rest in this home she wrote several memorials to the state legislatures, and it was during these intervals, that with her former pupil, Miss Dix visited the charitable and reformatory institutions of Baltimore, the penitentiary of that city where, by permission, she often passed her Sunday mornings, and the Catholic asylum for the insane. The patients in the latter institution, accompanied by the Mother Superior, called on these Protestant ladies as any other ladies would, and they returned the calls at the hour of the beautiful vesper service in the chapel.

Mrs. Merrill's home was in the vicinity of the Episcopal Orphan Asylum, whose inmates she welcomed to indoor games or to outside plays in the pleasant grounds adjoining her residence, but it was not until her removal to New York City that her eyes were opened wide to the wretched conditions resulting from intemperance and impurity. With her husband, she became deeply interested with Mr. Alfred Pease at the Five Points, and with other friends went to the opening Sunday service. Those hours were indeed painful ones to her, because of what seemed to be the utter hopelessness of the attempt to better their condition. Just as the singing began she noticed a visitor standing at the end of the settee on which two young girls were sitting, the new-comer being apparently unwilling to take a seat with them; her hair was shaven almost close, but she had on a new calico dress. Giving up her seat, Mrs. Merrill took one beside this girl; the look, partly defiant, partly pleading, given to her she will never forget. A rush of feeling came over the fortunate woman who had thus chosen to sit near one so unfortunate. Its sympathetic contagion caused both to weep like an elder and younger sister. After awhile the poor girl laid her hand in the proffered hand of Mrs. Merrill and they grew quiet together through the solemn service. From that hour Mrs. Merrill has felt a tender tie binding her to the forlorn and forsaken among women. A partial glimpse of the underground homes in the Five Points locality obtained that day sent the happy young wife home, brainsick with questions and heartsick that there was not Christianity enough in the great city to lift those women and children out of such habitations and to salt the whole locality with fire.

Two little ones had been transferred from Mrs. Mer-rill's sheltered home into the heavenly mansions, and to save her from despair God sent the faith that sustained her then and through gradual spiritual evolution has brought her to where she is to-day. She is deeply conscious that her motives have not their origin in earthly wisdom, but were inspired in heaven. She hears the cry of the world, but its most pathetic tone is the cry of its children.

From having been most conservatively reared, she has become a thoroughly progressive woman on the questions of the day—and this in spite of the early impress made by that abnormally conservative woman, Dorothea Dix.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union is the most beloved institution among the many to which Mrs. Merrill has lent the help of her deep heart and thoughtful brain. She is a true yoke-fellow to our noble "Mrs. Stevens, of Maine," and together they carry on a work in Portland, in company with the loyal band that has rallied to their help, such as is worthy of Neal Dow and the city his fame has rendered famous.

THE FIFTY-SECOND CONGRESS AND TEMPERANCE.

BY MARY JEWETT TELFORD.

If the departed are permitted to revisit scenes of their former activity it would be interesting to know how Gen. Lewis Cass, Hon. Thomas Benton, and their colleagues, who were among the early members of the Congressional Temperance Society, were affected by the fifty-eighth annual gathering of that organization Sunday night, March 6, and by the general change of base in public warfare upon the drink foe. The meeting was held in the First Congregational Church of Washington before their largest audience for ten years, as President Representative Dingley announced at opening. Senator Colquitt, of Georgia, with impassioned earnestness, declared the country would not suffer whatever might or might not be done about free wool and high and low tariff bills, but that the question of temperance had to do with the corner-stone of national life—the family, and he was ready to agree with "the Prohibitionists or anything else" to preserve intact that corner-stone. Representative Taylor, of Ohio, deplored that his state had pronounced against all license laws years ago in its constitution; was sure "something is the matter" or temperance workers would more substantially agree as to methods; was ready to wish all prohibitory constitutional amendments repealed, and more attention paid to "education," and dwelt upon being "practical."

Representative Pickler's address followed like a fresh breeze from his own prairie state, up to date in opposing all license of a wrong, and advocating prohibition as the best educative force and the most practical thing. He declared the nation tolerates, indorses the liquor traffic and all its curse. His words, too, were the one hint of the evening that within fifty-nine years a new force has come into national temperance reform, that of woman. Striking hands with ex-Confederate Democratic Colquitt upon the one point, this ex-Union Republican soldier was happy that Miss Willard and Mrs. Lathrap, North, with Mrs. Chapin and Mrs. Snell, South, were obliterating sectional lines. Now while we women have known this so long it ceases to be matter of comment, it is fitting that one of their own number should make the announcement to the national law-makers who are too engrossed in seals and preelection economy and tinkering up the old line fence where Messrs. Mason and Dixon used to live, to have found out anything about it.

Rev. Secretary Powers, President Garfield's pastor, in his report summed up the national legislation of the year just closed as exceeding that of all previous years together (he could hardly have remembered our national law for the teaching of scientific temperance), viz.: the original package, the canteen bill, the one mile from Soldiers' Home bill (district) the Brussels treaty, the supreme court decisions that no one has an inherent right to sell liquors and that no legislation can bargain away the public morals. Let the faithless take note how many of these measures are square in the highway towards ultimate prohibition. A unanimous rising vote of the audience was taken in support of the memorial made by the society to the commissioners that intoxicants be not sold on the coming World's Fair grounds. That "coming" qualfies "grounds." It is fair to presume no such stuff will get inside the grounds of the coming world.

The license bill for Alaska, as introduced in the Senate by Mr. Dolph, of Oregon, has had another airing before that body on the occasion of presenting a remonstrance from certain citizens of Oregon against it. Some notable words were said by Senator J. H. Kyle, of South Dakota, when this bill was introduced, words which ought to reach the ears of every unthinking citizen, and which make one wish the affix "Independent" might belong to more of our Congressmen's names. In reply to Senator Dolph's statement that it was impracticable to enforce the present prohibitory law for Alaska, on account of insufficient officers backed up by insufficient appropriation, Mr. Kyle said: "There is but one institution, I believe, in the United States at the present time that knows no law. If the question be smuggling, there is force enough in the United States government to suppress smuggling; if the question be Mormonism, there is force enough in the United States government to suppress that; if the question be larceny or almost anything else, regardless of whether it may be backed up by moral sentiment or not, there is force enough in the United States government to suppress it. But there is one institution—and I wish to repeat it—which knows no law, and that is the liquor interest of the United States, which rides over state laws and territorial laws, and which will ride over the law with respect to the sale of intoxicating liquors to the Indians in Alaska." Think of that, readers of THE UNION SIGNAL, pronounced in a full, clear voice in the United States Senate!

Concerning the part of "our own" in the fifty-second Congress, besides a memorial asking for political equality, a general call from all along the line to close the doors of the World's Fair on Sundays and against all liquor selling, the women of the District have joined in the request for a Girls' Reform school in Washington. Their several proposed measures command respect, at least, including the cleansing of postal matter, a wise bill now before Congress, pushed by the earnest National superintendent of purity in literature and art and watched by a competent woman here that it be allowed no rest in any time-honored, cob-webbed pigeon hole.

Washington, D. C.

RAILROAD TIES.

VIII.

BY JOHN G. WOOLLEY.

A scolding woman is an unprepared vitriol thrower; the only reason that she does not mar and maim and mutilate in her encounters is that she has no aqua fortis with her—only words; her victim is always one she loves and her act unpremeditated—if she should wait to go for acid the "cooling time" would save her—innocent.

A whining woman is an undeveloped poisoner. She singles out no victim but quietly infects everybody,—consumes oxygen and gives off home-made malaria. Where the two are united in one wife, God pity her husband!

. . . . . .

I met a traveling man the other day and loved him "by first intention." The more because he was, even then, in a splendid fight for liberty from "the drink." He was hesitating about going to Dwight. I spent much time with him and thought him almost persuaded to take the "hope of glory" instead of the "chloride of gold."

. . . . . .

Last night he came into the hotel and sat in front of the open fire to read a letter. As he read, I saw his face darken, and at the second page he crumpled the sheet into a ball, threw it into the grate, sprang to his feet with a sound that was cry and curse and groan—all three in one—and started out, then came back to me with an expression indescribable, and said shortly, "When I'm home she scolds—when I'm away she complains," and, as if ashamed of having spoken, hurried away.

. . . . . .

He is drunk now, and "her" heart will nearly break to-day when no letter comes from him, for she will know "all's wrong again," and she loves him, and there is no good heart in all the world but would pity her, remembering what she bears and has borne—and, as between her and him, his blame outweighs hers as a mountain a mustard seed, but, for all her case is so pitiful, it is sinful. God pity her and all of us, there is so little of "the genuine thing"—love that "seeketh not her own," "is not easily provoked," "speaketh no evil," "suffereth long and is kind," "beareth all things," "endureth all things," "never faileth."

C. & N. W. R. R. near Baraboo, Wis.

Correspondence.

TWO GREAT MEETINGS IN MISSOURI.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—February 8 and 9 an interstate conference was held in Kansas City.

The object of the meeting was to discuss woman's status under the law—to consider it from all points—social, industrial and political. Monday night an address of welcome and response to same were given by the writer and Mrs. Johns, of Kansas, after which Anna Shaw gave "Fate of Republics," and captured the entire audience, which packed the great auditorium to the walls.

Tuesday a symposium of the laws of Massachusetts, New York, Kansas, Missouri and England were given; also a most profitable discussion on "Dress Reform." Day and night the house was packed, and many went away because they could not get inside the doors. The collections taken amounted to $140.

The second great meeting was in St. Louis, February 21, held in Music Hall of the Exposition Building. The speakers were Lady Henry Somerset and Miss Willard. It was estimated that fully five thousand people assembled to hear these notable women. The aisles were so crowded that it was found impossible to reach hundreds in the audience; yet the collection was between three and four hundred dollars.

Now to what shall we ascribe the success of these meetings, both in attendance and in collection?

Some will say, "Lady Henry and Miss Willard always draw." Very true, but neither one was at Kansas City, yet the meeting was in every way a success. The secret in both cases was business management and thorough advertising. Every detail of arrangement was perfect, because somebody attended to it and did not leave it to everybody else.

Then the advertising was systematic and thorough—not a notice in one or two papers put into the most obscure corner a few days before the meeting, but continued notices with little accounts of the speakers. Then the unions sent out hundreds of postal cards and thousands of programs through the mail.

The audience was thus assured, rain or no rain—and it poured in St. Louis. If every union would use these same business methods, there would be no failures in audiences where speakers of repute are engaged. Mrs. Ira Lewis, of Kansas City, and Mrs. E. B. Ingalls, of St. Louis, are to be credited with the magnificent generalship that made these meetings a success.

Yet right here many unions fail entirely. They have not learned to advertise, and they do not half do it—then complain that their audiences are small and collections smaller. Sometimes they charge an admittance, which in my opinion should never be done in reform work; then the audience is small and composed of those who are already converted to the reform.

In large or small towns sufficient and wise advertising will secure audience and financial success.

C. C. HOFFMAN.

En route in Illinois.

W. C. T. U. IN ALASKA.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—The night was dark. The rain came in great sheets—winding and blinding us as we took the long and lonely walk on the seashore, from Sitka Town up to "the Presbyterian mission." We entered the brilliantly lighted, large and airy schoolroom. This was a special meeting for our benefit. We had made a special effort, through dire tribulations, to be there. Miss Kelsey, the matron of the Girls' Industrial School, met us at the door with her gentle words of welcome and appreciation of our effort. A motion to the children, and a grand storm of applause from these enthusiastic W. C. T. U. workers greeted us. The meeting was called to order by that incomparable worker, Mrs. de Vore, of Pennsylvania, who has thrown her heart, soul and intellect into the work of bringing the children into the kingdom of temperance.

It will be impossible to give you a program. There was singing, and oh, such voices as these native children possess! If the purity and sweet full tones, as they sang some of Miss Willard's own compositions, could be phonographed, how she would delight to hear.

They recited very beautifully many interesting dialogues and poems, but the one great pleasure of the evening was reached when they all sat on a long platform and each one, from nearly grown men down to Miss Kelsey's little adopted girl, arose, and one by one gave us the exact history of how had been earned each ten cents to send toward the memorial for Miss Willard. This is a mission school and the children have very few ways of earning money. Some were laughable, many tender, and others very pathetic. Our only wish was that Miss Willard and Miss Gordon were there to hear these bright-faced, intensely interesting native Alaskan children, members of the W. C. T. U. the most westerly in America. We do not believe there is a class among the boys in all the United States more enthusiastic. The use of tobacco is general, and when one great boy arose with a broad smile, and said, "I earned my ten cents very hard, very hard; had it ready good deal of times, but dropped it into chewin' tobacco," his mouth watered as if he wished he had some then, and his lips quivered as he said, "It's awful hard to give up tobacco, but I did, and there's the hardest ten cents I ever earned."

Mrs. de Vore said to us, "There is one boy who has broken his pledge five times, shall I take him back?" We answered, "Our dear temperance queen, Miss Willard, would forgive him seventy times seven if he only would come back the 491st time." She smiled and said, "We will reach over to him again." I send these children's autographs in the names they adopt as they enter the mission, and also their Indian names, for Anna Gordon's use. We think they will be of great interest in your display. As the meeting closed we walked thoughtfully home, feeling it "had been good to be there."

MARY HAYDON, Cor. Sec

Sitka, Alaska.

A RIGHTEOUS CAUSE AND CALL.

EDITOR OF THE UNION SIGNAL:—I am not a Quaker, but "the spirit moves me" to say a word or two to you and your readers, suggested by the St. Louis conference.

That conference and the party growing out of it refused to indorse the principle of woman suffrage or to commit itself to warfare upon the drunkard-factories. The Prohibition party has done both. It remains the only party that stands for the emanciaption of women and the protection of the home. It has done this at some cost. The suffrage plank in our national platform cost us something. It cost us the loss of active leadership on the part of some of the very best men in our party. It threatened at one time a very serious dissension in our ranks. The Prohibition party has, therefore, a double claim upon the sympathy and active assistance of the W. C. T. U. women. No other party on earth dares espouse their cause and face the opposition thus aroused.

The time has come for the Prohibition party to "foreclose its claim" upon the women of the land, and demand their assistance. A great movement is under full headway to secure the signatures of one million voters to an agreement to support our nominees for president and vice-president this year. The agreement is binding only in case one million signatures are secured to it. Two thousand workers are in the field already securing signatures. The plan has been officially approved by the national executive committee of the party and by the National President of the W. C. T. U. The results are thrilling and demonstrate to a certainty that the million names can be secured, if an adequate systematic effort is made to ask for them.

But where are the women? They are like the man who fell out of the balloon; they are "not in it"—not yet. Out of the 2,000 who have sent in lists of signatures, there are hardly 100 women! There ought to be out of the 200,000 members of the W. C. T. U., 20,000, or one in ten, at work to-day on this plan that promises, as nothing else ever has promised, to redeem this land from the terrible burden that rests upon it because of the saloon, and the infinite corruption that grows out of the saloon. Twenty thousand there ought to be; one hundred there are!

I do not write this captiously. I know that the reason for such a showing lies in the fact that the women have not been waked up to a recognition of this opportunity. Neither have the men. There ought to be an army of 40,000 men and women canvassing the nation for these signatures. Such an army, securing one signature each a week, could fill up the full quota of a million before the first of next October.. An average of five a week from each would give us the million in five weeks' time! And there are plenty of canvassers who have sent in over 100 names secured by personal application.

Here is a petition that carries in its possibilities all other petitions ever circulated by the W. C. T. U. on this subject. Shall we not see a massed effort in its behalf, and at once? The blanks are ready and are furnished free on application to almost any prohibition paper, or to the National committee, 10 E. 14th Street, New York.

E. J. WHEELER,

New York City. Editor of The Voice.

THE W. C. T. U. OF FRANCE.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—Members of the W. W. C. T. U. will be interested to hear of a new departure in the working of the union in Paris, under the auspices of Miss de Broen's well-known mission in Belleville. A large company of ladies, chiefly American and English, met in the afternoon of February 9th, at the invitation of Miss de Broen, at her temperance rooms, to listen to a spirited address by Mrs. Whitall Smith, of Philadelphia, about the working of the society in America. Other speakers followed, all in favor of the proposition to form a distinct W. C. T. U. for France. This resolution was formally adopted at a second meeting a few days later, Mrs. Smith again being present, and Miss de Broen having been previously appointed president by the World's Executive Committee, a secretary and a treasurer were voted for. All present agreed that such a union had become very necessary in France, the terrible evil of drink making rapid advances, and it was pointed out that one of the chief objects of the union would be the forming of branches throughout the country.

Miss de Broen has kindly offered the use of her rooms for the monthly or fortnightly meetings to be held in the interests of the union, where all visitors will be warmly welcomed. It should be specially mentioned that in connection with the Temperance Reading and Refreshment Rooms there is good accommodation offered to friends who are about to visit Paris. Comfortable rooms, with or without board, may be secured by applying to the "Manager," Miss de Broen's Office, 205 Rue St. Honoré, Paris. Situated in the most central part of Paris, and easily accessible from all stations, this "Home from Home," as enthusiastic friends have called it, will doubtless prove a great advantage to strangers in our gay city, specially so, as it combines the comforts of a Christian home with strictly moderate charges. Members of the union will encourage Miss de Broen in this effort to promote the temperance cause in Paris, by making it widely known among their friends.

E. BALTHASAR, Sec'y.

President's Column.

WORLD'S W. C. T. U. HEADQUARTERS.

AMERICAN—Chicago, Ill., 161 La Salle St.
ENGLISH—London, W. C. 57 Gordon Square.

WORLD'S W. C. T. U. OFFICERS.

President—MISS FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Vice-President-at-Large—LADY HENRY SOMERSET, 13 Memorial Hall, Farringdon St., London, E. C., Eng.
Secretary—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Ravenna, O.
Treasurer—MRS. ELLA F. M. WILLIAMS, 26 Chomedy St., Montreal, Can.

HELPFUL HINTS.

Here is a model letter from a state president. It comes to me from Mrs. Emma Bourne, the daughter of our beloved Mother Hill, and the successor as president of our beloved Mother Downs. I print the letter that its heartsome cheer may do good to all who read, as it did me good.

NEWARK, N. J., March 8, 1892.

DEAR CHIEFTAIN:—Your official letter was promptly received, and did me much good, not only in the pressing urgency and importance of the work presented, but in the manner of appeal, loyalty to the author, patriotism, and the Golden Rule applied.

You may depend on me for the exertion of every nerve and muscle personally, and for my most persevering and persistent efforts so far as my influence goes.

I write an official letter each week to the county and local presidents in the Temperance Gazette (New Jersey), and have presented the three petitions through this column, but urged that the month of March should be given exclusively to the petition for closed gates of the Columbian Exposition. April 7 we have a state executive meeting at Beverly; then I will urge with as much conviction and persuasiveness as the Lord shall give me, the claims of the World's Petition, and will have your letter read which will have more weight than any words of mine.

I like the plan of "the commission" and will coöperate in every way that you direct. We are hoping, dear Miss Willard, that the way will open for you to be with us at Ocean Grove, July 6 and 7; it is so many years since you gave us that pleasure, and so many are desiring it, we feel like urging the case, but in every event we know you seek the guidance of a higher power, and we too, seek it, so we will not be too anxious, but submit to that which you deem may bring the greatest good to the greatest number. Yours loyally and affectionately,

MRS. EMMA BOURNE.

***

One of our thoughtful leaders writes that healthy people are the very ones to use the following natural prescription and one from which there is no nervous reaction. The prescription is: Drink half a pint or more of hot water one hour before breakfast, one hour before lunch, one hour before dinner, and before going to bed. Like cleaning a soiled bottle, the acid of the food is carried away and the process of digestion is carried on with greater ease; the circulation is better; the warm water allays the thirst better than ice water, and is recommended as a drink for the W. C. T. U. lunch counters in the Columbian Exposition; also at conventions. It is not only a harmless but a helpful stimulation. When people wish to aid friends, who are lovers of strong drink, to abstain, these facts might be borne in mind.

***

A redeemed man recently said in the W. C. T. U. gospel meeting in Evanston: "I served the devil twelve years and he gave me wages, sickness, misery, poverty, death. I have served God and the temperance cause, which is part of His gospel, three years, and have received wages. It makes me laugh to see my children walking around dressed in good clothes, myself and wife looking respectable, and going to church; to remember that I used to order twelve pounds of flour at a time, and now see the grocer's wagon coming along with a barrel to roll into our pantry. Yes, I get my wages right along."

***

Mr. Charles N. Crittenton, of New York City, the well-known millionaire and evangelist, who founded the Florence mission in New York City, is now laboring in San Francisco. The story of the foundation is pathetic. Mr. Crittenton, a wealthy wholesale druggist, had a beautiful home on Fifth avenue, where a loving wife and gleeful children made his life a very paradise on earth. His little girl Florence was the ideal of his fatherly heart; and when she passed away to heaven he determined that as a memorial of the little four-year-old he would found a mission in the midst of the city's sin, which would shine out as a beacon in the darkness of temptation. So he bought and furnished a commodious four-story house, and here meetings are held every night, and girls are invited to come out into the liberty of a truly Christian life. Mother Prindle, as they call her, is the matron,—a blessed woman who once worked with us in the Anchorage mission in Chicago. About five hundred girls in a year pass through the Florence mission, and two-thirds of them are permanently helped. The cost of keeping up this home is about twelve thousand dollars a year, but how could money be invested so as to help humanity more signally?

TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS.

BY MATILDA B. CARSE.

Daughter, thy faith hath made thee whole.—Mark 5: 34.

Our readers will realize how rapidly the Temple is moving toward completion while I state, when these lines are read the writer and her secretary will have taken possession of their quarters in the Temple, which will be the first room occupied in the building. It is a beautiful little room on the eleventh floor flooded with light—when the smoke nuisance is abated in Chicago, which is expected in the near future. A fine view can be had from this room of the entire western portion of the city and the rolling prairies of Illinois, stretching out toward the horizon. The Temple office is just across the hall from the World's and National W. C. T. U. rooms, and adjoins the office of the Temperance Lecture Bureau. Almost the entire north wing of the eleventh floor will be occupied by the editorial rooms of THE UNION SIGNAL, business office of the manager and advertising agent. On the eastern front of the same floor, facing La Salle street, is to be the sales room and business office of the W. T. P. A., which occupy two large, well lighted airy apartments. To the north of these are the offices of the Illinois State W. C. T. U., and the Chicago Central Union. These rooms all command a fine view of the business portion of the city, with the blue waters of Lake Michigan sweeping toward the horizon on the east.

***

How much of pathos enters into some of the gifts which are sent for the Temple. O. H. Paddock, Pana, Ill., writes: "My wife, Ann Paddock, sends the enclosed $10. She is probably on her deathbed now, but desires to make this contribution to the good cause." Mrs. M. A. Akins, South Euclid, Ohio, writes: "Enclosed please find $10 for the Temple in memory of my only daughter who has gone to her heavenly home and left me old and feeble, to journey on alone." Mrs. Mary Rider, Oak Center, Minn., writes: "My dear aged mother, Mrs. Nancy Bartlett, sends $5 in memory of her son, George Bartlett, who gave his life for his country; he was a noble Christian boy. I also send $1 for my little daughter who went away from us last June." A white-ribboner from Indiana, who does not wish her name mentioned, sends a box of old silver coins to be sold. She writes: "They were given me by my best earthly friend years ago, and now he has passed 'over the river' and I want to put them where they will do some good. They have a history sacred to me and I send them with my prayers."

Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, the brave and dauntless leader of the W. C. T. U. host in Maine, is to have a tablet in Willard Hall. It is a birthday gift. One hundred dollars have been received from the treasurer of Maine for this purpose. In writing about it Mrs. Addie L. Harvey says: "We all love and honor Mrs. Stevens so much that we wish to give a lasting expression of our loyalty and devotion to her and the cause she so nobly champions on to victory in Maine. She is so desirous to further the Temple work, that we feel we can best please and honor her in this way. The many letters that have accompanied the contributions would make, if published, a volume of praise and expression of loyal service to our beloved leader."

Mrs. Kate B. Northup, York, Neb., sends $25, first installment on $100 from the state for a tablet in honor of their able and beloved state president, Mrs. Mary A. Hitchcock.

Mrs. A. S. Wiley, Norfolk, Va., sends $5 from the Brambleton union, to be applied toward a tablet in honor of the loved president of Virginia, Mrs. R. H. Jones. The Wyoming, O., W. C. T. U. sends $10 for the Charlotte Boyer tablet. Mrs. Lizzie Tippett sends $10 from the Lockland, O., W. C. T. U. She writes: "It having been decided that the unions in the twenty-fourth Ohio district contribute towards having our district president's name engraved in Willard Hall, the Lockland union sends the enclosed $10 for this purpose." (We would like to know the name of the district president, it is quite essential.) The W. C. T. U. of Georgetown, O., send $5 for the Charlotte Boyer tablet. Mrs. I. L. Marshall sends $9 for the tablet in honor of the loved president of Manistee, Mich., W. C. T. U., Mrs. Evelyn N. Peters. The unions of Pennington, N. J., So. Elgin, Ill., and White Cloud, Mich., send a penny for each member for the Lucy Webb Hayes tablet. The Savannah, O., union sends $1 toward the Mary C. Leavitt tablet. Abbie L. Jones, Chicago, Ill., sends $1 for a tablet in memory of Mrs. Emma Willard.

***

Africa we fear is going to outdo some of our own states in the amount she is sending for the Temple. A letter has just been received from Lottie Pretterill, Harriesmith, Orange Free State, South Africa, inclosing £21 ($102.06). She writes: "This sum we, 'Band of Hope' girls, have raised by a small bazar, and it is our wish to have our name recorded in the Temperance Temple at Chicago." Mrs. Sarah J. Cocking, Jacksonville, Ill., sends $13, the first installment of $100, which Mrs. Cocking is raising in the Sunday-schools of Jacksonville. Her plan is to have each union in a district appoint a woman who has ability to speak well to visit the Sunday-schools in her immediate vicinity or town, and present the Temple, asking that a collection be taken the following Sunday for it. Of course this meeting must be arranged beforehand with coöperation of the pastor and Sunday-school superintendent. We heartily indorse Mrs. Cocking's plan and hope unions will adopt it.

***

All checks and post-office orders should be made out in the name of Miss Esther Pugh and sent to her at Evanston, Ill. Orders for Temple Trust Bonds should be sent to H. C. Speer, 237 La Salle St., Chicago. A two cent stamp will secure a Temple mite-box and all documents in regard to the Temple including circular giving prices of silver models. Address Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, The Temple, La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

The Household.

A WOMAN'S WORK.

BY FRANK WALCOTT HUTT.

Only the work of to-day:
What of its triumph and sorrow?
Does it the past overweigh,
Gives it a zeal for to-morrow?
Where have I broken the thread,
What have I left still unmended?
Truer word never was said,
"Woman's work never is ended."

Only the work of to-day:
Soothing the heart that is broken,
Speeding love's message to say,
Leaving the evil unspoken.
And, when the curtains are drawn
Over the innocent sleeping,
Some one must linger till dawn,
Watch for the prodigal keeping.

Only the work of to-day:
No one hath guessed half its meaning:
None knows the sower, but pray
Many be blessed at the gleaning.
No one hath stayed for her fears.
None hath a helping hand lended;
Only the sower hath tears
Over her lonely toil bended.

Only the work of to-day:
Labor but finite and human;
Only the task of decay,
Only the work of a woman.
Tell me what hand will portray—
Upon what infinite pages—
Only the work of to-day
At the ingath'ring of ages?

Boston, Mass.

"LET IT ALONE."

BY INITTE.

"I tell you it's all nonsense," said Tom Seeford excitedly, "this idea of thinking that you can pick up the giant liquor traffic, and throw him bodily out of the nation. I tell you it would tear the country to pieces. You know, Brown, that I'm just as dead set against this business of Satan as you are. But still I believe in going slow. Use strategem. Don't get all out of patience with these fellows. Be pleasant to them; use moral suasion; show them kindly how wrong they are and how much woe and sin they are responsible for. Bear with them. You know the Bible tells us to 'suffer long and be kind,' that's what we as a nation have got to do;" and the speaker having unburdened himself of these conciliatory sentiments, carefully helped himself to the brownest of the late installment of buckwheat cakes, and fell to buttering it with an energy that gave token of a good deal of inward disturbance.

It was Monday morning. It bade fair to be "blue Monday," too, if the weather was to have anything to do about it. The rain and sleet, which had fallen the day before, had frozen, the wind blew a gale from the north, and a colder, more disagreeable day could hardly be imagined. However, the little group, who were breakfasting in the cozy kitchen, stood in no fear of the elements. The lamp threw out a clear, bright light, the roaring fire in the big cook-stove spake comfort to every soul, while the steaming cakes did their part toward furnishing the interior heat for the day.

"Mr. Seeford is a Christian, and he votes for high license!" This was what Tom had overheard the evening before, and was what had called forth his decided remarks at the opening of this story.

"I suppose, Tom," said Mr. Brown, quietly, "that you saw a boa-constrictor or two when you were traveling in South America last fall?"

The gentleman addressed looked up in surprise. To have this stanch Prohibitionist change the subject so abruptly after he had delivered himself of such treasonable remarks, was something to be wondered at.

"Why, yes," he said, the surprise in his voice as manifest as could be expected considering the ample amount of baked batter that was being stowed away, "I did see two or three. Why?"

"Oh, tell us about them, uncle, do!" said twelve-year-old Harry Brown, who, as his uncle's especial favorite, begged for a story upon every possible occasion.

"Didn't I tell you about that experience of mine with the constrictor, Harry? No? I thought I did; I meant to. It was on one of our exploring expeditions, as I liked to call them. I was making a collection of mosses and leaves, which I intended to mount separately from the flowers I had found. We were not more than a mile and a half from the place where we had camped for the day, and I had just directed Halgo, my servant, to put away the latest found specimen. While he was busy about this, I walked to a tree a few feet off, upon the trunk of which was growing the queerest looking lichen I had yet seen. As I reached out my hand I was startled by a piercing cry from Halgo. Turning quickly I saw him standing with mouth and eyes wide open, pointing to the tree. I looked back at it, and my queer moss was moving. Moreover, there was a movement in the top of the tree, too. In a second more the ugly head of a boa poked out from among the leaves; evidently he was trying to find out what the hub-bub was all about. He didn't seem to be very much disturbed. Probably he had had a good dinner and was too lazy to interview us. But we didn't wait to see what he might do; we simply hurried off as fast as our legs could carry us."

"Why didn't you shoot him?" said Harry.

"Didn't have ammunition enough. When you deal with boas, or any of his kith or kin, you've got to do him up entirely; no half-way business about it."

"Can't they be caught and tamed?"

"Seldom; very difficult and dangerous work, too."

"Couldn't you have used moral suasion, Tom, and patted him on the head and explained to him that it was very wrong for him to crush people to death and cause so much pain and misery?" asked the head of the family.

Mr. Thomas was through with his cakes by this time, and he could see a little more clearly why his brother had asked him about the boas.

"Oh, see here!" he said, "that's too ridiculous to be nonsense. If I had let that boa alone, he wouldn't have raised his head to see what I was about. Let liquor alone and it will let you alone. Not but what I feel sorry for these poor wretches that have lost all their manhood. But we must be cautious. Make haste slowly. Make these fellows that deal out the poison pay dearly for it. Push up the license higher and higher, until it gets so steep they can't stand it, and after awhile we'll crowd it out." And Tom rose, pushed back his chair and turned about with an air which said, "I don't want to hear another word on that subject."

Quiet Mrs. Brown had been baking the cakes and listening and thinking. She usually did a great deal of the latter. Now she sat down to eat her breakfast, while father supplied her with the feathery viands. She had smiled a little sadly, as her brother had told of the foolishness of absolute prohibition. This was the first visit that he had made to her home for twenty years, and she had been so grieved to find that, while Tom worshipped God with his voice, and by church attendance, and with his pocket-book, he was not willing to do so with his vote.

Tom sat with his chair tilted back against the wall, looking at his sister. He knew just about what she was thinking of. "Mary," he said, "are you fanatic enough to believe that the business, which is sanctioned by your country, the country that you are bound to honor and respect, is so bad that it ought to be wiped out of existence, no matter what the results may be? Haven't you patriotism—"

"Silas," said Mrs. Brown, "didn't I hear a knock?"

"I guess not, mother. It must have been the wind blow—"

"No, you're right," and Mr. Brown hurried to the door. Such a wee little mite of humanity as tumbled rather than walked in. She had on a thin, faded, calico dress, barely reaching to her knees. Trying in vain to meet the frock were a pair of cotton stockings, out-rivaling the dress, if possible, in shabbiness. The little blue hands clung tightly to a dirty rag, meant to serve as a shawl, which was drawn around the pinched face and stooped shoulders of the child. She couldn't have been more than seven or eight years old. In a comfortable home, a home untouched by the evils resulting from high license, she would have been a baby yet. But no sweet babyhood or innocent childhood is given to the drunkard's child. She was cold, so cold that she couldn't say anything, but she edged shyly up toward motherly Mrs. Brown as if sure of her welcome.

"Why, child! why, you blessed dear," said that lady, as she chafed the poor little hands. "Why, father, the poor child is nearly frozen. Bring me that heavy shawl that hangs in the corner. Tom, get me a basin of cold water to put these hands in. There, there, dearie," as the poor little waif showed signs of becoming unconscious, "we'll have you all right in a minute."

"Thank the merciful Father," said Silas to himself, "the poor little tots know where Sarah Brown lives. See the tears, actually frozen on that face, I swan! What is it, little one? Mother, can't she tell you now?"

"Father got drunk," said the child, as she released herself from the kind arms which held her, and sat bolt upright, "and—and"—swallowing her sobs, "he got put in jail Saturday, and we d-didn't have no money, so mother had to wash yesterday, and she had to dry the clothes 'round the stove and baby got sick, and—and—I don't w-want 'im to d-die, 'cause I do love him so." Here the tears and sobs had their way. "We—we ain't got no fire and nothin' to eat, and m-mother wants to know c-can we have somethin' warm for breakfas'." The sobs were under control now, and the voice was dry and hard,—more pitiful than tears. Something was in Mr. Brown's throat. Tom had walked into the other room. Mrs. Brown's eyes were decidedly wet.

"Here, Lottie, you come and eat," she said. "Eat all you want of these nice hot cakes; here's the butter and syrup. Do you want some coffee, dearie?"

"Is it that there black stuff?" asked the child, "'cause I had some once and I don't like it." Mrs. Brown quietly put a cupful beside her plate. "Oh, I never had none of that!" Poor baby! Did not know coffee with cream and sugar in it.

While Lottie was enjoying her breakfast, good Sarah Brown was filling a basket with cold boiled potatoes, some roast beef, a can of tomatoes, one of peas, a cake of butter, some dry bread for toast, and several drawings of tea.

"There," she said, as the small lady at the breakfast table slid down from her chair, "now we'll go home and get mamma a nice, warm breakfast and have it ready for her in less than twenty minutes. No, just keep the shawl on, I'm going to give you that." The big, double blanket shawl completely enveloped the little creature, and how the little eyes did sparkle!

"Where's Harry, father? Harry, carry this basket over to Jack Morgan's for me."

"And when you come back, Harry," said his father, "take this order to the grocer's and tell him to send the things up there, right away."

"Sarah," called Tom, as Lottie and her benefactress were going out the door, "stop at Dr. Gregg's on your way down, and have him see that baby. Tell him to tend to it till it's well, and charge it to me."

The door closed, and silence reigned. There were two people there, but a great deal of thinking was being done.

"Brother," said Tom at last, "I have always said, let liquor alone, and it will let you alone. I believe God sent that poor, half-frozen baby here this morning to open my eyes. Silas Brown, I've done my last stroke of work for a party that gives men the right to cause such misery as I've seen and heard of within the last hour. God helping me, from now on, I'm going to vote for the absolute prohibition of the liquor traffic."

North Greenfield, Wis.

LET HOMES BE ON THEIR GUARD.

BY VIOLA ROSEBOROUGH.

In a recent visit to a little country village I was entertained in a Christian home overflowing with good books and papers. One day I picked up one, obviously of a lower literary grade than most of the periodicals about me, but still seeming to be a harmless and even admirable little sheet. It was plainly intended for country and village circulation; it contained information and advice about gardening and household interests, little stories and verses and items of news, all on the order of such things in many deservedly popular domestic journals.

But something turned my eye to the advertising columns. Here was a different story indeed; this simple "home" paper was full of the most plainly and outrageously indecent, immoral, and I sincerely trust illegal, advertisements. It had every appearance of being only a masked vehicle for such. It had been sent as a sample copy to my friend, and she had never looked at it. It was clear that I was the first one to do so, and I shall take care that, except for the persons whose help I shall seek in trying to check such insolent defiance of the decencies of civilization, I shall be the last. I thought nothing could be more unscrupulous than the conduct of the advertising departments of some of our great metropolitan dailies, but I see I was mistaken. I tell the incident to sound a note of warning.

See what is in the advertising columns of the periodicals that come into your house. Their general aspect proves nothing. These vampires who live on the destruction of both human souls and human bodies, cunningly adapt their appeals to excite the curiosity of the young, and they sell their 'goods, their pictures, books, etc., cheap. It is surely the duty of every one, not only to see that our families, our children-friends and children-neighbors are not thus poisoned, but to use all the means that the law gives us to stop such practices.

We are all busy in our own particular life work, or are bound down by the insisting necessities of daily life; most of us cannot personally undertake such crusades, but what we can do is to find who are the persons who make these very crusades their life-work, and put matters in their hands. That is the good, one of them, of organized reform, organized benevolence, organized advance.

Rocky Creek, O.

UNION SIGNAL
WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

FRANCES E. WILLARD,
LADY HENRY SOMERSET,
MARY ALLEN WEST, } EDITORS.

MARGARET A. SUDDUTH,
MRS. HARRIET B. KELLS, } OFFICE EDITORS.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.
MRS. F. H. RASTALL, Business Manager.
161 La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

DEP'T BOOKS AND LEAFLETS.—ALICE M. GUERNSEY, Editor.

Entered at the Post-office, Chicago, Ill., as second-class matter.

Which hope we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast.—Heb. 6: 19.

OUR BILL OF FARE

for this week has a spicy flavor, a trifle inconsistent, it may be, with the season's somber face, but, introduced, as it is, with a Lenten poem, cannot be accused of totally ignoring the commemoration. The graceful sketch of the Marchioness of Waterford is rendered irresistibly attractive by the sweet face of the subject. A continuation of "Opinions of the Columbian Sunday Closing" embraces names well known in Chicago and elsewhere. "Darkness and Daylight in New York" is forcefully reviewed by Dr. Cushman's trenchant pen, and our senior editor presents a sketch of the superintendent of one of our new departments. What the fifty-second Congress has done for temperance is well told by a Colorado woman temporarily in Washington. "Railroad Ties," No. 8, makes a pithy point most kindly. The Correspondence department is introduced by Mrs. Clara Hoffman in a taking plea for judicious advertising, and continued by a racy account of the W. C. T. U. in Alaska, and the good news of a permanent French union. The Household has a pleasing variety, and the News from the Field is diversified by a Queen's Gardens sermonette, "Life's Patterns," one of Eva Kinney Griffith's best. News, and "nuts," and grave "officials," complete the reading matter on the paper, with the notable exception of the Children's department which has been assigned a new location on page fourteen.

THE HOPE THAT IS WITHIN US.

We do not know that the honest hand of toil shall yet grasp the helm of state—but we believe it. We do not know that prohibition shall yet prevail across the continent and be salted down by the salt seas' boundaries—but we believe it. We do not know that woman will bless and brighten every place she enters, and that she shall yet enter every place—but we believe it. The Bible is the chief corner-stone of these beliefs.

The labor movement can find no better motto than this from Christ's own lips, "My Father worketh hitherto and I work."

The temperance movement can find no better motto than His who said, "Every plant that my Heavenly Father hath not planted shall be rooted up."

The woman movement can find no better motto than that of the great apostle who said: "There is neither male nor female, but ye are all one in Christ Jesus."

True, there must always be the day of small things before we reach the day of great. In our more modern days associated effort has come to the rescue in a fashion that mightily accelerates the progress of reform. What if Dorothea Dix had given her life to the individual care of a few of the insane poor instead of going before legislatures and founding insane hospitals throughout the Union? What if Clara Barton had nursed a few soldiers instead of founding the Red Cross Army that can minister to a whole nation in time of need? What if Lord Shaftesbury had tended the individual chimney-sweep or relieved the sorrows of sundry little ones ground down under the slavery of the coal pits instead of instituting laws that swept the curse of child labor out of England at one stroke? What if Charles Sumner had uplifted individual colored men instead of so utilizing the machinery of the state as to lift up a race?

But these are splendid illustrations of the genius of one. This day of a new inspiration shows us how to apply the genius of the many focalized into systematic blessedness through organization. I thank God that by its means the workingman, the home and universal womanhood are soon to find a protection as universal as their need.

Emerson says, looking at the stately cathedral in Rome, "And yet a little waving hand reared these huge columns." Yes, but that hand wrought with ten thousand others on one plan and to one purpose. Alone we can do little. Aggregated we, the units of weakness, become batteries of power. It was once the fashion in certain circles political to speak sneeringly of "mudsills" and of "the men with hayseed in their hair." Now the mud opens to receive into silence and oblivion those who dared thus speak of men, and the hayseed harvest waves like Lebanon. Agitate, educate, organize, these are the deathless watchwords of success. The fingers of the hand can do little alone, but correlated into a fist they become formidable. The plank borne here and there by the sport of the waves is an image of imbecility, but frame a thousand planks of heart of oak into a hull, put in your engine with its heart of fire, fit out your ship, and it shall cross at a right angle those same waves to the port it has purposed to attain. We want all those like-minded with us, who would down the saloon, exalt the home, redeem manhood and uplift womanhood, to join hands with us for organized work according to a plan.

It is the way commerce has marched across this continent and captured it for civilization—one by one; it is the way an army is recruited, one by one; it is the way Christ's church is built up into power, and heaven adds to its souls redeemed, just one by one.

Readers of THE UNION SIGNAL one and all, will you not rally thus to the holy call of individual responsibility and gloriously united effort?

"For the cause that lacks assistance,
For the wrong that needs resistance,
For the future in the distance,
And the good that you can do!"

THE RUSSIAN FAMINE.

It is quite probable that our people do not fully appreciate the situation in Russia. We have received from Washington, on the authority of ex-Governor Hoyt, of Wyoming, who is now acting as chairman of the Russian Famine Relief Committee of the United States, facts which we desire to lay before the readers of THE UNION SIGNAL, hoping thus to stimulate efforts for the relief of that gigantic suffering.

It should be made plain to our good people that the Russian famine, so vast and dire, is not doing its terrible work alone, but has as its ally the freezing cold of a terrible winter, and the evils that follow in the train of a pestilence are likely, if not soon checked, to sweep over many lands. We must also remember that the Russian famine has come to stay, even until after the harvest of next summer, unless we succeed in banishing its spectral presence by the beneficences of those in more favored lands who have enough and to spare. We need to remember that the Russian government is exerting itself nobly for the rescue of the people, not only by the munificence of a great nation, but by the sacrifices of those who are administering public affairs. There are some in Russia who are devoting themselves utterly to the effort to mitigate the present misery.

Count Leo Tolstoi and his family are best known to us because they are foremost in the cause of temperance and purity. To them thus far we have sent the benefactions of our white ribbon army; yet there are others as devoted actively at work. But the extent of the famine is so great and the revenues of the government have been so far crippled by repeated and widespread failures of the crops, that help from other countries is imperative and it should be not only liberal and persistent, but best of all, immediate. Unhappily, the rest of Europe has also been impoverished, and the outlook for supplies must come from America, at all times competent and so wonderfully blessed with crops the past season that she can send many a shipload without draining perceptibly her stores.

The work of relief should be begun in all of the states, and be systematically conducted. Nothing more worthy could be attempted in this crisis than that each local union should exert itself to its utmost efforts to unite churches in a Russian relief meeting. Collections should be taken and forwarded to Miss Clara Barton, 732 Fourteenth Street, Washington, D. C., or to ex-Governor Hoyt, at the same address. Let it be known that they who can more easily give relief in the shape of farinaceous food, such as wheat and flour, or kiln-dry corn meal, barley, beans, dried green peas, rice and hominy, or in the form of cured hams, or canned goods of any sort, will soon find agencies ready to receive at some point designated by the governor of the state, and also at the port of shipment for Russia. Carloads of supplies, properly designated and directed, will have free transportation to the sea-board. The International Red Cross of Geneva, through its American and Russian branches, has been recognized by the Russian government and designated by the Russian representative in this country as a medium wholly acceptable and reliable through which money and provisions can be sent.

We suggest in the interest of these public relief meetings, and for the information of the people through the local press, that letters be written to Miss Barton and ex-Governor Hoyt asking for facts and interesting items, which they hold themselves ready to send; but there is no need of waiting for these. This editorial can be made the basis of a meeting; and we hope soon to be able to announce that our local unions are at work on this broad line of humanity, for we believe there are no groups anywhere more large-hearted and ready-handed than our local groups of white-ribboners.

MANUFACTURED CRIMINALS.

In an address before the Chicago Methodist Preachers' meeting in March, Mr. Mark Crawford, who is in charge of the House of Correction in Chicago, made some shocking revelations of the condition of that institution. It is but little better than a school of crime. It has no provision for the separation of youthful offenders from older criminals. It has but two cell houses and boys of seven are put in cells next to criminals of seventy, and can learn all the latter know of vice and crime. Mr. Crawford said that hundreds of youth had obtained instruction in crime in the House of Correction, and read a letter from a young man who had been sent there for various offenses when a mere child, telling how he had learned the arts of house-breaking and transom climbing and other crimes from men of mature age. Mr. Crawford gave the following table showing that ten per cent of the prisoners during the last ten years had been less than seventeen years old:

Years.	Total Number	Between 7 and 17 y'rs old.
1882	7,566	693
1883	7,058	672
1884	6,999	769
1885	7,108	706
1886	7,524	810
1887	8,763	993
1888	9,928	1,019
1889	8,393	962
1890	8,457	817
1891	8,249	1,031
Total	80,045	8,472

Chicago now has 6,400 saloons and many other institutions for the manufacture of criminals, but while the revenues from these and from the sale of the city's franchises have furnished an immense amount of "boodle" to municipal jobbers, but little provision has been made for the reformation of criminals. The city has entirely outgrown its institutions for the care of the dependent and vicious classes. Perhaps the worst feature of the House of Correction is the enforced idleness of its inmates. They are kept there in promiscuous crowds with no chance for manual labor, and nothing to occupy their minds but to study and acquire greater skill in criminal practices. Idleness is the greatest foe to reform. With no knowledge of any trade or means of making an honest living, the prisoners when discharged are sure to resort to crime for a subsistence. The records of the institution show that the same persons have been sent back to it repeatedly. Mr. Crawford is making an effort to get the city council to provide buildings and equipment for the manual training of the inmates of the Bridewell and for their education in the trades. He wants to make the House of Correction a reformatory institution instead of a school of crime.

Another speaker was Major McClaughry who described the methods of reform that should be adopted. Occupation for brain and hands is indispensable. Young offenders must be taught some occupation by which to earn an honest living. For their encouragement a careful system of merit marks should be adopted, by which they can rise to higher grades, with better cells and other advantages, and shorten their terms in prison. If they earn three credits each for good behavior, for study, for industry in manual occupations, they should be advanced in grade. For bad behavior they are to be reduced in grade. Each one is furnished with a little book in which his record is kept, so that he knows precisely what his standing is and that his conduct is carefully watched and his efforts to improve appreciated and duly credited to him. He is told to "watch his nines," with a view to shortening his term and preparing himself for employment when dismissed. He goes out on parole or probation, has to furnish the institution monthly reports of his conduct and certificate from his employer, and until he becomes established in upright ways, is made to feel that his progress is watched by friends in and out of the reformatory with kindly and helpful interest. Such in part is the truly beneficent system which Messrs. Crawford and McClaughry are seeking to establish in connection with the House of Correction. They ask and ought to have the support and coöperation of all good citizens in their efforts to secure the necessary appropriations by the city government. While Chicago has grown to be the second city in the country it has made little or no advance in providing for its dependent and criminal classes. It is far behind many eastern cities in this respect. Besides the wrong and peril of this neglect, it will, if not remedied, be a disgrace to the World's Fair city, and a source of shame to its citizens in the presence of our visitors next year.

WHITE RIBBON DOUGHNUTS.

How to make money, as set forth in Miss Bessie Gordon's recent article in THE UNION SIGNAL, seems to have produced a decided effect in the minds of our workers, and letters asking for Madame Willard's "doughnut recipe" come thick and fast to Rest Cottage. We therefore give from her own dictation a setting forth of the basis of those remarkable "concoctions," which in white ribbon circles seem rightly to "take the cake":

Take a little over one pint of rich, sweet milk, into which put two-thirds of a teacup of sugar and a little salt. Sift as much flour as you think will be required, into which mix four heaping teaspoonfuls of best baking powder. Stir into the milk and sugar six tablespoonfuls of very hot fresh lard, pour the mixture into the flour and make a sponge. When cooled sufficiently to prevent cooking the egg add one egg slightly beaten. Mix to a proper consistency, roll and cut into rings. It is hard to give a recipe where so much depends upon the judgment and care of the cook. Much depends upon having the lard in which the doughnuts are fried very hot before they are put in, otherwise they "soak up the fat" and are heavy.

THE position of the Republican—and for that matter the Democratic party, nationally, is clearly set forth in the following interview recently had with Senator John Sherman by the famous newspaper reporter, "Gath":

Q.—Senator, how have you been able to carry the Republican party in Ohio through the quicksands of prohibition?

A.—Why, on that subject I have been frank. I say that I believe in temperance, but there are others who believe in their beer and wine, and I do not propose to make my private tastes the standard of law. At the same time the civilized world recognizes that spirituous liquors furnish the most legitimate basis for taxation. I therefore believe in a tax strong enough to raise a good revenue on liquor. That is done by the national law, and there seems to be hardly any objection to it. But prohibition is in the nature of a sumptuary law, depriving some of livelihood and others of their lifelong customs.

MRS. LUCINDA STONE, of Michigan, has brought it about that in Michigan University, the largest institution of its kind in this nation, it is required by law that a woman shall be the incumbent of at least one professorship. This, of course, will be a most educational object lesson, and will serve to stimulate gifted young women by the prospect of reward for their faithfulness. It occurs to us that besides petitioning colleges to this effect, (and that ought to be done in every state,) the white ribbon women might well ask that in all colleges and universities for men and women there should be a chair of physical ethics. The religion of the body is the best and truest basis for the religion of the soul. The Ten Commandments and Sermon on the Mount have their analogue in the natural law by which this Temple of the Holy Ghost is governed. Let our state presidents and local unions in college towns exert their utmost influence to secure in the institutions they can influence this name on the catalogue of teachers, "Professor ——, Chair of Physical Ethics." A Father Mathew chair has already been founded in the Catholic University at Washington and a John B. Gough chair in the American University (Methodist) in the same city. We earnestly hope that these keynotes may find echoes in all our institutions of learning, and that right speedily.

THE first copy of Our Union, the official organ of the National W. C. T. U., which was finally merged with The Signal to make THE UNION SIGNAL, was brought out in July, 1875, at Philadelphia, by Mrs. Annie Wittenmeyer, first president of the National W. C. T. U., and edited by Mrs. Jane Fowler Willing of Chicago. Shortly afterwards Mrs. Wittenmeyer assumed both positions. The paper was a monthly of eight pages at fifty cents a year. In two years it had accumulated debts to such an extent that the convention in Newark seriously considered the propriety of its discontinuance. But in this emergency some of our leaders came to the rescue, and Mrs. Hannah Whitall Smith accepted the position of the editor-in-chief without salary, with Mrs. Mary T. Burt as managing editor, and Mrs. Cornelia C. Alford as publisher. The paper rose at once in favor under this vigorous management, and the second year Miss Esther Pugh became editor, the publisher, Mrs. Alford, being continued and the paper was issued as a bi-monthly. Next in order Miss Margaret Winslow, of Brooklyn, formerly a teacher in Packer Institute, a woman of talent (the one who first suggested the white ribbon as our badge) became editor, continuing in this position for several years to excellent purpose except that she was too conservative on the question of woman's ballot. These were the days of the great debates on that subject, which took the form of arguments pro and con as to whether the news from states that had adopted equal franchise as one of their departments, should be printed. To do this was so manifestly just that a department headed "Home Protection" was finally agreed upon and worked to mighty advantage by Christian women forming the W. C. T. U. During this time Miss Esther Pugh was publisher. In 1883 the paper was brought to Chicago and merged with The Signal, which had been founded by Mrs. Matilda B Carse as an independent weekly white-ribbon journal in 1880, and edited by Mrs. Mary B. Willard.

Special Difficulties.

PLEDGE.—"I hereby solemnly promise, God helping me, to abstain from all distilled, fermented and malt liquors, including Wine and Cider, and to employ all proper means to discourage the use of and traffic in the same."

QUERY.—Can gentlemen be honorary members in more than one W. C. T. U. at the same time?

ANSWER.—This is not usual. Transfer cards should be given both to members and to honoraries when going from one community to another. These can be had by writing to headquarters.

Q.—Please suggest names for local unions.

A.—Among the best are Lucy Webb Hayes W. C. T. U., Elizabeth Fry W. C. T. U., Neal Dow W. C. T. U. The St. Paul women have set a new keynote, and one most musical, in naming the local union of 110 members recently organized, the Isabel Somerset W. C. T. U. We think it a good plan. Every time that a character loved and trusted comes to the mind of any person it is a distinctive gain to that mind, and exerts an influence in moulding brain, heart and conscience. We would make the names of our local unions largely thus educational.

Q.—There has been some discussion here at the "Hub" regarding the proper pronunciation of the name Yolande. Will you please give it in THE UNION SIGNAL?

A LOYAL WHITE-RIBBONER.

A.—We suppose that each syllable should be sounded thus: Yo-lan-de, but we at Rest Cottage anglicized the pronunciation thus: Yo-lande, although the author himself placed the accent on the last syllable, giving the a the broad sound. In a charming novel of that name by William Black, he gives a description of a young woman who in appearance and character was not unlike our beloved Julia Ames.

Q.—Is there any reason why our district president should always be our delegate to the National W. C. T. U. Convention?

A.—None whatever. Pass the honors around.

Q.—"What leaflets shall we use for public meetings?

A.—"That depends." An artist selects a delicate sable brush for the fine hair lines of his painting, and one of very different size and shape when "washing in" an undertint. Shall we be less careful when dealing with souls, when helping the Master-Painter to bring out the marvelous picture of the ages? Throwing out of account—because all are so reasonable in price—the question of finance, two queries remain: 1. What purpose do we wish to accomplish by the distribution of literature? 2. What are the best leaflets to fulfill this purpose? But few of the many possible answers can be suggested here, and these are based upon W. T. P. A. publications.

Is it a campaign against high license? Use the Timely Talks on this theme, as indicated by their titles.

Is it to secure voters for the Prohibition ticket? Timely Talks, Nos. 17, 24, 30, 31, 32, 33, 36, 37, 38; Signal Lights, Nos. 1, 3, 14, 16, 21, 28.

A gospel temperance meeting? Timely Talks, Nos. 39 and 40; Gospel Lights; Signal Lights, No. 22; National Leaflets, 49, 52, 54.

A temperance meeting designed to arouse interest "all along the line"? The Total Abstinence Series.

A children's meeting, in Sunday-school or other where? Loyal Leaflets, and the L. T. L. National Leaflets.

In the interests of the purity department? Leaflets should be individually selected, choosing from the White Cross and the Social Purity Series. Do not give "School-Boy Morality" to a girl in her teens, or "Her Talisman" to a flippant young man. Bound sets of leaflets for sale by the W. T. P. A. enable workers to become familiar with them. National Leaflet, No. 48, "Safety for School Children," is excellent for general distribution.

For a suffrage meeting use National Leaflets, Nos. 5, 28, 33, 42, 43, 44 and 47.

A labor meeting to be captured for temperance? Timely Talks, No. 7; Signal Lights, Nos. 8 to 13, 18, 27, 30; National Leaflets, Nos. 14, 31, 34, 36, 39.

A teachers' convention? National Leaflets, Nos. 9, 30, 37, 38, 46, 48, 201; Social Purity, Nos. 3, 6, 11; White Cross, especially Nos. 11 and 12. (Put several together in a roll and tie with white ribbon.)

A mothers' meeting? The Home and Purity Leaflets for that purpose "made and provided."

Send to ministers, National Leaflets, Nos. 1, 15, 21, 22, 48; to doctors, National Leaflets, Nos. 9, 23, 29, 40; Home Leaflets, Nos. 8 and 12.

The leaflets for department and Y work, are, or ought to be, familiar to all white-ribboners. Special half-price rates for all the leaflet publications of the W. T. P. A. will be sent on application to the business office.

ALICE M. GUERNSEY,
Ed. Dept. of Books and Leaflets.

The Watch-Tower.

Mrs. F. H. Rastall, business manager of the W. T. P. A., thus addresses "On Duty": "You said you wanted bright things. Here is one: This association has the use of two wagons, each with horse and driver, the contracts lasting one year. The name of one of these drivers is Peter. On the wagons our business sign is painted, 'W. T. P. A., Printers, Electrotypers, etc.' On one occasion when the wagon was standing in front of the office of one of the firms which send electrotyping to our foundry the driver was asked, 'W. T. P. A., what does that mean?' and he promptly replied, 'Wait Till Peter Arrives—that is what they've got to do anyway.'"

***

The great crusades of the blue and the red ribbon swept over the land between 1874 and 1882, but as the years went by the white ribbon has asserted its power as a badge warranted both to wash and to wear, for when it has once been adopted one is likely to find it maintained in its place year in and year out, while alas, the ribbons blue and red come and go like the rainbow or the rose. This is said in sorrow, not in criticism, and it is recognized that the persistent type symbolized in the white ribbon is but another development of that world-old patience of women, which is their highest virtue, and has been inwrought by discipline and pain.

***

Dr. Sarah Hackett Stevenson, that woman of bright pen and speech, has recently been elected president of the Chicago Woman's Club, and has signalized her accession to this honorable place by a bright speech on the subject of "Women as Politicians," taking the uncomfortable phrase of Mrs. Lynn Linton. The whole speech is so good that we wish we might convey it to our columns. One paragraph we must certainly have, namely: "Mrs. Linton says 'that the cradle lies across the door of the polling booth that bars the way to the Senate.' We wish that this were true, for if men had to climb over their babies' cradles, and look into the face of their innocent children as they passed in to vote, they might vote as they pray. The state might then have a conscience as well a treasury, and the treasury might not so frequently get into the barrel."

***

It is a deplorable fact that some of our society women in our large cities and towns make a boast of earning their clothing by playing cards for money at social gatherings. One lady mentions that a few nights ago she was invited to a club that had been organized two years, and they felt no interest in the cards if they did not play for money. She said that at many of these gatherings where cards were played, the punch furnished by the hostess was so strong that it affected those who partook. Card playing is becoming a mania in many sections of the country, church members being mingled in it. Prizes are given, and women have afternoon clubs two or three times a week, besides as many in the evening, in which both sexes take part in the game of cards. This is no jeremiad, but simply the statement of a fact known to the observant and the intelligent.

***

Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens recently went to Calais, Maine, to organize a local union, taking with her a dear little girl of two years to place in a home where there were no little ones. The arrangements had all been made by correspondence, and when she met the foster parents, one look reassured her, as with open arms and a look of motherly affection the lady said, "This is my little Margery," and the little one stretched out her arms and clung to her. Through the efforts of Mrs. Merrill, Mrs. Stevens and others in the new department, such scenes are being multiplied, and will be more and more as the years go by.

***

Little May, the granddaughter of Hannah Whitall Smith, when a child five years of age, expressed her disapproval of prayer, because she said she had prayed that she might catch minnows in the pond; had taken her little silver mug and given them ample opportunity to go in, but they would not go. Upon this, her grandmother explained that we ought not only to pray, but that we ought also to work according to the lines of nature, which are the laws of God, in the very best way that we know how; and that men had learned that the way to catch minnows is to put a worm on a hook and then the little creatures will bite. The child's face brightened as she took in the plan a little, and said with emphasis: "Oh, I see, grandmother; worms is Heavenly Father's way." There is many a time when we have felt that the way was as unattractive as the handling of worms in order to catch fish, but as many a bright and huge fish has been landed after that manner, so many an iridescent success has been won by means as seemingly undesirable. We have to study to get into harmony with the laws of nature, and to be obedient to the laws of the Thinker who is behind all thoughts.

ON DUTY.

Queen's Gardens.

LIFE'S PATTERNS.

BY EVA KINNEY GRIFFITH.

You have all cut out patterns in your time. Some of you have cut patterns for little garments which you fashioned with tenderest care for the tiny babe you loved so well. The babe has grown to be a man now, and would laugh at your attempt to make clothes for him, but put away in the bureau drawer, tied with a bit of checked gingham, maybe, is a pattern of the aprons and dresses he used to wear when a boy. Sometimes you take them out and muse over them. Your musings bring back the picture of a rosy-cheeked child, full of life and motion, bobbing hither and thither, wearing the blue checked apron you had made for him. There are other patterns in the drawer, perhaps, that recall another little one who has been lying in his grave these twenty years, forgotten by all save his mother. Others still bring back the merry schoolgirl who was married but yesterday and has gone now to a home of her own.

Perhaps you are fond of fancy work. If so you have another drawer or box devoted to its patterns. How pretty some of them are! Do you remember how pleased you were once to get that new pattern of pansies for your pincushion, and how keenly you enjoyed embroidering that beautiful design of roses for your tidy? With what avidity you learned the new pine-apple pattern for lace when it first came around! How many pretty things you have made to beautify your home and garnish your toilets that never could have been made but for the new patterns that kept coming to you.

Every article of clothing you wear is made after somebody's pattern. The home in which you live had a pattern. It was built after a plan drawn by the architect. Your everyday work has a model. Your life has an ideal. Ideals, plans, patterns, models, designs, they are synonymous terms. Everything in life is fashioned after them. Yet the material things that we see impress us so strongly that we forget the power that is in the invisible pattern after which they are created. But the fit of the garment, the comfort of the home, the beauty of the ornament depends on the plan or pattern after which it was modeled.

Now let us look at Nature. How beautiful are the stately forests; the meadows abloom with flowers; the brookside of curious grasses! But every variety of tree is formed after a peculiar design from which it never varies except as it is stunted or hindered in growth. Each leaf, also, has an invisible model after which it closely follows as it grows. Then each flower, every blade of grass has its own peculiar ideal form. Again, the animal kingdom, even to our bodies, which are created after God's own image, follow with fidelity the pattern given them by nature.

The same law holds good in the mineral world. Why does the crystallizing salt always form cubes, and the freezing water fashion six-pointed stars? The scientists try to explain it by telling us of cohesion and the polarization of atoms. But no matter what these forces are, or how they work, it still remains true that wherever and whenever nature's forces act, they always unerringly follow an invisible pattern, intelligently designed.

Patterns are eternal, indestructible. The house may be torn down, the garment worn out, the paper pattern and the architect's plan thrown away, yet the invisible model after which they were made may be re-imitated at any time.

Dear heart, your own inward life, that wonderful thing you call character, is being formed after an ideal. And the perfection of the work depends on the correctness of the pattern. Is Christ being formed in you? Have you taken Him for your model? Then you should look upon Him often, noting the beauty and symmetry of His sweet character. Who would think of attempting to follow out some new and intricate pattern of fancy work without looking frequently at the design and keeping it always in mind? Yet there are people who start in the Christian life looking to other Christians for their model, and sometimes depending on other books for instruction, rather than the Bible.

The Bible is full of ideals for living and loving. It gives us death for earthly living, sleep for earthly dying, and health for sickness. These invisible ideals once accepted have a power over our lives of which we hardly realize. To keep them constantly in mind should be the aim of every Christian who would progress.

How pitiful is the condition of the soul in a sin-darkened life that knows no high ideal, that looks upon no noble pattern of unselfish living. There are people in wealthy homes who are without a Bible. There are rich business men living in the atmosphere of trade, and sinners down among the poor and ignorant, who are unconscious that their lives lack anything, because they have no beautiful, perfect pattern with which to compare themselves. There are intelligent men in places of responsibility and trust, who have persisted in sin and doubt until they have lost their ideals of truth and purity. They have designed a pattern of their own which they are following out. They have their own standards of right and wrong and as long as they live up to these poor human standards they think they are all right. Their case is more sad, more hopeless than the one who is cast down because he has failed in reaching his ideal that was too high for his human nature.

All the patterns of earth which have in them truth or beauty are God's thoughts. The pattern of the phonograph, the telephone, the steam engine, although invented by men, came from God. Some one caught an ideal from the invisible world about him and built a machine after it, and we called him an inventor. But the pattern for the machine was in God's thought before man had discovered it. True patterns come from above. They are to be found by looking within rather than without. If we would keep our own ideals pure and high we must often compare them with those of the Bible which contains the true standards.

News from the Field.

THE SUNNY SUNSET LAND.

The local fight referred to in my last letter has had a sudden and characteristic termination. It will be remembered that the California legislature relegated control of the liquor traffic in the several counties to the supervisors, and that the supervisors of Los Angeles county voted to grant license outside of corporate cities to applicants of good, moral character for a fee of eighty dollars a year; but if two-thirds of the voters of any precinct signed a remonstrance against the granting of any specific license, it should not be granted. The ordinance threw many obstacles in the way of securing signatures to the remonstrance, but the people, glad of even such a chance to shut saloons out, went to work with a will to secure the requisite number of signers. Farmers left their work at this, their busiest season, and canvassed their precincts day after day, rolling up long lists of remonstrants.

This was not at all what the board of supervisors and the attorney of the Liquor Dealers' Association, who was always present when the questions of granting license was up, had calculated upon. The clause providing for the two-third remonstrance was evidently intended only as a sop to the temperance element, after the manner of the resolution of "sympathy with all well-directed temperance effort," the supervisors not thinking it possible, under the hard conditions imposed, to secure the necessary two-thirds.

When, however, precinct after precinct sent in its remonstrances with more than the requisite number of signers, something had to be done. In one case where a remonstrance was presented late in the week, its consideration was postponed till the next Tuesday. Sunday the liquor men of Los Angeles went out to that precinct, and by means best known to themselves, secured sixty signatures to a paper declaring that the signers had signed the remonstrance under a misapprehension and wished their names taken off.

At the Tuesday's meeting this "withdrawal" was presented to the supervisors. Of course such a high-handed measure called out vigorous protest from the temperance people and a hot battle waged most of the session. At last the supervisors, seeing no other means of escape, voted to abolish the part of the ordinance forbidding the granting of licenses when two-thirds of the voters protested. This leaves them free to grant licenses to all applicants, which they are doing.

It were hardly worth while to give so much space to a local affair did it not illustrate so perfectly the tactics of the liquor power and the subserviency to it of our rulers everywhere. Coming right home to the country people here, who are mostly wedded to the old parties, it has convinced them, as nothing state or national could do, that the time has come for heroic measures to throttle the liquor traffic. I shall be much disappointed if it does not swell the prohibition vote largely.

The Southern California Citrus Fair is in full blast in Los Angeles, and a visit to it made me feel, as I had not done before, that I am in the land of oranges. At the fair they were piled up in wonderful profusion and variety. The lemon exhibit is scarcely second to that of oranges, indeed, that industry seems to be making more rapid strides than its sister, perhaps, because, as one remarked, "lemons are a necessity, while oranges are a luxury." The olive with its various products has also great prominence; there is such a rage for planting olive trees this spring that the nursery men cannot supply the demand for them. Raisins also make a fine showing, while guava jelly, walnuts, almonds, dates and peanuts flank them on every side. The wine exhibit is conspicuous by its absence, my closest scrutiny failed to discover any on exhibition, except half a dozen bottles of orange wine. At the first Citrus Fair sent to Chicago—"California on wheels"—wine was a prominent feature of the exhibit.

We miss the wonderful display of flowers of last year, the frost and wind storms having in large measure destroyed them; but these bright sunshiny days, following the rains, are bringing out the roses, geraniums, heliotropes and callas. A few hardy wild flowers are in bloom, and I am told that soon the hills will be aflame with California poppies. The wealth of greenery now clothing all nature satisfies the eye, even though flowers are tardy in making their appearance. Then there is the constantly changing beauty of the mountains encircling this little valley, which is at once an inspiration and a rest. "The strength of the hills is His also," and here we seem cradled continually in His loving arms.

The committee having it in charge are working bravely to lift the heavy debt resting on the Temperance Temple in Los Angeles, in which work we wish them hearty God-speed. The influence of this Temple for good—when paid for it stands as a monument to the indomitable energy and perseverance of the W. C. T. U.—cannot be computed in dollars and cents. It testifies to every one in this stronghold of the liquor power that the W. C. T. U. has come to stay, and that it has faith that God will give the victory.

Juvenile work has great prominence here, four or five L. T. L's meeting each Sunday afternoon. At their head stands that of the Central union, whose superintendent is Mrs. Lucy Blanchard, county superintendent of this department, an earnest and successful worker therein. This is the band that has raised such large sums for the Temperance Temple here and in Chicago. Mrs. Blanchard has also done a grand work along the line of Demorest contests in educating public sentiment, and has organized most, if not all the other L. T. L's in the city.

The one at Morris Vineyard, under the efficient superintendency of Mrs. B. M. Lee, is almost as large as the central band, and is doing thorough, systematic work. An orchestra of young men adds to its attractions, and a large class of adults forms its backbone. This band has placed a watering trough and drinking hydrant in front of a wood and coal yard on Main street, the second place in Los Angeles where water for man and beast can be obtained except in front of a saloon. Hundreds avail themselves of its privileges every day, and are thus free from one form of temptation.

The band has a daughter at Yuma, Arizona, and her genesis was in this wise: A Spanish boy from Yuma attending school in Los Angeles joined this L. T. L., and became so imbued with its spirit that when he returned home he talked temperance to his mates to such good purpose that soon they wished to sign the pledge. He wrote Mrs. Lee asking if she would send him pledges and badges, and allow him to secure all the signers he could and form them into a branch of the Morris Vineyard L. T. L. She gladly consented, and he has already returned sixteen cards signed, fully one-half the names being Spanish or Mexican. Thus the leaven is spreading; this branch holds weekly meetings, modeled on those of the parent society, where our manuals are studied and the Young Crusader distributed.

Major George A. Hilton has settled permanently in Los Angeles, where he conducts the Pacific gospel mission on South Spring street. Gospel meetings are held every evening and Sunday afternoon. A gospel wagon also goes from place to place Sunday afternoons holding hour-long meetings at different street corners, thus carrying the gospel to those who will not come to hear it. On an average seven hundred more churchgoers are reached each Sabbath by these wagon meetings. Often men come from them to the mission and several of them have been converted there.

Weekday afternoons are occupied by the classes of the Bible Institute, instructed by various pastors of the city and Major Hilton, in turn. These classes are well attended, and are increasing the interest in study of the Bible and in methods of Christian work.

MARY ALLEN WEST.

Los Angeles, Cal.

MASSACHUSETTS,

UNDER THE GILDED DOME.

Like Queen Esther of old, the Massachusetts W. C. T. U. has appeared before the Massachusetts Legislature at the time of the holding out of the golden scepter, to petition for the deliverance of her children and her commonwealth.

The hearings on the amendment to the tobacco law, for the reënactment of a prohibitory statute, and on the druggists' license, followed in quick succession, and were remarkable for the clear testimony, the authoritative statements, the kind and courteous attention of the committee, while we were justly proud of our leaders. Did you not know so well the power of Mrs. Fessenden, I would tell you that we felt ourselves honored in having such a president. Under trying and exasperating remarks, and contempt manifested in face and bearing of some of the remonstrants, she maintained the utmost forbearance, thereby revealing that inherent courtesy of true Christian grace, which more than once called forth the thanks of the committee "to the W. C. T. U. for the dignity and grace with which they had conducted the hearing." In this legislative work as well as in the admirable management of the details of her office work, Mrs. Stevenson has proven true our estimate of her ability when we cast our ballot for her at the state convention.

Some of the petitioners for the abolishment of cigarettes whose hearing preceded ours on the penalty amendment to the tobacco law, reasoned that tobacco in its natural state is perfectly harmless. Such were in favor of the prohibition of cigarettes because they interfered with the sale of the so-called better article, cigars. All who appeared as petitioners, with the exception of the W. C. T. U., were tobacco users or tobacco sellers. Our hearing which immediately followed, desired an amendment to the tobacco law, whereby a penalty might be attached to the use of tobacco in public places by minors under sixteen years of age, and it received as courteous attention from the committee as the one that preceded. Both measures were good, both received the support of the W. C. T. U., but while intensely interested in the passage of their bill against cigarettes, those who petitioned for this showed an equal determination to oppose our amendment. Mrs. Gleason spoke for us at both these hearings, and if no greater good has been accomplished, the subject has been agitated, the committee has been told some wholesome truths, and we have done our duty.

In the hearing on the reënactment of the prohibitory statute of 1855 Dr. Miner rendered us valiant service. He gave a vivid history of the movement in those days when Massachusetts was under a prohibitory law. In his introduction he called attention to the fact that no-license

Cambridge and Somerville, by their vote against the prohibitory amendment, showed that they only preferred to have their saloons located in Boston, the great liquor tank of New England, which by use of its force pump sends the liquor through the no-license states of Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont. Our government, by its license laws, attempts to play with fire and not get burned, and yet is getting burned all the time. He then gave reasons why we asked for the reënactment of the prohibitory statute of 1855, which was in accordance with the bill which General Butler drew up as attorney. The bill was challenged at every point, went through every court and yet remained intact. We desire this in preference to a new bill because it cannot be misinterpreted or disannulled on account of any legal flaw, and can be put into immediate operation, whereas a new bill would doubtless have to go through a long period of probation.

He stated and proved that the Republican party has abolished all the restrictive legislation we ever had on the liquor question. This prohibitory statute was enacted in 1855, the Republican party came into power in Massachusetts in 1856, and had not manliness enough to enforce the law, or courage sufficient to repeal it, and it remained a dead letter on our statute books. When, however, it was enforced through the seizure clause, it was found to be so successful in destroying the business of the liquor men that they determined to have it abolished. In pursuance of this policy in 1865 and 1866, a mammoth petition in favor of a stringent license law, signed by the merchants, and headed by the Hon. Alpheus Pardy, was presented to a special committee of the legislature. A six weeks' inquest was held every day from nine to one o'clock in Representatives Hall. During those memorable six weeks, public sentiment was so strong that it was almost impossible to obtain any liquor of any kind in Boston. Large sums of money were used as bribes. When the inquest closed the majority report was in favor of retaining the prohibitory statute, and though ninety men were unplaced when the vote was taken, there was then a majority in favor of the prohibitory statute. In the autumn of 1867 George Washington Warren, by the use of $9,000, packed the caucuses and secured a governor, senate and house, in favor of a stringent license law, and the prohibitory statute was repealed, because it damaged and destroyed the liquor business! Abolished because prohibition prohibited! There was a spontaneous rebound from the drunkenness that resulted and the next year a Prohibition governor was elected, Governor Claflin, who recommended a restoration of the prohibitory statute exempting cider. The next year all fermented liquors were exempted. Dr. Miner stated that the press is constantly reiterating the charge that prohibition has been a failure, while their own files tell a different story.

Rev. Joseph Cook followed with some strong moral arguments. "The liquor dealers," he remarked, "fleece from the community what they pay into the state. This income acts as a golden bar to prohibition. It robs Peter to pay Paul and does not pay Paul. The traffic is like a skater who can throw his weight first on one foot and then on the other. The time is coming when it will cost more to offend the younger sentiment of the community than to offend the liquor dealers. Make yourselves illustrious by leading in this holy crusade."

The hearing was inspiring, and in many respects the finest ever held on this subject. The arguments and facts were strong and convincing, and the committee serious and thoughtful to a marked degree. It seemed to us almost as if the day had been won, when a prominent member of the Law and Order League came forward not as a remonstrant, he said, but in the interest of the enforcement of the present laws, which he argued, if enforced, would give us practically all we desire. He then drew the attention of the committee off into a side issue by discussing and condemning the jury system. He condemned also the W. C. T. U. as a political organization, and exhorted us to employ moral suasion and pay more attention to the education of the children.

Mrs. Fessenden in replying aptly remarked that if the gentleman of the Law and Order League knew as little of the other subjects on which he had expressed his opinion as he evidently did about the W. C. T. U. his words would have but little weight with the committee.

The hearing on abolishing the druggists' licenses and giving the sale of alcoholic liquors into the hands of a paid agent, was remarkable for the number of prominent advocates who, feeling the importance of this measure, appeared to testify to the abuse of the druggists' license and its evil results. Among those who thus aided us was ex-city marshal Raymond of Haverhill, who stated that the board of aldermen were desirous of enforcing the law and so attempted to carry out the temperance sentiment of the city which asked for a limited number of druggists' licenses. It was found impossible, however, to limit the number, and in consequence every one who applied was granted a license and the drug stores became virtually liquor saloons open seven days in the week. He presented a petition in favor of our proposed bill which was signed by the mayor, and represented the solid thinking men among whom were seven ex-mayors, district attorney, the judge and associate judge of the police court, ex-city marshal, forty-six bank officials, editors of both daily papers, president of the board of trade, superintendent of schools, physicians, clergymen and many others holding official position.

Judge Warren A. Reed, of Brockton, delivered an admirable plea in which he made a strong point of the fact that by means of the druggists' license, an honorable business had been degraded. Eleven years ago, Brockton established practically a town agency, but it was found to be against the law and so had to be abolished. The sentiment in Brockton, however, is so strong against licensing the druggists, that it is impossible to obtain any alcoholic liquor for medicinal purpose even, unless one has a friend in the drug profession.

The druggists' license act practically nullifies the law as it virtually establishes liquor saloons in no-license cities and towns. The effect of this law upon the communities has been a "deep-seated despair" which makes it almost impossible to obtain a no-license vote as long as this law is in force. Mr. Raymond, of Haverhill, stated that a citizen in high official station whose residence was in close proximity to one of the first-class drug stores in the city, told him that he had witnessed blue kegs marked "kerosene" rolled into that store sufficient to deluge the whole community. In many instances saloons have been converted into drug stores so that the effect of this law is to establish the aristocratic liquor saloon as well as the low class liquor dive in towns that vote no-license. Another great objection raised against the law is that it is extremely difficult to detect the violation of a druggists' license. There is a decided opposition to spotters' evidence and there is no other way of obtaining sufficient testimony to convict a druggist.

At the second hearing the secretary of the Law and Order League presented a bill upon which we think all can agree and so we are in hopes that something definite will result from the agitation.

Other hearings have been in progress, one on the petition to increase the number of saloons in license cities and towns to one for every five hundred inhabitants. This came not from the liquor dealers as would be naturally expected, but from some of the best citizens of Holyoke and Fall River. Their argument, I am told, was that monopoly causes more positive harm than even free rum. They presented this bill in the interests, as they believe, of temperance.

EMMA W. BUMSTEAD,
State Reporter. Boston.

VERMONT.

EFFECTS OF THE PROHIBITORY LAW.

Having spent the winter in a sunny clime far from my native hills, my thoughts turn with pride to the Prohibitory Law of Vermont; although it is so carelessly enforced as to seem by some not to be enforced at all, the restraint it imposes upon the liquor traffic is a safeguard to the people.

Liquor selling is illegal. The man who engages in it is a candidate for the workhouse. Therefore he must be on his guard, and sell to none but such as he is sure will not disclose the secret. He must hide all evidences of his traffic. He displays no bottles, he hangs no sign. When accused of violating the law of his state by selling even a single glass, he puts on an air of injured innocence and denies all complicity or knowledge of such violation of law.

In no state is the white ribbon more respected than in Vermont. Appreciation of our prohibitory law is ever a part of our state platform, and we constantly pledge it our support.

Our state union is in good working order. It has one of the loveliest presidents ever seen, an indefatigable secretary, a full corps of county presidents and superintendents, as well as a rank and file whose aims and hopes are one. The miscalled non-partisan element is removed and we are pressing forward as of old.

Ever and anon a new union is formed. The latest is at Castleton. This young union has scored a victory against a liquor selling hotel-keeper, who by their instigation was prosecuted until he is glad to throw up the evil business.

The Y's of Chelsea are worthy of imitation. They hold meetings every other week at the homes of members. They have parliamentary and physical drills, debates, question-boxes, essays, etc. They keep a mite-box, and have held an observation party. This is the union that at our state convention last fall carried off the banner for increased membership; they had a paid membership of eighteen, more than double that of last year. They have just invited the county union to hold its convention with them.

Our Home Guards is the name of our little state paper. It is a monthly letter from the state officers to the members. It costs each one two cents a month, just the postage on a letter, and is so full of news and good cheer that we feel near each other as we peruse its columns. The February number has this item: "Who of our state workers will visit the small inactive unions in their own vicinity, helping them to get a new start in the different lines of our work? Who will go into unoccupied fields and organize new unions?"

Is not this a beautiful idea? Pass it along. There are many in the rank and file of our brave soldiery who are worthy to engage in such grand work. Last year a little of such work was done in our state. May it increase an hundred fold!

MRS. CLINTON SMITH,
State Reporter, Middlebury.

NORTH DAKOTA.

GREETINGS AND WORDS OF CHEER.

I hope I find you well, Aunt Columbia. They sent me over to tell you a little about one of Uncle Sam's babies—one of the twins. North Dakota, now going on three, "is thriving and fat and hearty and well," I assure you. She runs alone and talks and makes more noise than two children of her age ought to make.

She may be a baby in years and in numbers but she is not in size, for she is two hundred and ten miles wide and three hundred and forty-two long. Her area, therefore, is 71,820 square miles. You could place Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island and nearly all of New Jersey within her borders. We have fifty-three counties about two-thirds of which are organized. You could put "Little Rhody" in each county and have a big garden patch besides.

New England has about twenty persons to our one. Our size, therefore, is in some things a disadvantage. The more an army is scattered the harder it is to fight effectively.

Scattered as we are—hard-working people, getting our bread by the sweat of our brows in villages, small farmhouses miles apart, our two largest cities scant 10,000 apiece—you may not expect too much from the baby yet.

Our state W. C. T. U. was a year old last September. We have one hundred and two local unions in twenty-four counties, and twenty-seven departments headed by live superintendents.

Good words come from the Casselton W's and Y's. The W. C. T. U. have meetings regularly. After the business meeting, they have Bible readings and mothers' meetings alternately. They have been using Hannah Whitall Smith's, but this year are using Miss Elizabeth Greenwood's Bible readings and find them very helpful and uplifting. Their special financial efforts this year will be for either Temple or Temperance Hospital needs.

They started a series of prize contests in December. The prizes are to be in silver dollars. The first prize is three dollars, the second two. The first contest consisted of essays on "The Effects of Tobacco, Physically, Mentally and Morally Considered." The second contest was for similar prizes, the subject being "Alcohol." The contests are declared to be instructive and decidedly interesting. A small admission fee is charged and as a source of income these contests pay better than anything else yet tried. The proceeds from the last were over twenty-two dollars. As soon as sufficient interest warrants, they will enter upon a series of Demorest medal contests.

The president of the Casselton W. C. T. U. is our state corresponding secretary, Mrs. D. W. Shinn. She has many labors, as housekeeper, cook, waiting-maid, wife, mother. A few weeks ago the writer was royally entertained at her home. Mr. Shinn evidenced no symptoms of the henpecked husband; neither did the sturdy little men, almost twin boys, show lack of mothering, either in their manners or mending. "Her children arise up and call her blessed; her husband also and he praiseth her."

Our dear Y's at Casselton are alive and prosperous. They meet regularly twice a month. Recently they had a lecture on Purity, in the Presbyterian church. The house was full, and to their happy surprise over half of the audience was of "the masculine persuasion." They have a reading on Purity at each meeting. Ten new members have been added recently. Miss Wheeler, the president, and Miss Pollock, one of the loyal ones, both teachers in the public school, deserve great commendation for their steadfast efforts.

From Sanborn, in Barnes county, comes encouraging news of Y work. The Sanborn Y has from the beginning been one of the active, successful Y's of the state. The letter contained a freshly pressed pansy. It made me think of sweet girl faces all over the state, lifting hopeful eyes and serving with helpful hands and loving hearts. May our blessed Lord's purity be in the bodies and spirits of those to whom these hopeful eyes will look in love and who are to be blest by those helpful hands and loving hearts through life. "Strength and honor are her clothing and she shall rejoice in time to come."

Mrs. Pierson, president of the Sanborn Y, has organized a Junior Y, and Miss Maude Meloy has charge of it. The state president, Miss A. M. Kinnear, gave a lecture in Fargo on the work accomplished at the Boston Convention. She came home full of consecrated enthusiasm.

Miss Elizabeth Preston, state evangelist, has issued a very neat open letter to the unions, outlining her hopes and plans for the year's work.

Mrs. Emma F. Vail, of Forman, superintendent of evangelistic work, edits a column in her home paper.

We pity the Southern California sisters who have their superintendent of public instruction against them. We have for public superintendent, Hon. John Ogden, a man as earnest in temperance and purity as the most enthusiastic W. C. T. U. woman in the state. He aids us in enforcing temperance instruction in the public schools and in every good work for humanity. But our chief help is "in the name of the Lord who made heaven and earth."

EMMA F. BATES,
State Reporter, Valley City.

PENNSYLVANIA.

PITHY POINTS.

Let me thank the reporter of Southern California for the word to stop and take a look backward, and for a moment to rest the eyes from the eager gaze which for too long we have had fixed upon the present and future. How busy we all are, and how surely are we held responsible for the judgment we display in choosing the work wherewith we shall busy ourselves!

Pennsylvania's good Mrs. Forrester, who never scolds, has just asked her "dear little sister," meaning me, to tell her why our state has not been represented of late in our National paper. The repentant letter which I mean to send her shall have this letter for a background, being "fruit meet for repentance."

Our state superintendents are reviving the workers after the diversions of the holidays. Mrs. Mary F. Lovell, state superintendent of scientific temperance instruction, succeeded last year in getting the union series of text books adopted in some grades of the Philadelphia schools. At the meeting of the board of education of that city early in January, Mrs. Lovell presented a letter and statement giving reasons why certain other books should also be removed. She says that notice has lately been received from Messrs. Lee & Shepard, the Boston publishers, that they have revised the Blaisdell Physiologies to the correct standard, and that the revised books have Mrs. Hunt's indorsement.

Mrs. E. D. C. Mair, whose special care are the railroad boys, has not relaxed her usual watchfulness, but informs her county superintendents that new leaflets suitable for their work are now in press and will soon be ready for distribution.

Mrs. Holvey, press superintendent, declares herself more than ready to prepare a column each month for the Bulletin, but not liking to "manufacture" statements, asks for even short reports from county and local workers. Any item of interest, however brief, gives her, when many such are at her command, material for a good and interesting summary of news for use in the state Bulletin.

A most interesting decision was lately handed down from the supreme court of this state, in a case wherein Caroline Davis was plaintiff and Felix McKnight, a saloonkeeper, was defendant. Mrs. Davis' husband had drank liquor in McKnight's saloon until he became intoxicated; he wandered out and fell into a gutter full of water, and laid there, contracting pneumonia from which he died. A lower court gave Mrs. Davis substantial damages, and the case being appealed the verdict was confirmed by the supreme court.

Mrs. M. J. Guthrie, of Armstrong county, writes in praise of their county president, Mrs. Mechling, through whom, she says, the county union owes its allegiance to the National. She adds, "The overwhelming attendance at the Boston Convention induced some one to say, 'We can take whatever stand we please, now that we know our following.' Have a care, dear sisters, King David once numbered the people to his hurt. Unbroken ranks is what we need, 'shoulder to shoulder, step by step, forward, march!' "

Indiana county is to have a temperance temple, to be built in Dixonville. Mr. L. W. Buchanan, of that place, has given the women ground on which to build, and as the union is reported "large in numbers, strong in faith and abounding in good works," the temple will no doubt be pushed to completion.

BERTHA W. HOWE,
State Reporter, Bradford.

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

THE sixteenth district, Ill., has been favored by having Mrs. S. F. Grubb in eloquent addresses on "Foreign Work."

THE tenth annual meeting of Eastern Washington W. C. T. U. will be held in Davenport, during the second week in May.

A SUDDEN shock to her relatives and friends was the unexpected death of Mrs. C. L. Dorland, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., a very active worker in the W. C. T. U.

AT the Woman's Club, of Boston, the discussion on March 14 was on "How to Lessen the Evils of Intemperance." "And a spirited discussion it was," so writes Kate Tannatt Woods.

WILL the lady from Normal, Ill., who addressed Mrs. Buell, enclosing seventeen cents for Minutes, please send her name (which she omitted) to Mrs. Buell at Evanston, Ill.? She will then receive the book.

A NOTED veteran worker, closely allied with the prohibition movement, was Major J. L. Palmer, who laid aside his earthly labors forever, on February 13, 1892, at his home in Little Rock, Ark.

THE South Dakota W. C. T. U. has passed resolutions of regret at parting with their able president, Mrs. H. M. Barker, now in Chicago. Mrs. Emma A. Cramner has been elected to fill the vacancy.

THE unions in Brooklyn, formerly known by numbers, have changed to names, inspiring ones. Among these, union number four is now called the Frances E. Willard union, and is doing especially active service.

THE W. C. T. U. of Newport, Del., has lost one of its brightest members and best of workers, by the death of its late treasurer, Mrs. Mary E. Gamble. She was a true Christian and died triumphantly, rejoicing in the love of her Saviour.

THE Michigan superintendent of literature, Mrs. Annis M. Hood, of Big Rapids, urges each county superintendent to study carefully the report blanks and circulars issued by the National department of literature and to fill out the same, returning them to her before April 15.

AFTER an absence of six months Mrs. Anna M. Palmer has returned to her home state, Iowa. The time was spent in Illinois in evangelistic work; the unions have been "built up in their most holy faith"; churches and communities better enlightened as to what gospel temperance means.

A LOYAL TEMPERANCE LEGION has been formed at the W. C. T. U. Coffee House, Minneapolis. It consists of the children who come to the back door for the left over food. These are given tickets which entitle them to something each day, and invite them into the Hall to join the Legion.

MRS. JENNIE F. HOLMES, for several years president of the Nebraska W. C. T. U., and filling other responsible positions, died at her home in Tecumseh, Sunday afternoon, March 20. Her death brings sadness to the hearts of all who knew her and admired the practical, earnest common sense which made her "the balance-wheel of the W. C. T. U. machinery."

MRS. HENRIETTA PHARR, of Berwick Bay, La., is accompanying Miss Kearney, of Mississippi, in a six weeks' organizing tour of her state. Mrs. Pharr is the wife of Capt. John N. Pharr, a staunch Prohibitionist who royally serves the cause. At a time when it is sweeter to sit by the fireside in her luxurious home with all the ease of wealth about her, Mrs. Pharr chooses to go forth, and with Miss Kearney, almost single-handed, "fight the good fight" in Southwest Louisiana.

MRS. SUSAN T. CONVERSE, of Woburn, Mass., is an earnest W. C. T. U. woman whose inventive and helpful spirit, as well as the necessity of supporting her own family led her, years ago, to undertake the making of improved undergarments for women and children. As a result of long and intelligent study, she introduced into the market, in 1875, the very first ribbed union suits of which we have any knowledge. The workmanship upon her garments is of superior excellence, and a perfect fit is insured, as all suits are made from the careful measurements of each individual order.

A WHITE-RIBBON souvenir spoon, emblematic of Kentucky, with the figure of Daniel Boone standing in blue grass in bas-relief on the handle, is a recent expression from the Louisville Central union of their gratitude for the tireless and unremitting efforts made by Mrs. Mary H. Hunt to secure a temperance education for the children of the country. The spoon is of graceful shape, and the bowl holds the word "Kentucky" handsomely engraved, and surrounded by a delicate scroll. The letter "K" is engraved in such a way that, in addition to being the first letter of the name of the state, it also represents the badge of all W. C. T. U. women—a bow of white ribbon.

Our Library Table.

THE PATHWAY TO EASTER. Seven Words for the Seven Days, by Rose Porter, is a booklet that can well hold its own among the almost countless and choice Easter souvenirs. The "Seven Words" are the seven last utterances of our Saviour as He hung upon the cross, for each of which Miss Porter has arranged fitting selections in prose and verse. The chapters are preceded by Mary Lowe Dickinson's incomparable poem, "Easter" written for the W. C. T. U.

"Wherever a mantle of pity falls soft on a wound or a woe,
Wherever a peace or a pardon spring up to o'ermaster a foe,
Wherever a soft hand of blessing outreaches to succor a need,
Wherever springs healing for wounding, the Master is risen indeed!"

Embossed cardboard, 25c. Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

A dainty book comes out just in time for Easter, when so many parents present their darlings to the Lord in baptism. It is entitled, A CHRISTENING GIFT by Mrs. Julia Sargeant Visher, whose exquisite literary taste is matched by the daintiness shown in the book's make-up by the publishers, Searle & Gorton. Miss Willard writes the introduction; in it she aptly says: "Here, for the first time, is a little gift, especially prepared for that tender hour when a child receives that first token of individuality, a Christian name. Some pastors are wont on such occasions to place a rosebud in the baby's hand. If I mistake not they and many others will rejoice to find in this joint labor of a father and mother a more lasting gift, though not quite so dainty, yet with a perfume of its own. Nothing can be more fitting for this purpose than THE CHRISTENING GIFT, in which father and mother heart speak most tenderly, and Holy Writ gives sanction and assurance. Besides the poems of Mr. and Mrs. Visher are others by Lucy Larcom, Elizabeth Akers Allen, William Cullen Bryant, Charles Kingsley, Leigh Hunt, Rebecca P. Utter, Emily C. Judson, Jean Ingelow and other child-lovers. Together they form a very rosary of blessing, told in tender, devout heart-yearnings for "the little soldier newly mustered in."

THE NATIONAL TEMPERANCE LEAGUE'S ANNUAL, issued by the National Temperance Publication Depot, London, is packed from cover to cover with facts concerning the progress of this reform over the seas, during the year past. The army of temperance workers in America is looking to the children of to-day for the victories of the future, and the following extract from the Annual Report of the United Kingdom Band of Hope Union sounds a kindred note of hope and prophecy: "The Juvenile Temperance Movement was never before so widespread, so strong in numbers, so cordially recognized and appreciated, nor so systematically organized as it is to-day. The successful methods of the past have been adapted to modern social and educational developments, and, through the zeal, persistence, and devotion of many thousands of workers throughout the kingdom, the results have proved such as to excite the deepest gratitude for all the past, and hopeful anticipations for the future."

THE MARTYRDOMS OF LITERATURE, by Robert H. Vickers; 456 pages; price, $2. Published by Charles H. Sergel & Co., Chicago.

This volume, while not presuming to be exhaustive, shows marks of no little erudition, and is a genuine and scholarly addition to bibliography. It contains, as one may say, the "memoirs" of the loved and lost of the bookdom of the past. The author, a man of downright earnestness, considers literature as a sacred treasure, and sees a burning wrong in the wholesale destruction of libraries, as noted on the pages of history. He holds up to sturdy rebuke the destroyer, whether he be Goth or Vandal, Greek or Jew, Christian or Pagan, Protestant or Papist. This impartiality and oneness of aim gives unity to a treatise which traverses the historic path from the formation of the Library of Osmandyas to the losses by fire in the Escorial at Madrid during this century—from the destruction of the books of the Magians by Alexander the Great to the riotous mobs which consigned to the flames the valuable collections of Lord Chief Justice Mansfield and scientific Joseph Priestley. While to the superficial reader the writer may seem to fail in drawing the line between religion and fanaticism, the broader mind discovers that the genuine and true spirit of Christianity and of all religions is throughout the book exalted, and bigotry, wherever found, is unflinchingly condemned.

THE DAILY NEWS ALMANAC FOR 1892 ought to be on the desk of every alert business man and woman, and is a valuable acquisition to any library. Aside from the statistical matter common to almanacs, it contains in brief, reliable information touching the events the past year in the historical, political, commercial and ecclesiastical world. Issued by the Chicago Daily News.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

RUM, RAGS AND RELIGION, or IN DARKEST AMERICA AND THE WAY OUT, by Rev. O. M. Owen, Binghamton, N. Y. 25 cents.

DRIFTWOOD: SKETCHES FROM REAL LIFE, by Agnes Hedenström Welin. Published by the National Temperance Publication Depot, London.

KNEASS' PHILADELPHIA MAGAZINE FOR THE BLIND, issued semi-monthly. N. B. Kneass, Jr., Publisher for the Blind, 219 Church St., Philadelphia.

A. B. C. OF SWEDISH EDUCATIONAL GYMNASTICS, by Hartvig Nissen. F. A. Davis, Medical Publisher and Bookseller, 1231 Filbert St., Philadelphia.

THE BETROTHAL, or WHY MARRIAGE IS A FAILURE, by Martha Baldwin Ensign. Published by the author, New York.

POEMS, by Juan Lewis, Washington, D. C.

TWELVE YEARS' WORK IN THE NIZAM'S DOMINIONS, C. B. Ward, Bombay.

Official Communications.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

President—FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Sec,—MRS. C. B. BUELL, Evanston, Ill.
Recording Sec.—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Ravenna, Ohio.
Assistant Rec. Sec.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Treasurer—ESTHER PUGH, Evanston, Ill.

For presidents of states and superintendents of departments, see Annual Leaflet, which will be sent by Mrs. Buell on application, inclosing a two-cent stamp.

WHAT WILL YOU DO?

To Superintendents of the Sunday-School Department, Superintendents of Literature, and Local Officers of the W. C. T. U.

GREETING:

The growing success attending the issue of the Temperance Sunday-School Lesson augurs a larger victory than has as yet been attained. The great demand for the last (January) number, which so gladdened the heart of the National superintendent of Sunday-school work, and all who have labored, prayed and watched for victory, should be followed by a united effort to not only hold what was gained, but to make still further advances.

A very attractive Sunday-school lesson has been prepared for Sunday, May 22, the leading thought of which is the manliness of Godliness. It is the joint work of Mrs. Helen G. Rice and Mrs. Mary Lowe Dickinson, and these names are sufficient to commend it to all. It is very attractive, and wherever introduced for the first time will prove an entering wedge for larger temperance effort. Every teacher and every pupil in ALL the Sunday-schools should be furnished with a copy. Local unions could do no better work than would be done by raising money to furnish their schools who fail to provide themselves with a supply.

The following liberal terms are made by the W. T. P. A., which issues the leaflet: For 100, 50 cts; 500, $2; 1,000, $3.50; 2,000, $6; 5,000, $12; add postage at the rate of 12c per 100. The Young Crusader and the Lesson will be sent on the following terms: For 100, $1; 500, $4.75; 1,000, $9; 2,000, $15; 5,000, $35; 8,000, $48. All orders between numbers named at the rate immediately preceding.

Order from the W. T. P. A., 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill., and in time for distribution in the Sunday-schools May 15, the Sunday preceding the Temperance Sunday, May 22.

Let each one do what is possible, with prayerful dependence upon Divine strength and much will be accomplished.

Yours for the rescue of childhood through the truth,

FANNY H. RASTALL,
Nat'l Sup't Dep't Literature.

N. B.—Send for sample copies and ALL ORDERS to 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

CALL FOR EASTERN WASHINGTON STATE CONVENTION.

To the Executive Committee, County and Local Unions:

The tenth annual convention of the Eastern Washington Woman's Christian Temperance Union will be held at Davenport, Wednesday and Thursday, May 11 and 12. A meeting of the executive committee shall precede and immediately follow the annual meeting. (These meetings will be held Tuesday afternoon, May 10, and on Friday, May 13.)

Art. III of the state constitution is as follows:

"The annual meeting shall be composed of the executive committee, one delegate-at-large for each organized county, and one for every fifteen members or fraction thereof of each local union, who have paid their annual dues into the state treasury at least one month before the annual meeting."

Dues must be paid the state treasurer, and delegates elected, at least one month before convention. State treasurer, Mrs. Lucy R. Berry, Walla Walla. Write Mrs. Mary G. Boswell, Colfax, Wash., concerning railroad rates. When you purchase your ticket procure your railroad certificate of the ticket agent, otherwise you will receive no reduction in fare. Names of delegates should be sent to Mrs. Jennie L. Green, Medical Lake. Vice-presidents and superintendents who cannot attend the annual meeting should send their reports to Mrs. Jennie L. Green, Davenport, Wash. Send the names of all who expect to attend the convention to Mrs. A. M. Oliver, Davenport, Wash., chairman of the com-

(Continued on page 13.)

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

mittee on entertainment. Sunday, May 1, is set apart as a day of special prayer for the temperance work and workers in Eastern Washington.

"And let us not be weary in well doing; for in due season we shall reap if we faint not."—Gal. 6: 9.

LUCY A. SWITZER, Pres.
JENNIE L. GREEN, Rec. Sec.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

In order to avoid misapprehensions and unpleasant complications that have done harm to the work in other years, also to protect the widening movement of the World's W. C. T. U., we feel constrained to make the announcement that no speaker, organizer or worker will be accepted in our respective countries until indorsed by the local temperance society in the town or city where such worker lives, and by the president or general officers of the country from which such worker comes.

FRANCES E. WILLARD,
Pres. World's W. C. T. U.

COUNTY CONVENTIONS OF THE LOYAL TEMPERANCE LEGION.

So far as known, Massachusetts was the pioneer in the holding of Loyal Temperance Legion county conventions, the first one having been conceived and planned by one of her bright county superintendents. This proved so much of a success that the state superintendent immediately adopted the plan, her county and local helpers entering into it with enthusiasm. The aim for several years past has been to have each county of Massachusetts hold one such convention annually, and those that fail to do this are the exception.

These conventions have proved one of the greatest helps in arousing in the children an enthusiasm for temperance, and in maintaining their interest in regular L. T. L. work. It is a great point gained when our boys and girls have learned to connect some of their very best times with temperance.

It is therefore very gratifying to find that such conventions have now become a feature of the L. T. L. work in several states; and it is with the hope that the plan will be adopted by all the other states as fast as the development of their L. T. L. work will permit, and that the anticipation of this plan will tend to hasten their development, that the following directions are submitted:

1—TIME: This will vary with the climate of different states. It has been found in Massachusetts that the Saturdays of May and June are better than later dates, since the children scatter as soon as the long summer vacation begins; also we find it desirable to precede, as far as possible, the numerous Sabbath-school picnics.

2.—PLACE: Ascertain what W. C. T. U. will be willing to invite the convention. No union need hesitate to extend such an invitation, for the work involved need not be great and the recompense will be large. The pleasure of the children will surely be sufficient reward, but to this must be added the value of such an object lesson to the town where they meet.

3.—INVITATIONS: The county superintendent should send an invitation to each Loyal Temperance Legion leader, urging that the Legion shall, if possible, attend as a whole, but if not possible that there shall be at least representation by delegates. She should ask that the children come equipped with banners, flags and badges, not forgetting their basket lunches; that each company be prepared to fill ten minutes (more or less according to the number of companies) on the program with exercises of its own choosing, including always a report of the company given by the juvenile secretary. She should name several selections from "Marching Songs," that shall be rehearsed by each company, for chorus singing at the convention. She should ask each leader to state in her response to the invitation the number that may be expected from her company, the time and manner of their arrival; also to give a list of her exercises for the program.

4.—PROGRAM: This may consist of brief devotional exercises, words of greeting, and a response, the contributions from the various companies, and one or more brief chalk talks or addresses, all interspersed with plenty of bright singing. Arrange to have everything possible done by the children instead of for them. Committees on resolutions and credentials (with all others that can in any way be utilized) should be appointed from the juveniles, with an adult chairman, if necessary. Where a grove or park is available it is desirable to put all the exercises into a morning session, making the rest of the day a picnic, otherwise there may be short morning and afternoon sessions with a long nooning. A street march, with full display of banners and flags, should be one feature of the day.

5.—LOCAL ARRANGEMENTS: These will include the securing of a hall or church for the exercises and a convenient place, either in or out of doors, for eating the basket lunches, obtaining permission for the street march where such permission is necessary, and an escort of L. T. L. children to meet their guests at the depot. Our hospitable W's or Y's have sometimes chosen to furnish the lunch, or they have provided lemonade, milk or ice cream as an addition to the basket lunches, or have treated the children to a free ride in the street cars, but none of these things are a necessary part of the hospitality.

6.—SPECIAL ITEMS: Sometimes reduction of fares can be secured from the railroads for those over twelve years of age; those under twelve always ride for half-price. Enough adults should always accompany the children to insure their safety and their good behavior. It is desirable to invite as guests Legions from outside the county, so situated that they could easily reach the place of meeting. The hours of holding the convention should be determined by consulting the time tables of the railroads to be used. When the trip can be made by carriage instead of cars it adds greatly to the children's enjoyment.

It will be understood that the above are only general directions, to be modified as may be desired. We have aimed to give directions for a model convention. Do not be deterred from beginning because the first attempts may seem crude. Begin as you are able, and work on towards perfection.

ORGANIZATION.

The L. T. L. companies of each county should be organized at their next convention into a County Loyal Temperance Legion (unless this has been already done), with a full corps of juvenile officers, who shall be under the supervision of the county juvenile superintendent. It is believed that the executive committee of each county W. C. T. U. will gladly welcome annually to its convention the juvenile secretary, who will there give her report.

CONSTITUTION FOR A COUNTY LOYAL TEMPERANCE LEGION.

ARTICLE I.

This organization shall be called the—— County Loyal Temperance Legion.

ART. II.

The object of this organization shall be to unite more closely the local companies so as to increase the interest of their members in the cause of temperance.

ART. III.

It shall consist of as many divisions as there are local companies in the county; these divisions shall be numbered according to their date of organization.

ART. IV.

Its membership shall be composed of the pledged members of the various divisions, who shall pay an annual fee of five cents each, unless otherwise voted. In case of the disbanding of any division, its members may still retain their standing in the county organization as members at large.

ART. V.

The W. C. T. U. county juvenile superintendent shall be the superintendent of this organization. The juvenile officers shall be elected annually, and shall consist of a president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer, who, together with the state, county, district and local superintendents, shall constitute an executive committee.

ART. VI.

The juvenile officers shall, under the supervision of the superintendent, discharge the duties common to such officers; the secretary shall also present her annual report to the convention of the county W. C. T. U., when invited by its officers to do so.

ART. VII.

The regular meetings shall take the form of annual conventions, the time and place of which shall be decided by the state, district and county superintendents. All L. T. L. children will be expected to attend these conventions, but only members of the county organization will be entitled to vote or to hold office.

ART. VIII.

All appropriations of county funds shall be made by vote of the executive committee, who shall report the same to the convention.

[Wherever L. T. L. representation by adult W. C. T. U. delegates in state conventions, upon payment of dues, can be secured from the state executive committee, the whole or a part of the county funds may properly be appropriated for this purpose.]

HELEN G. RICE, Nat. Supt.
ANNA A. GORDON, Asso. Supt.

SPECIAL OFFER
FOR 30 DAYS.

To introduce our High Grade garments through the country, we will make, to measure, the latest and most popular style of Spring Jacket (as per cut) Imported Clay Diagonal Worsted, or Corkscrew, satin-lined throughout, for $15.00

Regular price, to measure, $30
Usual Ready-made price, $25

We guarantee our garments to be Superior in Finish to any in the Market.

Write for samples, references and instructions.

REFERENCE:—Columbia National Bank, Chicago.

MANUFACTURER'S CLOAK CO.,
188 Wabash Av., - - Chicago, Ill.

The Woman's Land Association.

Christian and Temperance women in every state in the Union are investing in this new BUSINESS ENTERPRISE FOR WOMEN.

A FEW CLIPPINGS FROM LETTERS.

Mrs. N. B. E. IRWIN, 4th St., Jacksonville, Fla.:—"Inclose order for one share. Have been through Clarendon Hills, and have confidence in the increase of values there."

Mrs. E. MORGAN, Cobleskill, New York: "Inclose order for 4 shares. My husband is member of Troy Conference."

EMILY C. ROSS, Newport, Ky.: "Will take 1 share. Hope lot will be a beauty, and many others."

Miss TILLIE BRANDON, 107 State St., Chicago, Ill., says: "Will take one share. Am a member of the W. C. T. U."

Mrs. LUCIA E. DRAWYER, Geneva, Neb., writes: "Inclose order for one share. Am a strong Methodist and Temperance Worker. God bless you."

A Temperance Clause in each Deed. Shares sold only to women. Send at once for our 32-page catalogue (free) giving full particulars of the most promising WOMAN'S ENTERPRISE ever offered to the Christian and Temperance women of America. Address

THE WOMAN'S LAND ASSOCIATION,
116 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE ROLLERS
Beware of Imitations.
NOTICE AUTOGRAPH OF Stewart Hartshorn ON LABEL AND GET THE GENUINE HARTSHORN

The Woman's Manual of Parliamentary Law. Just the thing for every W. C. T. U. member. Plain instructions for the conduct of meetings. Just issued. Send 75c. to JUSTITIA PUB. CO., 161 La Salle St., Chicago.

BEAUTIFUL HANDS.
A jar of Dr. O. P. Brown's Tissue Builder will supple the joints and fingers—whiten and beautify the hands for elegant piano execution. Druggists or mail, $1. Sample box with ladies' paper illustrating Seven Ages Woman's Life, free by mail.
J. Gibson Brown, 47 Grand St., Jersey City, N. J.

THE CHARMING MEXICAN PRIMROSE is the Grandest of all New Plants. It is strictly a perpetual bloomer, as it is in flower at all times of the year, a good specimen showing always from ten to thirty large saucer-shaped blossoms, about three inches across, of a beautiful, bright, clear pink color, veined with scarlet and with a white center. The superb color, combined with airy grace and beautiful form, goes to make a flower which is in beauty perfection itself. Each blossom keeps perfect many days before fading, and when it drops, others are out to take its place, and this succession of beauty is continued from one year's end to another. The plant is a free grower, succeeding in any soil or situation. As a window plant it combines great hardiness and ease of culture with unsurpassed beauty and delicate loveliness, and is truly a plant which has no superior. In the open ground it grows freely and blooms profusely all summer, and, in fact, until winter is upon it. Early frosts do not injure it, and it blooms on until frozen solid or covered with snow. It is a plant whose merits of hardiness, ease of culture, perpetual freedom of bloom, and unsurpassed beauty, both in color and habit, are offset by no faults whatever. It is the one most desirable new plant for the whole world. FINE PLANTS, ALL READY to BLOOM, by MAIL POSTPAID, GUARANTEED to Arrive in Good Condition, 40 cts. each, 3 for $1, 7 for $2. Those ordering three or more plants may have a Manettia Vine free by asking for it.

THE TRUE MANETTIA VINE The most magnificent flowering vine in cultivation, and is loaded with brilliant flowers every day in the year. The fame of its marvelous beauty is world wide. Fine plants ALREADY BUDDED AND BLOOMING, 25 cents each, 3 for 50 cents.

NEW PEACOCK PANSY. A Pansy of superb and varied color, showing the glorious and luminous bronze blue seen only in peacock feathers. It is the finest colored strain of pansy ever seen. SEED PER PACKET, 25 CENTS.

SPECIAL OFFER For 60 cts. we will send by mail one plant each of Mexican Primrose, Manettia Vine and pk't Peacock Pansy. Two of each for $1.

Also the Following Extra Choice Collections by Mail Postpaid.

12 Extra choice mixed Gladiolus, flowering bulbs.. 25c	5 Grand Lilies, 5 sorts named, including Auratum. 50c
6 New Double Pearl Tuberoses, flowering bulbs... 25c	5 Grand Cacti, different sorts named..... 50c
5 Rare Chrysanthemums, 5 sorts named..... 50c	3 Different rare new perpetual blooming plants.. 50c
4 Lovely Tea Roses, white, pink, yellow and scarlet 50c	6 Pkts. each rare new Flower, and Vegetable seeds 50c

A GREAT OFFER. For only $3.00 we will send postpaid all the collections, Primrose, Manettia and Pansy offered above. Order at once, as these offers may not appear again.

OUR BRONZE BLUE CATALOGUE (A superb work of art in bronze blue) of FLOWER and VEGETABLE SEEDS, BULBS, PLANTS and RARE FRUITS, is the most beautiful and complete ever issued. 152 pages, hundreds of Elegant Engravings, Stipple Lithograph Covers and 7 beautiful large Colored Plates. We offer the finest standard varieties and novelties in Flower and Vegetable Seeds, Bulbs and Plants of all kinds and rare new Fruits. Also the greatest collection of rare Cacti, Flowering Shrubs, New Aquatic Plants, etc. Don't miss the Great Japanese Wineberry, Allsummer Raspberry, Water Hyacinth, Trailing Queen Fuchsia, Dwarf Orange, Mosquito Catcher Plant, Picture Rock Tomato, Stanley Potato, and hundreds of other Grand Novelties. THIS MAGNIFICENT CATALOGUE WILL BE SENT FREE TO ALL WHO ORDER THE MEXICAN PRIMROSE OR ANYTHING HERE OFFERED. Or for only 20 cts. we will send CATALOGUE, Sample Copy of the MAYFLOWER and a packet of PEACOCK PANSY SEED. We want agents in every town to take subscribers for our beautiful Monthly Horticultural Paper, THE MAYFLOWER, 50c. per year. Large Colored Plate with every number. Liberal premiums. Sample copy free. Address

JOHN LEWIS CHILDS, Floral Park, Queens Co., N. Y.

Our Children.

PUSSY-WILLOWS.

BY HARRIET FRANCENE CROCKER.

Dainty children of the spring,
Pussy-willows, thee I sing.
Soft and velvety thy fur;
Darkly brown thy branches are,
Swinging gently to and fro
Where the murmuring waters flow.

Children hail thee with delight,
Hold thee 'gainst their faces bright,
First-born blossoms of the year,
For thy early coming dear.

Soon will come the wood-flowers true,
Snowdrops, crocus, violet blue,
Dainty ferns of palest green,
But before them, thou art seen.

Pussy-willows, soft and fair,
Blooming in the crisp March air,
How I love thee bending low
Where the murmuring waters flow.

Haymaker, Pa.

THERE ARE SOME FOLKS.

There are some folks who always plead
The usefulness of brandy;
And in the house, "in case of need,"
They always keep it handy.

But is it right, or is it kind,
In this to tempt another?
Lest by and by we sadly find
That we have lost our brother.

These thoughts we may not put aside,
The question goes far deeper;
Let us not say, as Cain replied,
"Am I my brother's keeper?"

We may not drink, if by our deed
We make our brother stumble;
To our own steps let us give heed
Lest failure make us humble.

The weak and erring let us aid,
Till they grow firm and stronger—
The drunkard lovingly persuade
To touch the drink no longer.

So let us work while 'tis to-day,
Nor leave until to-morrow—
Some word of help or cheer to say,
Or lift some load of sorrow.

—British Women's Temperance Journal.

WHAT HAPPENED TO KO-KO ON APRIL FOOL'S DAY.

BY JULIA MILLS DUNN.

Tommy sat looking out of the nursery window upon the lawn with a look very like a pout on his chubby face. His mother, sitting at the opposite window, sewing lace on the baby's bib, kept on talking in the same sweet, bright way that mothers have, just as if Tommy was good-natured, too.

"You see, dear, to do as we would be done by is so easy to understand, that even the very smallest boy can be quite sure when he is doing right to others. It is the best part of religion, the real spirit of Jesus, and the most learned men in the world, with all their books and learning, can find nothing grander and better to live by."

"See Ko-ko!" cried Tommy, forgetting all his bad feelings at the sight of his favorite playmate.

Ko-ko was a big peacock that Tommy's uncle had given him, and the great, beautiful creature seemed to like Tommy and made friends with him at once. In the warm sunshine they would stroll about the lawn side by side, Ko-ko's lovely plumage of glittering blue and green and gold making a picture of changing, iridescent color that Tommy thought was the prettiest thing in the world. He would eat small lumps of sugar from Tommy's hand when no one else could get near him, and though Ko-ko strutted a good deal and seemed very proud of his fine coat, Tommy loved and admired him more than all his other pets, even his shaggy brown pony, that his papa bought him for his birthday present.

It was the last day of March The next day would be April Fool's day and Tommy had been telling his mother what a fine trick he was going to play on Hal Peyton, who was about Tommy's own age and lived next door.

"You never saw such queer faces as Hal makes, mamma," he had said, his chubby face dimpling with smiles at the recollection. "I gave him some of the bitter stuff out of papa's medicine cupboard and told him it was candy, and you ought to have seen him! We boys laughed till we cried, to see how funny he looked." And Tommy laughed aloud at the mere thought of it.

"Do you think you did right, Tom?" asked his mother. "Is that acting according to the Golden Rule?"

"Oh, well, it's all right on April Fool's day, mamma; we just have to play tricks then. If you don't the boys think you're not much of a boy, you see."

Tommy was trying very hard to convince his mother that the Golden Rule could be safely suspended one day, and so great was his anxiety to play a trick on Hal, that he could hardly wait till the next day, though he did not say anything more on the subject to his mother.

"Mothers are real good, just splendid sometimes," he admitted to himself, "but they don't know how it is with you when it comes to coasting, or April Fool's day tricks. Why, a boy just has to be like other fellows then."

So the next morning when his father and mother drove away with the baby in the carriage, and Tom sat on the steps watching them off he could hardly wait for them to get out of sight to begin his "fun," as he called it, with Hal.

But at last they were really out of sight, the cook had gone to market and Tom felt that now was his time. He would have liked to run after Ko-ko who was trailing his long glittering tail of rainbow colors over the green lawn, but he knew he must hurry if he would not be detected. He ran to the kitchen and got four small lumps of sugar, then through the hall to his father's office that was in a wing of the house and began looking around through the shelves among the bottles of medicine. His chubby hands shook so that he could hardly pour out the stuff into the little tin cup that he had brought to put it in. Once he thought he heard his father's step in the hall, and crept under the office table where the big cover fell nearly to the floor hiding him entirely. But no one came, so he crept out and in a few minutes the four sugar lumps, carefully sprinkled over with the powder he had taken from the bottle, were lying on the steps, as innocent looking sugar lumps as ever you saw. Then Tommy spied Hal at his window, next door.

"Halloo," called Tommy as carelessly as he could for the beating of his guilty little heart, and trying to look as if he never thought of being naughty in his life; "come over and play with Ko-ko and me."

"Caw, caw!" echoed Ko-ko, hoarsely, and it sounded so much like "come, come!" that both little boys laughed.

"Isn't he a beauty, though," said Tommy proudly. "I tell you, Hal, there never was such a cute fellow as Ko-ko," and then he ran into the house, thinking that Hal would surely take one of the lumps of sugar and eat it while he was gone. He went into the parlor to watch Hal from the window, but it took so long to fix the curtains to his liking, that when he looked out Hal was patting Ko-ko's crested head and the lumps were gone.

"How he likes sugar, don't he?" said Hal, as Tommy, feeling like a culprit, came down the steps. "He ate all those lumps so quick you couldn't say Jack Robinson."

It was a tearful, sobbing little boy that knelt at his mother's side that night to say his prayers. "I nev-er th-thought I should hurt dear Ko-ko, mamma, and n-now he's dead and I can never have him any more. And oh, mamma, if I had only thought of the Golden Rule in my treatment of Hal, I wouldn't have lost my Ko-ko."

On a large corner shelf in Tommy's room, placed there for that purpose, sits Ko-ko, his large brilliant tail spread out against the wall, and his bead eyes looking as bright as if he were a live bird and not a stuffed one.

Sometimes in the night Tommy thinks he hears his hoarse call but it is only the wild winter wind blowing down the chimney. Above Ko-ko on the wall is a framed motto that Tommy is making more and more the rule of his life, and sometimes when the moon shines into his window he can just make out the gilt letters, "Do unto others as you would that they should do unto you."

LOOK ON THE BRIGHT SIDE.

It is not only a wise and happy thing to make the best of life, and always look on the bright side for one's own sake, but it is a blessing to others. Fancy a man forever telling his family how much they cost him! A little sermon on this subject was unconsciously preached by a child one day.

A man met a little fellow on the road carrying a basket of blackberries, and said to him, "Sammy, where did you get such nice berries?"

"Over there, sir, in the briers."

"Won't your mother be glad to see you come home with a basket of such nice ripe fruit?"

"Yes, sir," said Sammy, "she always seems glad when I hold up the berries, and I don't tell her anything about the briers in my feet."

The man rode on. Sammy's remark had given him a lesson, and he resolved that henceforth he would try to hold up the berries and say nothing about the briers.—Domestic Journal.

What Shall We Call It?

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:—I could imagine the scores of bright eyes scanning the long list of names published in our column last week. Only a few of these have been suggested by more than one of you in the happy letters you have written. Among these names I find several, any one of which would make a capital heading for our "What Shall We Call It?" column. They are so good that I shall have to ask you children to help me decide. Would you not like to do this? I feel certain you would, and that this would be the nicest way to do it, so when you have decided which you like best, just take a postal card and write on it the name that you prefer and send to Aunt Jane, at THE UNION SIGNAL office. Here are the names: Aunt Jane's Cozy Corner, Cold Water Circle, Twilight Talks, Temperance Fireside, Our Rally Corner.

Now make your choice and send in your vote to

Your good friend always, AUNT JANE.

VERY MUCH INTERESTED.

I am very much interested in the "What Shall We Call It?" column. I think "Cozy Corner for Temperance Children" would be a nice name. It is so kind of the editor to let us little folks have a page all to ourselves.

I wish all the children in the world were for temperance. Would not the saloons have to go?

MYRTLE TOBEY (nine years old).

Herscher, Ill.

Yes, the saloons would and will have to go!

DEAR AUNTIE:—I wish to become one of your nieces. Mamma takes THE UNION SIGNAL, and I like to read "Our Children." Mamma has had two meetings at our house and gave a chalk talk. We hope to have an L. T. L. soon. I should think that "Aunt Jane's Cozy Corner" would be a good name for it. I am nine years to-day.

BESS L. ATWOOD.

Come up close in the corner, little niece, Aunt Jane receives you gladly. Such a favorite name! It has been proposed a dozen times.

SOFT-SHELLED NUTS.

22.

TRANSPOSITION.

I am a word of letters four,
A character of frightful mien.
Transpose me, and the mountain home
Of a wild animal is seen.
Transpose again and you will find
A useful piece of wood
Which placed along a boundary line
To farmers, does great good.

KATHRYN.

23.

ENIGMA.

My first is in white but not in brown;
My second is in village but not in town;
My third is in mouth but not in nose;
My fourth is in pansy but not in rose;
My fifth is in write but not in talk;
My sixth is in run but not in walk;
My seventh is in warm but not in cold;
My eighth is in new but not in old;
My ninth is in insect but not in bug;
My tenth is in carpet but not in rug;
To practice my whole a blessing 'twill be,
And some day the world will try it and see.

GRACE E. SHUMAN.

24.

CONNECTED WORD SQUARE.

```
        * * * *
        * * * *
        * * * *
* * * * * * * * * *
* * * *       * * * *
* * * *       * * * *
* * * * * * * * * * *
        * * * *
        * * * *
        * * * *
```

Upper square:—1, to affirm; 2, in a great degree; 3, first; 4, a ford.

Right hand square:—1, at this place; 2, Ireland; 3, the outside; 4, finishes.

Left hand square:—1, the southwest wind; 2, a tax; 3, idle; 4, a rustic pipe.

Lower square:—1, a native of Denmark; 2, at a great distance; 3, short sleeps; 4, first. MERCURY.

Answers in three weeks. Send all replies and original puzzles to Puzzle Editor, UNION SIGNAL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

ANSWERS TO PUZZLES PUBLISHED MARCH 10.

13. Be not drunk with wine, wherein is excess.
Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink.
Love worketh no ill to his neighbor.
If any man destroy the temple of God, him shall God destroy.
Look not upon the wine when it is red.
Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.

14. Am I my brother's keeper?

15. Dine, wine; lunch, punch; come, rum; frisky, whisky; pale, ale; begin, brandy or gin; small, alcohol; daughter, water.

Correct answers: Bessie R. Clayton; Ben McKie Rastall; Fred C. DePuy; Mabel Carpenter; Grace E. Shuman; Ajax; Eunice D.; Amy Woodbury; Marian and Myrtle Tobey; Faye Stewart; Bernice Butler; Della Lakin; Perry C. Chase; Laura P. Gates; Irwin Porter.

VAN HOUTEN'S COCOA

MR. PECKSNIFF.

"Best & Goes Farthest."

"Thank heaven, I Am quite well. May I be permited to say: Thank heaven and VAN HOUTEN? "Is it not his Cocoa That makes me feel so Well?"

PERFECTLY PURE.

VAN HOUTEN'S PATENT PROCESS

increases by 50 PER CENT. the solubility of the flesh-forming elements, making of the cocoa bean an easily digested, delicious, nourishing and stimulating drink, readily assimilated, even by the most delicate.

Sold in 1-8, 1-4, 1-2 and 1 lb. Cans. ☞If not obtainable, enclose 25 cts. to either VAN HOUTEN & ZOON, 106 Reade Street, New York or 45 Wabash Ave., Chicago, and a can containing enough for 35 to 40 cups, will be mailed. Mention this publication. Prepared only by the inventors VAN HOUTEN & ZOON, Weesp, Holland. a5.

PERFECTION

KEEPS FLOUR PERFECTLY DRY AND FREE FROM DIRT VERMIN ETC.

COMBINES BIN SIFTER PAN & SCOOP. AERATES AND PRESERVES FLOUR FROM MOLD

FLOUR BIN AND SIEVE

Avoids the great inconvenience of reaching into a barrel or sack. No scattering. Saves time and waste. Once tried you would not be without it for many times its cost. Send for circular.

Prices to hold { 25 lbs. $2.50 / 50 lbs. $3.00 / 100 lbs. $4.00 } Your dealer sells them or ought to. If he does not please write to us.

SHERMAN & BUTLER, Manufacturers, 26-28 W. Lake Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

"WHAT I EAT, THAT I AM."

GRANULA

AN INCOMPARABLE FOOD

Discovered by JAMES C. JACKSON, M. D., Founder of the Famous

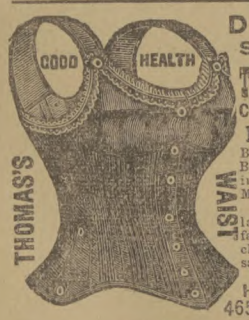
DANSVILLE SANATORIUM,

Being the life-giving principle of WHEAT. Easily digested; readily assimilated by all. "A universal favorite wherever known."

Trial Package 36 cents, by mail postpaid. Send for our Pamphlet (free).

GRANULA MFG. CO.
DANSVILLE, N.Y.

TOKOLOGY, a complete Ladies' Guide in health and disease. Mrs. G. W. C., of Detroit, Mich., writes: "Tokology treatment, under God, saved my life in childbirth, and gave me a strong, healthy baby girl. I would like to place a copy of your book in the hands of every woman in the land." Price prepaid $2.75. Sample pages free. Best terms to agents.
ALICE B. STOCKHAM & CO. 277 Madison-st. Chicago



DON'T WEAR STIFF CORSETS.

Thomas' Good Health Corset Waists BY MAIL. Ladies $1.50 Misses 1.25 Children. 60

Best for Economy, Health and Beauty. Buttoned or to clasp in front. Long or short waist. Material the very best.

Thousands mailed in the last year, with entire satisfaction to Patrons. Money cheerfully refunded if not satisfactory.

Agents wanted everywhere.
H. A. Thomas & Co., Manf'rs
465 W. Van Buren St. Chicago.

MISS BEACH'S
Curling Fluid

Keeps the hair in curl for days Innocent as cologne. A toilet necessity. Not sent on trial.

30,000 Ladies have Endorsed it

At druggists or prepaid 50c.
LADY AGENTS wanted.
DENISON CHEMICAL CO., 56 (H) LaSalle St., Chicago.

Publisher's Notes.

Bargains in Books.

Space on our shelves is exceedingly valuable on account of the ever increasing size of our stock. It is necessary therefore to remove all slightly soiled books and we make this an opportunity by which you can obtain our publications at about half the regular prices. The cover is generally all that is soiled, the inside is just as good as in new books. You can send for some of these to lend out to the neighbors, and thus do much good. Why not?

Bound in cloth or stiff covers	Reg. price.	Red. price.
Hygiene of the Home	$1.00	$ .50
Stories of the March	.75	.35
Marble Cross	.60	.35
How to Win	1.00	.60
The Year's Bright Chain	.50	.30
Frances Raymond's Investment	.50	.25
Driftwood	1.00	.50
High Caste Hindu Woman	1.35	.75
In paper covers:
Drill Manual	.20	.10
Helps for Health Meetings	.10	.06
Hints for "Y" Entertainments	.10	.06
Driftwood	.50	.25
Questions Answered	.25	.12
Purity Crusade	.25	.10
May Women Speak	.25	.12
Crusader Programs	.25	.15
Prohibition Program	.10	.06
Helping Hand	.10	.05
Chalk Talk Hand Book	.10	.06
Woman in the Pulpit	.25	.15
Duties of Women	.25	.15
Free Rum on the Congo	.25	.15
Crusader Series, Nos. 1, 2, and 3, each	.10	.06
Life of General Fisk	.15	.05
Prohibition Amend't Guide	.25	.15
Marching Songs, No. 2	.10	.06
Ye Hatchet Partie	.15	.05
Songs for Y. W. C. T. U.	.25	.20
K. D. Souvenir	.10	.06
Drink Chart	.10	.04
Temp. Annals	.25	.15
W. C. T. U. Order Book	.25	.15
Lesson Manuals, assorted	15 for	.25
Golden Keys	.25	.15
Bugle Notes for the Home	.10	.06

Postage prepaid. The supply is limited.
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

New Scripture Cards.

A stock of cards has just arrived and we take pleasure in describing and giving prices of same, as we believe our workers will gladly welcome the opportunity to obtain such direct from us instead of sending elsewhere.

The following are put up in packages of ten each:

No. 51, The Beatitudes	$
No. 52, Children's Promises
Price per package	10
" " ten packages	80
No. 53, Faithful and True
No. 54, Perfect Love
No. 55, These Sayings of Mine—I will
No. 56, Christian Army
No. 57, Christ the Good Shepherd
price per package	15
" " ten packages	1.20
No. 58, These Sayings of Mine—I am
No. 59, Fruits of The Spirit
No. 60, He Careth for You
Price per package	20
" " ten packages	1.60

The following are more highly colored and are specially designed for Sunday-school use. Ten sheets in a package.

No. 1, 40 cards (4 on a sheet)
No. 2, 40 cards (4 on a sheet)
No. 3, 60 cards (6 on a sheet)
Price per package	20
" " ten packages	1.75

All contain very pretty and appropriate floral decorations, and the texts have been carefully prepared in each series, on the subjects named above, thus making a sort of Bible Reading. Please order by number. We cannot send free samples. Send for a package at prices named and we are sure you will be pleased.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Now Ready.

The revised edition of "Thumb-nail Sketches," including Miss Willard's pen-outline of Miss Ames and her picture. The work has been reproduced under the direction of Miss Hood, Miss Ames' companion and friend, who will devote the proceeds to the Anchorage Mission, Miss Ames' favorite charity in Chicago. Orders sent will be promptly filled. Price 30 cts. per copy.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Milk Men and Milk Maids must have their tin cans, tin pans, and everything else faultlessly clean, and there is nothing half so good for such cleaning as

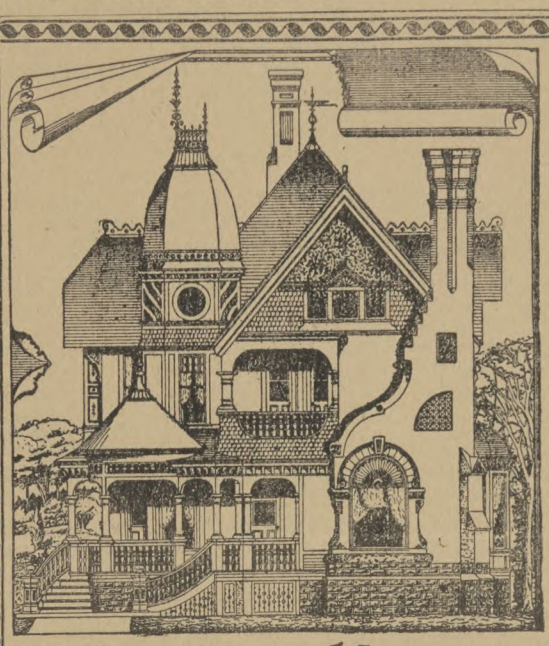
Gold Dust Washing Powder.

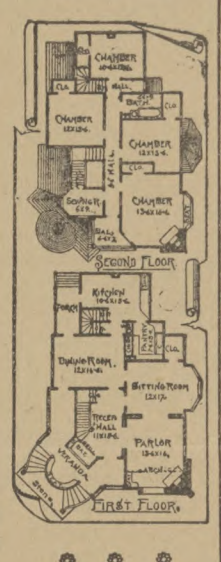
Housekeepers too have much to clean, and they can't afford to do without GOLD DUST WASHING POWDER, which makes things clean in half the time, and keeps them clean for half the money.

Gold Dust Washing Powder is sold by all grocers.

Less than ONE HALF the price of others.

N. K. FAIRBANK & CO., Sole Manufacturers,
CHICAGO, ST. LOUIS, NEW YORK, PHILADELPHIA, BOSTON, BALTIMORE, NEW ORLEANS, SAN FRANCISCO, PORTLAND, ME., PORTLAND, ORE., PITTSBURGH AND MILWAUKEE.





A Complete Home

should be so designed as to combine Comfort, Convenience, Durability and Style.

We design and furnish plans of just such homes, and publish The "Cottage Souvenir," a book of 172 pages, 8½ x 11 inches, containing a great variety of Designs and Plans of Artistic Dwellings —costing from— $500 to $10,000.

The Beauty and Completeness of these Designs, combining so many new features, has given this book a wonderful sale, and hundreds of Beautiful Homes are being built in all parts of our land from its designs. Price postpaid, $2.00. Prospectus and Sample Pages FREE.

Geo. F. Barber & Co.
— ARCHITECTS —
Knoxville, Tenn.

MASON & HAMLIN

Examine the new Mason & Hamlin Piano and Organ catalogues, sent free to any address. The Mason & Hamlin Grand and Upright Pianos are constructed on an Improved Method of Stringing, invented and exclusively used by Mason & Hamlin, by which remarkable purity of tone and great durability are secured, and phenomenal capacity to stand in tune. The Mason & Hamlin SCREW-STRINGER was patented in July, 1883, and is a veritable triumph for American ingenuity, being pronounced by experts "the greatest improvement of the century" in pianos. American Pianos and Organs are superior to all others. Mason & Hamlin Organs have long been the Standard the world over. The Mason & Hamlin Piano is fast becoming as famous as the Mason & Hamlin Organ, and illustrates that HIGHEST STANDARD OF EXCELLENCE which has always characterized the latter instrument, and won for it Highest Honors at all great World's Exhibitions since Paris, 1867. Illustrated catalogues free.

ORGANS PIANOS

Without under-estimating the improvements effected by others in pianos, the Mason & Hamlin STRINGER is claimed to be the greatest improvement of them all, and without it the highest attainable excellence is simply impossible.

MASON & HAMLIN ORGAN AND PIANO CO.
BOSTON. NEW YORK. CHICAGO.

LITTLE GEM FOLDING BAG.

The above cut represents a Folding Bag, so small when done up that it may be concealed in the hand or carried in the pocket, and strong enough to carry fifty pounds weight. Price, 50c. $3.50 per doz. Agents Wanted.

THE WORLD'S SPECIALTY CO.
Manufacturers of Novelties and Patented Articles.
ROOM 501, 95 DEARBORN ST., CHICAGO.

LADIES without business experience are making immense sales of Mme. MOCABE'S CORSETS AND WAISTS. Send for agents' terms.
St. Louis Corset Co., St. Louis, Mo.

☞ See Name "EVER READY" on back of each DRESS STAY you buy. Take none but them.
YPSILANTI DRESS STAY MFG. CO., Ypsilanti, Michigan.

LADIES Send to the Stevens' Dish Washing Machine Co., Cleveland, for descriptive circulars of this wonderful invention. No dish or wiping cloth used; truly a great blessing to the household. Agents wanted.

LADY Agents make big wages every day With our Ladies' and Children's Specialties. Over 100 different articles. Indispensable. Catalogue Free.
G. L. ERWIN & CO., Chicago, Ill.

LADY wanted, on salary, to sell Roses, Shrubs, &c Brown Bros. Nurserym'n, Rochester, N Y & Chicago

HOUSEHOLD NECESSITY. Agents make big profits. Catalogue (A) and particulars free. Cline Mfg. Co., 67 W. Washington St., Chicago.

LADY AGENTS CLEAR $10 PER DAY selling my garments for ladies & children Mrs. L. E. SINGLETON, Box 665, Chicago, Ill.

LADY Agents $5 a day sure; new rubber undergarment. Mrs. N. B. LITTLE, Chicago, Ill.

"Why stand ye all the day idle?"

10 DOLLARS PER DAY

is not easily made in these times, but it can be made working for us in any locality. We have agents that have made more than $25 per day, the whole secret is we have something that every housekeeper wants and will buy at sight without any urging. If agents prefer will pay a straight salary of $75 per month and expenses. Full particulars sent free to all points where we have not already secured an agent. Exclusive territory given. Can refer to any express company in Boston as to our integrity. Address, (in full,)
STANDARD SILVERWARE CO.,
Order Dept. 127 Boston, Mass.

45 sold in '88
2,288 sold in '89
6,268 sold in '90
20,049 sold in '91
60,000 will be sold in '92

A STEEL WINDMILL and STEEL TOWER every Three Minutes.

☞ These figures tell the story of the ever-growing, ever-going, everlasting STEEL AERMOTOR. Where ONE goes OTHERS FOLLOW, and we "Take the Country."

Though sold, we were unable to make all of the 20,049 Aermotors in '91. Orders often waited 8 weeks to be filled, but now we have vastly increased our plant and are prepared promptly to plant our increase in every habitable portion of the globe.

Are you curious to know how the Aermotor Co. in the 4th year of its existence, came to make many times as many windmills as all other makers combined? How we came to originate the Steel Wheel, the Steel Fixed Tower, the Steel Tilting Tower?

1st. We commenced in a field in which there had been no improvement for 25 years, and in which there seemed no talent or ambition, and none has yet been shown except in feeble imitation of our inventions.

2d. Before commencing the manufacture, exhaustive scientific investigation and experiments were made by a skilled mechanical engineer, in which over 5,000 dynamometric tests were made on 61 different forms of wheels, propelled by artificial and therefore uniform wind, which settled definitely many questions relating to the proper speed of wheel, the best form, angle, curvature and amount of sail surface, the resistance of air to rotation, obstructions in the wheel, such as heavy wooden arms, obstructions before the wheel, as in the vaneless mill, and many other more abstruse, though not less important questions. These investigations proved that the power of the best wind wheels could be doubled, and the AERMOTOR daily demonstrates it has been done.

3d. To the liberal policy of the Aermotor Co., that guarantees its goods satisfactory or pays freight both ways, and to the enormous output of its factory which enables it to furnish the best article at less than the poorest is sold for. For '92 we furnish the most perfect bearings ever put in a windmill, and have made an exhaustive revision of the Aermotor and Towers.

If you want a strong, stiff, Steel Fixed Tower—or if you want the tower you don't have to climb (the Steel Tilting Tower) and the Wheel that runs when all others stand still, that costs you less than wood and lasts ten times as long (The Steel Aermotor) or if you want a Geared Aermotor to churn, grind, cut feed, pump water, turn grindstone and saw wood, that does the work of 4 horses at the cost of one ($100), write for copiously illustrated printed matter, showing every conceivable phase of windmill construction and work, to the AERMOTOR CO. 12th and Rockwell Sts., Chicago, or 12 Main St., San Francisco.

GALVANIZED It is not enough to make portions of motor and Steel Tower are now galvanized after being completed, thus absolutely protected from rust and decay. leaves exposed, edges and is not a question of painting. The Steel Aer-

The Aermotor Pneumatic Water Supply System enables you to supply every part of your house with water without an Elevated Tank.

THE Total Abstinence Life Association
OF AMERICA

PAYS ALL HONEST LOSSES PROMPTLY and in FULL.

It furnishes to Total Abstainers the Cheapest and Most Reliable Insurance to be had.

New and liberal commissions will be paid to experienced agents in Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Michigan, California, Connecticut and Iowa.

It will pay you well to write to us.

THE TOTAL ABSTINENCE LIFE ASSOCIATION of AMERICA.
902-904 Royal Insurance Building,
CHICAGO, ILL.

DR. A. OWEN'S
ELECTRIC - BELT

Cures acute, chronic and nervous diseases without medicine. Send 6c. for sealed illustrated catalogue and sworn statements in English, German, Swedish and Norwegian, or Treatise on Rupture.

THE OWEN ELECTRIC BELT & APPLIANCE CO.

TRADE MARK.

Main Office and Only Factory, State-st., cor. Adams, Chicago, Ill. [The Owen Electric Belt Building]. Entrance on State-st. Office hours from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.; Sunday, from 10 a.m. to 12 o'clock. Tel. 2766. New York Office, 826 Broadway. The Largest Electric Belt Establishment in the World.

Webster's Original Unabridged Dictionary in 4 volumes, charges paid to any address in the United States, and a copy of Dr. A. Owen's Electric World for one year will be sent for $1.50. Address Dr. A. Owen's Electric World, 207, 209 State St., Chicago, Ill.

$50.00 A WEEK A bright, energetic man or woman wanted to take the sole agency for an article that is needed in every home and indispensable in every office. SELLS AT SIGHT, in town or country. $700 in 90 days and a steady income afterward. A "Bonanza" for the right person. Good jobs are scarce and soon taken. Write at once.
J. W. JONES, Manager, Springfield, Ohio.

COE & CONVERSE, Fort Atkinson, Wis.
Offer a large stock of best Fruit and Ornamental Trees, Vines and Plants adapted to the cold Northwest. Also choice Seed Potatoes. Send for descriptive priced Catalogue Established 1879.

Publisher's Dep't.

Do Not Forget.

This is to remind you that we have still for your use many valuable supplies, at an exceedingly low rate. Read and remember—or better still for future reference. It is good so long as supplies last.

Cut This Out

Wall pocket package No. 1, containing 48 Timely Talks, 42 Signal Lights, 16 Gospel Lights, 28 Loyal Leaflets, 18 Total Abstinence Leaflets, 12 copies of THE UNION SIGNAL, will be sent, postpaid, to any address, for 50 cts.

Wall pocket package No. 2, containing 18 Miscellaneous Leaflets, 12 Amendment Leaflets, 24 National Leaflets, 24 Assorted Leaflets, The Drink Chart, The Mill and the Still, and 12 copies of The Young Crusader will be sent, postpaid, to any address for 50 cts.

A beautiful W. C. T. U., or L. T. L. bookmark, made of celluloid with ribbon back, will be sent for 25 cts.

A catalogue of supplies will be sent to any address without charge.

A beautiful temperance souvenir, with lithograph illustrations, containing selections from the poets, will be sent for 50 cts.

Slumber banners, on ribbon, for guest chamber greeting, can be secured for 50 cts. each.

A prospectus of Readings for 1892 will be sent, postpaid, on request.

A Great Historical Chart and Map of the United States will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of $1.

"Chicago's Dark Places," a book to arouse the Christian to the conditions in our large cities, will be sent, postpaid, paper edition, for 35 cts. per copy; in cloth, 75 cts.

The new Y Manual, by Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, costs only 25 cts.

Thumb-nail Sketches illustrated—an outline of the career of the leading W. C. T. U. leaders in this country and elsewhere, especially valuable in placing or securing speakers, but better known and more valued as the last work of Miss Ames. Price 30 cents.

A fine life-size aquarelle-tint picture of Miss Willard for fifty cents.

Marching songs for Young Crusaders, price 10 cents.

Golden Keys, a kindergarten manual, price 25 cents.

Lovely souvenir W. C. T. U. spoons at various prices. Send for circular.

Lady Gay and Her Sister, a delightful story book for little folks Price 75 cents.

Miss Willard's last address 2 cents per copy, 10 copies for 15 cents.

Back numbers of THE UNION SIGNAL for distribution for $1 per 100.

Back numbers of The Young Crusader for distribution, 75 cents per 100.

THE UNION SIGNAL, Oak and Ivy Leaf and The Young Crusader (with quarterly Sunday-school lesson supplement) one year for $1.30.

THE UNION SIGNAL and Our Day, the only reform magazine published, one year for $3.

Our Day, a monthly magazine devoted to reform, one year $2.50.

Well, we cannot enumerate all. Read what is said in these columns every week. Send for catalogue and address all inquiries and orders to

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

To-morrow is Her Birthday.

"I wish I could send a gift to my friend. Her birthday is to-morrow. But I really think I cannot afford anything she would care for."

"Why, did you not understand that the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association has a fine stock of cards and booklets ranging in price from a few cents to a dollar each, any one of which would be a pleasant reminder of affectionate regard. I think it is lovely to be able to say, 'You are not forgotten' at so small an expense. Send for their catalogue, and do not allow such regret to creep in on another occasion of this kind."

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

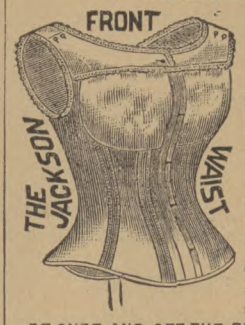
A New Method.

We have to submit a new method for interesting those not already enrolled as subscribers to THE UNION SIGNAL, the paper that educates along the line of protection to character and home. Will all interested send for information to this office?

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Send for Color Samples and Price List. Patented February 2, 1886. Examine closely. Stamp on inside of Waist.

TAKE NO OTHER.



THE GENUINE
JACKSON
CORSET WAISTS

ARE MADE ONLY BY THE
JACKSON CORSET CO., Jackson, Mich.

The manufacturer's name is printed upon the boxes, and stamped upon inside of clasp in each waist. They are the most popular articles of the kind now on the market. You should have one of them.

BE SURE AND GET THE RIGHT THING. IF YOUR DEALER HASN'T IT, SEND $1.25 FOR SAMPLE.

One-third Your Life is Spent in Bed!

NO ODOR — COLD BLAST — NO DUST — NO QUILLS — CHICAGO

The Art of purifying Feathers for Bedding purposes has been the subject of close study for many years, and has reached its highest development in the COLD BLAST PROCESS, by which all foreign matter, dust and the causes of odor are eliminated, and the Feathers rendered pure, clean and sweet, as well as permanently buoyant, while retaining their Feathery softness. FEATHER PILLOWS MADE OF THESE ARE HEALTHFUL. Watch for Trade Mark. Your dealer probably keeps them. If not, address

THE COLD BLAST FEATHER CO.
MAKERS OF Faultless Bedding. CHICAGO.

FREE For 30 Days. Wishing to introduce our CRAYON PORTRAITS and at the same time extend our business and make new customers, we have decided to make this Special Offer: Send us a Cabinet Picture, Photograph, Tintype, Ambrotype or Daguerotype of yourself or any member of your family, living or dead and we will make you a CRAYON PORTRAIT FREE OF CHARGE, provided you exhibit it to your friends as a sample of our work, and use your influence in securing us future orders. Place name and address on back of picture and it will be returned in perfect order. We make any change in picture you wish, not interfering with the likeness. Refer to any bank in Chicago. Address all mail to THE CRESCENT CRAYON CO. Opposite New German Theatre, CHICAGO, ILL. P. S.—We will forfeit $100 to anyone sending us photo and not receiving crayon picture FREE as per this offer. This offer is bonafide.

PEATS THE
WALL PAPER
MERCHANT CHICAGO

Retails all grades of WALL PAPER of the newest designs and latest colorings in small quantities; many patterns cheaper than your home dealer can buy them.

GOOD PAPER, 3c. GOLD PAPER, 5c.

Handsome parlor paper 10—12½—15c per roll with wide border and ceiling to match.

If you intend to use any WALL PAPER whatever send 10 cents for postage on samples and his guide "HOW TO PAPER" will be sent free. Agents sample books $1.

See his samples before you buy.

ALFRED PEATS, Wall Paper Merchant,
136-138 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

WOODBURY'S FACIAL SOAP
For the Skin, Scalp and Complexion. The result of 20 years' experience. At Druggists or sent by mail, 50c. A Sample Cake and 128 page Book on Dermatology and Beauty, Illustrated; on Skin, Scalp, Nervous and Blood Diseases and their treatment, sent sealed, 50c. Disfigurements, Birth Marks, Moles, Warts, India Ink and Powder Marks, Scars, Pittings, Redness of Nose, Superfluous Hair, Pimples, etc., removed. Consultation free, at office or by mail.
JOHN H. WOODBURY, Dermatological Institute,
125 West 42nd Street, New York City.

BUY A SUMMER HOME ON THE SHORES OF
Imperial Lake Geneva, Wis.

We offer in parcels of 100 feet and upward BEAUTIFUL RESIDENCE SITES. All prices, all sizes and easy terms.

GRAND TERRACE ADDITION

For plats and further particulars address PRATT BROTHERS, 508 Chamber of Commerce, cor. Washington and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.

5000 LADY AGENTS WANTED FOR
DARKNESS AND DAYLIGHT
or LIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF NEW YORK LIFE

A WOMAN'S thrilling story of Gospel, Temperance, and Rescue work "In His Name" in the great under-world of New York. By Mrs. HELEN CAMPBELL. Introduction
By Rev. Lyman Abbott, D.D.

A wonderful book of Christian love and faith. 250 remarkable illustrations from flash-light photographs of real life. 81st thousand. 5,000 more Agents Wanted,—Men and Women. $200 a month. ☞ Experience and capital not necessary, for We Teach All. Give Credit and Extra Terms, and Pay Freights. Outfit free. Write for Circulars to A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

PURE GUM RUBBER GOODS
Of Every Description; also,
Mackintosh Clothing;
also, Japanese Tissue,
For Mending Without Needle or Thread,
ELASTIC TIP CO.,
Headquarters 152-154 Lake St., Chicago

BAKER'S COCOA
Is ABSOLUTELY PURE. Unlike the Dutch Process, no Alkalies or Dyes used

VOSE & SONS PIANOS
EXCEL IN BEAUTY, TONE AND TOUCH.

ASTHMA
WORST CASES CURED TO STAY CURED IF UNCOMPLICATED BY ORGANIC DISEASE.
Incurable cases declined.
WE WANT NAME OF EVERY ASTHMATIC.
Examination free by mail.
P. HAROLD HAYES, M.D.
BUFFALO, N. Y.

DR. SYKES' SURE CURE FOR CATARRH — Has cured many cases pronounced hopeless by physicians. Send for Free Book 'Common Sense Talk' and numerous testimonials. They will convince you.

Taken internally and used locally with Insufflator. At Druggists or per mail, $1.50.

DR. SYKES' SURE CURE CO., 103 STATE ST. CHICAGO.

F. P. VAN VALKENBURGH, Former Associate Physician and Surgeon to the Old People's Home, 3858 Indiana Avenue, Chicago, also examining Physician for the New York Life Insurance Co., Cures Drunkenness, Morphine, Opium, and destroys the desire for Tobacco. Cures guaranteed. Correspondence solicited. Reference: Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Office, 103 State-st. Chicago

MALE AND FEMALES MAKE $3 to $5 A DAY at home working for us. Send your name on a postal card for particulars and Free Sample. Hobb's Medicine Co., Chicago, Ill.

BEST PAYING THING for Agents is our PHOTOGRAPH FAMILY RECORD PICTURE. We give you liberal terms. Address Dept. G
C. P. CORY & CO., 51 & 53 Jefferson St., Chicago

DEAF NESS AND HEAD NOISES CURED by Peck's Invisible Ear Cushions. Whispers heard. Successful when all remedies fail. Sold by F. Hiscox, 853 B'way, N.Y. Write for book of proofs FREE

PILES Remedy Free. INSTANT RELIEF. Final cure in 10 days. Never returns; no purge; no salve; no suppository. A victim tried in vain every remedy has discovered a simple cure, which he will mail free to his fellow sufferers. Address J. H. REEVES, Box 3290, New York City, N.Y.

ECZEMA I NEVER FAIL to CURE
Add DR. W. H. ROSS
Grand Rapids, Mich.

PARALYSIS CURED without medicine. Rheumatism, Spinal Diseases and Dropsy easily cured. Address
Dr. C. I. THACHER, 6, Central Music Hall, Chicago, for a valuable book FREE to all.

RUPTURE A Positive Radical cure at Home. (Sealed) Book giving full particulars sent free. Write Dr. W. S. Rice, Box U Smithville, Jeff. Co., N. Y.

LINCOLN TEA. Guaranteed to cure Constipation, Liver and Kidney trouble. Blood and Complexion Purifier. Send for sample. Sold by all Druggists.
McCLURE DRUG CO., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

ALUMINUM SOUVENIR
Charm (dime size) with the Lord's Prayer coined in smallest characters, and strung on blue silk ribbon, sent free to any one FREE sending 10 cents for sample copy of The St. Louis Magazine. Aluminum is the wonderful new metal, bright as silver, light as wood, strong as steel, will not tarnish.
St. Louis Magazine, 901 Olive St., St. Louis, Mo.

MY WIFE SAYS SHE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT FOR THE MONEY. $12 Buys a $65.00 Improved Oxford Singer Sewing Machine; perfect working reliable, finely finished, adapted to light and heavy work, with a complete set of the latest improved attachments free. Each machine guaranteed for 5 years. Buy direct from our factory, and save dealers and agents profit. Send for FREE CATALOGUE.
OXFORD MFG. COMPANY, DEPT 20, CHICAGO, ILL.

MILLER'S HOTEL New York City, 39 West 26th St. A Prohibition Home. Patronized by W. C. T. U. workers visiting New York. Turkish, Electric, Roman Baths.
Address. CHARLES H. HAYNES, Prop.

REAL ESTATE Looking for a HOME or an investment where you can double your money? ELLSWORTH the new temperance suburb of Chicago offers both. Write to ELLSWORTH LAND ASS'N, Room 41, 81 Clark St., Chicago.

103 E. ADAMS ST. BORSCH-OPTICIAN CONSULT US ABOUT YOUR EYESIGHT SATISFACTION GAURANTEED

A LADY WANTED
in each locality to manage Toilet Parlor at home; we obtain names, send circulars. $5 to $15 weekly. Our Toilet Art Book Free. Send stamp. SYLVAN TOILET CO., Port Huron, Mich.

THE UNION SIGNAL

WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION — FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

Vol. XVIII.—No. 14.] CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, April 7, 1892. [Price $1.00 per Year in Advance.

Mrs Ursula D. Hettick 2419 19th st 9292

THREE QUESTIONS.

How much would the majority of drunkards give to be cured of their thirst for liquor?

How many drunkards are there in the United States?

What would be the income of a great Remedial Institute, from which 99 out of every 100 drunkards were discharged cured within four weeks?

These questions are asked for a purpose. They concern you if you have,

(1) A dissipated friend to save, or

(2) Money to invest;

Because

(a) Alcoholism, opium-eating and the tobacco habit can be cured.

(b) THE NATIONAL BICHLORIDE OF GOLD INSTITUTE in the city of Chicago is demonstrating this glorious fact every day in the year.

(c) The methods, peculiar to itself, include the use of Bichloride of Gold combined with other remedies and supplemented by heathful, moral and Christian influences.

(d) It has the strong support of a great religious and temperance reform element.

(e) It already owns magnificent property in Chicago as shown herewith, and proposes to erect a much larger and in every way complete institute near one of the Chicago parks.

(f) It is incorporated with authorized capital of $500,000. In order to carry out its plans 4,000 shares of capital stock at $25 a share, paid up and non-assessable, are offered for sale.

(g) This presents an opportunity for persons of small means to invest in an enterprise which is sure to give the most gratifying returns, both in the work accomplished and the profits earned. Shares will be sold to be paid for in $5 monthly instalments.

(h) Preference will be given to persons having friends who are subjects for treatment, and special arrangements will be made on their behalf. Particulars on application.

(i) Branch institutes will soon be opened at various points throughout the United States and Canada, each paying tribute to the Company; this means large dividends to stockholders.

(j) Of course the value of these statements depends very largely upon the character of the men engaged in the enterprise. Upon this point the most careful examination is courted. Dr. Mark M. Thompson, founder of the institute and president of the company, is a man who has made the cure of drunkenness the study of his life, is at the head of the project. Walter Thomas Mills, the well-known temperance lecturer, is the secretary. Standing behind and helping it forward are: Bishop Samuel Fallows, D. D., Miss Frances E. Willard, Rev. Dr. F. A. Noble, Rev. Dr. J. Wolfenden, Rev. W. T. Meloy, Judge James N. Orr, A. G. Beebe, M. D., R. N. Hall, M. D., Gen. C. H. Howard, Editor of Farm, Field and Stockman, Gen. S. M. Singleton, President Total Abstinence Life Association of America, and many others.

The National Medical and Moral Temperance Association, of which the above named parties are officers, work in connection with the National Bichloride of Gold Co. They have just made arrangements to aid inebriates to treatment, who may not be able at the outset to pay for treatment.

THOSE WHO INVESTIGATE ARE CONVINCED OF THE GENUINENESS OF THE WORK AND BUY STOCK. And why should they not? That the stock will pay very large dividends is unquestioned. Patients are flocking to the Chicago institute daily (both men and women), and are finding sure deliverance.

One clergyman, after thorough investigation of Dr. Thompson's Bichloride of Gold Treatment, says:

"I am convinced that Dr. Thompson has won from Nature—nay, from the God of Nature, the great secret of the medical cure of inebriety, but the patient should, after treatment, put himself within the right moral and Christian conditions. This is a special feature of Dr. Thompson's plan."

It is a well known fact that a certain doctor has made over $1,000,000 during the past year by the treatment of drunkards. He is not in sympathy with Christianity, and he does not see the necessity of surrounding his patients with the restraints and help which the church can afford them.

CONVINCING.

In order to show how, and in what sums stock is being taken, we give extracts from a few of the many letters which have already been received:

HAS CONFIDENCE IN THE CURE, THE DOCTOR AND THE OFFICERS.

"I know both Dr. Thompson and your treasurer, Mr. Townsend, and have confidence in the treatment. I will take four shares. Enclosed find $20. J. M. B."
Tabor, Ia.

WILL INVEST AND HELP IN THE WORK.

"Enclosed find money order for $30, payment on six shares. I will be glad to act as your agent. J. Z."
Port Byron, Ill.

The National Bichloride of Gold Institute Building, just opened in Chicago, Ill., corner of West Monroe St. and Hoyne Av. This building and the ground it stands on is the property of the National Bichloride of Gold Co. For terms of establishing branch institutes, address the Company.

FOUR INSTEAD OF ONE.

"I have received and investigated your pamphlet and feel satisfied with it. I will take four shares instead of one. MISS M. A."
Wooster, O.

PHYSICIANS INVEST AND BECOME OUR AGENTS.

"I will take two shares. Enclosed find payment. I will also act as your agent. M. M. C., M. D."

MINISTERS RESPOND.

"I enclose $1 to secure four shares of your stock. I will send balance as soon as contract is received. REV. E. B. F."
Babylon, N. Y.

$1 TO SECURE TWO SHARES.

"Please reserve two shares for me. D. M. S."
Pulaski City, Va.

$5 TO SECURE ONE SHARE.

"Enclosed find check for $5 on account of one share of stock. Balance $20 will be sent after the 1st proximo. J. J. H."
Astoria, N. Y.

"Your pamphlet received to-day. I will take ten shares of your stock. Enclosed find my check for first payment. O. H."
Providence, R. I.

CONSTANTLY INCREASING, 1, 2, 5, 10.

"I will take one share. Enclosed find $25. F. W. D."
Chicago, Ill.

"Herewith find first payment on two shares. J. E. M,"
Chicago, Ill.

"Enclosed find $25, first payment on five shares. MISS J. E. T."
Chicago, Ill.

"Enclosed find $50, first payment on ten shares. MRS. C. A. H."
Chicago, Ill.

"I spent two days at Chicago investigating the work of Dr. Thompson at the National Bichloride of Gold Institute, and not only became convinced of the genuineness of the work, but decided to do all I could to promote the sale of stock and aid in sending men for treatment. REV. G. T. HOLCOMBE."
Kalamazoo, Mich.

FROM BISHOP SAMUEL FALLOWS.

"In answer to the many inquiries coming to me regarding Dr. Thompson's Bichloride of Gold Treatment for Drunkenness, the Opium and Tobacco Habits, I invariably answer, It is safe, sure and speedy. There is no doubt, there can be no doubt about it. It is the grandest medical triumph of the age. The results are marvelous!
SAMUEL FALLOWS."

"I am not only convinced that Dr. Thompson's Bichloride of Gold treatment will accomplish all that is claimed for it, but I am also satisfied that the stock of the National Bichloride of Gold company offers a safe investment which is sure to pay large dividends.
Philadelphia, Pa. WM. G. HARLEY."

HAS KNOWN DR. THOMPSON FIFTEEN YEARS.

"In regard to inquiries which are being made as to the treatment of inebriety by the National Bichloride of Gold Company it gives me pleasure to say that I have investigated the same and am satisfied of the thoroughness and value of the work done. It also gives me pleasure to say that I have known Dr. Thompson personally for about fifteen years and can state that any one intrusting their case to him will find themselves in the hands of a thoroughly competent, Christian physician and gentleman. Yours truly, (Signed) GEO. B. TOWNSEND."

WHAT THE RESCUED SAY.

We give brief extracts from a few of the scores of testimonials of those who have been treated and cured. These men have stood firm from five to eight months.

"It gives me great pleasure to make a statement of my case for the benefit of your new company, in relation to my intemperate habits and the wonderful cure that has been made by your Bichloride of Gold treatment.

"I wish to say to the world, as I have often told you, that I was a most notorious drunkard for twenty-eight years; the longest I was sober, at any one time, was ten weeks, when I was under a vow to my priest, but every minute of that time I had an intense desire for stimulants. I was unable to work, and my reputation for drunkenness so hard that no one wished to employ me. My last great debauch lasted five months, in which I neither ate or slept in a natural way. It was in this hopeless state that I went to the free clinic at one of the medical colleges, where I found Dr. Thompson prescribing. The Doctor at once recognized my condition, and said he would cure me of my drunkenness. It was with much reluctance that I allowed him to try to cure me. The treatment was tonic and hypodermic. The Doctor gave me constant care the first day or two, as I was in such a nervous condition as to demand it. About the third day my condition was greatly improved. Since that time I have never desired the vile stuff, but have come more and more to despise and loathe it as the days of happiness and prosperity go by. My good wife, who had lost all hope of my reform, and was well nigh crushed with grief and want, now joins me in thanking God and Dr. Thompson for a perfect cure. JAMES CALLAHAN."
Chicago, Ill.

"Dr. M. M. Thompson.—DEAR SIR:—In September, 1891, I began taking your Bichloride of Gold treatment. I had been a more or less hard drinker for nineteen or twenty years, and suffered greatly from its effects. After taking your treatment for three days, I lost all desire for liquor, and at the end of three weeks was perfectly well, and have not drank any since. I feel that I am entirely cured, and cheerfully recommend any one who is suffering in the same way to go to Dr. Thompson." JOH. AUG. FLENSBURG.
Chicago, Ill.

"GENTLEMEN:—In answer to your inquiries regarding Dr M. M. Thompson's gold cure and my former condition, I wish to say: I had been a very heavy drinker for twenty years. The last seven years I had been drunk nearly all the time. When I went to Doctor Thompson last fall I was unable to hold my job or to do a day's work. I had gone so far as to neglect my family and lose all interest in everything; my debauchery had become so great that I was more like a beast than I was like a man.

"The next day after I begun treatment I went to work, and the third day I lost all desire for whisky, and, thank God, it has never returned. I work among men who 'rush the can' all day and who offer me beer and whisky, but I have no desire for it.

"I believe Doctor Thompson's treatment is perfectly safe, and judging from the large number I have seen cured by him and the fact that I have known no failures I believe it to be SURE AND PERMANENT.
Chicago, Ill. GERALD J. MORE."

"To whom it may concern:

This is to certify that I was addicted to the liquor habit for twelve years, and during the past two or three years I have been entirely unable to control my appetite for drink, at times being unconscious of my acts. September last, some of my friends, who had heard of Dr. M. M. Thompson's gold treatment for inebriety, persuaded me to take it, and as I was entirely willing to be cured, I placed myself under his charge, but without the least confidence in his ability or the ability of any one to cure me, simply doing so to please my family. In a few days after commencing to take this treatment, I was surprised to find I cared nothing for drink, and after three weeks was discharged as cured. It is now some five or six months since I stopped this treatment, and still the old appetite has not returned, nor is the sight of liquor in any form a temptation to me; life now seems brighter and better, my ambition has returned, and I am altogether a new man.
Very truly yours, H. CRAWFORD."

The full address of these parties and others cured, is given in our pamphlet. Send for it.

Send any amount you please to secure as many shares of stock as you wish to purchase. Remember, shares are only $25 each at present, and are non-assessable. This stock will undoubtedly be worth many times the present value soon, as branch institutes are being established. Stockholders participate in all profits. Do not fail to send for pamphlet, but if you are wise send a small amount to secure shares, as they will soon all be taken.

Address NATIONAL BICHLORIDE OF GOLD CO.,
17 to 21 Quincy St., Chicago, Ill.

Our Library Table.

A MONODY TO A FATHER'S MEMORY, by Sarah P. Morrison, is a collection of poems inspired by a reverent, loving memory of the dear one "gone before." Riverside Press, Cambridge, Mass.

Thomas Whittaker, 2 and 3 Bible House, New York, has just issued two attractive booklets, MARY, THE MOTHER OF JESUS, by Elizabeth C. Vincent, a tender tribute to the Mater Dolorosa; and IN THE TIME OF SICKNESS, by Rev. George Hodges, an excellent sermonette on the lessons to be learned and profit to be gained in the seclusion of the sick room.

Murray Montague contributes to the steadily growing library of temperance literature a good story. A MODERN TRAGEDY tells some oft-told truths in new ways, and makes not a few strong points in the interest of the cause. S. W. Barrows & Co., Hartford, Conn.

Mrs. Emily Huntington Miller contributes to the collection of Easter souvenirs a tiny volume in white and gold, entitled FOR THE BELOVED. It is composed of eight poems, breathing soul comfort to those who meet the Easter morn from the shadow of death. In this world, ever sorrow-touched as hearts must be, there is a continual outreaching for the things which can in any way carry the balm of comfort to suffering ones, and these poems by Mrs. Miller are eloquent of the truest comfort of God, while > "——still with patient love He waits

> Till, sorrow's tears all shed,
> We creep like children to His arms,
> And so are comforted."

For sale by Cranston & Stowe, Chicago. Price 25c.

A well-written epic by a modern poet is something to be treasured. Such an one is ZULULU, THE MAID OF ANAHUAC, by Hannah A. Foster, the W. C. T. U. bard of Ohio. Locating the scene of her plot in central Mexico, where

> "Old Popocatepetl lay,
> His knees enwrapped in green and gray
> Thick-woven, and his hoary head
> High-pillowed and cloud-canopied,"

Miss Foster has woven, out of the rich history of those past American races, a story which for skillfully wrought plot, stirring romance, and beauty of narrative, is certainly exceptional. The epic is not only poetic, but is thoroughly readable from first to last, holding the attention unabated and arousing keenest enthusiasm and admiration for the winsome, courageous heroine, Zululu.

Let a few quotations speak for the terseness as well as the beauty of language and thought:

> "Ungenerous judgments dwell not with the great;
> Suspicion speaks a littleness of mind."

> "Power is deed when duty strikes the hour."

> "Seems it so difficult to rest
> A little in the shadowed nest
> Of love unseen? So hard to stand
> In silence, holding fast the hand
> Omnipotent? Shall doubt or fear
> Disquiet whom the gods hold dear?"

> "Where lies in man the boundary line
> Between the human and divine,
> Both having place and unison
> In form earth-wrought and breathed upon
> By God? Yet dust is only dust!
> A clayey casket which the rust
> Of time eats through—the body is;
> And life is life—eternity's
> Co-equal."

G. P. Putnam's Sons, 27 W. Twenty-third street, New York City.

THE OPAL QUEEN, by Eliza B. Swan, is a story with an unusual amount of quaint originality. Its heroes and heroines move in those circles of wealth and high art-culture which make the shifting scenes of life so fair to look upon. The strongest character touches in the book lie in those of the Opal Queen herself,—whose rare spirit never loses its beauty, even when the golden setting of wealth is rudely torn away, but like the famed jewel whose name she bears, reveals even richer depths of loveliness than before. Detached from the story, but synchronously belonging to it is an entertaining history of the "Monboddo" school of art.

Published by Robert Clarke & Co., Cincinnati.

The many warm friends of Bishop Vincent have welcomed the monograph entitled, MY MOTHER. He calls the little volume AN APPRECIATION, and none but a tender, high appreciation of that dearest earthly tie could so beautifully portray the mother-character of Mary Vincent. The sketch is written "that some mothers who never knew thee, and to whom we, who did know and love thee, may not much longer tell the story, may be helped in some measure to be to their children what thou wast and art to us who still, with abounding love and with tears of joyful gratitude, call thee Mother!" Flood & Vincent, Publishers, Meadville, Penn. Price 35 cents.

ECCLESIASTICAL AMUSEMENTS, by Rev. E. P. Marvin, is a strong, timely protest against the fairs, entertainments and festivals which do not strengthen, but on the contrary undermine in subtle, unsuspected ways, the spiritual life of the church. "No compromise" must be the motto of the church of Christ, keeping herself unspotted from the world, and her soul-life pure and strong to fight the great battles before her. The book is worthy of high commendation.

A. W. Hall, Publisher, Syracuse, N. Y. Card-board, 25 cts; pamphlet edition, 10 cts.

THE DEATH PENALTY, by Andrew J. Palm, is an earnest presentation of a topic too often forced upon public notice by the columns of the daily papers, wherein the unflinching pen of the reporter outlines with repulsive exactness the execution of the death penalty upon some victim of the law. The author does not seek to convince his readers by a sentimental essay that shall move to nothing beyond mere sensational sympathy, but strikes at the old foundations upon which the death-penalty has been established, well-directed blows from the sledge hammer of facts. If the advocates of life-taking for the crime of murder would give THE DEATH PENALTY a careful reading, they must, if honest with themselves, acknowledge the error of their belief.

G. P. Putman's Sons, 27 W. Twenty-third St., New York.

"Can you lend me a story book? One that will rest me," is a wish often uttered by young people who are hurried along relentlessly by this busy world. The story of MEGDA by "Forget-me-Not," (Emma Dunham Kelley) is one of these desirable, restful books, bright, natural, full of fun and full of earnest, helpful, truest living for Christ. It is a book one wants to share—just the kind for warm firesides, long spring afternoons, or summer hammock times.

James H. Earle, 178 Washington street, Boston, Mass.

We have received from the author, Homer L. Stewart, of Tecumseh, Mich., a copy of his new book, entitled, CELERY GROWING AND MARKETING A SUCCESS. It will be an invaluable assistant to every person who either grows celery or contemplates embarking in that business. It gives the author's own practical experience in growing and marketing celery. The book will be sent to any address in the United States or Canada, postage prepaid, for $2. Address all communications to Homer L. Stewart, Tecumseh, Mich.

THE PULPIT AND POLITICS, by J. G. Evans, D. D., LL.D., is a book of brave, logical utterance upon a theme which has called forth a variety of opinion from the evangelical and from the political world. The days of elaborately wrought out sermons upon abstruse questions of theology are past, and instead we are hearing wide-awake, soul-stirring speeches, that aim at the very heart of living, seeking to build up the moral and spiritual bulwarks of the nation and individual, and to destroy every baneful influence that may threaten their highest development. Good, and even brave men, however, falter at this point, and the question is raised: "What is the proper empire of the pulpit? Does it cover the whole field of morals, or are the provinces bearing political banners interdicted ground?" Dr. Evans certainly answers the question. The last pages of this very practical volume contain a symposium made up of brief statements from well-known thinkers, closing with a powerful article by Dr. C. H. Payne, on "The Duty of the Pulpit to Help Mass the Forces of the Christian Church Against the Liquor Traffic." The book commends itself to every thoughtful person, but most especially to those who stand in the pulpits of our land.

Published by Noble M. Eberhart, 420 Dearborn street, Chicago.

Many authors have tried to tell the strange story of life reproduction as it is repeated in the beautiful histories of plants and animals, but few, if any, have touched as high and pure a key-note as has Margaret Warner Morley, in her exquisite book, A SONG OF LIFE. The make-up of the volume, as befits its exceptional merit, is well-nigh perfect in material and design. Each page is beautified by drawings, evidently executed by a master-hand—drawings of plants, birds, fishes and larger animals in different stages of development, their arrangement, delightfully unconventional, the regular lines of print being made to give place to the pictured flight of birds, trailing of vines and sport of fishes. But the "Story," in its delicate purity and its sacred adherence to truth, far exceeds any complementary adjuncts of art. There can be no hesitation in saying that "The Song of Life" takes the first rank in this class of literature. It is a book that should be in every library, in the hands of every mother and teacher; more than that, it is a book that can be safely placed in the possession of boys and girls. It supplies a want long felt in the book-world, and will without doubt, well accomplish the holy mission on which it has gone forth.

A. C. McClurg & Co., Chicago.

The table of contents of THE POPULAR SCIENCE MONTHLY for April is an especially attractive one, leading off with a pen-portrait of "Agassiz at Penikese," by Prof. David Starr Jordan, who pays therein a high tribute to the great teacher of science. The treatment of Galileo and his works at the hands of the churches, Protestant and Catholic, is discussed in a paper on "Astronomy," by Dr. Andrew D. White, and those who rejoice in the freedom of thought of the nineteenth century, have broad sympathy for the veteran, who, having grown gray and feeble and battle-scarred in the "warfare of science," was at last forced to "abjure, curse and detest the error and the heresy of the movement of the earth." "Involuntary Movements," by Joseph Jastrow, is an interesting scrutiny of involuntary muscular motion in its relation to brain action. The "automatograph"—the principle of which is rudely illustrated by the well-known planchette—transmits to paper through its sensitive medium, the otherwise imperceptible movements of the hand while the mind is engrossed by a given object. These experiments "bear a striking corroboration of the view that all thought is only more or less successfully repressed action, and that, as an eminent muscle-reader puts it, all willing is either pushing or pulling." The contributions which fill out this issue are all of wide interest, deserving individual notice.

New York: D. Appleton & Co., $5 per year.

Among the magazines for April, LIPPINCOTT'S monthly comes to our table with an offering of contributions that is full of allurement. Rosa Nouchette Cary's story "But Men Must Work," is a thoroughly readable narrative. Melville Philips writes humorously in the Journalist Series of the "Literary Editor," relating one or two experiences that are very life-like touches of what editors are liable to meet in their daily work before the public. "Nihilism and the Famine," by Countess Norraikow, is of present interest, tracing the famine in Russia to unjust taxation and unwise government. Julian Hawthorne provokes more than one smile over his quaint eulogy on "Walking," introducing under cover of the humorous paragraphs some facts that our carriage-loving Americans would do well to consider. As an offset to the foregoing is "Four-in-Hand Driving" an illustrated article by C. Davis English. "A Wedding," by Louise E. Hogan, is a pathetic short story, its substance too often repeated in the prosaic rounds of real life.

J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia. Price $3.

THE STRAND MAGAZINE is an English publication of the popular style. Its stories are bright and new and its articles embrace a line of topics that appeal to a wide class of readers. Its pages are replete with exceptionally fine illustrations, making the periodical both valuable and attractive.

George Newnes, Ltd., Strand, London, England. $2.25 per year.

The boys and girls and "little folks" have an unusual treat in store in D. Lothrop Company's publications, THE PANSY; OUR LITTLE MEN AND WOMEN, and BABYLAND, for April. These are the Easter issues, and the joy of the Resurrection Morning is not forgotten amid the wealth of rhyme, stories, jingles and pictures that gladden the heart of every little man and woman within their reach.

CHRISTIAN THOUGHT for April, edited by Charles F. Deems, D. D., LL.D., is an excellent number of this undenominational religious magazine now completing its ninth yearly volume. Among the articles that deserve special attention is one entitled "Science and Faith," by Prof. A. J. Du Bois of the Sheffield Scientific School of Yale University. Dr. Edward J. Hamilton, Prof. Charles W. Shields and the editor contribute remarks on the above-mentioned paper which are most interesting. The Rev. W. F. Blackburn contributes "The Study of Social Science in Theological Seminaries," a paper of great interest. The Rev. Edward M. Deems has in this number an article entitled "The Common Origin of Man," which shows much thought and research. It is published bimonthly by Wilbur B. Ketcham, 2 Cooper Union, New York. $2 per year.

THE ARENA bears upon its cover the legend:

> "We do not take possession of our ideas but are possessed by them;
> They master us and force us into the arena,
> Where like gladiators, we must fight for them."

Many and vigorous are the "ideas" presented to the reader of this magazine, and these gladiators of the bloodless field are eloquent in their challenge to mental contests. "Vital Statistics of the Negro," by Frederick L. Hoffman, is a presentation of facts and figures touching this question so near to our interests as a nation. The Hon. John Davis states in strong language some features of "The Money Question," showing the world-wide power of the "almighty dollar." "Volapük," by Alfred A. Post, will give to those to whom the name may not suggest very clear ideas of this universal language, an intelligent possession of the facts concerning its conception, growth, and possible future. Among the remaining noteworthy productions in this issue is Rev. George St. Clair's "Rational Views of Heaven and Hell," conducting one from a consideration of the states of bliss or punishment as believed in by uncivilized nations, to those beliefs embraced by the higher spiritual development of this century. The editorial, "Two Hours in the Social Cellar" of Boston, is a vigorous plea that we "forget not the millions who are now stifling, starving, and dying as the legitimate results of the injustice of our present social conditions,"—a plea that needs to be echoed and re-echoed by every journalist, editor and author, by every one who can command the ear of the people, until "man's inhumanity to man" shall have ceased to make "countless thousands mourn."

The Arena Publishing Company, Boston, Mass.; $5 per annum.

Articles of political timeliness in the April FORUM are: A discussion of the several phases of "The Crisis of the Democratic Party," by the Hon. Wm. L. Wilson, of West Virginia, by Frederic R. Coudert, the leader of the anti-Hill Democrats in New York, on the revolt against Senator Hill; and by Matthew Hale, on the theft by the Democrats of the New York Senate. Besides these, is a thorough review of the change in Iowa from a Republican to a Democratic majority. "Is Iowa a Doubtful State?" by Gov. John N. Irwin. There are two literary articles of unusual value—one, an autobiographical article, by the late Prof. Edward A. Freeman; and another on "The Learning of Languages," by Philip Gilbert Hamerton. "Our Anthracite Supply and Distribution," by Joseph S. Harris, president of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company; "The Germans as Emigrants," by Professor Geffcken; "Reformatory Prisons as Schools of Crime," by Wm. P. Andrews. An interesting discussion of a social institution is "The Burial Monopoly of Paris," by Edmund R. Spearman; and Prof. R. L. Garner, who has reduced the speech of apes to an intelligent study, gives the result of his latest researches.

THE FORUM, New York. Price $5 a year.

APRIL MAGAZINES RECEIVED.

The Homiletic Review, Funk & Wagnalls Company, 18 and 20 Astor Place, New York.

The Phrenological Journal, Fowler & Wells Co., 775 Broadway, New York.

The St. Louis Magazine, 901 Olive St., St. Louis, Mo.

The Chautauquan, T. L. Flood Publishing House, Meadville, Penn.

Life and Light for Woman, Boston, Mass.

The Forum, The Forum Publishing Co., New York City.

The Review of Reviews, 13 Astor Place, New York.

The Californian Illustrated Magazine, The California Publishing Co., San Francisco.

The New England Magazine 86 Federal St., Boston Mass.

THE UNION SIGNAL

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION — FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Vol. XVIII.—No. 14.] CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, April 7, 1892. [Price $1.00 per Year in Advance.

THE regular meeting of the board of directors of the W. T. P. A. will take place at the office, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill., at ten o'clock Wednesday, April 20, 1892.

ESTHER PUGH, Acting Sec.

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

Every saloon was closed in New York City on last Sunday.

Secretary Blaine has recovered from his illness and is once more at his desk.

The Rev. Dr. Pierson has accepted a call for five years to Spurgeon's Tabernacle in London.

Sixty young women graduated from the Moody Training School at Northfield, Conn., March 31.

The launching of the cruiser, Raleigh, was witnessed by forty thousand people at Norfolk, Va., on Thursday.

The City of Paris crossed the Atlantic by the long course (2,864 miles) in 5 days, 22 hours and 3 minutes last week.

Eighty thousand bales of cotton and four solid blocks of houses were destroyed at New Orleans, Monday morning, entailing a loss of $3,000,000.

The Geary Chinese Exclusion Bill passed the House on Monday by an overwhelming vote. It is predicted that the Senate or President will veto the bill.

The report of the Bardsley investigating committee of Philadelphia last week completely exonerated Mr. Wanamaker for any responsibility in the failure of the Keystone bank.

Italy has notified the United States government that she will take part in the Columbian Exposition provided indemnity is paid for the Italians killed at New Orleans a year ago.

The directors of the Columbian Exposition have refused to grant space to the World's W. C. T. U. for the erection of a building in which to exhibit the work and progress of the temperance reform.

Dr. Parkhurst's charges that gambling and disorderly houses were permitted to run unrebuked in New York City were sustained on Friday by the grand jury, which censured the police, charging them with corruption.

The congressional investigating committee visited Chicago last week in the interests of the Columbian Exposition, and seemed most favorably impressed with the present condition of the work and the future outlook.

A fierce gale of wind devastated many towns in Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa, Missouri and Illinois last week, and caused much damage in Chicago, unroofing houses and blowing a seven-story structure over three small cottages, killing seven persons outright, and wounding a score of others.

AN interesting letter just received from Miss Jessie Ackerman will be published soon. In the interval her host of friends will gladly read that her recent resting spell in Tasmania has brought strength and health, and that she is now lecturing in Australia. Her address is 28 Russell street, Melbourne.

THE Mississippi legislature has just passed a Scientific Temperance Instruction Bill, by which every grade in the public schools is now compelled to teach the subject under exactly the same regulations which govern every other study in the schools. The State University, the Agricultural and Mechanical College, the Girls' Industrial Institute and College, and Alcorn University and Tougaloo College for colored students are likewise subject to the law. The same legislature has also passed a law forbidding sale of tobacco in any form to boys under eighteen years of age, and a law prohibiting the sale of newspapers carrying lottery advertisements.

BY the urgent request of leading white-ribboners and with much reluctance, Lady Henry Somerset has been induced to write the charming sketch of her father, Earl Somers, that would have appeared in this week's issue but for a delay in receiving the cuts. Seldom has the life, character and work of an English nobleman been depicted by one whose relations to her subject enabled her to make the picture so complete. The article will be published next week.

IT is to be understood that the statement recently made to the effect that our National president is one of the vice-presidents of the National Medical and Moral Temperance Association in Chicago does not imply that she gives her adherence to any association or remedy. This would be entirely inconsistent with her wide relations to the temperance reform. Her relation to the association is her hearty indorsement of the Christian training which is an adjunct of the medical cure.

THE election by primaries for governor of Louisiana on March 22 resulted in the necessity for the appointment of a committee of seven, agreed upon by pro and anti-lotteryites, to investigate election returns. They were given power not only to count and promulgate the figures as received, but to go behind the returns to investigate charges of fraud and non-conformity to rules. The anti-lottery candidate was declared fairly elected as the result of this committee's canvass, thus scoring a triumph for justice and right.

REMEMBER self-denial week begins Easter Sunday, April 17th, and lasts until the 23d. Every white ribbon woman in Christendom is asked to deny herself something not necessary, that its cost may go to the local, state, National, or the World's W. C. T. U. treasury, as her conscience may decide. In the Red Letter Day Calendar, this announcement is coupled with the following quotation of a speech by Lady Henry Somerset: "No cause was ever victorious for which men and women have not lived and suffered and died."

JOHN BURNS, the celebrated English labor leader, is a candidate for a seat in the House of Commons. Few men have led a great social revolution with so much moderation and justice. John Burns is not only an enthusiast, he is a great speaker and a man of talent. The secret, however, of his power is understood when he tells the story of his own childhood, and there are often tears standing in strong men's eyes as he speaks of his mother as he saw her in his early life, worn with work and weary with the conflict of keeping starvation from the home. The manner in which John Burns marshalled the laborers in the great strike of the London dockmen two years ago was a clear demonstration that a revolution based on righteous demands can be effected without disorder or anarchy.

ONE of the greatest omissions of white-ribboners after these long years of experience, is, that they allow the reports of their conventions to go by default, for lack of knowing who is the Associated Press agent in their locality. The first business of the local union when a convention, National, state, district or county is invited by them, should be to ascertain who are the Associated Press and Union Press agents; whether there is a syndicate of the local press, and who manages it; whether there are patent inside papers published in their town or city, and by whom, and to see all the reporters of the religious and local papers, interesting them and arranging for their accommodation at the convention, furnishing them badges, and giving to each a copy of the annual leaflet issued by the National W. C. T. U. Thus the good results of these meetings of good women would go widely out over the nation to that larger audience that hears with its eyes.

THE Board of Lady Managers is contemplating bringing out for the World's Fair an encyclopedia of the organizations conducted by women, not only in the United States but the world. They are very anxious to secure a full and correct list. Will the president of every such organization send the name and address of the organization that she represents to Helen M. Barker, 409 Rand-McNally Building, Chicago, Ill.?

GEN. NEAL DOW has recently written to Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, our leader in Maine, the following note:

My Dear Mrs. Stevens:—You may write, if you please, to Chicago that I will bequeath my scrapbooks to the collection of archives to be placed in the Temple, if the ladies would like them. There are twenty-three volumes now, very large and thick. Perhaps there may be another volume. The twenty-third is about one-half finished. They are half bound in strong morocco.

Very truly yours, NEAL DOW.

This is the best news we have heard in a long time. There is not a library on the planet that would not think itself fortunate to secure such a collection from such a collector—the most distinguished living temperance reformer. Instead of receiving a birthday present on his eighty-ninth anniversary, Neal Dow makes one, which is perfectly in accord with his whole life of beneficence. THE UNION SIGNAL congratulates its most honored subscriber on gripping the grippe so tightly that it surrendered and he became the bearer of gifts to the devoted women whose labors are the fit complements of his own.

THE saloons of New York City have been closed on Sunday at last, as a sequel to the agitation started by Rev. Dr. Parkhurst. The ball he has set rolling is one that we rejoice in. Politics in the pulpit is at tintinnabulation pitch, and the Presbyterian denomination, conservative beyond a peradventure, has begun the tune. A Boston preacher spoke to the point last Sunday when he said, "Religion is not an impractical affair, to be put on and off like a suit of clothes. When you say that a minister who is called to this high and noble calling, ought not to take politics into the pulpit, you must keep right on, to be consistent, and say he ought to say nothing about social sins, sins against society, sins against the home life, sins in commerce, sins in amusements, sins in professional careers, but turn his attention only to theory. It seems really as though it were time to understand that ministers are men, that the pulpit is a thing of this life, for the purpose of dealing with the affairs of this life. The pulpit has to deal with life, and it should not lose its grip on life. If ever there was need for the pulpit to begin a crusade against sin in politics, that day is here. When it is necessary for us to get on our knees and plead with officials sworn to defend and enforce the laws, and they reply: 'Do it yourself; it is not my business'; when Congress will spend thousands of dollars in trying 'to lay pipe' for a coming election, instead of doing its duty; when the saloon, which has not a single reason for its existence, but an eternity of facts and truths against it, shapes our laws and rules in our politics; when men must buy their way into office by money and pledges which compel silence on questions which pertain to the uprooting of vice and the bringing in of virtue; when the rum-soaked and criminal misrule of our large cities is a matter of comment the world over, it is time for the pulpit to join with a fearless press and speak against the cursed thing until for very shame the darkness gives place to light. When sin has been driven out of politics the question can be eliminated from the pulpit. It has to deal with sin in all its ramifications, and it can never stop until the dawn of righteous rule bids its lips be stilled." All honor to Dominie Parkhurst. Let this thing go on until New York and Boston, Chicago and San Francisco, and all the rest of our large cities are freed from misrule. And let all the people say Amen!

Contributed.

TIRED OUT.

BY ALICE E. H. PETERS.

Tired of the strife and toil,
Tired of life's sad turmoil
Which meets defeat.

Tired e'en of asking why
Other lives are 'compassed by Blessings replete.

Too worn to bear the strain
Of hearing those complain
Who will not work;

Loathing the duties
Dissevered from beauties
Which others shirk;

Tired of the weariness
Caused by the dreariness
Of souls oppressed;

Tired of sad thoughts that pain
When old wounds bleed again
That none have guessed;

Sick of the multitude
Teeming with thought so rude
As to my life.

Disgust with critic's pen
Dipped deep in malice when
On comes the strife.

And long have I waited
For kindness belated
To show her face.

Surely God's gentle love
Comes ever from above
To our sad race,—

Yet, I am so weary,
And life seems so dreary,—
So worn am I—

That I have grown unfair—
So tired as not to care—
And almost to die!

Columbus, O.

ONE, TWO, OR THE WHOLE?

BY HELEN CAMPBELL.

There is, in a certain circle in one of our great cities—a circle, admission into which is the hope and dream of many social aspirants—one woman whose charm of manner can in no wise be excelled. Friend or stranger, Philistine or bore, she has the power, even when shaking off the last, of doing it in such gracious fashion that offense is impossible.

It is to the stranger that she is specially kind and winning, and this in a society inclined to frown upon all strangers, and which inquires earnestly as to the grandfathers of the new arrivals. And so it happened one day that a looker-on asked her point-blank: "How is it that you who certainly have strong likes and dislikes, and who are so keen a judge of what is desirable, keep this manner which brings everybody to your feet?"

"Isn't that a trifle strong?" she laughed. "But I know what you mean. I know that people are at ease with me, and I intend that they shall be. It is part of my system of getting the most out of everything, and I learned it as we learn most things that are really vital—by sharp experience. You want to ask what? Very well; you shall have it all.

"I was fifteen years old and with all the morbid self-consciousness that was part of my New England inheritance; awkward, shy, tumbling over my own feet, yet eager to see and hear distinguished people, and to be approved by them. A Southern girl of that age is all that I wished for and was not; winning, unconscious, charming, but that was impossible for a Massachusetts girl of my generation.

"I had read and been bewitched with the tales of an author, whose name you must not have, but in whom we all delighted. To see him was bliss, yet I trembled as I thought what catastrophe I might bring upon myself by my usual ridiculous shyness. My turn came at last, and I stumbled forward in an agony of embarrassment, to be met by a curt little nod and two fingers put out to me in what seemed absolute insolence. I had no knowledge of such methods of greeting. He was half foreigner, he had lived abroad so long, and possibly did not realize what those two fingers represented to me, but I looked at him confounded, incapable of taking them, and got back to my aunt as fast as possible, so disenchanted that to this day, I cannot hear his name, without seeing those fingers, and the supercilious little look on his face. It spoiled his books for me, nor have I ever fully recovered.

"One definite result followed. Then and there I made up my mind that no one should ever be made so unnecessarily miserable by me, and I had an example of what might be attained, in the dear poet who lived near us, and whose gentle graciousness was absolutely unfailing. He could not, no matter how bored, hurt a human soul, and I tried to copy him. And in that process I began to learn other things, till now my creed, or a big bit of it is,—'Every day beautiful as I go along.'

"Rubs? Hard places? Plenty of them, child, but always some compensation. In his journal one day the poet wrote:

"'We lead but one life here on the earth. We must make that beautiful. And to do this, health and elasticity of mind are needful, and whatever endangers or impedes these must be avoided.'

"So he learned to extract the best and brightest from whatever came in his way. He refused to have a commonplace, noisy, unfruitful day. If those elements were there he managed to transmute them into something rare and precious. He did it by giving the best of himself as he went along. He was 'all on the spot,' as the college boys say. No two-fingered hand-shake for him. He knew how to abandon himself to the gift of the moment, from an oriole's song to a lovely sunset, a talk with a friend, a happy mealtime with his children. By the river or with his book, he gave himself in full and in return secrets were his, and he received as freely as he gave.

"The moral? Yes, there is always a moral, but this one does not need words of mine. What you call my manner, grew out of the conviction that this is the way to take people as well as life, and I have had richest reward. In fact, I ometimes think it is pure selfishness, I so enjoy seeing the unfolding that often comes, and the sense that I have some rare flower all my own at command.

"The sum of it all is, that if you shake hands with one or even two fingers, you have a one-fingered response, and a gift also of all the discomfort and hurt feeling such methods produce. The poet's gift was partly innate, partly acquired, but he never ceased learning. Why should not one try it on everything? There is always a smooth spot somewhere, in even the roughest exterior, and to search for it is one of the most effectual cures for the blues, or any morbid self-consciousness that I know anything about."

"But, my friend, there are few who have your opportunities."

"That may be in one way, but life is an unending opportunity. The original gift may be lacking, but it grows with every attempt to develop it, till at last it is an instinct, and it means happiness. To one of my boys it seemed to come instinctively. To the other, it was always an effort, yet see the two men now, side by side, and you would say both had the same temperament. It is for all of us if we will, and it so sweetens life that I preach its gospel to every boy and girl I can reach. We are not an urbane nation. On the contrary, we have superlatively bad manners, which belie our excellent hearts. I want the heart to have a better chance to make itself known, and it will, for we are improving. When our manners match our real dispositions we are going to be the most delightful nation on the face of the earth, and we are already on the road."

This was the secret. It has its own value, and so a place here.

Lakewood, N. J.

"WHAT'S IN A NAME?"

BY ORLANDO M. WOODWARD.

THE UNION SIGNAL has done well in proposing the adoption of a new name by the Prohibition party. The party would have done better had it taken such action four years ago. With a good, new name, and a broader platform it would very probably have gained such strength that there would have been no "People's" party. We have been so handicapped by the old name, narrow, negative and misleading as it is, that many of our workers are now solicitous for some change that will give us more advantageous conditions. The name "Prohibition" has been made very repulsive to many good people, partly by their misconceptions of the party, and partly by abuses committed under this name by some speakers and writers. The "Free Soil" party was swallowed up in a new party, and the Prohibition party is likely to be absorbed in like manner unless it this year discards its present inappropriate name, for a retention of which no good reason can be given.

The name "Columbian" seems to me the most desirable that can be found for adoption by our party. Permit me to mention some of the reasons for regarding it as a pleasingly appropriate one:

1. The name "Columbia," as applied to our country, suggests the happiest impression of its advantages as the land of "the free and the home of the brave," and a land where joy and peace and plenty abound. To make our country more than ever such a land of liberty and prosperity is the mission of our party, and when our work is done we may, with immeasurable increase of joy and pride, count ourselves, in the broader sense, "Columbians."

2. Columbus was a reformer, one who led in the honored progress of his time, yet against opposition and discouragements that would have defeated the endeavors of a man not sustained by a great heart and sublime faith. Our purpose is to bring into being, as he did, a new world that the multitude of our fellows do not believe exists among the possibilities of the near future. Our reforms, when accomplished, will make the whole world new in its life and purity and advancement.

3. Denied aid and encouragement by the men in power, to whom he first applied, he found at last in a woman the appreciation, the faith, the self-sacrifice and enterprise he needed and sought. So we have found in the warmer heart and quicker conscience of woman the interest and support that has been to the Prohibition party its mainstay in all the score of years it has lived and labored for right.

4. Columbus was wronged in the naming of the new world for a later discoverer, and our countrymen with all the world are now uniting to atone in part for the injustice thus done him. We can fittingly help right this wrong by giving the worthy name "Columbian" to our grand party of progress, as it lifts anchor and sails away to the mainland of national prohibition, equal suffrage, fairness in finance, suppression of monopoly, and a government truly by the people for the people.

5. Besides being richly significant and appropriate, as shown by the foregoing reasons, the name "Columbian" is euphonious and convenient, and one under which the reform hosts will gladly rally.

"DAYLIGHT AND DARKNESS IN NEW YORK."

III.

BY B. V. CUSHMAN, M. D.

The third and last part of the subject of this review is the work of New York's famous chief of police, Inspector Thomas Byrnes. Under his administration the detective bureau of our metropolis has become of world-wide importance. Before his régime Wall street was at the mercy of thieves, bank messengers and elderly gentlemen being their favorite victims. Inspector Byrnes hired an office in the street, put nine of his best men there, and succeeded so well in ridding the locality of robbers that he was presented with a fine gold watch—and the president of the stockbrokers' exchange, while making the presentation speech, was relieved of an elegant fur-lined overcoat by some daring and facetious thief, who was never discovered.

King Humbert of Italy, who seems to have a penchant for bestowing royal favors upon noble Americans, lately conferred the boots and spurs of knighthood upon Inspector Byrnes, in recognition of his kindness to members of the Italian colony in New York, and for his influence in gaining extradition between Italy and this country. The modest man regards it as an honor less to himself than to the force.

Inspector Byrnes has nothing better to say for the tenement and cheap lodging-house system than had Mrs. Campbell and Col. Knox. The woman sees in that system a vast cess-pool of degrading poverty and squalor; the journalist sees in it also a nest where every sort of sensational vice and crime breeds, while the chief of detectives discovers besides these, a dangerous sink of political corruption. It is appalling for magnitude as well as for infamy. In 1890 nearly five million cheap lodgings were furnished in the great city. To whom? To "drunkards and vicious people of the lowest type"; to "thieves, idlers and loafers of every sort." The police also find "a sprinkling of professional men who once held positions in society,—lawyers, doctors, civil engineers and even authors. First, they have become drunkards, and have gone down the ladder step by step until they have been abandoned by their friends and have become sots in the lowest lodging houses, presenting no difference in their personal appearance from the vilest patrons of such places. Only conversation with these people betrays their education and former standing in society." Strong drink is a great leveler.

"But" the chief says, "this is not the worst feature. Take the case of the youth who runs away from his home in the country. In searching for a cheap place to sleep he naturally and, it must be said, innocently drifts into one of these lodging houses. In nine cases out of ten—I am quite confident the proportion is not too large—he is graduated a petty thief, often develops into a burglar, and may sooner or later become a murderer. Numerous cases of this kind occur every year." For the enlightenment of the youth who is pining for something he does not find in the clean bed his mother makes for him, let me describe the underground lodging cellar, as shown in a flashlight picture taken at midnight. The couches consist of a bench extending around the sides of the room, and the floor covered with a thin sprinkling of sawdust. The rags in which the wretched lodgers are clothed form mattress and cover. For such accommodations they pay "three cents a spot," and in the picture every "spot" is occupied. This picture and description would make a good tract to go wherever the dime novel has gone.

Everything—that is bad—"gets into politics" nowadays, and the cheap lodging den is no exception. "It is notorious that these houses are used every year for the 'colonization' of voters. A large number of men register regularly from these places, and they have not the slightest hesitancy about swearing in their votes in case of challenge."

The chief of detectives very naturally treats of crime and criminals. One cut shows a culprit "at the mercy of the artist," as we say when we go to have a picture taken. This subject is to have his photograph in the Rogues' Gallery, and by every possible grimace and distortion of feature he tries to disguise his visage. This trick, however, is becoming rare, for rogues have learned that modern photography is so perfect, and the modern detective so sharp, that it is impossible to elude either camera or officer, and "making faces" is now seldom tried. These photographs are destroyed only when proof of death is absolute. In case of reformation the likeness is retired, but not destroyed, for in case of relapse, it would be useful.

Among professional pickpockets, women are gallantly accorded first place for patience, dexterity and caution. There seems to be division of labor even among thieves. For instance, one made a specialty of robbing young married couples. He took no partner and had a long and successful career, but alas, drink, the canker-worm which destroys every kind of business capacity, was his downfall in a most literal sense. One night he undertook while drunk to ransack the apartments of a newly wedded pair. With several thousand dollars worth of costly "presents," he started across the roof-top of an unfinished building, and fell between the rafters. His groans and cries attracted assistance and he was found in the cellar with the stolen jewels beside him.

Every phase of swindling, black-mailing, bogus advertisement and confidence game is mercilessly laid open in the last section of this remarkable book, and if generally read, the nefarious work of social parasites of every species would be more difficult, and the number of victims correspondingly less.

The old-fashioned sentiment, "Honesty is the best policy, though it sometimes keeps a man poor," is the closing sentence.

AN OCCASION FOR DONNING "THINKING-CAPS."

[The secretary of the People's party in Iowa has addressed this letter to Miss Willard. No reform flag thrown out to the breeze should fail to catch the eye of Prohibitionists or their cheers for all the honest bravery and right purpose that nail the colors to the mast-head. —Ed.]

Dear Editor:—I am so profoundly impressed with the necessity of a union of the reform elements in the political contest just before us that I cannot divest myself of the thought that God will yet direct His servants into some path that will lead to such a union.

The letter of Mrs. Mary A. Livermore, in a recent number of The Signal, prompted me to send her a reply, a copy of which I herewith inclose for publication, if in your judgment it seems best. For myself, I can see no course that the Prohibition convention at St. Louis can pursue that will leave the way open for a union that will not be concession to our people that would be humiliation to the party pride of all Prohibitionists. Still, I firmly believe that if the matter of a ticket could be left to an executive committee who would indorse ours in case we put forth acceptable nominees, that our people would select candidates that would be unobjectionable in point of ability or personal opinion, on either prohibition or woman suffrage. I believe that such a course, while it would not weaken us, would give your people an immense leverage on us in the future. It seems almost presumptuous to suggest such a plan, but think for a moment what will result if we run a separate ticket.

1. Earnest reformers who believe alike, and who ought to work together, will be separated and working to cross purposes.

2. Either you will indorse our economic views, or you will antagonize them. It is impossible now to bring forward any new solution that will command attention.

3. If you antagonize them you will render future union impossible and drive many of your people into our ranks.

4. If you indorse them it will be scarcely less effective in bringing your people to us. We have the middle of the road, and it will be hardly possible for you to pass us.

5. So far as human sight can now discern, the People's party is the only one that promises any hope for escape from absolute slavery to corporate monopolies. Their insidious power is undermining every free institution. This conviction has taken hold of the people, and though they may be slow to act, it will govern the trend of their movement when they shall awaken from this lethargy.

6. The monopolies are fully alive to the situation, and the People's party is the only one they fear. To make sure of their power for four years more they have converted the Republican machine into an absolute champion of all they wish, and are assiduously at work to capture a controlling influence in the Democratic party, while they make it seem to antagonize Republican absolutism. Hill, Gorman and Brice are a fit counterpart of Quay, Dudley and Clarkson. We have a trio who are their peers in ability, while in character they are beyond comparison—Weaver, Polk and Powderly.

This letter is inspired by no one and has no greater significance than my own signature can give.

I am with great respect, yours truly,

J. Bellangee.

The following is the letter referred to, brimming with brotherly earnestness and a noble vindication of the People's party—an intense plea for unity, that deserves discriminating reflection and unprejudiced judgment:

Mrs. Mary A. Livermore,
Boston, Mass.

Dear Madam:—Your letter in The Union Signal concerning the Industrial Conference at St. Louis no doubt voices the sentiment of a great many good women who have been for years working in the cause of women's enfranchisement.

I was at that conference and felt greatly depressed at its action upon the suffrage question. Not belonging to any of the orders there represented, I was not a delegate, but I worked with my might to secure favorable action on that resolution, and when I realized that it would fail, and when I saw lifelong suffragists voting against it, I felt all the disgust of which my nature was capable, at the time-serving policy of the conference in overlooking such a great and fundamental wrong as the disfranchisement of women. It was not until the closing scenes of the conference had developed the central idea which animated the delegates, that I realized why the suffrage plank met with such a fate at the hands of its friends; for my judgment is that not less than four-fifths of the conference were in favor of it.

When the final action was taken on the majority report, with but two dissenting votes, and when that vast conference, composed of delegates from non-partisan organizations, formally adjourned, and by unanimous action resolved itself into a partisan organization for the purpose of giving effect to the union that had been consummated, then it was that I realized that the one great thought that overshadowed all others in the minds of the delegates, and before which everything else had to give the right of way, was a realization of the supreme importance of effecting a harmonious union.

At one time it seemed probable that the conference would split over the suffrage plank; but there was not a particle of real danger. Cromwell himself, with a file of English soldiers, could not have dispersed that conference as he did the Parliament of old, until they had completed the work of union which was uppermost in their hearts. Only those who have so long worked to bring the Knights of Labor and the Alliance up to the point of united political action can realize the momentous importance of the union there effected, and its overshadowing influence. It was not so much the personal opposition of delegates to the suffrage resolution that caused its defeat, as the fear of the Southern members that, since it implied the enfranchisement of the negro women of the South, its adoption would again raise the race question, and render the "Solid South" impregnable. As the platform now stands they confidently expect a sweeping victory in many of the Southern States.

I am fully convinced that the enfranchisement of women is near at hand, and that it will come, when it does come, at the hands of some party representing the plain, common people, rather than one representing the politicians and the place hunters.

It may be the one formed at St. Louis. I hope and believe it will; but I would with all deference remind you and others who have labored so long in the cause of suffrage and prohibition, that, until this time, you have for the most part confined your efforts in the field of politics to those parties which represent the politicians and the organized plunderers of the people.

The clear-cut advocacy of prohibition and woman suffrage by the old Greenback party never seemed to win it friends among the noble and able women who advocated these measures. Here in Iowa its platforms were especially clear upon those subjects, but instead of its bringing the support of those good people, it was abused and denounced as traitorous because it would not disband and help the Republican party which was trying to destroy the Greenbacks and whose support of prohibition has never been either hearty or sincere, and who would not utter a word in favor of woman suffrage.

The fact is the suffragists and Prohibitionists have been as bad as others in their political efforts and have given their help, not to their true friends, but to their hypocritical enemies, because the latter were supposed to be more influential and respectable, and such a course seemed more politic. They have seemingly forgotten that "He useth the weak things of this world to confound the mighty" and they have failed to learn that the mighty usually need to be confounded.

Why was not the St. Louis conference ignored by the women as have been other reform conventions? Simply because it represented a movement that is becoming formidable. Another element also entered into the case. The Alliance movement in Kansas and Nebraska had received such conspicuous help from the women and had developed such talent for political work on their part that it seemed but natural and right that they should be recognized. That fact, too, had a powerful weight with the delegates. Wherever the subject was being discussed by groups of delegates you could hear this remark, "We must not alienate those women in the settlement of this question," and in all the talk I heard, but one man opposed suffrage from principle, as he styled it. Why would it not be good policy for you women who have the cause so much at heart to "press on that button" and by helping us, demonstrate your friendship and your political power, and place us under obligations which we could not afford to ignore. Man's cause is woman's cause and surely you could put your whole soul into a fight that involves the homes and happiness of the sober and industrious sons of toil, that defends industry and sobriety from the oppression of greed and monopoly. By confining your work to districts where our candidate is personally favorable to woman suffrage, you could emphasize your opinions on that point.

As to the temperance question, I believe the Scriptures are right when they say that "the love of money is the root of all evil" and that in the end the temperance question, as every other moral question, will be found to be a great economic question, and its solution most easily effected by bringing about a state of economic justice. I believe the conditions of society which build up classes of the very rich and the very poor produce debauchery on the one hand and degradation on the other, which augment the forces of intemperance beyond the power of prohibitory or restrictive laws to subdue or check.

If love be not the filling but the fulfilling of the law then hate must be the essence of *all dis*order, the complete manifestation of all evil; and as in the economic world coöperation becomes the synonym of love, so does hatred find in the term competition its most literal translation. Can we expect sobriety and restraint to be the fruits of an economic system like ours founded upon a competition which knows no limit but the death of the competitors, no law but the demands of success, and no restraining influence that is not measured in dollars and cents? Can we expect moderation and purity of life from men gorged with wealth that has been wrung from the toil of others, or that the discouragement and defeat of ill-requited labor will make men manly and strong to resist temptation?

Sincerely impressed with the grandeur of your character as a woman and a reformer, and believing that God's purposes toward the human race and our people as a nation can neither be resisted nor confined to the narrow channel of a single reform, I trust that the time is not far distant when you, with all others who love mankind, will realize the supreme importance, not only of an universal suffrage that knows no sex, but of an universal brotherhood that knows no class.

Come, work with us in the love of humanity; come, study with us the needs of humanity; come, help us to overthrow the wrongs from which humanity suffers; come with us and we will listen to your plea in humanity's behalf, but do not turn your back on us because we do not apprehend the truth as fully as you do. We are in dead earnest, so are you.

Come with us and help us fight the battles of the oppressed. Lift up your voice with us in the demand that labor shall have the just reward of honest toil, that industry and faithful citizenship shall receive more honor than cunning and unscrupulous power.

Come with us and help us to beat back the tide of materialistic debasement, which permeating all departments of human effort has well-nigh robbed life of its enjoyment, friendship of its fidelity, love of its purity and religion of its sincerity.

Des Moines, Iowa.

RAILROAD TIES.

IX.

BY JOHN G. WOOLLEY.

Where does a woman carry her purse?—at any rate, where does she not carry it? I have been engrossed by this question for an hour while waiting for my train in this station. . . . . Certainly not in her pocket—at least not always, nor often—that is, if I know a pocket when I see it. . . . . Several, to be sure, seemed "regular made," so to speak, as they stopped at the ticket window, but not many. . . . . In the hand, in a little bag, in a knotted handkerchief, in the drapery, aloft, below, forward, aft. . . . . I have decided not to pursue the subject.

My train is not ready yet, but I think I'd better go. She has evidently mistaken the ticket window for an upper berth. . . . . If I ever should be tempted to pick a woman's—that is to say, if I ever should feel driven to commit "larceny from the person" of a woman, I should rise above it, and look for something easy and honest, like prospecting in the Black Hills. . . . . All of which induces the reflection that people may—do carry the same thing differently. . . . . Which reminds me that this is exactly what Phillips Brooks was showing in his lenten sermon yesterday afternoon at Trinity Church, by the text, "Wisdom is justified of all her children." . . . .

The church was packed to the walls, people sat in the seat behind the lecturn, on the altar steps, and on the floor, perched on the pulpit steps, the chancel rail and the rim of the galleries and stood solid to the inner doors, and the preacher, without a bishop's robe, seemed as great as Shakespere, but simple as a child and almost divinely patient and loving. I never felt so clearly that "the greatest . . . . is charity." . . . . From there I went to the barracks of the Salvation Army on Washington street. . . . . .

It was very different, but the message was identical, "Love, love, wonderful love." . . . White quartz on the "Back Bay," gold-bearing and very rich in the assay—brown hematite at the barracks in the "South End"—carrying gold too, not richer, but more easily "worked." . . . . . Which makes me think that, perhaps, that miserable, opinionated, good-for-nothing friend of mine who differs from me about how to destroy the liquor traffic, may yet yield yellow gold, if I can only discover some persuasive chemistry to "reduce" him by withal.

I have heard that the very "high grade ore" cannot be "mined with the pick" and that it defies the "stamp-mill."

Boston & Maine R. R., near Portsmouth, N. H.

THE AMERICAN COFFEE HOUSE.

In 1890, at the Atlanta Convention, the National W. C. T. U. adopted the Coffee House department, appointing Mrs. Elizabeth Augusta Russell, of Minneapolis, Minn., as its superintendent. If the right way to cook a hare is first to catch your hare, more so the right way to have W. C. T. U. coffee houses is, first, to catch your woman who knows how. We have caught her, and introduce her to the constituency as follows:

Somebody has said, "Every man has in himself a continent of undiscovered character." So has every woman. Part of Mrs. Russell's character, "undiscovered" to herself, is the being the cause of helpfulness in others, on the principle that

"The nobleness that lies in others sleeping,
Will rise in majesty to meet thine own."

The power to bring her helpers to the plane of her ideals has been a chief reason for Mrs. Russell's wonderful success as the head of the W. C. T. U. Coffee House of Minneapolis, and in other positions.

A correspondent relates that Mrs. Russell is a daughter of New England, born among New Hampshire hills in the village of Mason, where she gathered the "rudiments" in the orthodox fashion, and took the "finishing" of New Ipswich Academy of her native state. She was trained in habits of industry, economy, and in the severe theology of the time, according to the faith of the Congregationalists. Her father and mother lived and died true Yankees, the former from Rindge, N. H., her mother from Ashburnham, Mass., at which place Mrs. Russell passed her married life. The war found her teaching at Florence, Ala. She immediately returned home, and, at the time of the first battle of Bull Run, was installed as matron of the Soldiers' Relief Association in New York, and was "mustered out" with the rest at the close of the war. During these years she often visited Washington to study hospital methods, and gave herself unreservedly to the relief of suffering soldiers, whether in blue or gray. The building was six stories high, without an elevator. The wounded boys entertained themselves counting how many trips up and down the long stairs she made for their comfort, and yet remember it with tenderness. Mrs. Russell still feels the effects of this great strain, but says: "No work of my life can I look back upon with so much satisfaction as the work at that hospital." She was afterwards matron of the Soldiers' Home at Augusta, Me.

From the age of sixteen years Mrs. Russell was in the atmosphere of hotel management, and was two years housekeeper at the Grand Union, Saratoga, and for eight years at the Continental in Philadelphia. After a seven months' tour abroad, she was in hotel work at Manhattan Beach, the Oriental at Long Island, Neal House, Columbus, O., and West Hotel of Minneapolis. Then the white ribbon wound its claims into her spirit, and four years ago she took charge of the Central W. C. T. U. Coffee House in the same city, which is the shining mark to which everybody points an unbeliever in the coffee house movement, though it was a general prediction that this enterprise was born for failure. Mrs. Russell is a woman who gives neither herself nor anybody else rest until her plans have "worked out"; at the same time, while others would be counting the cost, she is tireless in her benevolence and care for those who help her. She incites them to live up to their own best, to make their ideal and their real identical. While she exactingly enforces the regulations of her business, no one shrinks from approaching her motherly heart with "the rifts that make the music mute." She is on the picket line of duty, the scout who carries the day's orders, yet takes the time to be a mother to the girls who find a home with her, to help boys to a university course, and to search her Bible for the strength for every hour's unhalting march.

Mrs. Russell is burning with zeal for this coffee house movement, and her spirit "faints with long desire" to see one in every suitable location in every city. She is ready to go to those places which want her help, and asks that state and local superintendents of this department be appointed. If any W. C. T. U. expects to make a success of such an enterprise it would be well to consult Mrs. Russell at the outset, for it is as sad to learn by failure what "not to do" as it is to learn the value of a thing from the want of it.

"By their fruits ye shall know them," so Mrs. Russell's Coffee House shall start the series in the words, in part, of a dweller within its happy home-protection.

THE CENTRAL W. C. T. U. COFFEE-HOUSE.
Minneapolis, Minn., 14, 16, 18 S. Fourth Street.

"I had been searching all day for suitable rooms in private boarding houses, when I chanced upon John G. Woolley, who said to me, 'Why not locate in the coffee house? You will find there the most and best for the least money of any place in the city. Come in and I will introduce you to Mrs. Russell.' Here I have been ever since, with no disposition to exchange its friendly comforts for any other attractions.

"This enterprise was begun in a modest way, some four years since, on Fourth street, near the old Tribune building, with the object of providing good lunches at the lowest price possible, for a class of people too often frequenting the so-called 'free lunch counters' of the saloons. The Coffee House was well received by the very best people of the city, from its beginning. After the first six months Mrs. Russell, the present manager, was induced to take charge, with a force of only ten girls, the baking and laundry work being done outside. Under her able management, the work grew with such rapidity that at the end of fourteen months they were compelled to change their location for want of room, and moved to 14 Fourth street, into a four story brick building, 75 feet front by 180 deep, containing sixty-one sleeping apartments, large dining room, where from 2,000 to 2,400 guests are daily accommodated; two kitchens, storerooms and well-equipped bakery and laundry, and last but not least, a pleasant audience room and parlor.

MRS. ELIZABETH A. RUSSELL.

"Perhaps a faint idea of the immense proportions of the work can be gained from the fact that 100 sacks of flour, 300 bushels of potatoes, 1,800 dozen eggs and 2,000 pounds of butter are used per month, with a meat bill of from $1,200 to $1,500 for the same time, while over one hundred employés are on the roll, thirty of whom earn their board and go to school.

"No meals are served on Sunday, a fact that is highly appreciated by the employés, who, on that day, after an eight o'clock breakfast, assemble in the audience hall, where service is conducted by Mrs. Russell for the purpose of imparting religious instruction to those who volunteer to come. At half past two Sunday-school begins, while at half past three a public gospel temperance meeting is conducted by the best clerical talent of the city.

"On week days this audience hall is devoted to a no less Christian purpose, being thrown open for a lunch room where five and ten cent lunches are served to the employés of various business establishments or for those who bring a whole or part of their food from home; they find here a quiet, pleasant room, without charge, neatly arranged tables, and what is more, kindly interest. have talked with many of them and they speak in terms of unbounded praise of this department. Three evenings in the week a night school is held in this same room by two students of the University. Before Christmas 800 of this class were in daily attendance. The W. C. T. U. also employs teachers for a cooking school and kindergarten and supports various other benevolent and charitable works from funds earned by the Coffee House. My manner of life has led me to be intimately acquainted with the management of many of our large hospitals, sanitariums and other public institutions, and I have yet to see one where more perfect harmony, accuracy and order prevail in every detail than is to be found in this establishment, under the efficient management of Mrs. Russell."

On the menu card of this Coffee House may be counted one hundred and twenty different dishes, ranging in price from five to fifteen cents, most of them not over ten cents, and only three or four of them as much as twenty-five or thirty cents. It measures up well with the table of first-class hotels, superfine and wholesome cooking being the grand specialty.

The profits of the Coffee House have enabled the W. C. T. U. to open another, which is already on its own feet, in a densely populated quarter directly in contact with the laboring people. During the winter a coffee cart was started, of which the Minneapolis Journal thus speaks:

The coffee cart has come, and Mrs. Russell, manager of the W. C. T. U. Coffee House, is accordingly the happiest woman in Minneapolis. To-day sees the fruition of a scheme which was long ago conceived by that thoughtful and benevolent lady. The evils resulting from the almost enforced use of stimulants by the firemen at large and long continuing fires, first suggested to Mrs. Russell the idea of furnishing coffee and sandwiches to the hard-working fire laddies. To think with Mrs. Russell is to act, and she soon elaborated a plan for a coffee patrol cart which should go to all big fires and deal out the beverage, that cheers but does not intoxicate, to the firemen. It was at this juncture that F. L. Darrow & Co., the well-known carriage firm, came to the front with a generous offer to furnish the cart at about one-fifth of the actual cost. This offer was promptly accepted, and the cart was ordered built. This morning it arrived, much to the gratification of all concerned.

The wagon is indeed a beauty. In general exterior appearance, so far as shape and style go, it resembles a stylish brougham. The body is about ten feet long, and hangs upon a set of easy springs. The driver will be almost sheltered from observation by two handsome panels at the sides, and the roof, which overhangs to the dashboard. While the vehicle is en route to the scene of a fire the sides will be closed, but when the time arrives for the occupants to dispense refreshments the upper half of each side can be lifted in two sections, and these will form awnings providing protection against sun and rain to those within the wagon and to the lunchers. At the rear a coach door provided with a drop sash admits to the interior.

Once within the wagon one realizes its usefulness. All the interior finish is in natural light woods. On each side, hip high, are lockers for cups and saucers, while alongside these are capacious open boxes, suggestive of toothsome sandwiches. Smaller receptacles are to be utilized as depositories for spoons, forks and knives. The coffee urns, two in number, will stand at the front end of the wagon, backed up against the driver's seat, from which they are separated by a strong partition. The coloring of the wagon is in keeping with its purpose. Ultramarine for the body, English vermilion for the running gear and carriage part, lake on the panels, all embellished with gold striping, tell the story of its connection with the fire department, these being the colors of all fire apparatus.

This cart is the object of Mrs. Russell's tenderest solicitude for the irresistible power with which it is demonstrating the tremendous mistakes of the past about the nature and need of alcohol.

The rationale of the coffee house, as General Booth says, lies in the fact that "reformers must outbid the drink shop in the subsidiary attractions which it offers to its customers. The tap-room, in many cases, is the poor man's only parlor. Many a man takes to beer not from love of beer, but from a natural craving for the light, warmth, company and comfort which is thrown in along with the beer, and which he cannot get except by buying beer."

Andrew D. White, of Cornell, said in The Christian at Work, "The city governments of the United States are the worst in Christendom—the most expensive, the most inefficient and the most corrupt. Why? Because the spoilsmen are in large measure liquor dealers, and because the saloon is the center of political power. A plan, therefore, which shall offset the saloon, is not only an agency philanthropic and benevolent, but one by which the saloon may be shorn of its social and political power. It is necessary to establish agencies which shall adequately and unobjectionably meet the need for a poor man's club."

Mr. W. Abbatt, of West Chester, N. Y., whose experience in this line is as wide as any man's, contributes the following practical points to THE UNION SIGNAL for the guidance of our workers:

"A fact that lies at the root of all success in England will be found equally valuable here; the building must be large, attractively fitted and furnished. It should have bathing facilities and lodgings if possible, as these help to create a permanent source of valuable income, and to enable the manager, if he be the right sort of man, to do a vast amount of good work among his customers without anything of an obtrusively religious work being paraded.

W. C. T. U. COFFEE HOUSE, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

"That such institutions are needed in every great city or even the average large town, admits of no question. Society is what the average man craves and will have. The saloon at present is the only place where he can find it; hence he goes there. Give him all its attractions without the liquor and he will go to the coffee house. Cheap, ordinary restaurants, even without liquor, do not fill the bill—the social element is wanting.

"The essentials to success, I believe, are: first, an incorporated company with sufficient capital, not less than $50,000; second: a smart, sympathetic, Christian man and his wife as the actual superintendents of the house; third: an attractive house, well located on or near the corner, on a thoroughfare. Waste no time or money on by streets or the wrong side of good streets.

"The chief difficulty is the fact that, as there are many cheap, small restaurants, the benevolent public thinks a cheap, small coffee house will do. This is a great, a vital error. To be successful, a coffee house must be large. An entire building, if on a thoroughfare, is not too large; basement—storage and cooking; first floor—dining room, reading room, also, if large enough, washroom; second floor—public hall, invaluable for meetings; third floor should be for lodgings, fourth also if demanded; top—lodgings for employés, who ought mainly, if not altogether, to lodge on the premises. An amateur band or orchestra formed from among them, is one of the great attractions at several of the Liverpool coffee houses.

"Such a coffee house ought to do well near the entrance to the World's Fair grounds. With the significant fact before me that the only two coffee houses here which have survived the first year were both started by women, I need have no great gift of prophecy to foretell a thorough success if the women of Chicago take up this great work in a practical manner. Then no visitor to the city will have to report, as did the chairman of an investigating committee in my hearing in 1887: 'Our search has been a failure in finding coffee houses which have been a success, and a success in finding coffee houses which have been failures.'"

Mrs. Eva McIntyre, writing from the experiences of the Minneapolis W. C. T. U. Coffee House, says:

"The American coffee house is an institution peculiar to America, and like all other commodities, it sprung into existence because of the demands of the people. In Europe each country has its coffee house and restaurants, each peculiarly equipped, and the menu made to suit the demands of the countrymen. Who would think of sitting down to a dinner in Germany without finding dishes which the German appetite craves, sauerkraut and pretzels. So in France, Italy and other countries. In America, the steward of the coffee house has the appetite of all nations to cater to, and what would suit our German friend would not satisfy his neighbor. Therefore, the bill of fare must be elaborate. Even in a western coffee house one must bear in mind the dear Easterner, or Yankee, and serve baked beans garnished with crisp pork, brown bread, Indian meal pudding and the homely dainties of New England—these are counted beyond all price by the wandering sons. Feeble imitations of these local feasts exist in all our restaurants, but they do not thrive any better than do the corn pone of Virginia or the chicken gumbo of New Orleans and the 'side meat' of Missouri. The cook must be exported with the recipe or the attempt will be a sickening failure, for, you know, there is no cooking like 'mother's,' and you cannot find everywhere her woodshed upon which to ripen the tomatoes.

"There is scarcely a town of 1,500 inhabitants but has one or more restaurants. These were started by some brother on purely business principles, for the money there was in them. It is only during the last ten or twelve years that a restaurant was thought of as a philanthropic movement. The woman's exchange came into existence; it had a phenomenal growth, forty having been opened during the last decade. The first exchange was opened at 329 Fifth avenue, New York. The exchange did not meet the needs of the people, as far as the restaurant was concerned, the prices were necessarily too high in order that they might pay the per cent on food furnished by the women.

"It was left for the W. C. T. U. to take up this work and carry out the idea of a good coffee house, with home cooking, steaming hot coffee as a counter-irritant for the saloon. The every-day restaurants do not furnish the wholesome food that working men and women need, and often the appetite is not satisfied, then the saloon is the next resort; with this idea the mothers invaded the restaurant and to-day there are a number of coffee houses in America under the entire management of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

"Comparatively few coffee houses have been made a successful enterprise. The failures have been from various causes; want of proper management alone would cause any institution to fail; then they are not kept clean and tidy; want of promptness, waiters get indifferent, especially if business is dull. Eternal vigilance on the part of the manager is necessary both in sleeping and waking moments.

"If the coffee house be on the European plan, the prices should not vary with the rise and fall of provisions, better remove the article from the bill of fare. In regard to the management, I would say most decidedly, that it must be under one head and that head a woman's; women are perfectly able to direct it, it is their business. Then there is a great difference between a committee at the back, and a committee on the back. In the dining room, no matter what occurs, impertinence by waiters should not be allowed; things disagreeable will happen, that is the penalty for being in the restaurant business; if necessary pay back the money, and don't let any one go out dissatisfied, otherwise you not only lose one customer but, it may be, a half dozen.

W. C. T. U. COFFEE HOUSE, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN. (INTERIOR.)

"People do not want fancy things at a restaurant as much as homelike cooking, served neatly by a happy-faced waiter, from off a clean dish with clean linen. The day has gone by when fancy prices will make the most for the proprietor; it is the small amounts that count in the end. To manage a coffee house is one thing, and to tell some one else, understandingly, how to do it is quite another.

"The primary object of the coffee house is to offset the saloon, first, by offering wholesome food and refreshing drinks to counterbalance the constant temptation to spend money for 'that which is not bread' and for 'that which satisfieth not'; by providing elevating social influences we win many from the poisonous atmosphere of the bar-room, in which all purity withers like flowers before a furnace.

"The sober, second thought of the coffee house idea is a business enterprise, through which, by uniting energy and untiring industry, means may be secured with which to prosecute numerous lines of Christian work taken up by many of our women."

Correspondence.

MISS MARSDEN'S JOURNEY TO SIBERIA.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—When we left Moscow one year ago at Christmas time, it was Miss Marsden who waved us the last good-bye; and when we reached St. Petersburgh again on our holiday trip this year, Miss Marsden was one of the first to welcome us back. This seems easy to say, but means far more than these few and simple words convey; for in the interval, what heroic endurance, what noble self-sacrifice, what deeds of far-reaching mercy are comprehended. It may be remembered that a large part of her mission to Siberia was to get the herb of which she had heard in the Caucasus, as a probable cure for leprosy. I cannot now think that this was the sole errand in her own mind, for it would then hardly have occurred to her to project so many other important enterprises.

In company with her friend, Miss Field, a lady well known and well beloved in St. Petersburgh for her noble Christian work as well as for her lovely character—just the person to supplement with her practical carefulness Miss Marsden's unconsciousness of details—Kate Marsden set out on her journey to Siberia on the first day of February, 1891. From the end of the railway, two days' ride from Moscow, they took their way in sledges, drawn by wild horses, and sleeping only five or six hours of the twenty-four, in their wraps, on the floor of some rough and filthy stopping place. In the large towns they were generally entertained by the governor of the province, but this was their only experience of comfort, and this they owed to the kindness and thoughtfulness of her Imperial Majesty, the Empress of Russia, whose letters to officials along the way proved the "open sesame" to hospitals and prisons, and to hearts as well. When they reached Omsk it became evident that their money would not hold out for two, and Miss Field turned back homeward to raise funds for the completion of Miss Marsden's journey. And so Miss Marsden was left, very helpless apparently, without an interpreter, at the mercy of strange drivers, in a vast desert of snow, and with the thermometer standing at forty degrees below zero. She loves, however, to tell how help has always come just as she needed it, and at this very critical moment the governor of Tomsk sent an escort to Omsk to accompany her to the former city. On the entire sledge journey a police escort was given her from one province to another, until in April, the last of the month, she reached Irkutsk.

Here she learned the latest facts in regard to the lepers of Siberia; how for sixty years they have been crying to the government for help, and how in that time the disease has spread from the Arctic circle southward till it has scattered its seeds over one quarter of that vast territory. As nothing of the existence of the disease in her dominions was known to the Empress of Russia, it will be seen how difficult it is for appeals to reach that kind heart at Gatschina, and one can the better understand the earnestness with which she commissioned Miss Marsden to tell her all she saw of need and suffering on her way.

At Irkutsk, during her stay, Miss Marsden organized a committee consisting of the Governor-general, the Archbishop, Bishop and several other residents of the town, to take in hand the building of a leper hospital in the infected district, and herself raised several thousand dollars on the spot for this purpose. She then embarked on a cargo boat bound for Yakoutsk, and was four weeks in making this journey without other shelter than a rough shed, and for her resting place, only the bags of grain. Early on the journey, at Erkaterinberg, I think, she met a good bishop of the Greek church, who assured her in regard to the existence of the herb, and himself knew of its helpfulness in some cases. Through some of the priests who had labored with him in his forty years' ministry among the Yakouts, he was able to have a supply of the plant ready for her on her arrival at Yakoutsk. Though she had now traveled over six thousand miles from Moscow, she was still many hundreds of miles from the leper country—a wilderness that lies around the rivers Lena and Bilini.

To make this journey safely it was necessary to have an escort of thirty mounted Yakouts, and with this retinue, accompanied by a young medical candidate who spoke both French and Russian, she set forth on her long horseback journey of fifteen hundred miles. It was in the intense Arctic summer, and often impossible to ride in the daytime, so they were obliged to pick their way through the bog and the dense forest in the darkness, their horses as nervous as children in the dark, and often startled by the glaring red eyes of a hungry bear. At other times when it was possible to ride by day, they must all huddle together in a tent at night, in order to keep warm, keeping up bright fires on account of the wild beasts that prowled and howled around their camp. Traveling this way through the months of July and August, Miss Marsden was able to visit and help seventy-three lepers living at long distances from each other, in huts made of clay and manure, and without other food than is furnished by the fish of the numerous small lakes in the forest. It is strongly suspected that these fish contain the germs of the disease, in which case the spread of leprosy at such a rapid rate is not difficult to account for. The lepers are turned out into this wilderness at the first appearance of the plague, and live there till they die. It is supposed that food will be carried around a circuit of many hundred wersts at stated intervals, but officials are often remiss, and some fearful cases of starvation are reported. And the intervals are, at best, so long that the food is putrid long before a fresh supply can be expected. The poor creatures were many of them so impressed by Miss Marsden's love for them, coming so far to find out their needs, and to supply the few comforts in her power, that they tried to show their appreciation by offering her their poor, miserable food, and stroking her face with their poor stumps of hands—loving attentions that she said she could no more refuse than a holy sacrament. With the help of her medical assistant, she took a very complete record of each case, and brought back with her samples of leprous flesh, which will be invaluable in the study of the disease by scientists. Under these conditions, which I can only hint at in this brief space, it is not to be wondered at that no cases of cures are reported of the plant. Cases of alleviation there certainly are, leading to strong hope that in better circumstances, such as are soon to be made a reality by the establishment of the hospital, a positive cure may be effected. Miss Marsden has brought back a supply of the plant, and hopes to have it thoroughly tested in the leper hospital at Jerusalem and in the warmer climates where the disease is known.

The first of September found Miss Marsden at Yakoutsk again very worn and broken by the long ride, and the two months of exposure to almost every discomfort and danger, for all this time she had not had a change of clothing, or been able to take off the well-worn garments at night. Insects of the most tormenting description infested the wilderness, and she was "very much in the condition of Lazarus," as she laughingly said, when she reached a comfortable room and bed. Still no thought of complaint ever moved her from her purpose, which was and is to see these poor outcasts comfortably housed and cared for. Her sole wish was to get back to tell the Empress of their condition, also to reach St. Petersburg before winter, to secure from Her Majesty the removal of women prisoners to Siberia, at a more humane season of the year. When she reached Tomsk, on her homeward way, she went to the Greek convent and told her story to the sisters there, how the leper hospital was to be built, but that now the problem was, who would care for these poor, suffering patients? As she told the story, she said, "I remembered that we were all King's Daughters, and so I just appealed to them In His Name," and with the result that the Mother Superior and six nuns volunteered for the work. It is a heroic thing when these devoted women go to Molokai or India, there to live and die among the most loathsome of God's outcast poor, but in the present case this resolution takes them to live and die in a land not of flowers and sunshine, but of almost perpetual ice and snow, where for nine months of the year the cold is that of the Arctic regions, forty and even fifty degrees below zero.

I have already exceeded the limits of an article of this sort, and there is still much to tell. Suffice it to say that Miss Marsden reached her journey's end so much the worse for the terrible wear and tear that she ought to rest for a long time, but she will not. Two surgical operations awaited her when I saw her, but she was hard at work every day. Her great enterprise at that time was to secure funds for the maintenance of the hospital, and until this was accomplished, no thought of rest was welcome to her. Since reaching home, I have had a most jubilant letter from her, announcing that her burden has been most wonderfully lifted,—that M. Pobiedonostzew, the head of the Holy Synod, has, on behalf of the church, taken the entire expense of the hospital support off her hands, and has himself given a large sum of money to the enterprise. This, at a time when Russia can but feel the heavy drafts on all her resources, and her sympathy and generosity flowing, of necessity, in the direction of her millions of sufferers, shows how high a value is placed by those in official station, on Miss Marsden's work.

I had other means of seeing how her labor of love is regarded by those who stand very near the Empress, as the Countess Tolstoi, who has been the first lady in waiting at the Imperial court for many years, kindly allowed me to call upon her, and did not hesitate to identify herself with this holy mission, speaking of it as "our work," and of Miss Marsden in the most loving terms. I wish there were space to describe this, to me, ever memorable visit to this noble Christian woman, whose statesman-like glance from the windows of the Winter Palace takes in so wide and interested a view of things in Europe and beyond, and makes her at seventy years old one of the most notable, as she is one of the most interesting women of the century. Her loving address to Miss Marsden, as "my dear child," and her warm appreciation of William T. Stead won my heart completely, for it showed me how true a woman's heart glowed beneath the majestic and queenly outward presence which has graced the home of two emperors, and ministers still in friendly intimacy to the imperial family of Russia.

MARY B. WILLARD.

President's Column.

PERSONAL.

To My Comrades:

In every new undertaking criticism is inevitable, and it comes to my ears that some have said I have already too much to do, and should not have taken on the heavy care of becoming, for the time at least, editor-in-chief of THE UNION SIGNAL. The facts are that I had no expectation of assuming such duties until, upon the death of our beloved "Yolande" Ames, the stroke told so severely on Miss West, who had long stood at the helm, as editor, that the comrades nearest to her felt that she must have a change, and have it at once for the sake of her health and spirits. She was persuaded to go, the evening of the day this was first mentioned to her, on the International Press Excursion to California, and has repeatedly written to us of her gratitude to those who sent her off and did what they could to make it easier for her to leave. In this plan for a change to be afforded to our faithful editor, I had no part except to help it on when started. Then came the question, "Who shall take care of the paper?" and being asked if we would do so, Lady Henry Somerset and I consented, for it occurred to me that it was even less laborious to express my thoughts and hopes, purposes and plans for our work to half a million white-ribboners and temperance men and women every week, than to write laboriously to the leaders one by one. I am confident that in this way I am best serving the interests of those who placed me in the two-fold and most responsible position of president of the World's and the National W. C. T. U.'s whose organ THE UNION SIGNAL is. It is less laborious to work through this channel than to send out private letters, no matter with how many secretaries or stenographers one may be provided. It is also less laborious than to traverse the country, as I did steadily for twelve years, reaching from 500 to 2,500 persons in my evening meetings, whereas now the number reached, through the press, is increased incalculably. For two years in succession my comrades have unanimously voted me a year's rest in the Atlanta and Boston Conventions. This generosity was greatly appreciated by me, but the rest has not been taken and cannot be except that I am thus kept off the platform and am working in more quiet, but I believe much more effective and pervasive ways. One of our state presidents, Mrs. Rastall, offered a resolution at the Atlanta Convention that if I be granted a vacation and relieved from work for the W. C. T. U., I also should be requested not to go when others should call, and I believe her point was well taken. The criticism has been made that I do not attend as many summer meetings as I ought, but my physician told me that I must not do so this year, and I have cancelled engagements of the most important character. It cost me not a little to decline to speak before the National Educational Convention in Saratoga next summer, and the National Christian Endeavor Convention, in Madison Square Gardens, in July. These were gatherings at which a great deal could have been accomplished for our cause. It is my conviction that a certain number of meeting held, or a certain amount of work done by a leader, are far less important than that health be maintained at par, and spirits and capacity for work conserved.

It has also been urged that I am paid by the National W. C. T. U., and work for another organization, as editor for THE UNION SIGNAL, without salary; but while it is true that I declined a salary, feeling that THE UNION SIGNAL presented me a grand vehicle through which to carry on my work as President, I have been voted by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association $100 a month for the stenographic service, which is essential to success, in view of my multiplied duties and immense correspondence.

These facts are put before my comrades of the Grand Army of Reform for their consideration, and are uttered as frankly as they have been thought by

Yours in the love of our whole cause,

Frances E. Willard.

***

PETITION OF THE

WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

FOR THE

PROTECTION OF THE HOME.

Addressed to the Governments of the World.

Honored Rulers, Representatives and Brothers:

We, your Petitioners, although belonging to the physically weaker sex, are strong of heart to love our homes, our native land, and the world's family of nations.

We know that clear brains and pure hearts make honest lives and happy homes, and that by these the nations prosper, and the time is brought nearer when the world shall be at peace.

We know that indulgence in Alcohol and Opium, and in other vices which disgrace our social life, makes misery for all the world, and most of all for us and for our children.

We know that stimulants and opiates are sold under legal guarantees which make the Governments partners in the traffic, by accepting as revenue a portion of the profits, and we know with shame that they are often forced by treaty upon populations, either ignorant or unwilling.

We know that the law might do much, now left undone, to raise the moral tone of society, and render vice difficult.

We have no power to prevent these great iniquities beneath which the whole world groans, but you have power to redeem the honor of the nations from an indefensible complicity.

We therefore come to you with the united voices of representative women of every land, beseeching you to raise the standard of the law to that of Christian morals, to strip away the safeguards and sanctions of the state from the drink traffic and the opium trade, and to protect our homes by the total prohibition of these curses of civilization throughout all the territory over which your Government extends.

NAMES.	RESIDENCES.

We must have one million names this year. Will not men and women, youths and maidens, boys and girls, who have the great cause of home protection, paste this petition on a nice white sheet of paper and circulate it to the best of their ability sending the names to Miss Alice E. Briggs, Rest Cottage, Evanston, Ill.?

TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS.

BY MATILDA B. CARSE.

By faith Noah, being warned of God of things not seen as yet moved with fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house.—Heb. 11: 7.

The crowds that daily pass along La Salle street in front of the Temple have been annoyed for months past with an ugly barricade of old boards covering the front of the grand entrance. The rest of the building has called forth peans of praise, but the point where usually centers the crowning beauty of a building has in this instance been covered up in rather an unsightly manner. People wondered when the outside had been completed for weeks, why this ugly barricade should be kept up. The great sliding door in the center on which was painted "No admittance," utterly forbade farther scrutiny, which if it could have been prosecuted would have revealed the fact that the most skilled Italian artisans were hard at work with chisel and hammer, following the pattern given by the architect, and turning the rough, hard granite into most exquisite Gothic designs. I have often stood behind the barricade watching the men as the hammer came down on the chisel, blow after blow, making the fire fly and little chips break off, to my unpracticed eye, without any appreciable effect on the granite, but as the weeks went by I saw the beautiful design of the architect was gradually being reproduced on the stone. I enjoyed thinking what a surprise it it would be to all when the hour came for the ugly outer covering to be removed, and the grand entrance stands revealed in all its beauty. As much of a surprise as it has been to many a weary soul, who, having passed along earth's pilgrimage, smarting under the chisel and hammer of earthly affliction, realized not until the hour came when the poor garment of flesh was removed, what a glorious pattern the great Architect had wrought out of their lives, fitting them to be polished stones in His heavenly Temple. Yesterday as persons passed the Temple they stopped to look and admire; a wonderful transformation had taken place in a night. The great wooden barricade had been taken away, and the grand entrance 23 by 24 feet, stood revealed, fretted with all the beauty of Gothic sculpture. On a great panel on either side of the entrance, not so high but a child might read, are the following words cut on the granite: "The Temple," underneath, "W. C. T. U." The same inscription has been cut on the corner-stone, with the addition —"organized 1874—erected 1890." On one corner the monogram of our society, on the other the plain letters "W. C. T. U." so that he that runs may read. A day or two ago, when I first saw these letters cut on the corner-stone of the magnificent building which is the pride of this great city, I felt like exclaiming: "Now, Lord, lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, for mine eyes have seen thy salvation."

***

The King's Daughters of Rock Falls, Ill., send $23.82 to be applied on their pledge of $100. Washington county, N. Y., W. C. T. U. sends $25, last payment on a $100 pledge. The Mt. Pleasant W. C. T. U. of Providence, R. I., sends $20 to be applied on its pledge. The Evanston, Ill., union, sends $26.17, a payment on its pledge. The Harristown, Ill., W. C. T. U., sends $40.50 and the W. C. T. U., of Union, Me., $10 on their pledges.

***

The following will show how the littles are gathered in for the Temple:

Mrs. Jane M. Range is a veteran seventy-seven years old. She lives at Dayton, Washington. She sent for a mite-box, and returned its contents, $4. Some generous miners helped her fill it—they dropped into it $2.50. About three months ago Mr. P. S. Frissell, Hinsdale, Mass., sent for a mite-box; he has returned the contents, $3.69, and writes: "The mite-box was placed on my desk; I would call traveling agents' attention to it and they would generally put something in. I wish it were more, but every little helps." Mrs. S. W. Walter, Eddyville, Neb., a veteran, sends $5. She writes: "Not knowing whether I shall ever see the Temple, I have felt for some time I should give something, so that should any of my children pass through Chicago and visit the Temple they could see my name in the record book." Abbie M. Church, Hallowell, Me., has interested herself in the Temple and sends $12.60 raised by mite-boxes and through other sources. Mr. and Mrs. Levi Strunk, Fenton, Ill show their interest in the Temple by sending $10; they write of their deep interest in the enterprise. Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Sherman, of Sterling, Col., also send $5 each. Mrs. M. J. Goppe, of Mapleville, Neb., sends $5, and writes: "May this small gift send its influence back to Nebraska and help to carry the state for prohibition ere long."

***

The promise of a photograph with a group consisting of Lady Henry Somerset, Miss Willard and Mrs. Carse, with their autographs attached, to all persons who fill a mite-box ($3.65) by April, 1893, has received no end of responses. This pledge will also hold good to all persons who fill mite-boxes for unions.

***

Orders are increasing constantly for the Temple silver models. We receive letters every day of high appreciation of their beauty. Miss Frances E. Willard writes: "I have had many inkstands given me—models of everything in the heavens above and the earth beneath—but the beauty, symmetry, suggestiveness of the Temple inkstand has caused me to relegate the whole collection to the top shelf and put our 'House Beautiful' to the fore. From it, in this new form, I am dipping up ink and inspiration by the teaspoonful, some of which will, I hope, return to bless the great enterprise and its great-hearted founder." The price of the models are as follows (let it be remembered all are of the same size): No. 1 is a bank, price $1.75; No. 2, inkstand, $2.25; No. 3, jewel case, $2.25. The above price pays for transportation. All orders for the models should be sent to Mrs. Carse.

149 Ashland Boulevard.

The Household.

HOW THEY TALKED—HOW THEY VOTED.

BY J. S. KNAUSS.

They talked of wealth and freedom,
These men of many minds,
And of the moral progress
This golden era finds;
They told how true prosperity
On virtue's rock is based,
And how the nation's honor
Within the home is placed.
They said of health and reason,
"There are no higher boons,"
Then went to the election
And voted for—saloons!

They raved about high tariff,
Because it was a scheme
That made the poor man's burdens
And sufferings extreme.
They said it was an outrage
That some should wealthy grow
By means of vile extortion,
And methods base and low.
Said they: "From such corruption
Our land we'll purify,"
Then filled the code with statutes
To make the "license" high!

Upon the rights of women
They ventured to dilate,
And said reform was needed
Within both church and state;
And told how loving woman
Could strengthen and refine,
And raise each social compact
From sophistry's design,
And be (at home) a jewel
Of worth and luster rare;
And then they went and voted
To always keep her there!

Belmond, Ia.

MRS. FAIRBANKS' SCHEME.

BY M. F. ROBINSON.

Mrs. Fairbanks was known in the community in which she had lived for a quarter of a century as an earnest, energetic woman of high aim and devoted Christian character. Above all, she was radically and unqualifiedly a temperance woman. She had never taken an active interest in the public advancement of temperance work, because her husband had been for many years a moderate drinker. To declare her convictions publicly seemed like confessing aloud, to strangers, the secret of her troubled heart. Not a drop of intoxicating liquor was ever permitted in her household economy—no pudding sauce or mince-pie compromises ever crept in there—"touch not, taste not, handle not," she believed and exemplified in her daily life.

The moderate drinker was fast becoming a genteel drunkard. Lines deepened upon the good wife's brow, and the hair silvered rapidly. As the husband grew more irritable and unreasonable from month to month, a silent reserve usurped the natural cheerfulness of her manner. They had once lived congenially together; once she had worn upon her sweet face the expression of the much beloved and loving—but the face, the tell-tale face, it will mirror the shadows of the heart in spite of resolve or pretense! From patient forbearance to settled anxiety is but a pace, and any stranger, given to philosophical observation of the human countenance, might have classed this one with the tens of thousands of women who live that inferno of miseries—a loveless married life. Lo! what revelations would the world see, should science some day give to the world an instrument which would gauge the sentiments of the heart of one of these! What tortures endured! What emotions repressed! What temptations overcome! Only Infinite Sympathy could read and measure such record justly. Earthly remedy there is none; for to love the unlovable and unlovely is impossible. Pity and duty may sustain the pretense of affection, but both are cold substitutes. One may live abounding in these and starve and freeze and die for the lack of love! Pity is of the mind; duty is of the hands; but love is of the heart; and lacking this some spring of life fails at its source; there is a never-ceasing thirst and longing which nothing else can supply.

Sleep "knits up the raveled sleeve of care," between the bitter days in troubled lives, for trusting and philosophical minds, if they will but trust and philosophize; but, there came a time in the history of this woman when the waking perplexities were forty-eight hours long,—when the financial side of the question racked her brain day and night.

The colored preacher who spoke from the text, "Dar is a reaper whose name is debt," would have gained inspiration from her anxieties could he have known them; but her story was not for human ears. At last, however, a sense of relief and a degree of hopefulness seemed to pervade her manner, and she remarked at the breakfast table, at which she sat alone with her husband, "I think I see a way out of our financial strait."

"The way out of all such straits is economy and hard work," he retorted significantly, for, while pouring the margin of the profits of a good business down his throat, he frequently charged their pecuniary embarrassments to family expenses, as if to make the faithful wife, who would not have spent so much as a dime in self-indulgence, responsible for business troubles.

Without noticing the unfair inference of his words she added, "If you will let me have two or three dollars this morning I will launch forth in a business which will restore to us our former prosperity."

"Must be a stupendous business with such an immense capital," he remarked scornfully as he ungraciously tossed the silver pieces upon the table and rose to go to his office.

"It is the most extensive line of business in America and requires the least capital to make a start," she replied calmly.

He did not wait for her to unfold her plan, but leaving the house closed the door emphatically behind him.

The possessor of the three dollars arrayed herself in a plain street suit, and went direct to a palatial liquor store in a distant part of the city. Opening the door she entered and advanced deliberately toward the marble bar. A half-dozen well-dressed men were gathered in the place. Bacchanalian symbols, prismatic colors, burnished silver and sparkling glass riveted her attention, and she suddenly halted midway in the room, as if overcome by bewilderment and ladylike amazement at her surroundings.

A death-like stillness fell upon the occupants as they gazed in astonishment at the genteel intruder. One, just about to lift a foaming glass to his lips, set it down softly, and stole quietly out of the doorway nearest him. His withdrawal was the signal for the departure of his comrades,—all seemed to have immediate and imperative calls elsewhere.

The bartender, staring in blank surprise and wonder, started and colored at her pleasant, but reserved, "Good-morning, sir."

"Good-morning, madam," he replied.

"I would like a half-gallon of liquor of the quality most used by the moderate drinker," she said.

A jocose smile curled his lips, but her pallor and dignity of bearing checked any freedom on his part, and he replied respectfully, "We have a good article at two dollars a gallon—wholesale prices, madam—a better at four dollars, and a better still at seven dollars," his eyes beamed with curiosity at his unusual customer and her more unusual purchase.

"I will take the cheaper grade," and she deposited a silver dollar upon the marble bar before her.

"And where shall I send it, please?" inquired the retailer, politely.

"I will take it with me," she answered.

"It makes a large package, lady," said he demurringly.

"Yes; but I think I can carry it, thank you," replied she in a tone and manner which forbade further protest.

Stepping for a moment into a storage room in the rear he returned and handed her a neatly covered basket containing four pint bottles of liquor labeled "Old Bourbon." He bowed her out of the door as politely and deferentially as if a knight of the drawing room, and watched her until her form was lost in the hurrying crowd.

More than once on that day he related to his patrons an account of his odd customer and her purchase. Men and boys of all conditions and ages may go into the saloon—women fallen from self-respect visit some places where drink is sold without question from men, but to see a lady in such a place excites comment; it is improper. Thank God for all such improprieties!

Mrs. Fairbank felt like a guilty creature; she would have been only a trifle more uncomfortable had she carried a dynamite bomb in that neatly covered basket; she reached home at last, and went directly to her own room. Unpacking the bottles she placed them upon the pretty center table with a corkscrew and a dime savings bank. On the side wall hung a pair of inverted wine-glasses suspended by a pure white ribbon bow; these, her pretty temperance symbols, were placed on the table beside the bottles. This done she knelt a moment, with bowed head beside the desecrated table, then rising with a pallor about the lips, but with resolutely strong step, she went about her household duties.

Her husband came in at the usual hour, and as was his custom, went to their apartment to make his toilet before dinner. Mrs. Fairbank entered the room in quest of some article in a closet, to find him gazing in mute astonishment at the array of bottles upon the table—the first intoxicant he had ever seen beneath their roof.

"May I inquire what this means, madam?" he asked in a tone of injured dignity.

She stepped to the table and in a low voice, mellow with resolutely suppressed emotion said: "Yes, Herman, this is my way out of our financial difficulties. I have plead with you to abstain from drink and your own moral and financial ruin; you refuse, and I thought it best to start a saloon of our own, in order that the two hundred per cent profit may go into my pocket and save the last remnant of our property—this home. Here is a half gallon of liquor, it cost at wholesale price two dollars; there are thirty drinks, such as I am informed gentlemen pay from ten to twenty cents each for, according to the manner in which it is served; at the lowest price there is enough margin to enable me to save, in a year's time, a sum sufficient to aid me in caring for you when you become incapacitated for business; and if you patronize this establishment as freely as you do those down in the city, I shall grow rich rapidly, keep this roof above you in your helplessness, and—and—" her voice lowered again to a more solemn tone—"have money enough left to bury you when you die." She turned and walked out of the room leaving him alone to contemplate her plan, only adding as she went, "You can drink yourself rich instead of poor, Herman."

He threw himself into a wide arm-chair and gazed upon the table and its contents. He was paying two hundred per cent profit upon his own ruin! Even his faithful wife had given him over to his appetite! She offered him an opportunity to "drink himself rich"! A new scheme, surely. The dinner waited untasted while the clock ticked another hour, and still another into his wife's throbbing brain, upon her quivering heart, before she heard his step upon the stairs. He came into her presence a changed man, and gave to her a pledge which he has never broken.

The bottles disappeared from the center table with the seals unbroken, having served the purpose of an object lesson in mathematical temperance reform.

Waterloo, Iowa.

WORDS TO THE WISE.—COMMITTEE WORK AS AN EDUCATOR.

BY ABBY MORTON DIAZ.

Committee work may well be considered as conducive to the higher, yes, to the highest education, since it demands what is declared to be the chief duty and aim of religion, self-abnegation. "Deny self," said the Master. "Oh, to be nothing!" prays the saint, and "Oh, to be nothing!" chants the solemn choir.

Equally with the paid work of business does the committee work of philanthropy demand sacrifice of personal considerations. In both cases it is the understanding that self's affairs shall not interfere with the duties undertaken. The philanthropic society, as well as the business firm, promises the public to engage in certain lines of work. For the fulfillment of such agreement the firm depends upon its employès, the society upon its committees. The philanthropic worker agrees to work for love, the business worker for money. But an obligation is an obligation, just that and nothing less, whether assumed for love or for money, and implies personal responsibility, and a degree of self-abnegation. This latter term is high-sounding, but the principle itself, like all high principles, is concerned in the humblest affairs, and in fact does exalt these to its own high plane. Promptness, for instance, may be supposed a matter of minor importance, but here, right at the very threshold, the moral education of committee work is begun. Self's personal affairs must not stretch over the hour or moment appointed for a committee meeting, lest self become the thief of others' time. Should the quorum be seven, one inconsiderate laggard steals sixty minutes. This the said laggard is at last made to perceive, perhaps by her own occasional losses, then, conscience stricken, she gives up her dishonest practices, and the virtuous lesson thus learned in the reformatory school of a committee room is likely to serve good purpose elsewhere.

When the learner shall have perfected herself in the simple honesty course she is ready for a further lesson in the renunciation of self. Self-denial in its common acceptation is reasonably easy. Almost any one of us will give up the biggest apple, the coziest arm-chair; a few of us will endure serious deprivation, but there is one thing made by us so absolutely a part of self that to give it up, or have it operated upon, cuts right into the quick and arouses the instincts of self-defense. By this thing, so closely joined to self, is meant self's expressed opinion or idea. One, whose committee education remains as yet unfinished, is likely to defend these just because they are hers. Objections receive scant attention, for her mind is occupied in preparing a rejoinder. Suggestions of weak points are warded off. As she advances in wisdom, however, she learns that an idea, opinion or plan once given forth is not a piece of private property to be defended, but that it belongs to the whole company and that every member is in duty bound to give it close examination and to show up its defects. Moreover, it has by this time grown clear to her that the setter forth of an opinion, idea or plan is of all others most bound to recognize its defects, lest haply it become the means of harm rather than of good. "Courage of her convictions"? Certainly, and show reasons for the same; but freed from obstinacy and conceit and pride of opinion, she will have become so docile in spirit, so devoid of personality as to yield graciously to the decisions of the majority.

Later on, still more advanced in her education, she also accepts kindly all personal criticisms of her methods, her motives, her aims, her sayings and doings, though probably insisting that such criticisms be made in the right spirit: but in the next higher course she is able to maintain this same impersonality even when the fault-finding remarks are made in the spirit of animosity. She perceives the fact that whether loved or hated, revered or despised, called good or bad, her sole concern is with the alleged fault, "Does it exist?" With the spirit shown she has nothing to do whatever. It is not her spirit. The faults must have seemed to exist or there would have been no reason for the remarks; it remains with her to trace out the cause of such seeming. Possibly she has acted unwisely, decided hastily, appeared unfriendly or neglectful. She may have spoken lightly and with seeming discourtesy, may have been puffed up with self-approval; owing to immediate pressure of duties her words, tones, looks, manner, may not always have betokened the presence of the spirit of love and of kinship. If any of these things be true of her she herself is the person most concerned—just as each apple on a tree is itself most concerned in its own perfectness, having the true apple type or pattern, to show forth.

Thus aiming at excellence she will say, blessed are the faultfinders, knowing that they advantage us in two ways; first, by revealing to us our imperfections they put us in the way of improvement. Second, if the censure is unwarranted by facts we are given a chance to explain,—to explain, it should be added, not so much for self's exoneration, as that the influence of our supposed unworthiness may not work for unrighteousness. As only the feminine pronoun has been herein used it must be stated that the need of the kind of education above mentioned has no sex limitations.

UNION SIGNAL

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

FRANCES E. WILLARD, LADY HENRY SOMERSET, MARY ALLEN WEST. } EDITORS.

MARGARET A. SUDDUTH, MRS. HARRIET B. KELLS. } OFFICE EDITORS.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.
MRS. F. H. RASTALL, Business Manager.
161 La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

DEP'T BOOKS AND LEAFLETS.—ALICE M. GUERNSEY, Editor.

Entered at the Post-office, Chicago, Ill., as second-class matter.

And the Lord shall be King over all the earth in day that shall there be one Lord, and his name one.—Zech 14 9.

OUR BILL OF FARE

for this issue might well have for a sub-head multum in parvo, so diversified are the subjects, and so meaty are the contents. Helen Campbell's world-wide name is found upon the first contributed page, adding emphasis to the excellent creed. "Every day beautiful as I go along." The name of the Prohibition party is discussed by one who favors "Columbian." New York's new book receives a further exposition by Dr. Cushman. A fervid plea for union of the People's and the Prohibition parties is made by the secretary of the former party "Railroad Ties" makes the much discussed topic of a place for a woman's purse illustrate the different ways of carrying the same thing—in matters spiritual. The first of a series of three articles on "The American Coffee House" appears on page 4 with an illustrated sketch of Mrs. E. A Russell and the Minneapolis W C. T U. restaurant Miss Marsden's journey to Siberia is graphically told by Mrs Mary B. Willard, and the President's Column and Temple Items occupy their usual places. A poem, story, and 'Words to the Wise" fill the Household page to overflowing. The World's W. C. T. U. is well represented on page 10, and the Children are cared for on page 14. Five names for the new column are presented for their choice by Aunt Jane.

A BLOODLESS REVOLUTION.

The time has been when such a crisis as the city of London has passed through within the last few weeks would have caused a civil war, for the struggle was virtually between the aristocracy and the people. The candidates put forward by the classes were incontinently beaten, while those representing the masses were elected almost to a man. This bloodless revolution is the more remarkable, as, like all other great centers of business and politics, London is notoriously conservative. Happily the change has been gradually wrought by the resistless forces of public opinion that have recognized the value of disinterested public service.

Three years ago Parliament gave local home rule to the municipalities of England by providing for county councils to be elected by the people, and to serve without fee or reward. The council in London was composed of men sincerely interested in the public good; four women were elected members and two were appointed to sit as aldermen, but the rulings of the court deprived the public of their services.

One hundred and twelve men constituted the council and board of aldermen, the latter being elected by the former. So well did they discharge their duties—which practically embrace the government of the entire city,—and so generous was their policy toward the working classes, and also their proposals for a more equitable division of taxation between temporary and permanent interests in real estate, that lethargic London rose to the occasion and reëlected the progressive members by large majorities. It is significant that one Duke and four other members of the House of Lords, all of whom were candidates, were defeated.

Lord Rosebury and Lord Carrington, both of them advanced Liberals, were elected, which shows that a title does not necessarily prove a hindrance when the candidate is known to be in touch with the people's cause. Among those elected are barristers, solicitors, surgeons, journalists, architects, builders, tailors, jewelers, coal merchants, bakers and travelers, a shoemaker, a printer, a compositor, a sailor and two carpenters; besides these there is one Canon of the Established Church and one missionary, three retired military officers and one publican, alas! but no brewers. This gives a better complexion to the council than the municipal officers of any city in the United States can show Compared with Chicago's "boodleboard" of aldermen, London's city fathers are foregleams of the millennium.

It must not be forgotten that women voted for the second time under the new laws that grant the municipal franchise to all rate-payers, irrespective of sex. Women's vote in England has been counted on by the Conservatives, but it is significant that the progressive party has shown its interest in temperance and other social reforms. The women have cast their ballots for home protection, as THE UNION SIGNAL has always predicted. Existing parties in America will do well to note the signs of these times. The handwriting on the wall grows plainer every day. England and America are moving onward to the better era when all the knowledge in the community shall take care of all its ignorance, and all the virtue in a community shall prove at its ballot-box that it is abundantly able to take care of all its vice.

"CLEANLINESS IS NEXT TO GODLINESS."

No more important forward step has been taken by women in public affairs than their efforts to help clean the streets of New York and Chicago. Under the saloon rule of these two municipalities the people have been very badly served by those who should have done everything that the latest results of modern science indicate to improve the sanitation of these immense aggregations of humanity; but the condition of things had become not only disreputable but alarming, when women came to the rescue—as they have always done in times of dire extremity. What has been already accomplished in New York City we hope to describe in an article of a future issue.

The movement has but now been inaugurated in Chicago. On March 27 the Municipal Order League of the city was at the fore, Judge Walter Q. Gresham presiding. Mrs. Henry Wade Rogers, wife of the president of Northwestern University, Dr. Sarah Hackett Stevenson, one of the leading physicians of the city, Mrs. Charles Henrotin, vice-president of the woman's board of managers, and other prominent women, with good men not a few, occupied the platform. The president, Ada C. Sweet, explained the scope of the work, and took a collection. Miss Sweet has long been known as one of the brightest and most winsome women in Chicago. She was pension agent for many years, and used playfully to say that it took more time to hold her office against the determined men who sought to wrest it away from her on political grounds, than it did to do the work. She was finally ousted by their machinations—or else she resigned for lack of resignation, we have forgotten which—and has set up an office for herself, in which she is successful, as her talents and dauntless energies would always cause one to expect, no matter what she might undertake. She and her coadjutors will succeed in this street cleaning undertaking; but before they do this thoroughly, they will be obliged to seek and obtain municipal suffrage.

Rev. Jenkin Lloyd Jones, who is a great humanitarian, spoke at this meeting, his subject being "Cleanliness is next to Godliness." He said, speaking from our present point of view, "The soap man is sometimes a better evangelist than the tract man. If you wish to refine a boy, give him a buttonhole bouquet, and he will wash his face. Wherever you find dirt, you will find impurity. The uncleanness of Chicago is testified to by the grinning row of wooden garbage boxes that line several hundred miles of alleys, each one reveling in the presence of that vast mass of decaying matter, whence emerge the germs of diphtheria and typhoid. The city officials say they have not money enough to employ the 30,000 idle men in cleaning the streets; but I find, on good authority, that the Chicago streets cannot be cleaned at all, that the city administration would almost break down for lack of funds, were it not for the revenue which is received from the accursed license money of the 5,600 saloons, more or less, within its limits. The most efficient means of cleanliness is the use of fuel gas in the manufacturing and thickly settled portions of the city. Let two things be done religiously in our midst, and the cleanliness will come—vote and pay taxes. We have a harbinger of promise in a woman's hand, which shall ere long hold the ballot. I would have each church provided with baths, free or nearly so, and drinking fountains for men, and troughs for horses. I would have bath houses in the more crowded parts of the city, with accommodations for private laundry work; and I would have, in each of our great parks, a great assembly hall, with art gallery and museum."

Dr. Sarah Hackett Stevenson said among other admirable things, "We have 22,400 square miles of water at our front door in Chicago, and not one public bath to use. Men and boys are arrested for swimming in the lake; 5,000 were thus treated last year. Boston is far in advance of us in public baths. In 1891, that city had sixteen free bath houses and twenty lavatories. The baths are floating, boat-like structures in the bay. The only fault I find with the Boston system is that it is a warm weather one. Winter ought also to be provided for. It is an amazing fact that saloons are the only places in Chicago that have what can be called public lavatories."

Well, women, wash away! Scrub and "clear up" generally. It is a good preliminary lesson for that "general housekeeping" that shall sweep and ventilate this country from its filthy smoking cars to its cobwebby caucuses.

CONVENTIONAL ETHICS.

It would surprise many persons to know what proportion of their ethical observances are based upon inheritance, temperament, habit. "It is our custom," has been for immemorial ages the final explanation of conduct. The trend of habit and the set of brain are towards repetitiousness in action. These account for much that men call sacred. New departures are taken only by the most stalwart natures, and even they move forward with many a startled glance over the shoulder wondering if they have not committed the unpardonable sin in forsaking the old paths. Conscience may be compared to a steam engine with mighty power in it to move along the track, but that track may be called knowledge and the narrow gauge determines the engine's caliber,—so that in the last analysis knowledge furnishes the roadway, puts in the ballast and leads the race onward to broader fields and pastures new.

As Coleridge has so finely said, "Time consecrates, and what is gray with age becomes religion." We are not now speaking of Christianity—which affords the safest working hypothesis of a life that man has ever found,—but we mean those special observances to which many are devoted simply because their fathers were. We consider the ethics that hold to alcoholic wine at the communion as purely conventional and yet, amazing as it is, there are no doubt thousands of good men and women who think they do God service in retaining alcoholic wines. This is especially true in the old country, and the Archbishop of Canterbury has declared that it is irreverent to use what we call unfermented wine. Conventional ethics closes the temperance coffee houses of London while the gin shops continue in full blast. Conventional ethics tells women they must keep silence in the churches; that they must be in subjection to their husbands and learn of them at home, quoting specific texts of Scripture to define the status of one-half the human race and leaving entirely out of the account the broad generalization of that gospel which came to bring not only light, but liberty. Conventional ethics said to the laboring man, "Be content with your wage, servants obey your masters," but the New Testament is the greatest light that ever shone upon the labor question, and men are reading it in humble homes where once the gospel was not loved, because they find its ethics those of the masses rather than the classes.

Whoever branches out, whoever does an old thing in a new way, whoever even invents a word or phrase, leaves the beaten track and walks his way at his own will, may rest assured that the conventional mind will hold him severely to account. Yet, the wisest philosopher who ever lived said that continually the old moulds must be broken that the living forces of God may flow out into channels fitted to carry them more steadily. The new is very likely to be the best, because it is the newest, and in a universe so largely unexplored we must forever be going forward. Fresh combinations, unaccustomed outlooks, fuller explorations must be the rule in the minds and hearts of those, who in the name of Christ have said, "Let us go forward, we are able to take the hill country and drive out the Philistines." As it has been ever, so it is to-day and shall be without end, the truest friends of humanity are they that continually "speak to the children of Israel that they go forward."

DOLLARS AND CENTS.

There is no test of character like the relations one manifests toward money. The way in which anybody gives, holds and spends money will tell you more about that person than any other one fact that you might learn. We once thought that the best test of character is the manner in which a person treats those dependent upon himself. And we have often said that we would rather know how a professing Christian treats his wife and children, how a professing Christian woman treats her housemaid, how they both treat their dogs and cats, than to know what they say in prayer-meeting.

But this money question cuts even deeper, because up to this time money stands for all that anybody wants on this planet except character. It will even buy reputation, but nothing on earth can buy character. That is a heavenly vision and comes down from God. It has been said by the wisest among men that the love of money is the root of all evil, and no statement showing a deeper insight into human nature was ever made. Emerson has somewhere a thought like this: "At first you are careful that your neighbor does not cheat you, but some day you become careful not to cheat your neighbor, and when this happens you have exchanged your market cart for a chariot of the sun." Everybody knows in his heart which of the two he is most anxious about—not to be cheated or not to cheat. If the latter, then he is rich in character whether he is rich in dollars and cents or not.

Among relatives money questions have caused more ill feeling than any other subject. It seems strange that the tie of gold is stronger than the tie of blood, but so it has proved a thousand times. It is well for us to look carefully into our attitude toward our pocket-books. Have we mean, little and niggardly ways? If so, we are in spirit poverty-stricken whether we have realized this or not. Are we willing to divide with those about us? If not, we must steadily cultivate this kindly habitude.

We once read of a man converted late in life who had by nature the meanness of an inordinate love of money. One day when the collection basket was approaching his pew he opened his purse and took out the smallest coin that it contained. Perceiving that this was not according to the gospel plan he took out another larger still. Just then a voice whispered to him, "You had better look out, you are giving too much." He recognized this as a voice from beneath and not from above and as the basket had just then arrived he flung into it purse and all, saying in an audible voice, "Ah, old devil, you may as well clear out; if you speak to me again I will do this way every time."

That was probably the best hour that man ever saw. However money-loving we may be by nature, it is entirely possible to break away from this corroding bondage that eats away all the finer qualities out of the human spirit and destroys every blossom from the garden of the heart and home. If we will pursue a method analogous to that of the man of whom we have just written, we shall soon find ourselves out of the wilderness and on the fragrant, happy highways of a generous, large-hearted life; a life

"That is twice blessed;
It blesseth him who gives and him who takes."

HOUSEHOLD ECONOMICS.

Mrs. Charles Henrotin, vice-president of the Woman's Branch of the World's Congress Auxiliary, has sent us an important pamphlet from the committee on Household Economics. It is decided to establish a Housekeepers' Association, the object of which is to awaken the public mind to the importance of establishing a bureau of information where there can be an exchange of wants and needs between employer and employed in every department of home and social life. To promote among the members a more scientific knowledge of the economic value of various foods and fuels; a more intelligent understanding of correct plumbing and drainage in our homes, as well as the need for better water and good light in carefully built houses; also to secure skilled labor in every department of women's work in our homes—not only to demand better trained cooks and waitresses, but to consider the importance of meeting or increasing the demand for those competent to do plain sewing and mending. The work is to involve cooking classes, industrial schools, coöperative laundries, coöperative bakeries, training schools for laborers, kitchen-gardens, public kindergartens, diet kitchens, mothers' and nursegirls' schools, and training schools for nurses. There is to be a committee on food supplies, the duties of which will be to have published twice a week in the daily papers a list of wholesale and retail foods, such as meats, vegetables, butter, eggs, etc., to compare Chicago with other markets and to furnish statements of what articles of food are most desirable to buy either in large or small quantities, with household recipes for cooking and all other matters relating to household economics. There is also a committee on publication known as press work, which is very important since by its means women throughout the country will be made aware of the valuable results obtained.

Another important committee is upon household economics in village communities. The work of this committee is to formulate plans for housework in village communities, suggesting plans for coöperation in laundries, bakeries and kitchens, discussing methods of profitable market gardening, poultry and egg raising on a small scale, and furnishing information on all topics connected with housework.

There is also a committee on teaching sewing in all the schools. We hope there will be displayed the good sense to require all boys as well as girls to learn to sew. The best dressmakers are men and it is a most helpful accomplishment, nay, an actual necessity for every man to know how to sew on his own buttons in times like these.

Mrs. John Wilkinson, one of Chicago's most accomplished women, is the president of this association, and it meets on the second Wednesday of each month at 10 a. m. in the new church Temple, Van Buren street. White-ribboners, please take notice. The name given is the Columbian Association of Housekeepers, and the work laid out is just what has been so often called for and needed, namely: the applying of science and the best results of modern thought to that most beautiful and attractive of all human institutions, the home.

The Congregational Club in Worcester, Mass., has recently had a wide-awake controversy on the place assigned to women in the church by Paul. The general drift of the discussion was favorable to the emancipation of women in the church, which is a most cheering symptom in that intelligent and intellectual denomination, the Congregational. We quote some of the utterances:

The intellectuality of woman to-day is in striking contrast with her condition at any former period. Her opportunities are scarcely inferior to those of men. Co-education has been tried and has proved to be a success. Western men unflinchingly accept the logic of event, and to-day nearly four hundred colleges in the United States are empowered to confer degrees of which nearly two-thirds are co-educational. Six million dollars have been given to Vassar, Smith, Wellesley and Bryn Mawr colleges, and two thousand young women are being educated in them. In every profession except one, women are scoring triumphs and annihilating prejudice. It is strangely inconsistent to recognize the special gifts of women in every sphere of activity but one, and against the dictates of reason and common sense alike to rule her out of this sphere, especially when it is plain that this is the very place where her rare gifts might find free scope and accomplish greater results. Who is better qualified for religious work than women? Whatever we may think of the injunction to Timothy, one thing is sure, it is ignored to-day in nearly every denomination. The churches throughout the land owe their strength to women, and tens of thousands of them are directly engaged in religious teaching. If you insist upon restricting the words of the apostle, in his first letter to Timothy, to titled preachers the case is not materially changed. The Quakers have three hundred preachers, the Unitarians sixteen, the Congregationalists six. For thirty years past the emancipation of women has been an absorbing topic, and it will go on till there remains no more territory to possess. There are five classes of men who will defend the affirmative of this question; that is, they will take the ground that the place assigned to women in the church by Paul in his first letter to Timothy is valid and defensible in our own time. (1) Men who regard all Scripture as equally applicable to all times and places. (2) Those who hold that women are constitutionally inferior to men. (3) Those who entertain prejudices. (4) Those who are blind to change in social conditions. (5) Those who, recognizing the law of Christ in everything else, deny its application to ecclesiastical affairs. But when we consider woman as Paul knew her, and as we know her in these days, the unprejudiced mind must make a discrimination between the two characters and the work suitable to them.

Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman, of Missouri, is a general who stirs enthusiasm among her soldier comrades; take, for example, her latest "Bugle Blast" headed, "Read this at the next meeting."

The legal question concerning the ownership of the Temple by the National W. C. T. U. is most happily adjusted. Most of the Temple stock not owned by the W. C. T. U. now, is owned by Marshall Field of Chicago. He owns $251,000. A board of trustees, consisting of Frances E. Willard, Lady Henry Somerset, Madame W. Jennings Demorest, Matilda B. Carse, Mary A. Woodbridge, Harriet B. Kells, Helen L. Hood, and the presidents of several State W. C. T. U's, has been appointed to receive and invest all money for the Temple. Nothing is invested or disbursed without consent of this board. When the Temple is completely paid for, this board of trustees will deed and turn it over to the National W. C. T. U. Marshall Field has entered into written agreement to sell all his stock to the W. C. T. U.; $50,000 to bind the bargain was paid him January 28, 1892; $10,000 to be paid quarterly until all is paid. Not a single legal barrier now prevents our owning this magnificent building, acknowledged to be a fine investment, of which we as a state will receive dividends in exact proportion to the amount we pay. The National and World's W. C. T. U. and the editorial staff of The Union Signal will occupy offices in the Temple when it is completed next May. More than half the entire building is already rented. Four banks hold long leases and are fitting up in truly splendid style. It now remains to be seen what share Missouri W. C. T. U. will have in this rich enterprise. The years are not distant when this enterprise will yield rich returns to all who have a part therein. Will you read Miss E. P. Gordon's article in The Union Signal of February 4. "How One Union Made Money?" Will you communicate with Mrs. M. B. Carse about the "mite-box method"? Will you go to work at once to raise some money? Go to work! Agitate! Agitate! Pay your dues to state, district and county! Pay your pledges! Invest in Temple fund! More unions die for lack of this effort to make money for the cause than from any other reason. Just go to work! You will get the money, and in getting money you will get new members, the respect and recognition of the public, and the development of your own confidence, ingenuity, capability, power. Try it! Try it!

It seems almost incredible that "Lady Brooke," of whom we have all read in connection with the "Prince of Wales set," should propose to assuage the sufferings of the victims of the influenza plague among the poor by the distribution of a thousand blankets and two thousand bottles of brandy! It is late in the day for a woman of sense to make such a suggestion. "The times of our ignorance heaven winked at, but now commands all men to repent," and women too. We earnestly wish that the trustees of our Woman's Temperance Hospital would issue a little booklet, giving the lines of treatment that have proved most available in their own observation. Of course this should be written by physicians and couched in the plainest language, so that mothers in the home need not remain in ignorance of the latest teachings of science on the great question of non-alcoholic stimulants.

The Watch-Tower.

The ballot is an emblem of civilization in the past as represented by man; the ballot is its emblem in the future as represented by man—plus woman.

***

A look across the tree tops now shows shining bayonets of buds that have fought valiantly with winter, and will soon be transformed into bannerets of victory waving in the leaves of spring. May this same triumphant change be wrought for the embattled hosts of temperance reform before our youngest soldier's head blooms with the frost of age.

***

"Oh, God, may we keep our fingers off Thy stars."—Joseph Parker, of London.

***

A Tory paper inveighing against the English temperance movement said: "We congratulate ourselves that so far as we know, but two bishops have signed the pledge this winter. Thank heaven none of the rest have bowed the knee to Baal."

***

Canon Wilberforce in Exeter Hall, after a most thrilling passage in which he described the subtle dangers of moderate drinking and the hold it gets before the victim dreams how great is his bondage, said: "This reminds me of the old nursery rhyme in the 'Book of Nonsense':

"'There was a young woman of Niger
Who went for a ride on a tiger;
But they finished the ride with the lady inside,
And a smile on the face of that tiger.'"

The revulsion of feeling was electric, and that responsive audience made the old hall ring with their cheers and their hearty "Hear, hear."

***

It does not occur to our people how odd it sounds for husband and wife to call each other "Mr." and "Mrs.," but its whimsical effect on foreign ears, if once appreciated by us, would cause the time-honored observance to be honored hereafter in the breach rather than in the performance. In the best cosmopolitan circles the custom is believed to be to call each other either by the Christian name, or by the relationship each has assumed toward the other.

***

Mrs. Jennie F. Holmes, for years president of the Nebraska W. C. T. U., passed away to the better life on March 20, 1892. We were long associated with this dear sister, always in the most pleasant way, and have no other memories of her than those that bring us happy hopes and expectations. Her life was given to good and gracious causes, and we shall find her again wherever hearts are stirred with love one for another on the basis of the gospel and the character of Him who founded our religion.

***

A community without women of equal social action, a church without her equal ecclesiastical action, and a state without her equal political action, are very much what a home would be without a mother, wife, sister, daughter, or friend. Men have carried civilization just as far as they can do it alone. They are not to blame for the present condition of things. "Impedimenta to the rear," was the famous order number one of our great military force. The smoke of battle asphyxiated the woman's movement. She can but hope for equality in the piping times of peace.

***

A working motto:

"Sin worketh, let me work, too,
Sin undoeth, let me do,
Busy as sin my work I'll ply
Till I rest in the rest of eternity.

"Time worketh, let me work, too,
Time undoeth, let me do;
Busy as time my work I'll ply
Till I rest in the rest of eternity.

"Death worketh, let me work, too,
Death undoeth, let me do;
Busy as death my work I'll ply
Till I rest in the rest of eternity."

***

How much we need to discriminate between obstinacy and firmness. Obstinacy is the locked door which neither light nor fresh air may penetrate. Firmness is the open door where the man well armed "keepeth his house" ready to receive all who come, able to discern friend from foe, to defend the truth, but always in the attitude of sincerely seeking to know "what is truth."

On Duty.

World's W. C. T. U.

"ALL RIGHT" IN JAPAN.

[The quaint English of this Japanese friend will add interest to his letter.—Ed.]

The work is going all right. As usual the work is taken by young men largely. However, I am very glad to tell you of some change of Tokio W. C. T. U. It has been only slow in their work, as there were some complication among themselves. But a few days ago the first ex-president, Mrs. Yajima, said she will accept the office if she will get majority of vote. If she will accept the office, the all members will agree with the views of the promotion of the temperance work. I hope I will be able to write you about good result of Tokio W. C. T. U.

Tokio temperance society is growing, and the members are increasing very much. Last month we got twenty-five new members; the total of the members is over 1,000 in numbers, though they may not come all to the meetings.

I have translated "Temperance Training in the Home," by Miss Mary Allen West, and for last month published in "Parmly Billings Leaflets," for "World's Temperance." It is a long leaflet as it took eight pages, so I put a paper cover (twelve pages in all). Two thousand copies were printed and sent out to many places where temperance meetings will be held.

Not long ago we had a social meeting, and had a good time. There were some addresses and plays. Rev. Julius Soper of the M. E. Mission, and Rev. Bland of the Christian Church, were present. The meeting was opened at 2 p. m., and closed at 6 p. m. In the meeting or entertainment we had refreshment which contained of cakes, oranges and a box of Tushi, or sandwich of America, made of rice and fishes instead of beef and bread.

On the 13th of this month we shall have the regular monthly temperance lecture at Ginga Church. I asked Dr. G. Verbeck, the best speaker in Japanese among the missionaries. We expect very good meeting.

I attend some work in the foreign office when I have time. I have also translated "American Self Government," exponent of light and liberty. I will soon publish it and will give some influence upon temperance work. Japan wants true liberty through temperance and American system of self-local government. I will present you when it comes in public.

Sho Nemoto.

Tokio, Japan.

HOW IT BEGAN AND HOW IT GREW.

The subject of starting a W. C. T. U. in Kingston, Jamaica, was one that pressed heavily on me. I have been constantly on the lookout for some able woman to start one, and with whom I would gladly coöperate. But all efforts in this direction having failed, necessity seemed laid on me to inaugurate the work myself; so praying earnestly for Divine guidance and help, I went around consulting ladies and gentlemen whom I knew to be favorable to the temperance cause, and encouraged by them I applied for, and obtained the use of the collegiate hall, a fine one and well adapted to the purpose, by paying a fee of one dollar for attendance. I then wrote and sent notices for a meeting of ladies, at which about fifty were present. Two gentlemen also came, one the editor of a paper. All said it was a good meeting, and twenty-four gave their names as members of the Kingston W. C. T. U.

The constitution and pledge were read and adopted, and it was decided that we meet every Tuesday at five p. m., the minister of the Christian church kindly tendering us the use of his place of worship free of expense. At our second meeting, last Tuesday, more ladies united, and we trust there are "more to follow."

But, dear sisters, the magnitude of the work almost terrifies me, and I know not how to proceed. An excellent Christian lady, and an active worker, Mrs. J. Harrison, is a great help, but she has had no experience in this line of work, and we are both at sea as to how to set the members to work, while we agree that there ought to be no delay. In fact, two or three have asked, "What are you going to set me to do?" Circumstances are so different here from America, some of the departments could not be taken up at all. The literature is a great help, and I am reading up all the time, but it seems as if I just move around in a circle, and come back to where I started, as ignorant and as puzzled as before. I have spoken so much of the systematic and business-like way in which the work is carried on in the United States, that I fear our attempts will seem like child's play. One formidable difficulty meets us at the outset, and that is the money question. It would be too tedious to enter into details, but I would just explain that many who would be willing to join us cannot afford to do so. There are so few resources for women and girls that numbers are unable to find employment, and those who do are so poorly paid. Then most of them are church members, and of course have to contribute in that direction. We so greatly need advice and guidance, which we shall thankfully receive, and oh, how eagerly we should hail the coming of some competent lady from among you.

Most deeply do I sympathize with all concerned in the death of dear Mrs. Downs and Miss Ames. The former I knew well, and have often heard; the latter I learned to love through The Union Signal. How bright will be their crowns in glory!

We have appointed superintendents of four departments of work and have ordered some tracts and leaflets suitable for distribution at railway stations, police stations, jail, and for general circulation.

I have received a request from the principal of a Government Training School, about five miles from Kingston, to go and give the young ladies a little talk on the work of the W. C. T. U. Thus I am being drawn on further than I had expected. I ask your prayers, for I need them.

The last mail brought me Miss Willard's circular letter of February 28th, for which allow me to tender the grateful thanks of myself and the ladies of the Kingston W. C. T. U. Unless you have been placed in a similar position to the one I now occupy, you cannot fully understand the eagerness with which I grasp any helps or suggestions from those who are so competent to give them, for as the work widens out, I feel more and more its vastness. At the same time I most gratefully acknowledge the help and encouragement I receive from my dear fellow-workers who are always ready to help.

It was thought advisable to hold a public meeting during the annual session of the Methodist Conference, the chairman of which, on application, sent us a list of seventeen ministers, all strong temperance men, who would be ready to speak for us. It happened that they got through their business sooner than they expected, and dispersed to their various stations, and as the chairman was sick on that evening, 8th March, and his colabors were engaged elsewhere, none of them were with us. However, we had eight other ministers of different denominations and some lay gentlemen, all of whom spoke beautifully.

The press superintendent gave a short history of the W. C. T. U., past and present. Rev. Mr. Collins (American) spoke on the same topic, and Mrs. Harrison, with beaming face, told of her happy and successful experience during the short time she had been connected with our organization. The other speakers with great eloquence, took up the various phases of the temperance question and were warmly applauded. One of our young ladies sang very sweetly, "Have courage, my boy, to say No," the audience joining heartily in the chorus, as they also did in the choruses of the other two hymns that were sung. The collegiate hall was beautifully decorated with flowers, potted plants and banners, all the work of our members. Of the latter were the words "Welcome" in large letters, right over the platform and underneath "Success to the W. C. T. U." On either side were "For God and Home and Every Land" and "If God be for us who can be against us?" Every seat was occupied and there were many standing, so that there were over four hundred persons present. The collection amounted to $15, which will be quite a little help. The collectors were all young ladies of the union and the ushers, honary members. We got a few extra names, and we hope for other good results.

I fear I have made my letter too lengthy, but we are vain enough to think that the parent society will be interested in the sayings and doings of one of her youngest children who, though only creeping now, hopes to walk and perhaps run by and by! The local papers are all so engrossed with the proceedings of the legislative council now in session, that little or no notice has been taken of our meetings, but we have heard on all hands expressions of approval and commendation, and also those of complaint from the liquor fraternity.

Constantia Maddix,

Kingston, Jamaica.

A RED-LETTER YEAR.

The prayer of the women in the convention of the W. C. T. U. of Australasia—"Stir up, we beseech thee, O Lord, the wills of thy faithful people," coupled with the earnest effort which proves sincerity, has not been in vain. During the time when the colonial parliaments are in session (June to December) legislative work very naturally receives much attention. This may be called an exceptional, a red-letter year, as in almost all the colonies the question of the franchise for women has been brought up for parliamentary consideration.

In South Australia and New South Wales, the W. C. T. U. coöperate with the active, organized Woman Suffrage Leagues. From the United States consul at Auckland and from the W. C. T. U. superintendent in Christ Church, we learn that only from the suffrage department of the W. C. T. U. has any effort been made by the women of New Zealand toward obtaining the franchise. Of course many others are interested, but have not moved in the matter. This is readily explained. The W. C. T. U. is organized on the American lines and able to make united, organized effort; this they did most nobly, presenting a petition signed by 9,000 women. The bill passed the lower house, but was lost in the upper house by two votes. The Victorian Alliance and W. C. T. U. worked together in Victoria. In proof of their labors they presented, on the second reading of the electoral bill, a petition signed by 30,000 women to refute the statement that women themselves do not want the ballot. After discussion, the section enfranchising women was withdrawn, opposed here, as in New South Wales, by the Labor party. The agitation and education thus begun will be continued and the question will doubtless be made a prominent issue in the next general election.

Attention has also been drawn to the inadequate protection of girls. The age varies in the different colonies. In Victoria it is twelve years. A petition, signed by over 300 representative men and women was sent to the legislative council, asking that in the bill before them the age of protection instead of fifteen be made sixteen years as the very lowest limit, to correspond with the law in South Australia and in England. At the instigation of Miss Baer, member of the London Vigilance Committee, a meeting was called by the W. C. T. U. upon very short notice, and attended by from 300 to 400 women. Resolutions were passed, a copy of which was sent to the speaker and each member of the legislative assembly, requesting the passage of the bill which has been before parliament since 1886. This bill was passed.

The sixth annual convention of Queensland W. C. T. U. has shown most encouraging growth. A few years ago not more than thirty people could have been induced to attend a temperance meeting. It was decided to take up woman's franchise as a new branch of work during the year, and also to prevent the employment of women as barmaids. Young, pretty girls are in demand for barmaids; their bright faces and lively chat draw and hold customers. The work is light, well-paid, and sought by many in preference to teaching and the like, and accounts, in a measure, for the difficulty in securing household servants. In view of the feeling which has so long prevailed, upholding those who engage in the liquor traffic, the words of the representative from New South Wales at the International Congregational Council in London (July) give encouragement to those who have long hoped. He said: "It was useless to fight the publican and give the brewers prominent positions in church and state, and the brewer's cart which stood so long in the way of civilization is being removed and the brewer ostracized."

Many loving hearts turn to dear Mrs. Love whom the W. C. T. U. feel they can illy spare from Australia. Touching instances of her Christ-like life, pure teaching and example, come most unexpectedly to us. Entering all walks of life, from the highest to the lowest, she never failed to leave loving testimony for truth and temperance.

Communications from National superintendents to the Australasian W. C. T. U., if addressed to the general secretary, Mrs. Kirk, W. C. T. U. Headquarters, Melbourne, Australia, will be promptly forwarded.

Melbourne, Aus. Catharine P. Wallace.

WORK UNDER DIFFICULTIES IN CHILI MILITANT.

Our Concepcion temperance society, composed of men and women, has continued through the year. The meetings have been a little irregular owing to the strict surveillance maintained during the war, and to the sickness the latter part of the year. Still, I think only one meeting, perhaps two, has been entirely omitted. The attendance has been less than last year, averaging, perhaps, no more than thirty. I have thought it best to let this society continue the same another year. The next meeting will be our annual gathering, when officers for the year will be elected. Not all those who attend the meetings are members of the society. The number of pledged members is less than last year.

I am sorry to say that many of our old signers broke the pledge at a New Year's gathering. Often men from outside, whom we do not know, come and ask for the pledge. They sign it and go their way to keep it—perhaps to break it.

Our W. C. T. U. has held no meeting since the first months of the year. I cannot predict the future, but will do all I can. With the city swarming with soldiers, parents did not like to send their children unattended, and no Loyal Temperance Legion was held during the year. Some attended our evening meetings with their parents, and I know most of them have kept their pledge. We had no teachers' conference this year and so there has been no regular meeting of the district W. C. T. U. which was organized last year. I have been unable to ascertain that anything has been done at the various points. I know the ladies are interested and I hope they will do something this year. I have written them concerning the matter. Now is not this a dismal record of a year's work and with so extended a territory as Chili? I enclose one petition which was omitted with the others. This year we will endeavor to circulate it in Spanish. We translated a tract here this year and it is just issued by our Mission Press. The publication cost $130 which is paid by the (New York) M. E. Tract Society. Mrs. Grubb has sent me some leaflets.

Through a friend I have recently obtained permission to fill a column of a daily paper with temperance items, one issue a week, or less, if more frequently contributed. This I shall try to fill with undeniable scientific facts concerning the effects of alcohol. I hope to send my first contribution next week. You must not forget that we are not yet perfect in Spanish, and translating sometimes means much work. "La Cinta Azul" contains much which we can utilize. Their force is quite sufficiently strong, without help from me. A letter received from Buenos Ayres last week announced Mrs. Leavitt's safe arrival. We shall expect her here next year. My last Signal brought the sad news of Miss Ames' death. "God changes His workmen, but carries on His work."

I have wished that here in our boys' school we could do something in social purity work. Have not known where to begin. Last year our pupils were large boys, almost young men, and I did not like to attempt the work among them. If we have smaller boys this year, I may renew my temperance meetings.

Ida A. T. Arms.

Collegio Americano, Concepcion, Chili.

WORLD'S WAVE CRESTS.

The Annual W. C. T. U. Convention for New Zealand was held at Auckland, March 29.

A gospel temperance society was organized at the beginning of the year at Weenen, Natal. Rev. A. M. Murray, Rev. R. Sherneld and Mr. C. Tyler spoke at the initial meeting.

An additional list of 2,853 signatures to the World's Petition has been received from Miss Morgan, secretary for Great Britain, with a number of resolutions from various religious bodies indorsing the same.

Mrs. Edith M. Clark, press superintendent for Antananarivo, Madagascar W. C. T. U., reports further encouragement from editors; several temperance stories, tracts, etc., having been translated and published in various periodicals.

A private letter from Mrs. Annie Carvasso, corresponding secretary Queensland W. C. T. U., bears this bit of earnest thought: "The work is much needed in this fair colony of ours and although we sometimes find it very hard, yet we are still determined to stand true to our colors and do all in our power to eradicate this curse from our land."

A voice from Bulgaria is given wings in a little hieroglyphic sheet with a heading which translated means, "One who is temperate." It is published by the Young Men's Temperance Society and the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. The first number which greets The Union Signal eyes contains a variety of interesting contents to which the translated titles only furnish us a clue.

A resolution was passed at the annual conference of the Yorkshire Women's Christian Temperance Union (B. W. T. A.), held at Huddersfield, England, not long ago, asking for legislation which will empower magistrates to commit habitual inebriates to specially certified homes, instead of sending them to prison for repeated short terms which in most cases xert no curative influence.

Mrs. J. E. Peters, president of the Newfoundland W. C. T. U., not only discharges the duties of that office satisfactorily, but is also recording secretary for the auxiliary of the Woman's Missionary Society, is treasurer of both the Parsonage Aid and Benevolent Societies, meets once a week with a society class of her church, besides having the care of a family of eleven. The union at St. John's holds weekly gatherings, with fortnightly public meetings which promise good results. A coffee house is in contemplation.

News from the Field.

CONNECTICUT.

"They that be wise shall shine."

The first conference of the Connecticut Y's was held in the First Methodist Episcopal Church in Hartford, March 11 and 12, and was a delightful and helpful occasion. Mrs. Forbes, state president, Mrs. Pickop, state superintendent of Y work and the Y union of Hartford, spared no pains to make the meeting a success, which it was, very decidedly. Dainty programs were prepared and sent out freely in order that all interested might know of the gathering, and those not interested might become so.

The church parlors were made beautiful with floral decorations and presented a pretty sight when filled with bright maidens who had been wise in becoming Y's. The first devotional exercise was led by Mrs. Forbes, who read and commented on the parable of the talents. The hymn, "I gave my life for thee" by Frances Ridley Havergal, was then sung, and Mrs. Forbes offered prayer. Following this service Mrs. Jessie Morgan Pickop, the lately appointed superintendent of the Y department, called the convention to order after being introduced by Mrs. Forbes, and made a few appropriate remarks. She mentioned the necessity of the Y paper and its helpfulness, also Y manuals. The New Haven Y sent as greeting to the convention the words found in II Thess. 2: 16, 17.

Introducing Mrs. Pickop, Mrs. Forbes told of her feeling of grief and disappointment when Miss Haskell was prevented from continuing her work, and her wonder and questioning as to who could go on with the dropped threads. Hearing that Ohio's efficient superintendent was about to take up her abode in our state, she wrote an appeal asking her to take the office. To-day we rejoice that the request met with a favorable reception securing Mrs. Pickop's services for our Connecticut Y's.

A "plan of work" committee was appointed consisting of one delegate from each Y union represented. This committee recommended twelve of the forty branches of the W. C. T. U. work.

Mrs. Barnes having arrived was now introduced to the convention; she made a few happy remarks, among other things saying that recently in a train she was seated behind two men who were drumming for liquor businesses. She heard the conversation between them. They were exchanging experiences in their line of work. One said when he went into a town his first move was to find out about the organizations there. Of churches, of Y. M. C. Associations and kindred societies he had no fear, but if he found an active W. C. T. U. and a Y. W. C. T. U., he knew his sales would not be as large as they would if no such organizations existed. Mrs. Barnes said this demonstrated the fact that the liquor interest recognized our unions as organized protests.

A solo was sweetly rendered by Mrs. Alice Sherwood, of South Norwalk. Mrs. Forbes told in her bright way how to conduct a meeting, and her suggestions were very helpful. Some points that she well made were: begin promptly; open with devotional exercises; do not be afraid to make a prayer yourself, don't be satisfied with simply the Lord's Prayer; a prepared program necessary, one upon which some time has been spent; let the members take turns preparing it; observe parliamentary rules; close promptly on time; if your leader will not conduct the meetings properly, get one who will.

A recitation was then given by Miss Mary Lillian Herr, of Norwich, and a fine talk on physical culture, by Miss Clara Coe, of Meriden. Miss Coe illustrated her discourse with some simple exercises to show the proper poise of the body. A spirited discussion followed regarding trained skirts. Mrs. Barnes gave expression to some ideas suggested to her by reading an article entitled, "Wherewithal shall we be clothed?" She also related her experience with her first long dress. Both Mrs. Forbes and Mrs. Barnes expressed their decided disapproval of trained dresses for the street, and their remarks were applauded.

Mrs. Barnes conducted the discussion, "How to make a Temperance Committee Effective," in which members of Christian Endeavor societies were invited to participate. Many helpful thoughts were given.

Friday evening the conference was opened with a devotional exercise conducted by Mrs. Annie Waters, president of the South Norwalk Y, after which a solo was gracefully sung. Though the most prominent feature of the evening was the address by Mrs. Barnes, a delightful part of the program was the address of greeting given by the president of the Hartford Y, Miss Nettie Baker, and the response by Miss Mary Huntington, president of the Norwich Y. Exquisite violin solos were rendered by Miss Mary Beeman, of Hartford. A fine recitation was also given by Miss Herr. Mrs. Barnes was in her happiest mood and gave of her best in the address of the evening. A duet by Misses Berry and Browne followed her and was finely sung. The benediction was pronounced by the pastor of the church.

Saturday morning Miss Augusta Camp, president of Newington Y, conducted the devotions. Miss Herr read the minutes of the session of the preceding day, and the roll was called and was responded to by a delegate from each union who gave a short history of her Y. These reports were very encouraging.

"Things to Do and How to Do Them," was the subject of the discussion conducted by Mrs. Pickop. Her suggestions were wise and practical and could not fail to inspire the girls with new ambitions. On account of illness Mrs. Forbes could not be present and Mrs. Barnes had charge of the question box in her absence. Miss Etta Aston, of the Rockfall Y, gave a recitation which was well received.

Mrs. Barnes made a few closing remarks and the exercises of the convention closed with the singing of the Y parting song, written by Mary A. Livermore.

Mrs. Barnes and Mrs. Pickop were the recipients of bouquets of roses. A telegram of cheer was sent to Miss Haskell, the former Y superintendent. The next Y conference will be held in connection with the annual convention of the state W. C. T. U. in Norwich. The committee on credentials reported forty delegates present.

With deep sympathy for the bereaved ones we chronicle the death of the mother of our state corresponding secretary, Mrs. M. M. Andrews, also of Mrs. Brown, the mother of Mrs. C. B. Buell, National corresponding secretary. The cause of temperance loses two faithful friends who have worked and prayed for its advancement.

M. Belle Smith,
State Reporter, Rockfall.

GEORGIA.

GOOD NEWS GRAPHICALLY GIVEN.

To a casual observer there would seem to be a dearth of temperance news in Georgia. A brief paragraph in the daily press is all the space devoted to the local option elections, upon which, to so large an extent, depend the material and moral welfare of our various counties. And yet, unknown to many outside of the localities themselves, the battle between "bar-rooms or no bar-rooms" is frequently fought, sometimes for a whole county, and sometimes for one of its districts only, while municipal elections on this issue are of frequent occurrence.

To this local option movement, as opposed to a state prohibitory law, much of the apparent apathy of our people is to be attributed. Their interest and efforts are necessarily too much confined to local issues, and while it may be well with one locality, another, not far distant, may be suffering from the liquor curse. Still the local option law was the best the legislature would give us, and under its workings a large proportion of Georgia is free from bar-rooms.

In The Wesleyan Christian Advocate of recent date is a strong editorial for state prohibition, and in the same issue an appeal from the well-known Rev. S. P. Richardson, of Cartersville, for a state organization, "that will not beg the legislature to rid the people of the whisky curse, but will labor to put men in the legislature who will do it openly and independently."

In many parts of the state there are good temperance women who do valiant work in local option campaigns, who will not organize as auxiliaries of the state W. C. T. U. I think they are laboring under a mistake in standing aloof from us. They would be stronger and so would we, for their coöperation. But they plead their church duties, their missionary societies, their social engagements, and sometimes the imaginary bugbear of woman suffrage. When will all Christian women learn that the saloon is the foe to the church and its missionary operations, and the great enemy of woman and all she holds sacred and dear?

Very sweet and inspiring have been the letters that have come to me this winter from our dear W. C. T. U. workers. Mrs. Sibley writes from Augusta that they have large and interesting weekly meetings, receiving new members at nearly every one. The various departments have capable, earnest superintendents. They are arranging for Demorest medal contests, and for renewed work in factory districts.

Mrs. A. A. W. Cadwallader, who with her husband was preparing to open a refuge for fallen women in Atlanta, but was prevented by the city council, was invited to Augusta. She accepted the invitation, has become a member of the Augusta union, and she and Mr. Cadwallader are doing a good work in the home for fallen women located in that city.

Savannah writes, through its corresponding secretary, Miss Grace Harman, that at their headquarters they have free lodging rooms for men and boys out of work. Breakfast is given for one week, and aid in finding employment. There is a mission hall on the first floor, where gospel meetings are held three evenings in every week. The Savannah union also has a free kindergarten and a mission Sabbath school for English and Chinese, and a mission Sabbath school under its care. It reports a and an industrial school under its care. It reports a Loyal Temperance Legion, with successful Demorest medal contests. The ladies visit the jail, the barracks, and the hospital, in evangelistic lines, and have a flower mission. In the rear of the chapel at headquarters is a free reading room, a blessing to working men and boys, affording a safe, quiet, and pleasant place in which to spend their leisure hours.

Summerville is in the northwestern part of the state, and its faithful women are somewhat isolated from others, but they do fine work. The president, Mrs. A. M. Street, tells of their weekly prayer service and monthly business meetings, and of their Loyal Temperance Legion with its seventy-nine members, and average attendance of one hundred.

Union Point has a prosperous Loyal Temperance Legion, and an energetic president in Mrs. Sam Sibley.

From Haddock Station, Jones county, one of the new unions, comes blessed tidings. There we have an ideal of temperance effort, in the union of whole families working for the cause. Mrs. L. E. Farriss writes that at the monthly public meetings there are always new accessions, sometimes as many as five or six. Thank God for consecrated Christian temperance workers like these!

At Atlanta, while there is much to depress and discourage our workers—by reason of the late defeat of the municipal temperance ticket, our being under ecclesiastical ban in some quarters of the city, and our lack of money to carry on the work as vigorously as could be wished—yet the cause progresses. Faithful superintendents do good work in their respective departments, but the juvenile work is at present attracting most attention. The Temperance School at the Barclay mission has been productive of great good. It is under the care of Mrs. Robinson and Mrs. Robb, who are constantly devoted to its interests, and has several other faithful and efficient teachers. Mrs. A. E. Sexton, of the West Side union, never tires in her work with the children. The Loyal Temperance Legion hold frequent public entertainments and Demorest medal contests.

The Loyal Temperance Legion of South Side union meets in Trinity Church, under the excellent training of Mrs. F. P. Parks and her faithful coadjutors. Not long since they gave a public entertainment, assisted by the West Side Loyal Temperance Legion, and the Trinity Home Mission School.

The "old" union is rejoicing over a mission school just established by our good treasurer, Mrs. E. M. Evans. The Bible readings given every second Thursday by Mrs. Mary N. Calloway, of this union, are spiritual uplifts. Several church societies have sent for her to repeat these readings at various points in the city.

Thomasville has had some refreshing times lately. Mrs. S. S. Bouchelle writes that among the winter visitors is Mrs. J. L. McCartney, of Beaver Falls, Pennsylvania, the author of "Loving Words to Girls and Boys," and other leaflets used in our work. This lady has assisted the union in its mothers' meetings, several times being called to lead; she also gave a public lecture on "Echoes," which was well received by the large audience, and favorably noticed by the press. Thomasville has also been recently favored with a lecture from Mrs. Wm. H. Felton, of Bartow county.

Mrs. Felton is one of the two ladies appointed to represent Georgia on the Board of Managers of the Columbian Exposition. The legislature made no appropriation for an exhibit, and Mrs. Felton has been invited to speak at a number of places in order that the people themselves may be aroused to raise the necessary funds for a Georgia exhibit. But while at this work she does not turn a deaf ear to calls for temperance addresses, and has recently spoken to crowded and enthusiastic audiences, not only at Thomasville, but at Macon, Dalton and other points. Last Sunday afternoon, at the Methodist church in Decatur, in response to an invitation from the W. C. T. U., Mrs. Felton gave her grand lecture on "Motherhood and the License System." The church was crowded to its utmost capacity, and that large and conservative audience listened to the tender, womanly plea for protection to mothers and children who are bereft of their rights by the legalized liquor traffic.

I began this letter with some remarks on local option. I close it with the report of three recent victories:—The little town of Ocklockonee, by a very large majority; Dalton and Dalton district in Whitfield county, where the ladies and children rallied so nobly for prohibition; and lastly the whole county of Whitfield has voted for the fourth time, every time going "against the sale," and this time by the largest majority yet given.

Missouri Stokes,
State Reporter, Decatur.

WISCONSIN.

ROOTINGS FROM THE BADGER STATE.

The larger cities of our state have had the good fortune to secure the services of Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman, of Missouri, as lecturer.

Milwaukee reports "two grand lectures." Fond du Lac reports two, of which the second "was the strongest and most eloquent temperance address ever delivered in the city." A Racine daily paper said, "Mrs. Hoffman's lecture was a forcible appeal to the manhood of the nation to do away with the licensed iniquity of the drink traffic."

Temperance sentiment has been smouldering everywhere in our state. In many newspaper offices the subject of just how large a quantity of temperance matter can be put into a paper without quite disgusting the partisan Republican or Democrat, as the case may be, is often seriously considered by the editor—not that nearly all of these papers are admirers of the W. C. T. U. (it is doing too much practical "meddling" for that), but temperance ideas are plainly on the increase, and the newspaper is the mirror which reflects public sentiment, of course.

The W. C. T. U. of Madison has been blessed with the services of John G. Woolley for a week. Meetings were held in the Congregational Church in the evening with afternoon Bible reading in W. C. T. U. room. While we do not know that he reached many drunkards directly, who dares say, believing there are no degrees of sin in the Father's sight, that as much good was not wrought in the effect produced upon those who, while professing God as their leader, have basely submitted to the dictates of policy? Mr. Woolley was ably sustained by the pastor of the church, and the Madison union feels very grateful to both. A Demorest contest the evening before the meetings begun was well received, although not so many of the voting citizens attended as we had hoped.

Superior, in the northern part of the state, is earnestly engaged in "rescue work" for our unfortunate sisters, and is being encouraged by many expressing a willingness to commence a new life. Feeling that the work is being crippled for want of a properly prepared place to receive these heavy-laden ones, strong efforts are being made to raise the funds necessary for building and supporting such a refuge. I believe that $500 a year has already been subscribed.

I am told that even the hens in Ashland are working for the Temperance Temple. A white-ribboner, anxious to contribute something for the Temple said, "I will sell all my Sunday eggs for the mite-box." I do not know that she told the hens of her intention, but certain it is that on the first Sunday they contributed thirteen eggs, whereas their largest gift, heretofore, had been seven!

Medford union distributed during the year 8,000 papers in English, 950 pages of German, 225 Scandinavian and 75 in French, besides 1,000 Sunday-school papers and Youth's Companions to German children, and 1,200 papers to Scandinavian families who seemed anxious to get them.

Antigo reports that, although there was a dancing school the night the union gave a "bonnet" sociable, the "bonnet" drew and the dancing teacher had one pupil. Why not make greater efforts to enlist the young in our work through social channels? If we succeed in making strong temperance men and women of them it will insure success for the work of the future.

Durand gave a copy of "Black Beauty" to every family having one or more of its members in the L. T. L. Beaver Dam gave a five-o'clock "Geographical Tea." Each table represented a country and was in charge of a lady and gentleman, the lady providing banner, souvenirs and button-hole bouquets, the gentleman giving an account of the drink habits of the country represented, and what was being done there in the interest of total abstinence.

La Crosse union supplied all the Sunday-schools with literature for the temperance Sunday-school lesson. It supplies the public library and Y. M. C. A. reading room with THE UNION SIGNAL, also ten copies for depot racks and barber shops. What an untold harvest will result!

Clinton, though its members are busy women, wish to "each count one for God and Home and Native Land." Milton has a Band of Mercy numbering thirty-three connected with its Loyal Temperance Legion. Big Bend says it never was in better condition, and Tomahawk reports good work done. Sparta union was so thankful that the village voted "no-license" last spring that it is raising money to place a large fountain in the public square.

Augusta sends word of the strength, encouragement and even enthusiasm it has received from the W. T. P. A. leaflets. Black River Falls is more eager to work than ever before, and Oshkosh writes the glad tidings that the city papers cordially accept all local temperance reports. Mazo Manie distributes its literature by placing it in the stores, the merchants putting a leaflet with each purchase. Westby is the first Norwegian union organized in Wisconsin. One of their methods of work is to give each member a number of pledge-cards to have signed. Nearly one hundred names have already been obtained. Let us also bear in mind the strength it has given each member to be able to say of a certain amount of work accomplished, "I did it."

Louisville holds gospel temperance meetings in the schoolhouse, when the members distribute temperance leaflets. The New London W. C. T. U. presented a petition to the council against selling liquor on Sunday, quoting the statute laws. A member writes, "The petition occasioned much talk and many are better informed regarding the laws than they were." Evansville gave a New Year's dinner which was very successful and gave the union the money needed to pay its quota for state fund. Its Loyal Temperance Legion is in a flourishing condition.

Racine has opened a Woman's Exchange and presented "The World's Petition" to the Presbyterian Synod and the Woman's Synodical Missionary Society of Wisconsin—both heartily indorsing it. Arcadia union, six months old, has succeeded in the introduction of scientific temperance instruction into the public school. Our state convention is to be held in Madison, June 7-10, and we expect great good from it.

MARIA F. HANCHETT,
State Reporter, Madison.

CALL FOR ALABAMA ANNUAL CONVENTION.

The ninth annual convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Alabama will be held in Attalla, April 19 to 21. The executive committee will meet at 3:30 p. m., Tuesday the 19th, the Plan of Work committee (executive committee and state superintendents) at 4:30 p. m. on the same day. Each local union is earnestly requested to send a full delegation, viz. —The four general officers, one delegate at large and one for every twenty paying members. Names of delegates should be sent to Mrs. Jessie Banks, Attalla, as early as possible. Entertainment will be provided for all. Interesting speakers have been secured for the evening meetings. Please bring Bibles for evangelistic services.

MRS. MATTIE L. SPENCER,
Pres. Alabama W. C. T. U.
MRS. SALLIE M. ESKEW,
Rec. Sec.

Official Communications.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

President—FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Sec.—MRS. C. B. BUELL, Evanston, Ill.
Recording Sec.—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Ravenna, Ohio.
Assistant Rec. Sec.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Treasurer—ESTHER PUGH, Evanston, Ill.

For presidents of states and superintendents of departments, see Annual Leaflet, which will be sent by Mrs. Buell on application, inclosing a two-cent stamp.

PRAYER FOR SABBATH OBSERVANCE.

God's gifts are wisely conditioned on asking. Even those things on which God himself has set His heart must be asked for, so that Jesus himself prayed for us, and to fulfill all righteousness still stands our intercessor to ask for us pardon and sonship; prayer is the key-note of the Bible. Let us realize that all good comes through prayer, and we shall cultivate the prayer spirit and become thereby a power. In this rushing age we need to sacredly devote some time to our closets, but more than this, we should associate prayer with our reading, our words and employments, till even in reading the news item by item, our aspirations naturally rise Godward for God's blessing in thwarting the evil, in caring for the needy, in prospering all good work and workers and opening the way for reforms.

And as God has special promises for united prayer, let us this week so far put aside cares and hindrances that we can daily join the great army in prayer for the coming of the kingdom by the honoring of the Lord's Day, which is also pre-eminently man's day—filled with blessings for all humanity. Let us pray that Christian lives may be made consistent, that the eyes of patriots, and the representatives of labor interests may be opened to the underlying need of humanity for a Sabbath, and that God's blessing may rest upon the special efforts to close the Exposition on the Sabbath, the outlook for which grows daily brighter. J. C. BATEHAM, Nat. Supt.

THE TOBACCO "GEM."

I am fully convinced we can secure total prohibition only when we have educated an army of voters. For that reason our best efforts must be given to the children. To this end I ask all white-ribboners to secure subscriptions to the anti-tobacco Gem. This little paper is published by a good man, who earns his bread by the sweat of his brow, and supports the paper besides. For ten years he has carried the burden of this enterprise; but we all know this cannot go on always, and if substantial help is not given he will become discouraged. It is the only anti-tobacco paper published, and is really a good one. This brave man has had tobacco smoke blown in his face, tobacco put into his pockets, his office key-hole plugged up with it and his windows bespattered with tobacco juice. All this has been done by the enemies to our cause. What have we been doing to help in this work? Simply nothing. Now I call upon all white-ribboners to interest themselves in this paper, write for it and secure subscriptions. The subscription price is twenty cents a year, and just now for twenty-six cents you will get the paper for a year and a copy of the "Black Beauty." Ten numbers to one address a year, one dollar. I ask the local presidents, superintendents of juvenile and narcotic departments to go to work at once, and make the month of April one long to be remembered by this self-sacrificing man. Let each state send $100 for this paper. One hundred subscriptions for the ten numbers will accomplish this, and these papers, given away to the children, will make them despise tobacco.

State superintendents on narcotics, give this your attention, please. Send orders and money to C. H. Shephard, Melvin village, New Hampshire.

MRS. E. B. INGALLS,
Nat. Supt. Dept. Narcotics.
4119 Westminster Place, St. Louis.

LETTER OF INTRODUCTION.

Since Miss Willard's note about a form of "Letter of Introduction" appeared in THE UNION SIGNAL we have had many orders for it and for single copies.

The form is not a "letter," but a neat card which is easily filled out and answers every purpose.

No price was stated, and as we do not send out single copies, it will be well to state that the cards are sold at 50c per one hundred, postage paid. Every union should keep a supply of them on hand, also the "Traveling Card" which sells at 50c per hundred.

CAROLINE B. BUELL.

CHILDREN'S CHAIN PLEDGE CARDS.

When obtaining autographs of children on the red, white and blue cards, to be used at the Columbian Exposition, the residence of each and every child should be written as well as the autograph, so that each Loyal Temperance Legion may have proper credit for names sent in. The cards now being used have the pledge printed on one side, and the W. T. P. A., 161 La Salle St., Chicago, sells them for twelve cents per package of thirty.

ANNA A. GORDON,
World's Supt. Juv. Dep't.

SHIP LIBRARIES.

Of the many instrumentalities made use of by friends of the seamen, none has proved a greater blessing than the little case, filled with books placed on board the ship as she is leaving port. Starting on the long voyage from New York to China or Australia, the good book, the pictured newspaper, the illustrated magazine, is eagerly devoured in the leisure hour by Jack Tar. Wonderful results have followed the efforts of different societies in this country and in England, on this educational line. Notably the Seaman's Friend Society, of New York, which has sent out so many thousand Loan Libraries in the past thirty years. The plan is to furnish the case or box with about twenty-five books, and after they have been well read, to renew them with fresh reading matter.

The methods adopted by our workers in the Woman's Christian Temperance Union to gain the same object, differ somewhat. From the port of Baltimore, for instance, the superintendent of the department for sailors has a corps of helpers who fill strong canvas bags with literature, and place them on every vessel. The seamen's department in Maine (notably Portland) sends a messenger on Sunday mornings, with fresh papers to the vessels in port. At Vineyard Haven this work is done by the Christian Endeavor Society, whose superintendent is an enthusiastic worker in the branch known as the "Floating Society" of Christian Endeavor. In New Haven, Conn., is established a Ladies' Seamen's Friend Society, and at Charleston, S. C., the ladies have a splendidly equipped Home for Sailors, where a fine library is maintained.

Within the last year the National superintendent of this line of effort has systematized and brought into more active operation her work for the Commercial marine, entering New York harbor. The plan is to supply Loan Libraries, furnished in part with second-hand books; these have been supplied by the W. C. T. U. of a city or county in New York, and the state of New Jersey, and accompanied by a donation of ten dollars. This amount of money will cover the cost of bookcase and incidentals of transportation, and add a few new books which will contain temperance stories by well-known writers. The first contribution came from Binghamton, New York. The case was filled with thirty-five books of interesting reading, besides a Bible, hymn book, prayer book, copies of THE UNION SIGNAL, and other religious periodicals, and a comfort bag of sewing materials.

Visiting the ships in company with the King's Sons, your superintendent often rejoices in the cordial reception given by Christian captains, who, with the generous natures that distinguish these men of the sea, respond nobly to our efforts. I trust that the readers of THE UNION SIGNAL will also make a sympathetic response by helping to sustain our Loan Libraries.

SARAH A. MCCLEES,
22 State Street, New York. Nat. Supt.

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

MRS. C. B. BUELL will soon be at her desk again.

MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE is lecturing in Colorado.

THE offices of World's and National W. C. T. U. will be in the Temple after May 1.

EVERGREEN PARK, Ill., has a W. C. T. U. just organized. May it keep ever green!

MISS FRANCES E. GRIFFIN is speaking on behalf of our training school in Wayne, N. C.

MISS BESSIE GORDON is attending county conventions and "neighborhood meetings" in Massachusetts.

MRS. FRANCES J. BARNES has been making a tour of leading women's colleges in the East to enlist new Y's.

ONE of the popular "dollar meetings" was held in Boise City, Idaho, by the local W. C. T. U. recently. Its success adds to the long list of indorsements to this attractive money-making plan.

MRS. HELEN L. BULLOCK, of Elmira, N. Y., one of our National organizers who has been laid aside from overwork for some months, is now in the field again and begins work in the state of Delaware, April 10.

MISS FRANCES H. ENSIGN, who is filling so capably the office of state superintendent for Ohio Y's as successor to Mrs. Jessie Morgan Pickop, is a charming speaker whose services should be called into a wider requisition.

MRS. SARAH B. COOPER, the founder of the free kindergartens of the Golden Gate association of San Francisco, has declined a call with $50,000 pledged to organize a similar work in New York. United States Commissioner Harris says that Mrs. Cooper's San Francisco work is the best organized kindergarten work in the world.

MRS. MOODY, of Indianapolis, one of our workers, has organized a hygienic society in connection with her department of health. She has secured the names of some of the most cultured and influential women in the city who have never been identified with any branch of the temperance reform. Mrs. Moody intends to open a hygienic cooking school in the near future.

MRS. E. NORINNE LAW, National organizer, has taken for her special field the past winter, the upper peninsula of Michigan, thick with saloons, and containing a large percentage of foreign population. Camp lumbermen, Indians and saloon-keepers have been in her audiences, which are frequently composed entirely of men. Good results must follow her work.

ONE of Missouri's most devoted W. C. T. U. women is Mrs. Alice Williams, of Cameron, lecturer for social purity department National W. C. T. U. She has held mothers' meetings and given many public evening addresses on this topic. She recently attended the first territorial convention in Oklahoma, and addressed the legislature in behalf of a woman's suffrage bill, which was lost by just one vote.

THE sixteenth annual convention of the second district Michigan W. C. T. U. will be held in the First Baptist Church of Ypsilanti, the 13th, 14th and 15th of April, commencing Wednesday at 10 a. m. Each union is entitled to two voting delegates; visiting delegates will also be entertained. Send names of all delegates to chairman of entertainment committee, Mrs. M. J. Barney, Ypsilanti. Mrs. Helen M. Gougar will deliver an address on the evening of the 14th.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report

EVERY Family Student School Library

S-H-O-U-L-D Own a Dictionary.

Care should be taken to ∴ ∴ ∴ ∴ ∴ GET THE BEST.

WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY

THE INTERNATIONAL, NEW FROM COVER TO COVER, IS THE ONE TO BUY.

It is a thorough revision of the authentic "Unabridged," fully abreast of the times.

The work of revision occupied over ten years, more than a hundred editors being employed and over $300,000 expended before the first copy was printed.

"This work, well used in a family, will be of more advantage to the members thereof than hundreds of dollars laid up in money."

Sold by all Booksellers.

G. & C. MERRIAM & CO., Publishers, Springfield, Mass., U. S. A.

☞Do not buy reprints of obsolete editions.

☞Send for free pamphlet containing specimen pages, illustrations, testimonials, and full particulars.

THE UNSEEN FRIEND.

By LUCY LARCOM. 16mo, $1.

A little book emphasizing and illustrating the great idea of the immediate presence of God among men. A book singularly lofty and sweet in tone, which will at once uplift and charm its readers.

OTHER EXCELLENT BOOKS

By LUCY LARCOM.

AS IT IS IN HEAVEN.

The heavenly type, or spirit, of life is shown to be the type of the truest life on earth. A charming book, $1.00.

EASTER GLEAMS.

Poems. Parchment paper, 75 cents.

BECKONINGS FOR EVERY DAY.

A Calendar of Thought. $1.

BREATHINGS OF THE BETTER LIFE

Original and Selected, $1.25.

A NEW ENGLAND GIRLHOOD.

75 cents. Holiday Edition, $1.25.

Autobiographical, and every way delightful.

POEMS.

Household Editio $1.50.

Sold by Booksellers. postpaid, by

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO., Boston.

WE OFFER

An uncolored Japan

TEA

that satisfies.
Expressed to any address 75c. pound package. You get our 20-page pamphlet

"A CUP OF TEA,"

Free, when you send your address.

"THE ENTERPRISE"

Evanston, Illinois.

SOCIAL PURITY; True Manhood.

A Manual for Young Men. Mrs. F. H. Rastall, Business Mgr. W. T. P. A., writes: "I can most earnestly commend, as well as recommend, 'TRUE MANHOOD' as a suitable book for boys and young men, containing, as it does, information they all need in order to protect themselves from influences they cannot avoid, and against which this book will arm them. It will be especially valuable to parents who shrink from the duty of themselves conveying information on delicate questions to their boys at a suitable age." Price, prepaid, $1.65. Best terms to agents.

ALICE B. STOCKHAM & Co., 277 Madison-st, Chicago

5000 LADY AGENTS WANTED FOR

DARKNESS AND DAYLIGHT

OR LIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF NEW YORK LIFE

A WOMAN'S thrilling story of Gospel, Temperance, and Rescue work "In His Name" in the great under-world of New York. By Mrs. HELEN CAMPBELL. Introduction

By Rev. Lyman Abbott, D.D.

A wonderful book of Christian love and faith. 250 remarkable illustrations from flash-light photographs of real life. 31*st thousand*. 5,000 more Agents Wanted,—Men and Women, $200 a month. ☞ Experience and capital not necessary; for We Teach All. Give Credit and Extra Terms, and Pay Freights. Outfit free. Write for Circulars to A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

Publisher's Notes.

It is Dainty,

And particularly beautiful and appropriate for an Easter gift. Have you seen it? What? Why,

The Pathway to Easter.

Do not fail to secure copies of this for adult Sunday-school pupils and friends.

How can we describe it? First, is that lovely Easter poem by Mary Lowe Dickinson—so tender, so Christ-like. Read from it verse 2.

"Wherever a mantle of pity falls soft on a wound or a woe,
Wherever a peace or a pardon springs up to o'ermaster a foe,
Wherever a soft hand of blessing outreaches to succor a need,
Wherever springs healing for wounding, the Master is risen indeed!"

Then come the seven words from the cross:

"Seven times He spoke seven words of love. God grant those words may guide us close to the Cross—for the Cross guides to Easter."

And the seven utterances are elaborated. It is very helpful. Price 25 cents.

Born—An Idea.

It first saw the sun's light March 7, last, and is already making its presence felt in a very "material" way. In fact, the aforesaid idea has developed so fast as to cause a whole circular to be printed telling all about a certain "plan" of which we have decided to give you (confidently) the benefit. Better not delay to send for particulars about on which we equip worthy people with free outfits of "Childhood" and "Glimpses" helping many to make money.

Our New Plan

Are you interested?

SUBS'N BOOK DEP'T W. T. P. A.,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Read this Once More.

Space on our shelves is exceedingly valuable on account of the ever increasing size of our stock. It is necessary therefore to remove all slightly soiled books and we make this an opportunity by which you can obtain our publications at about half the regular prices. The cover is generally all that is soiled, the inside is just as good as in new books. You can send for some of these to lend out to the neighbors, and thus do much good. Why not?

	Reg. price.	Red. price.
Bound in cloth or stiff covers
Hygiene of the Home	$1.00	$ .50
Stories of the March	.75	.35
Marble Cross	.60	.35
How to Win	1.00	.60
The Year's Bright Chain	.50	.30
Frances Raymond's Investment	.50	.25
Driftwood	1.00	.50
High Caste Hindu Woman	1.35	.75
In paper covers:
Drill Manual	.20	.10
Helps for Health Meetings	.10	.06
Hints for "Y" Entertainments	.10	.06
Driftwood	.50	.25
Questions Answered	.25	.12
Purity Crusade	.25	.10
May Women Speak	.25	.12
Crusader Programs	.25	.15
Prohibition Program	.10	.06
Helping Hand	.10	.05
Chalk Talk Hand Book	.10	.06
Woman in the Pulpit	.25	.15
Duties of Women	.25	.15
Free Rum on the Congo	.25	.15
Crusader Series, Nos. 1, 2, and 3, each	.10	.06
Life of General Fisk	.15	.05
Prohibition Amend't Guide	.25	.15
Marching Songs, No. 2	.10	.06
Ye Hatchet Partie	.15	.05
Songs for Y. W. C. T. U.	.25	.20
K. D. Souvenir	.10	.06
Drink Chart	.10	.04
Temp. Annals	.25	.15
W. C. T. U. Order Book	.25	.15
Lesson Manuals, assorted		15 for .25
Golden Keys	.25	.15
Bugle Notes for the Home	.10	.06

Postage prepaid. The supply is limited.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

SPRING

According to the Medical Almanac, is the time to clean the system, as well as the house. "Gentle Spring" is far gentler than their Spring medicines. Suppose now, instead of taking a dose for the stomach, that our every-day house cleaner, the blood, was purified as nature does it—with the air we breathe? Suppose for this purpose you should take Drs. Starkey & Palen's COMPOUND OXYGEN, which is common air, enriched with oxygen, and magnetized? This done, supposition ends. That this will purify the blood, heal the lungs, and quiet the nerves, is as easy of demonstration as that water will quench thirst.

If you are sick, or run down, try COMPOUND OXYGEN. You will miss the taste and the trace of the Spring medicine, but a better result will be yours. We have over 60,000 carefully recorded cases. Some of them are printed in a book of 200 pages, which we send free to any one requesting it.

Drs. STARKEY & PALEN, 1529 Arch St., Philadelphia.
120 Sutter St., San Francisco, Cal. 864 Broadway, New York. 66 Church St., Toronto, Canada.

$1,000,000 ADDITIONAL FOR INDUSTRIES AT HARRIMAN, TENN.

DIRECT BENEFITS TO LOT BUYERS AT

Profit-Sharing Auction Sale of Lots

APRIL 13, 14, 15, 1892.

Peculiar Advantages, never before Offered Investors by a RESPONSIBLE COMPANY. Six Per Cent. Interest Guaranteed, besides TEN Per Cent Premium, and LIBERAL PROFIT-SHARING. Handsome Growth in Real Estate Values Assured in the

Only New Town in the South Steadily Successful from the Start

BEST OPPORTUNITY OFFERED FOR BONA FIDE INVESTMENT.

From One Farmhouse, Jan., 1890, to 4,000 People, Jan., 1892

"Two Years of Harriman," a superb volume of nearly One Hundred Pages and Over SIXTY FINE ENGRAVINGS, sent as a SOUVENIR to any address for 25 Cents to pay costs of mailing. Full Information about TERMS of SALE, SPECIAL RAILROAD RATES, and the PROFIT-SHARING MEDIUMS, promptly furnished FREE.

W. H. RUSSELL, General Manager. A. A. HOPKINS, Secretary.

All who wish to attend this Sale at Harriman can Secure REDUCED RATES by writing at once to WM. F. SINGLETON, 902 Royal Insurance Building, Chicago, Ill.

WRITE THE COLOR OF EYES, HAIR AND COMPLEXION on the back of a photograph or any small picture of any member of your family, send it to us and we will upon its receipt make for you

FREE of charge, a beautiful PASTEL or SEPIA PORTRAIT, showing the natural color of the eyes, hair and complexion. This picture is an artistic gem and must not be confounded with the common black crayon, air brush or machine-made pictures which you see in almost every grocery. This is not a scheme to swindle by forcing the purchase of a frame. You buy your frame where you please. What we wish to do is to introduce our Pastel and Sepia work and to accomplish this we give to the first person sending from a city, town or locality one of these beautiful pictures. We will give for the first five orders you send to us, after you have received your picture. We send but one picture to each locality on these terms. Send photo at once and be the lucky one. This offer holds good for 30 days only. Inclose a $1 bill with your photo to cover cost of packing and delivering to you. We are entirely responsible and refer to any Express Co. in Chicago. ARTIST PORTRAIT CO., 59 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

$20 in Gold

AGENTS WANTED ON SALARY or COMMISSION, to handle the New Patent Chemical Ink Erasing Pencil. Agents making $50 per week. Monroe Eraser Mf'g Co. X 213 LaCrosse, Wis.

DIAMOND DYES give the fastest, brightest, handsomest colors, and make the old clothes look like new. They are the original and only reliable package dyes. Sample card free. WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Burlington, Vt.

PILES CURED FREE. New, Painless, Certain. Gives instant relief and lasting cure—never returns. To prove it we will send a trial package FREE, to any address. PYRAMID DRUG COMPANY, Box 35, ALBION, MICHIGAN.

PARENTS CANNOT AFFORD

To let their children grow up without the amusement and physical training which the World's Parlor and Lawn Game gives. ELASTIC TIP CO., 152 and 154 Lake Street, Chicago.

WOMEN wanted for a WOMAN'S ENTERPRISE. An early reply may make you rich, either as an investor or active worker. For particulars address

THE WOMAN'S LAND ASSOCIATION,
114 and 116 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

EARN BETTER WAGES

By attending, day or night, the INSTITUTE OF TECHNOLOGY, 151 Throop St., Chicago, Ill. Any person taught any study any time by professors. Leading Chicago School. 1,000 students last year. Open to both sexes. Admirable arrangements. Low tuition. Installments taken. Satisfaction guaranteed. Send for Catalogue.

WORST CASES CURED TO STAY CURED IF UNCOMPLICATED BY ORGANIC DISEASE.

ASTHMA

WE WANT NAME OF EVERY ASTHMATIC. Examination free by mail. Incurable cases declined.

P. HAROLD HAYES M.D.
BUFFALO, N. Y.

MY WIFE SAYS SHE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT FOR THE MONEY. $12 Buys a $65.00 Improved Oxford Singer Sewing Machine; perfect working reliable, finely finished, adapted to light and heavy work, with a complete set of the latest improved attachments free. Each machine guaranteed for 5 years. Buy direct from our factory, and save dealers and agents profit. Send for FREE CATALOGUE. OXFORD MFG. COMPANY, DEPT 20, CHICAGO, ILL.

HOTEL FREDONIA. Washington, D. C. H St., between 13th and 14th. ELEGANT, QUIET, HOMELIKE & STRICTLY TEMPERANCE G. H. La Fetra, Prop.

MILLER'S HOTEL New York City. 39 West 26th St. A Prohibition Home. Patronized by W. C. T. U. workers visiting New York. Turkish, Electric, Roman Baths. Address. CHARLES H. HAYNES, Prop.

REAL ESTATE Looking for a HOME or an investment where you can double your money? ELLSWORTH the new temperance suburb of Chicago offers both. Write to ELLSWORTH LAND ASS'N, Room 41, 81 Clark St., Chicago.

103 E. ADAMS ST. BORSCH-OPTICIAN CONSULT US ABOUT YOUR EYESIGHT SATISFACTION GAURANTEED

EVERYBODY Wants This. PORTABLE BATHS. Best ever known. Wholesale and Retail. Agents Wanted Everywhere. Send for Circulars. E. J. KNOWLTON, Ann Arbor, Mich.

20 Hidden Name, New Emb. Basket, Plush Fringe Cards, 1 complete Fountain Pen 25 Games & Agts. Outfit 10cts. Typewriter and Photo Cameras free to Agts. Clinton Bros. Clintonville, Ct.

YOUR NAME on 25 LOVELY CARDS, 1 RING, 1 LACE PIN, 1 PATENT FOUNTAIN PEN, 1 FORGET-ME-NOT ALBUM, 400 Album Verses &c. with the New and Popular Monthly, WAYSIDE GLEANINGS, THREE MONTHS FOR 10c. LAUREL CARD CO., CLINTONVILLE, CONN.

COMPOUND OXYGEN Price reduced. For information address DR. A. H. HIATT Central Music Hall, Chicago

AGENT made $71 in four days selling my Electric Corsets and Specialties. 100 PER CENT. profit and Cash Prizes. Sample free. Dr. Bridgman, B'way, New York.

Our Children.

MARCHING TO VICTORY.

BY MARY L. WYATT.

(Tune—Marching Through Georgia.)

Blow the bugle, girls and boys,
We'll sing another song,
Sing it with the spirit
That shall help the cause along,
Sing it as we ought to sing it
Fifty thousand strong
While we are marching to victory.

CHORUS.—

Hurrah! hurrah! we'll make the jubilee,
Hurrah! hurrah! for temp'rance it shall be,
So we'll sing the chorus grand
Sing it loud and free
While we are marching to victory.

How the boys and girls will shout
When prohibition comes,
How the youthful soldiers, too,
Will beat their temp'rance drums;
Oh! what great rejoicing
There will be in many homes
When we are marching to victory.

CHO.—

So we'll make a thoroughfare
For temp'rance and her train
Many miles in latitude
And thousands in the main,
Foes will flee before us,
For resistance will be vain
When we are marching to victory.

CHO.—

West Medford, Mass.

REFORM IN FROG HOLLOW.

BY R. M. ALDEN.

Frog Hollow was a beautiful spot, as the lingering rays of the afternoon sun climbed through the trees on the hill, and lay on or about the quiet water. The frogs were hidden from sight, except a few unusually industrious ones who might have been seen hopping into the water or from stone to stone; but the little blue-flies were dancing in the sunshine, and the water-bugs were holding a matinée on the waunkapin leaves, and the whole hillside seemed whispering to itself of the beauty of the summer day.

The Hollow was deep and cool, and in its center was the pond formed by the stream which came down from the mountains, and grew more and more lazy as it wound among pastures and forests. There were several of these ponds, stitched together by narrow threads of water which venturesome frogs sometimes explored. Farther up than the one in the Hollow was another with high, steep banks, and mossy edges greener than anything else in the woods; and down stream was one where the boggy soil made it difficult to approach, and where the cows sometimes made wide, sticky holes with their round feet. But the Hollow was where the most of the frogs lived, big and little, tender and tough. This was only because their ancestors had lived there for years before them, and why should they try to be better off than their ancestors?

But on this delightful day, Mr. Kroak, the philosopher of the settlement, sat quite hidden from view in a dark corner of the Hollow, on his favorite log of antique oak, and pondered somewhat sadly on many troublesome matters. Another young frog had been carried off that morning, to add his choice legs as a delicacy to the menu of the neighboring hotel. Such things were becoming alarmingly frequent. Either the summer boarders' appetites had improved upon those of the previous year, or the young frogs were more easily tempted by the offered bait. Hooks were constantly let down the sloping bank, and certain of the rising citizens of the Hollow were seen no more.

It must not be supposed that the evil was a new one, and this was one thing that puzzled Mr. Kroak's philosophical mind. Investigation had shown that the earliest traditions of the settlement concerned the depredations of the fishermen with bait and cruel hook, and there was no family which had not suffered. The bait grew more delicious year by year, and more than one sagacious frog had acquired the ability to secure the tid-bit and yet avoid the hook. But such were indeed fortunate, if sooner or later the very prick of the steel did not fascinate them, and the basket of the fisherman finally carry them off in triumph.

For many years nothing seemed to have been done in remedy of the evil, but at last it became too great to be passed by; and so complicated was the series of efforts directed against it, that it becomes very difficult to describe them in a brief historical sketch. Naturally, the first attempts were in behalf of the young frogs, who had no proper appreciation of the dangers besetting their path, and who were carefully taught, in many of the families of the Hollow, the evil which might result from tampering with any bait which found its way into the pond. Under the direction of the more vigorous reformers, too, lectures were given on moonlight nights, which pointed out with great eloquence the sorrows of the past on account of youthful folly and the demand for broiled frog-legs; and many were moved to tears by the pathos of these discourses. It was also decreed that in the schools in which the young were drilled in music and all proper exercises, there should be added a physiological course, intended to show the precise way in which a hook affected the frog system, and the exact cruelties inflicted on the captured, as they were reported from the hotels. The Froglet's Anti-Fishermen Society was organized, and many pledged themselves even to keep away from those parts of the Hollow where hooks had been found especially numerous.

But (so Mr. Kroak reflected, as he recalled the events of the past) it became clear that while considerable good had been accomplished by these methods, the death-list kept by the recording frog had not grown materially smaller. Reasons for this could be easily found; the young frogs were often observed on the evenings of the moonlight lectures to be far away from the audience room (even when Professor Frogophilus Green was reciting, "Tell Me I Hate the Hook!") while bald-headed seniors, who had never tasted bait in their lives, constituted the chief attendance. Besides, a good many claimed that a large amount of bait had been found, which if used judiciously, brought no evil consequences; and was it not absurd to lose all this, in order to avoid possible danger? So the sad work went on.

Then Mr. Kroak remembered that he himself had come to the front and urged the law-council of Frogdom to take action in this matter. The debates of that session he could never forget. The first question which arose was whether the council could consider the matter of the fishermen at all. Many claimed that it was wholly outside of their power; the young frogs had been guilty of imprudence, and had suffered the consequence. Those who had been careful were all right. What was there in this with which the august council had to do? Let the Anti-Fishermen Society and the other benevolent organizations look after it. Some claimed, in fact, that the rescue of the young from destruction was so solemn and sacred a task that it was defiling it to bring it forward among the rude politicians of the council.

To all this Mr. Kroak had meekly replied that whatever blame could be attached to the victims themselves, it was quite certain that the destruction would continue so long as the bait was offered them, and hence the law-makers would do well to see what should be done about the dangerous temptation. And when at last it was decided to try to do something, every separate member had a distinct plan of action, and the dispute became so loud that the boarders at the hotel came to their windows to listen to the fearful commotion in the Hollow.

Some suggested that the Upper Pond, on account of the high banks, was utterly unsuited for fishing, and that the small number of frogs who stayed there was never interfered with. Why not move there, and leave bait and all behind? There were but few (and they were considered enthusiasts) who defended this; for it was a very rash plan. What would they do (said most) without any bait at all? Besides, no one was ready for such a move. There was reason in all things. Everything could not be done at once. Sentiment was not prepared to move up stream so fast. "How did they know it was impossible?" Easily enough; it never had been done, and that showed how the public felt about it.

Mr. Kroak himself cautioned against too much haste, and made every one listen to his plan. It was clear, as had been shown, that all the catching could not be stopped. It would be bliss indeed (he grew so eloquent on this point that he nearly fell from his waunkapin leaf into the water) if it were possible; but it was not possible. What then could be done? All communication with certain parts of the bank could be absolutely cut off, by order of the council, and certain fixed points could be left open where the hooks would be let down. Mr. Kroak thought that these points should be convenient to the fishermen (in order that they might not be too seriously disturbed) and also convenient to the frogs (in order that the supply of bait might be properly regulated). He believed that in no case should communication with the bank be allowed at places where the education of the young was carried on, nor within twenty square feet of the Decrepit Bullfrogs' Hospital or similar institutions.

(Concluded next week.)

What Shall We Call It?

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:—How many of you, I wonder, have noticed to whom the letters at the head of this column have been addressed? Yes, to the "Dear Boys and Girls." That means, not to the girls alone, or to the boys alone, but to the boys and girls. Aunt Jane welcomes you both. For this is the way we mean to work—side by side; planning together for our share of work in the great temperance family, boys as well as girls. Isn't that the only way?

I wonder, too, if you have all voted for this name we have talked so long about? It takes a long time for word to get around, our family is so big and widespread; but send in your vote for one of the names published below, and it will reach us in time.

Your affectionate AUNT JANE.

VOTE FOR ONE OF THESE NAMES.

Aunt Jane's Cozy Corner.
Cold Water Circle.
Twilight Talks.
Temperance Fireside.
Our Rally Corner.

A BRIGHT BOY'S OPINION.

It certainly is very kind in THE UNION SIGNAL, and ever so good and thoughtful in you, to invite boys as well as girls into your parlor. You are about the first aunt that has thought boys nice enough to go into the parlor. Some boys are sent by their big sisters into the sitting-room. There they get noisy and make mamma so nervous that they must go away into the dining-room. From there they skip to the kitchen, where Bridget bristles up and gives them a very dignified invitation to light out in the yard. They soon get restless there, then out into the street they go to have fun with the boys. Mamma does not do that, but I know some boys' mammas that do. Mamma gives me music lessons, and tells me the home belongs to myself and older brother. I have no sisters. While you are so kind to invite us to name the little nook we are invited to occupy, I think the name of "Aunt Jane's House" will be just the name you ought to give it. We would all feel so much at home there. Hoping you will like the name, I remain, Yours truly, ALLEN M. BROWN.

Woodlyn, O.

Aunt Jane loves a house full of boys, and thinks they belong in the house just as much as the girls. We want your help, Allen, and all the boys, to build and "keep" our temperance homes.

SOFT-SHELLED NUTS.

25.

TRANSPOSITIONS.

1. Transpose the past participle of to recline, and form a small, pointed piece of iron.
2. Transpose to spring, and form a loud sound.
3. Transpose a cord, and form a river of Africa.
4. Transpose a space between hills, and form to guide.
5. Transpose to send forth, and form a minute object.

CAROLINE L. HAWKE.

26.

ENIGMA.

I am composed of 22 letters.
My 22, 19, 16, is wrong doing.
My 9, 21, 15, 4, is a sign of approval.
My 3, 5, is a personal pronoun.
My 14, 7, 8, 17, is used in making mortar.
My 1, 12, 13, is enjoyed by children.
My 11, 2, 18, is to ask for alms.
My 10, 6, 20, is what all drinkers do.
My whole will help to save the nation.

CANDACE D. F. KING.

27.

CONCEALED TEXT AND MOTTO.

A word is hidden in each of the following sentences: When the words are rightly guessed, and read in the order given, they will form the text and motto.

I.

1. The child is quite sick.
2. He has received his wages.
3. They live east of here.
4. Liquor selling is a sin.
5. Tobacco is a narcotic.
6. He came to his death by drink.

II.

1. Temperance is a virtue.
2. A lion was seen in the way.
3. They were all astonished.
4. Many things were for sale.
5. She is a very good girl.

AMY WOODBURY.

Answers in three weeks. Send all replies and original puzzles to Puzzle Editor, UNION SIGNAL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

ANSWERS TO PUZZLES PUBLISHED MARCH 17.

16. Cigarette.
17. Cold, hold, held, head, heat.
18. King Alcohol must go. Saloons must go.

Correct answers: Royal J. Davis; Faith P. Lilly; Mary A. Fish; Flo. Potter; Bertha M. Lacock; Robert Humpston; Isabelle; Kathryn; Lizzie and Maggie Shepherd; I. P. M.; Mary Mathes; Lela Sutliff; Otis Baldwi Ransom Short; Harry D. Spangenberg; Harrison T May A. Smith; Mattie L. Waterman; Martha B. Marion Gray Fox.

Kernels.

Editor—Your manuscript was so badly spelled that we found it almost impossible to make out the sense of it, and—

Literary Aspirant—I—I'm very sorry, sir; I—

Editor—And so we have decided to use it as a French Canadian dialect story. Check will be sent on publication.—Puck.

The gain in population in the United States from 1850 to 1890 was 128 per cent, and in school enrollment 195 per cent.

The Pope has consented to allow the first map which ever included America, and which is in the Vatican collection, to be exhibited at the Columbian Exposition. It was made at some time between 1494 and 1529.

The oldest capital in the United States is Santa Fe, which was the seat of government in New Mexico as far back as 1640, and yet its population is only 6,185, according to Porter's census.

THE AMERICAN GIRL.

She knows no Latin, she knows no Greek,
But the purest American she can speak;
She knows the uses of her and she,
And the proper places of I and me;
She doesn't use big words to tell
A story, although she can use them well;
In short, she's a girl without pretense,
With an ample supply of common sense.
And I'd rather have her any day
Than the girl who can parley voo frangsay.

Man wants the earth, but it is the housekeeper who gets the dust.

Some people may think this has been poor winter weather, but it has certainly been well supplied with change.

Natural History — Teacher — "Hans, name three beasts of prey."

Hans—"Two lions and a tiger."

First Suburban—"Hello, Smith! You are got up regardless. Going to a wedding?"

Second Suburban—"No, I'm going to town to try to engage a cook, and I wish to create a good impression."

Old Lady—"Doctor, do you think there is anything the matter with my lungs?"

Physician, after a careful examination—"I find, madam, that your lungs are in a normal condition."

Old Lady, with a sigh of resignation—"And about how long can I expect to live with them in that condition?"

A short time ago an old negro came before Judge Guerry, of Dawson, charged with some trivial offense. "Haven't you a lawyer, old man?" inquired the judge. 'No, sah." "Can't you get one?" "No, sah." "Don't you want me to appoint one to defend you?" "No, sah; I jes' tho't I'd leab the case to de ign'ance ob de co't."

Mrs. J. was telling a story to a group, among whom was one who was very deaf. At its conclusion, observing that he did not laugh, she turned to the person next to her and whispered, "He didn't see the point, and it's as plain as A B C." The whisper reached our friend, though the ordinary tone escaped him. "Yes," he said, turning to Mrs. J., "plain as A B C, but I'm D E F."

A London paper recently offered a prize for the best definition of "Money." The prize was awarded to Henry E. Baggs, of Sheffield. His definition was: "An article which may be used as a universal passport to everywhere except heaven, and as a universal provider of everything except happiness."

Lady Carteret, wife of the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, said one day to the witty Dean Swift:

"The air of this country of yours is very fine."

Swift instantly fell on his knees.

"For the love of heaven," cried he, don't mention that in England, for if you do they'll put a tax on it!"—Ex.

In some still nook dost toil unknown?
Thy simple fare unnoticed take,
Keeping true heart asleep, awake
While deeds less brave than thine have flown
Where fame's proud trump is loudly blown?
Work patiently for God's dear sake,
Give what thou canst to hearts that ache;
Thy Lord some day will claim His own.
And when He counts His treasures o'er
Upon eternity's bright shore,
It may be He will value more
The fragrance of the lily's bell,
Shed richly in its narrow dell,
Than stars whose praise the ages tell.

Publisher's Dep't.

Testimony.

I like the present shape of The Young Crusader very much and shall continue to urge our Legions to subscribe for it. At the present price every Legioner in the United States should read it.

IDA H. RUSSELL,
State Supt., Cal.

One of the National superintendents writes: "THE UNION SIGNAL is delighting everybody. It is the finest paper we see."

"My age is eighty-two and two-thirds years, and I sit on the street and write complimentary and calling cards for ladies and gentlemen, for our support and to pay for THE UNION SIGNAL."

"Isn't THE UNION SIGNAL interesting?" says one. "Isn't it rich in information?" says another. "How did I ever get along without it?" says a third.

We knew all about it, and feel just like saying, "Didn't I tell you so?" Of course it is just the paper for the Christian worker in the temperance reform, and for the home. Certainly under the joint editorship of our beloved leader, Frances Willard, and England's precious loan to us, Lady Henry Somerset, it is a journal of which any white-ribboner may be proud.

Why not ask several of your friends to give you ten cents each; you forward their addresses to Chicago, and they will receive THE UNION SIGNAL one month, just long enough for a good taste, and if their digestion is in good order, rest assured that taste will make them hungry for more, and if poor, it will tone it up.

MRS. M. E. CHENEY.

Encouraging. Indeed it is. Do you wish to encourage us? Then do what you can to help circulate THE UNION SIGNAL.

You need it!
Your family needs it!
Your friends need it!
Your minister needs it!
Your children's teacher needs it!
Every thoughtful Christian person needs it!

What?

THE UNION SIGNAL!

Send for it. Introduce it to your friends and report results to

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

THE Cynosure says: "There is but one monthly magazine in the United States devoted to reform, and that is Our Day, published at 161 La Salle street, Chicago, by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association. Joseph Cook and Miss Frances E. Willard head the editorial corps of this powerful publication. He has lectured on both sides of our globe, and she is the president of a union which surrounds it. The March number resembles 'a sea of glass mingled with fire.' No person who reads a review should be without it."

The April number is now ready. Sample copies 25c. each. Send for them to

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

FOR autograph pledge cards for L. T. L. World's Fair work send to this office. Per package of 30, 15c.

HAVE you a copy of "Thumb-nail sketches?

"What is that?"

"Do you not know? It is a booklet containing sketches of the workers and speakers of the W. C. T. U. who have a national and a world-wide reputation. Besides this, it has seventeen illustrations—fifteen pictures of our leaders and one of the Temple and the Temperance Hospital."

"Is it an expensive book?"

"Oh, no. You can get a copy for thirty cents."

"Well, I must have one."

Another.

Local superintendents, I appeal to you to aid in placing The Young Crusader in our Sunday-schools. Send immediately to the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association, 161 La Salle street, Chicago, for sample copies, and go right to work. If you fail to secure its introduction in any Sunday-school, get up clubs among the girls and boys, old or young. It is wholesome reading for all, and very few will refuse to subscribe for it after they have once read it, and know the price—12c a year in clubs of 25, or 15c a year in single copies.

STATE SUP'T S. S. DEPT.

Send for Color Samples and Price List. Patented February 23, 1885. Examine closely. Stamp on inside of Waist.

TAKE NO OTHER.

THE GENUINE
JACKSON
CORSET WAISTS

ARE MADE ONLY BY THE
JACKSON CORSET CO., Jackson, Mich.

The manufacturer's name is printed upon the boxes, and stamped upon inside of clasp in each waist. They are the most popular articles of the kind now on the market. You should have one of them.

BE SURE AND GET THE RIGHT THING. IF YOUR DEALER HASN'T IT, SEND $1.25 FOR SAMPLE.

YPSILANTI Dress Reform UNDERWEAR

SPRING GOODS REDUCED IN PRICE.

Sanitary Balbriggan, Sanitary Lisle Thread, Sanitary MERINO, SILK and Sanitary Balbriggan, Silk and Cashmere mixed.

For SPRING and SUMMER WEAR. { The ONLY Sanitary Underwear, and Endorsed by the leading medical profession.

Send for new Catalogue, Samples, and revised Price List. If your dealer cannot supply them, they can be obtained of the manufacturers.

DON'T BE DECEIVED.
See that each garment is stamped with our Trade Mark—
"Ypsilanti Health Underwear."

HAY & TODD MFG. CO., Ypsilanti, Mich.

Metal Tipped. EVER READY DRESS STAY Will Not Cut Through.

See Name "EVER READY" on Back of Each Stay.

Acknowledged the BEST DRESS STAY On the Market

Made with Gutta Percha on both sides of steel and warranted water-proof. All other stays are made differently and will rust. Beware of Imitations. Take none but the "Ever Ready."

Manufactured by the YPSILANTI DRESS STAY MFG. CO., Ypsilanti, Mich.

FOR SALE BY ALL JOBBERS AND RETAILERS.

SPECIAL DEPOTS. { MODEL DRESS STEEL CO., 74 Grand St., New York. BROWN & METZNER, 535 Market Street, San Francisco.

One-third Your Life is Spent in Bed!

The Art of purifying Feathers for Bedding purposes has been the subject of close study for many years, and has reached its highest development in the COLD BLAST PROCESS, by which all foreign matter, dust and the causes of odor are eliminated, and the Feathers rendered pure, clean and sweet, as well as permanently buoyant, while retaining their Feathery softness. FEATHER PILLOWS MADE OF THESE ARE HEALTHFUL. Watch for Trade Mark. Your dealer probably keeps them. If not, address

THE COLD BLAST FEATHER CO.
MAKERS OF Faultless Bedding. CHICAGO.

FREE For 30 Days. Wishing to introduce our CRAYON PORTRAITS and at the same time extend our business and make new customers, we have decided to make this Special Offer: Send us a Cabinet Picture, Photograph, Tintype, Ambrotype or Daguerotype of yourself or any member of your family, living or dead and we will make you a CRAYON PORTRAIT FREE OF CHARGE, provided you exhibit it to your friends as a sample of our work, and use your influence in securing us future orders. Place name and address on back of picture and it will be returned in perfect order. We make any change in picture you wish, not interfering with the likeness. Refer to any bank in Chicago. Address all mail to THE CRESCENT CRAYON CO. Opposite New German Theatre, CHICAGO, ILL. P. S.—We will forfeit $100 to anyone sending us photo and not receiving crayon picture FREE as per this offer. This offer is bonafide.

MENDING MADE EASY BY THE USE OF GUM TISSUE

Used for repairing all kinds of clothing, from the very finest silk or satin to a buckskin mitten. Kid gloves and umbrellas mended without sewing, quicker, neater, and stronger than ever before. SAMPLE 10cts. to intending agents, F. Cassgreen Mfg. Co. 134 Van Buren St., Chicago, Ill.

MASON & HAMLIN ORGANS PIANOS

Examine the new Mason & Hamlin Piano and Organ catalogues, sent free to any address. The Mason & Hamlin Grand and Upright Pianos are constructed on an Improved Method of Stringing, invented and exclusively used by Mason & Hamlin, by which remarkable purity of tone and great durability are secured, and phenomenal capacity to stand in tune. The Mason & Hamlin SCREW-STRINGER was patented in July, 1883, and is a veritable triumph for American ingenuity, being pronounced by experts "the greatest improvement of the century" in pianos. American Pianos and Organs are superior to all others. Mason & Hamlin Organs have long been the Standard the world over. The Mason & Hamlin Piano is fast becoming as famous as the Mason & Hamlin Organ, and illustrates that HIGHEST STANDARD OF EXCELLENCE which has always characterized the latter instrument, and won for it Highest Honors at all great World's Exhibitions since Paris, 1867. Illustrated catalogues free.

Without under-estimating the improvements effected by others in pianos, the Mason & Hamlin STRINGER is claimed to be the greatest improvement of them all, and without it the highest attainable excellence is simply impossible.

MASON & HAMLIN ORGAN AND PIANO CO.
BOSTON. NEW YORK. CHICAGO.

YOSE & SONS PIANOS. ESTABLISHED IN 1851.

Celebrated for their Pure Tone, Elegant Designs, Superior Workmanship, and Great Durability. Sold on easy terms. Old instruments taken in exchange. Write for catalogue and full information.

170 Tremont St., Boston, Mass.

Ladies' Infants' Childrens' Young Ladies'

A Very Satisfactory Garment.

WHY? Because it Supports Stockings and Underclothes from the SHOULDERS, and has no stiff cords; fits with perfect ease and freedom. Elegant, and strictly hygienic. Sold by leading dealers.

LADY CANVASSERS WANTED.
Send for Illustrated Price List.
The FOY, HAMMON & CHADWICK CO., Brooklyn, N.Y.

"BEAUTY" ACCOMMODATION WAIST No. 7, WITH TAMPICO DRESS FORM.

Made of finest Sateen, Soft Sateen bust and pockets for Tampico Dress forms. Removable Steels. Adjustable Shoulder Straps. Lace Back, Button Front, curved to figure at back.

PERFECT FORM, EASE AND SUPPORT.

Sizes 18 to 30 in. in White and Black. Sent free by mail, for $1.50. Little Beauty Waists for children, the best. Catalogue free

E. H. HORWOOD & CO.,
51 Mercer St., - New York.

STRONG WORDS

I. "I could quote a thousand men who, when everything else failed them, found in Granula the very food their systems needed."—JAMES C. JACKSON, M. D., founder Dansville Sanatorium.

II. "Granula has saved my life on several occasions. I now carry the article with me as a sort of life preserver."—WM. GILLETTE (the actor).

III. "The Judge (A. W. Tourgee) has been crazy ever since he was in Dansville about the delicious Granula."—MRS. A. W. TOURGEE.

FOR THAT
"PERFECT HEALTH FOOD"
GRANULA

GRANULA CO., Dansville, N. Y.
Pamphlet free. Trial box, postpaid, for 36 cts.

GOLD MEDAL, PARIS, 1878.

W. BAKER & CO.'S
Breakfast Cocoa

from which the excess of oil has been removed,
Is absolutely pure and it is soluble.
No Chemicals
are used in its preparation. It has more than three times the strength of Cocoa mixed with Starch, Arrowroot or Sugar, and is therefore far more economical, costing less than one cent a cup. It is delicious, nourishing, strengthening, EASILY DIGESTED, and admirably adapted for invalids as well as for persons in health.

Sold by Grocers everywhere.
W. BAKER & CO., Dorchester, Mass.

Dr. O. P. Brown's
GREAT EXTERNAL REMEDY,
HERBAL OINTMENT!
reaches disease through the pores, arouses circulation, heals inflammation, banishes pain 25 and 50 cents. Druggists or mail. J. Gibson Brown, 47 Grand St., Jersey City, N. J.

SAVE $40.00 ON NEW $140.00
BICYCLES
New, Latest Pattern $140 Bicycles for $100. Cheaper grades in proportion; cash or time. Agents wanted.
A. W. GUMP & CO., Dayton, Ohio.
BICYCLES, GUNS & TYPEWRITERS taken in exchange.

THE Total Abstinence Life Association
OF AMERICA
PAYS ALL HONEST LOSSES PROMPTLY and in FULL.

It furnishes to Total Abstainers the Cheapest and Most Reliable Insurance to be had.

New and liberal commissions will be paid to experienced agents in Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Michigan, California, Connecticut and Iowa.

It will pay you well to write to us.

THE TOTAL ABSTINENCE LIFE ASSOCIATION of AMERICA.
902-904 Royal Insurance Building,
CHICAGO, ILL.

PEATS THE WALL PAPER MERCHANT CHICAGO.

Retails all grades of WALL PAPER of the newest designs and latest colorings in small quantities; many patterns cheaper than your home dealer can buy them.

Good Paper, 3c. Gold Paper, 5c.

Handsome parlor paper 10—12½—15c per roll with wide border and ceiling to match.

If you intend to use any WALL PAPER whatever send 10 cents for postage on samples and his guide "HOW TO PAPER" will be sent free. Agents sample books $1.

See his samples before you buy.

ALFRED PEATS, Wall Paper Merchant,
136-138 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Publisher's Notes.

Helps for Workers.

What are the most suitable leaflets for distribution at public meetings?

For a campaign against high license: Timely Talks and Signal Lights; see titles.

To secure prohibition voters: Timely Talks, Nos. 17, 24, 30, 31, 32, 33, 36, 37, 38; Signal Lights, Nos. 1, 3, 14, 16, 21, 28.

A Gospel Temperance meeting: Timely Talks, Nos. 39, 40; Signal Lights, No. 22; Gospel Lights; Total Abstinence Series; National Leaflets, Nos. 49, 52, 54.

A Children's Meeting, or a Sunday-school: Loyal Leaflets and the National L. T. L. Series.

In the interests of the Purity Department: Select leaflets carefully, and with reference to individuals, from the White Cross and the Social Purity Series. Use National Leaflet, No. 48, for general distribution.

A Suffrage Meeting: National Leaflets, Nos. 5, 28, 33, 42, 43, 44, 47.

A Labor Meeting: Timely Talks, No. 7: Signal Lights, Nos. 8 to 13, 18, 27, 30; National Leaflets, Nos. 14, 31, 34, 36, 39.

A Teachers' Convention: National Leaflets, Nos. 9, 30, 37, 38, 46, 48, 201; Social Purity, Nos. 11 and 12.

A Mothers' Meeting: Home and Purity Leaflets.

For Ministers: National Leaflets, Nos. 1, 15, 21, 22 52.

For Doctors: Signal Lights, No. 26, National Leaflets, Nos. 9, 23, 29, 40; Home Leaflets, Nos. 8 and 12.

Special half-price rates for all the leaflet publications of the W. T. P. A. will be sent on application.

Attention.

A fine illustrated Sunday-school temperance lesson has been prepared for Sunday, May 22, by Mrs. Helen G. Rice and Mrs. Mary Lowe Dickinson—

That is Our Part.

To place it in the various Sunday-schools where children may receive the benefit of the thought and prayer of which it is the outgrowth—

That is Your Part.
Will You Do It?

The following liberal terms are offered: 100, 50cts; 500, $2; 1,000, $3.50; 2,000, $6; 5,000, $12. Add postage at the rate of 12 cents per 100. The Young Crusader and the Lesson will be sent on the following terms: 100, $1; 500, $4.75; 1,000, $9; 2,000, $15; 5,000, $35; 8,000, $48, postpaid. Send all orders to

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

To-morrow is Her Birthday.

"I wish I could send a gift to my friend. Her birthday is to-morrow. But I really think I cannot afford anything she would care for."

"Why, did you not understand that the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association has a fine stock of cards and booklets ranging in price from a few cents to a dollar each, any one of which would be a pleasant reminder of affectionate regard. I think it is lovely to be able to say, 'You are not forgotten' at so small an expense. Send for their catalogue, and do not allow such regret to creep in on another occasion of this kind."

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N.
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

The Key-Note.

"Let's bury Kansas Sunday-schools in temperance literature, that they may arise and walk in newness of life." This is the message the state superintendent of work in Sunday-schools sends to the workers in her state. It is good advice. Let all take heed. And remember the Sunday-school temperance lesson for May is now ready.

ARE you wanting a good speaker? Send for "Thumb-nail Sketches" and learn who the leading speakers are and all about them.

AMONG other fine publications we can offer to our readers is the book entitled "Hindu Literature," by Mrs. E. A. Reed of Chicago. The aim of the writer is to overthrow the arguments in favor of infidelity resulting from an imperfect knowledge of the religion of the ancient Hindus. It is highly commended by distinguished scholars at home and abroad. The retail price of this valuable book is $2. We will send it and THE UNION SIGNAL one year for $2.25.

SPECIAL OFFER
FOR 30 DAYS.

To introduce our High Grade garments through the country, we will make, to measure, the latest and most popular style of Spring Jacket (as per cut) Imported Clay Diagonal Worsted, or Corkscrew, satin-lined throughout, for $15.00

Regular price, to measure, $30
Usual Ready-made price, $25

We guarantee our garments to be Superior in Finish to any in the Market.

Write for samples, references and instructions.
REFERENCE:—Columbia National Bank, Chicago.

MANUFACTURER'S CLOAK CO.,
188 Wabash Av., - - Chicago, Ill.

For Harness, Buggy Tops, Saddles, Fly Nets Traveling Bags, Military Equipments, Etc.
Gives a beautiful finish which will not peel or crack off, smut or crock by handling. Not a varnish Used by the U. S. Army and is the standard among manufacturers and owners of fine harness in every quarter of the globe.
SOLD BY ALL HARNESS MAKERS.

DR. A. OWEN'S ELECTRIC BELT.

Send 6c. for sealed illustrated catalog with full list of diseases and sworn statements in English, German, Swedish and Norwegian, or Treatise on Rupture cured by Electric Truss. THE OWEN ELECTRIC BELT & APPLIANCE CO., Main Office and Only Factory, State st., cor. Adams, Chicago, Ill. [The Owen Electric Belt Building]. Entrance on State-st. New York Office, 826 Broadway. The Largest Electric Belt Establishment in the World.

Webster's Original Unabridged Dictionary in 4 volumes, charges paid to any address in the United States, and a copy of Dr. A. Owen's Electric World for one year will be sent for $1.50. Address Dr. A. Owen's Electric World, 207, 209 State St., Chicago, Ill.

Torrey Razors
—AND—Strops
Highest in Quality.
Known the world over as incomparably The Best. Some troubles are difficult to dodge. Shaving troubles can always be avoided by the use of TORREY RAZORS and TORREY STROPS. Every Razor sold under a GUARANTEE to GIVE SATISFACTION. If the dealer will not supply you, DON'T take any other, but send for Catalogue, telling how to select, sharpen, and keep a Razor in order.
J. R. TORREY RAZOR CO.,
P. O. Box 753 Z WORCESTER, MASS.

$22. FIRST CLASS CURTAIN DESK Four and a Half feet long. Unlimited variety in stock and to order.
American Desk & Seating Co.
270-272 Wabash Av., CHICAGO, U.S.A.

'DELSARTE'
Corset Waists and Braces. Send for Price List.
Agents Wanted. Also
DELSARTE CORSET CO.,
142 W. 23d St., New York.
111 State Street, Chicago, Ill.

FOR MANY LADIES THE BALL'S
PERFECT COMFORT HALTY NO POSSIBLE IN-DRY TO BE NO METAL EYELETS TO PULL OUT OR CUT STRINGS THE FIRST DAY EASY NEVER BREAK OR ROLL UP BONES FIT SLIMS BUT NEVER CORSETS & CORSET WAISTS FOR OTHERS THE
KABO
ELEGANT SHAPES AND MANY OF THEM NO METAL EYELETS TO STRAIN YOUR CLOTHES BONES POSITIVELY DO NOT BREAK OR ROLL UP FULLY GUARANTEED BY CHICAGO CORSET
CORSETS ARE THE ONLY ONES GIVING ENTIRE SATISFACTION.

WEAK, NERVOUS PEOPLE.

DR. HORNE'S ELECTRO-MAGNETIC BELT positively cures RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, LIVER, KIDNEY and exhausting chronic diseases of both sexes. Contains 23 to 100 degrees of Electricity. GUARANTEED the latest improved, cheapest, scientific, powerful, durable and effective MEDICAL ELECTRIC BELT in the WORLD. Electric Suspensories free with Male Belts. ELECTRIC TRUSSES FOR RUPTURE. 9,000 cured. Send 4c stamp for pamphlet.
DR. W. J. HORNE, REMOVED TO 180 WABASH AVE., CHICAGO
Mention THE UNION SIGNAL.

DR. SYKES' SURE CURE FOR CATARRH

Taken internally and used locally with Insufiator. At Druggists or per mail, $1.50.

Has cured many cases pronounced hopeless by physicians. Send for Free Book 'Common Sense Talk' and numerous testimonials. They will convince you.

DR. SYKES' SURE CURE CO., 103 STATE ST. CHICAGO.

F. P. VAN VALKENBURGH, Former Associate Physician and Surgeon to the Old Peoples' Home, 3858 Indiana Avenue, Chicago, also examining Physician for the New York Life Insurance Co. Cures Drunkenness, Morphine, Opium, and destroys the desire for Tobacco. Cures guaranteed. Correspondence solicited. Reference: Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Office, 103 State-st. Chicago

MALE AND FEMALES MAKE $3 to $5 A DAY at home working for us. Send your name on a postal card for particulars and Free Sample. Hobb's Medicine Co., Chicago, Ill.

BEST PAYING THING for Agents is our PHOTOGRAPH FAMILY RECORD PICTURE. We give you liberal terms. Address Dept. G C. P. CORY & CO., 51 & 53 Jefferson St., Chicago

DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES CURED by Peck's Invisible Ear Cushions. Whispers heard Successful when all remedies fail. Sold by F. Hiscox, 853 B'way, N.Y. Write for book of proofs FREE

PILES Remedy Free. INSTANT RELIEF. Final cure in 10 days. Never returns; no purge; no salve; no suppository. A victim tried in vain every remedy has discovered a simple cure, which he will mail free to his fellow sufferers. Address J. H. REEVES, Box 3290, New York City, N. Y.

PARALYSIS CURED without medicine, Rheumatism, Spinal Diseases and Dropsy easily cured. Address Dr. C. I. THACHER, 6, Central Music Hall, Chicago, for a valuable book FREE to all.

RUPTURE A Positive Radical cure at Home. (Sealed) Book giving full particulars sent free. Write Dr. W. S. Rice, Box U Smithville, Jeff. Co., N. Y.

LINCOLN TEA. Guaranteed to cure Constipation, Liver and Kidney trouble. Blood and Complexion Purifier. Send for sample. Sold by all Druggists.
McCLURE DRUG CO., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

ROCK BOTTOM Prices on Dry Goods, Groceries. Everything you eat, wear or use. Send for FREE Illustrated Catalogue to E. R. EAGLE & CO., 68 Wabash Av., Chicago, Ill
We do not sell liquors in any shape.

WANTED! A Christian lady in every township to do writing at home, Pleasant, remunerative work, requiring only a portion of each day's time. Address The Yale Hygiene Co. Agency Department, New Haven, Conn.

LADIES Send to the Stevens' Dish Washing Machine Co., Cleveland, for descriptive circulars of this wonderful invention. No dish or wiping cloth used; truly a great blessing to the household. Agents wanted.

LADY Agents make big wages every day With our Ladies' and Children's Specialties. Over 100 different articles. Indispensable. Catalogue Free. G. L. ERWIN & CO., Chicago, Ill.

LADY wanted, on salary, to sell Roses, Shrubs, &c Brown Bros. Nurym'n, Rochester, N.Y. & Chicago

HOUSHOLD NECESSITY. Agents make big profits. Catalogue (A) and particulars free. Cline Mfg. Co., 67 W. Washington St., Chicago,

LADY AGENTS CLEAR $10 PER DAY selling my garments for ladies & children Mrs. L. E. SINGLETON, Box 665, Chicago, Ill.

10 cents pays for the best ladies' paper published for three months. Ladies' Bazar, Chicago, Ill.

"Why stand ye all the day idle?"
10 DOLLARS PER DAY
is not easily made in these times, but it can be made working for us in any locality. We have agents that have made more than $25 per day, the whole secret is we have something that every housekeeper wants and will buy at sight without any urging. If agents prefer will pay a straight salary of $75 per month and expenses. Full particulars sent free to all points where we have not already secured an agent. Exclusive territory given. Can refer to any express company in Boston as to our integrity. Address, (in full,)
STANDARD SILVERWARE CO.,
Order Dept. Boston, Mass.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints. Having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, and desiring to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who wish it, this recipe in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail, by addressing, with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. NOYES, 820 Powers' Block, Rochester, N. Y.

To the Cincinnati Convention via the B. & O.

Delegates and others attending the Cincinnati Prohibition Convention in June, are requested, before choosing their route from any point, East, West, North or South, to communicate with any of the following agents of the B. & O., who will cheerfully supply all information relative to the lowest rates obtainable, the most picturesque, quickest and safest route, and who will make special arrangements for the transportation of special parties in special cars: L. S. ALLEN, the Rookery, Chicago: W. E. REPPENT, Columbus; O. P. MCCARTY, Grand Central Station, Cincinnati; C. P. CRAIG, 415 Broadway, New York; A. J. SIMMONS, 411 Washington Street, Boston; C. R. MACKENZIE, 833 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia: B. F. BOND, Baltimore; S. B. HEGE, Washington. Pullman accommodations. Two Vestibuled Limited Express trains daily between Cincinnati and the East. Quickest and best train service to Cincinnati from Columbus. The B. & O. is the most attractive route all the year around between Chicago, St. Louis, Cincinnati and the East.

WANTED.

Men and women to sell lots in the temperance manufacturing town of Harvey. Liberal Commission to sell lots only in Harvey, laid out by the Harvey Land Association, original founders of the town. Every lot owner protected by contracts with the manufacturers. Agents must have good references. THE HARVEY LAND ASSOCIATION, 819 The Rookery, Chicago.

The Harvey Land Association has just located three additional industries at Harvey. The plant of J. Mathews, steel boiler, tank manufacturer and founder, boilers, fire-fronts, steel water towers, iron tanks for railway cars and packing houses. They will begin building at once. The Chicago Rock Faced Stone Company, manufacturers of pressed stone for buildings, cornices, window trimmings, etc. A new repair shop at the Steel Car Works, 100x300 feet. The firm of A. J. Sweeney & Son, manufacturing plate-glass machinery, traveling cranes, etc., have begun their buildings. The Wells' Glass Company's new buildings are half completed, and the Bellaire Stamping Company are now moving into their new works. One hundred and sixty-eight new houses are under contract, and there is great activity in this manufacturing town. —From Chicago Evening Journal, March 31, 1892.

CALIFORNIA.

California is the most attractive and delightful section of the United States, if not of the world, and its many beautiful resorts will be crowded with the best families of the East during the entire winter. It offers to the investor the best open opportunity for safe and large returns from its fruit lands. It offers the kindest climate in the world to the feeble and debilitated, and it is reached in the most comfortable manner over the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé Railroad. Pullman Vestibule Sleeping Cars leave Chicago by this line every day in the year, and go without change or transfer through to San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego. This is a feature not offered by any other line.

Write to John J. Byrne, 621 Rialto Building, Chicago, Ill., if you desire any further information as to the country and the accommodations for reaching it.

THE CONQUEROR

The New Salvation Army Monthly. Profusely illustrated. While essentially an American magazine for American readers, it yet gives news of Army operations all over the world.

"We warmly welcome this new magazine. The mechanical execution is of the highest class. Its illustrations are most attractive, and its matter up to the highest thought and purposes of that great movement which now embraces all nations, and seeks earnestly those most neglected, forgotten and forlorn.—UNION SIGNAL."

One Dollar Per Year.

BALLINGTON BOOTH, 111 Reade St., New York City.

Send for Sample Copy.

HOW TO MAKE A FORTUNE

WANTED—Salesmen; who can easily make $25 to $75 per week, selling the Celebrated Pinless Clothes Line, or the Famous Fountain Ink Eraser—Patents recently issued. Sold ONLY by salesmen, to whom we give Exclusive Territory. The Pinless Clothes Line is the only line ever invented that holds clothes without pins—a perfect success. The Fountain Ink Eraser is entirely new will erase ink instantly, and is king of all. On receipt of 50c. will mail you sample of either, or sample of both for $1, with circulars, price-lists and terms. Secure your territory at once. THE PINLESS CLOTHES LINE CO. No. 184 Hermon St., Worcester, Mass.

BUY A SUMMER HOME ON THE SHORES OF

Imperial Lake Geneva, Wis.

We offer in parcels of 100 feet and upward BEAUTIFUL RESIDENCE SITES. All prices, all sizes and easy terms.

GRAND TERRACE ADDITION

For plats and further particulars address PRATT BROTHERS, 508 Chamber of Commerce, cor. Washington and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill

Publisher's Dep't.

This is the Way!

Sow Prohibition seed in your neighbor's mind. How?

1. Send at once for samples of THE UNION SIGNAL. We will gladly furnish them for this purpose.
2. Make a list of hopefuls, and assign about a dozen each to such members as will agree to undertake the following task:
3. Give a paper to each, and ask for a careful examination as a special favor.
4. Call in three days, on each, and solicit a subscription, if possible for a year, six months, or three months.
5. If she refuses, ask if she will accept and read it (as a gift) for one month. If she consents:
6. During the last week of the month call again and solicit her subscription.
7. Keep it up; be tactful. Don't press an argument indiscreetly; but keep it up.

Our Day

For April is now ready. The Boston Monday Lecture, by Rev. Joseph Cook, is alone worth the price of the magazine. It is on "Unshaken Columnar Truths in Scripture." We would enumerate were there not so many. Send for a copy and read for yourself. Price 25 cents.

It is a Beauty.

Miss Willard says our new catalogue is. So is the Temperance Lesson for May 22. Send for it and see for yourself. We cannot do it justice in these columns.

Our Lovely Easter Goods are in great demand. Send at once if you need any of them.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Testimonies.

I enjoy the paper very much, and as president of the Y here, I often find just what I want and need in the Oak and Ivy Leaf, and if we don't do much we see that others are doing much to help the good work along. Wishing you success in the work. ELLA WINSLOW.

Fairmount, Ind.

Having received the convention number of the Oak and Ivy Leaf and read it with pleasure and profit, I now send two dollars for which please send ten copies of the Oak and Ivy Leaf, also the "Life of Service" offered with clubs of ten.

Yours in the work,
MIRANDA B. HESS.

Stillwater, Minn.

There is No Use

In sending foreign missionaries away from home unless you help them afterward. Read "Free Rum on the Congo," and see how hard it is for them to accomplish what they desire. If you are interested in missions—and of course you are—you should know what this book contains. Price 25c.

Sample copies of our papers will be sent to any one who desires to aid in securing a large circulation of the same, and thus assist in "educating public sentiment."

Do You Want a Photograph

of one of the National W. C. T. U. leaders? You can have it. Write to us for information, and we will tell you how.

MRS. E. F. VAIL, of Bradford, Ill., desires us to say that twelve shares of W. T. P. A. stock owned by her are for sale. Address as above.

Take Notice.

Special editions of THE UNION SIGNAL are prepared for all special days, and extra numbers can be secured by ordering in advance. For rates on large numbers address

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Van Houten's Cocoa—Send for a can. See advts.

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE ROLLERS

Beware of imitations. Notice autograph of STEWART HARTSHORN on label and get the genuine Hartshorn.

THE EMMA WILLARD MEMORIAL ASSOCIATION desires to place life of our greatest educator in every home. Charter members $1.00; 100 sketches to be resold for scholarships in Mid-Continent Industrial and Normal School, Benkelman, Dundy Co., Neb., opening June 7th, or Home Missions, text-book "Our Country," 30c. National Organ Chicago Woman's News, 16-page illustrated weekly, $1.00 per year. Sample plans and sketch, 6c. Address Mrs. WM. L. TAYLOR, Sec., Canton, Ill.

DULUTH 7% & 8% First Mortgages
REAL ESTATE AND MINING STOCKS.
References Furnished. Correspondence Solicited,
Tvedt, Eckstein & Co., 327 W. Superior Street, DULUTH, MINN.

GOLD Eyeglasses, 1 pair sent postpaid any address. $2 Worth $8, with chain, 50 cts. extra. Satisfaction guaranteed. All kinds of optical goods. Agents wanted. Particulars on application. Add. N. W. OPTICAL CO. 17-19-21 Quincy St., Chicago, Ill

FAT PEOPLE You can reduce your weight 10 to 15 lbs. a month at home without starving or injury by DR. CLARKE'S Home Treatment. Proofs, Testimonials, Free. F. B. CLARKE, M. D., Drawer 133, Chicago, Ill.

YOUR CHILD must be kept healthy, or she can not be beautiful. Sensible mothers buy the "GOODSENSE" Corset Waist for themselves and their growing daughters.

LADIES without business experience are making immense sales of Mme. McCABE'S CORSETS AND WAISTS. Send for agents' terms. St. Louis Corset Co., St. Louis, Mo.

DRUNKENNESS cured by using BOSTON DRUG. Absolute secrecy guaranteed or money refunded. Price $1. All druggists, or by mail W. R. BROWN & CO., 105 Chauncey St., Boston.

A LADY WANTED in each locality to manage Toilet Parlor at home; write, obtain names, send circulars. $5 to $15 weekly. Our Toilet Art Book Free. Send stamp. SYLVAN TOILET CO., Port Huron, Mich.

RHEUMATISM IF YOU CANNOT FIND A CURE Add. DR. W. H. ROSS, Grand Rapids, Mich.

BICYCLES ON EASY PAYMENTS No extra charge. All makes new or 2d hd. Lowest price guaranteed. Largest stock & oldest dealers in U. S. Cata. free. Agts. wanted. Rouse, Hazard & Co. 77 G St., Peoria, Ill

HAVE YOU ANY USE FOR MONEY?

If so, we have a plan of our own which will put money in your pocket. It practically amounts to just this.

WE TAKE THE RISKS OF BUSINESS
WE FURNISH YOU CAPITAL
YOU TAKE NO RISK
YOU INVEST NO CAPITAL
YOU REAP THE BENEFITS

by becoming our solicitor for "CHILDHOOD; ITS CARE AND CULTURE," or "GLIMPSES OF FIFTY YEARS." With which would you prefer to work?

: : PLEASE STATE YOUR CHOICE : :

And we will send terms with full details of the plan. Assuredly, this is an offer which it is to your advantage to investigate. You can make more money in this business, if rightly conducted, than in any other and you can do much good. Send for details at any rate.

IT COSTS BUT A POSTAL CARD.

ADDRESS SUBSCRIPTION BOOK DEPARTMENT.
WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUB. ASS'N.
161 LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO.

THE PATHWAY TO EASTER

SEVEN WORDS FOR THE SEVEN DAYS

BY ROSE PORTER

To which has been added an Easter poem written for the W. C. T. U. by MARY LOWE DICKINSON. This consists of an elaboration of the utterances of Christ from the cross, and is peculiarly appropriate for Easter tokens. It is printed on excellent laid paper, and bound in embossed bristol. We make this an Easter specialty, and offer it at the exceedingly low price of 25c. per copy, 6 for $1.25, 12 for $2.25.

Send orders to WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION,
161 La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

DO YOU WANT FACTS?

And do you desire others should know the facts in regard to the liquor traffic? You cannot do better than by securing a copy of that wonderful book,

The Temperance Movement

By Ex-SENATOR BLAIR.

It discusses

Alcohol and Health,
Alcohol and Crime,
Alcohol and Poverty,
License or Prohibition?
Alcohol and Wealth,
Alcohol and Labor,
The Forces Against Alcohol,
Temperance Organizations,
The Church.

It is a very valuable compendium of information. Every thinker and every leader in all causes should read it. It is a book of 583 pages, beautifully illustrated. We offer it, bound in cloth, at the ridiculously low price of $1.25 postpaid.

Address WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

LITTLE GEM FOLDING BAG.

The above cut represents a Folding Bag, so small when done up that it may be concealed in the hand or carried in the pocket, and strong enough to carry fifty pounds weight. Price, 50c. $3.50 per doz. Agents Wanted.

THE WORLD'S SPECIALTY CO.
Manufacturers of Novelties and Patented Articles.
ROOM 504, 85 DEARBORN ST., CHICAGO.

BEATTY Pianos $175. Organs $48. Want Ag'ts. Cat. free. Dan. F. Beatty, Wash'ton, N. J

Signal Notes.

THAT she cannot afford it is war-despoiled Chili's plea for not participating in the World's Fair.

RECENT data places the population of the globe at 1,480,000,000 souls; the land area at 52,821,000 square miles.

"No member shall be permitted to drink the white man's grog" is the pertinent regulation of a newly formed Zulu church in Africa.

"IT is never too late to mend." Chauncey M. Depew used to smoke twenty cigars a day, but finding it injurious to his health, he has stopped the use of tobacco entirely.

THERE are no Sunday papers in England. The attempt of the New York Herald to publish a Sunday issue of its London edition was a flat failure. This fact scores one for English conservatism.

THE opium habit is a dangerous contagion, which is spreading from its center in Asia, into other countries. As a form of iniquity it is unsurpassed, and should be met with most relentless opposition.

A COMPARISON made according to census estimates of 1887 shows that Russia has about 3 per cent, France 14½ per cent, England 16 per cent. Germany 20 per cent, the United States 22 per cent of population under school influence.

ILLINOIS is said to be the stronghold of the whisky power. The internal revenue collections of this state for the year ending in June were more than twice that of any other state—New York yielding $16,565,522, while Illinois paid $38,464,312.

THE international traveling commissioner of the Salvation Army, Colonel McKie, is now in this country, having been sent out on a tour of inspection by General Booth. He is accompanied by Assistant Staff Commander Platt, and the meetings which they conduct are remarkable in number and enthusiasm.

THE two causes which are credited with awakening the German people to the necessity of the temperance reform are first, the conviction that beer-drinking is weakening the moral and physical qualities of the nation, and second, the necessity of turning the beer material into bread. Statistics show that Germany devotes about a quarter of her productive energy to the liquor traffic, and that the "demand for bread can only be met by the denial of beer."

REV. DR. NEWTON, in the Independent, claims that the venerable system of Hinduism is crumbling away; the religion of the gospel is slowly but surely taking its place. The increase of the Christian population in ten years has been sixty-five per cent, while the heathen population has grown only eleven per cent. There are now 2,000,000 of native Christians in India. At the same rate of progress there will be 24,000,000 in fifty years, and 200,000,000 in one hundred years.

THE town of Harvey, Ill., is established on a solid temperance basis, and has proved that manufacturers can be more prosperous when their employés are prosperous and are free from the saloon curse. It has been fully demonstrated there, that men can do better work in foundries and iron and steel works without beer than with it. They have just located three additional industries. One hundred and sixty-eight new houses are under contract, and there is great activity in this manufacturing town. We are fully assured that Harvey is without a saloon, and the restrictions are such on every lot sold by the Harvey Land Association, that saloons cannot come in the future.

AT a certain prominent place in Cincinnati a new saloon has been opened, after fixing the place up in the most elaborate manner. The recess door in front is all that art can make it, finished with stained glass; on either side of the door are large show windows. In one is an easel holding a horseshoe of the most delicate roses, nicely imbedded with ferns, and in the other window is an elaborate decoration of crimson and white roses with fern leaves for the background. On the day of the opening a man in passing by was heard to say after gazing intently for some minutes on the display, "They ought to put on the window 'please omit flowers.'" Another one added, "This is our funeral;" and so it is, but mothers and widows will be called on to shed tears.—Christian Worker.

False Economy

Is practiced by many people, who buy inferior articles of food because cheaper than standard goods. Surely infants are entitled to the best food obtainable. It is a fact that the Gail Borden "Eagle" Brand Condensed Milk is the best infant food. Your grocer and druggist keep it.

Ivory Soap is especially valuable for bathing the skin of infants and very young children. It has a direct action on the pores, and not only thoroughly cleanses but softens and heals the skin.

Particular care should also be taken to wash the children's clothing in Ivory Soap. The garments will be whiter, cleaner and sweeter. The lather of Ivory is clean. There is no oil or grease in it. Dr. R. Ogden Doremus, of New York, says that the detergent properties of Ivory Soap are unsurpassed.

COPYRIGHT 1890, BY THE PROCTER & GAMBLE CO.

MORE FACTORIES LOCATED
BY
The Harvey Land Association
13 FACTORIES ∴ GREAT ACTIVITY AT HARVEY

J. MATHEWS, Steel Boiler, Tank Manufacturer and Founder —Boilers, Fire Fronts, Steel Water Towers, Steel Oil Tanks for railway cars and packing houses—will begin building at once.

THE CHICAGO ROCK-FACED STONE COMPANY, manufacturers of Pressed Stone for buildings, cornices, window trimmings, etc.

A. J. SWEENEY & SON, manufacturing Rolling-mill Machinery, Plate-glass Machinery, Traveling Cranes, etc., have begun their new building.

THE WELLS GLASS COMPANY, manufacturing Beveled Glass, Stained Glass for windows and decorated windows of all kinds. Building half completed.

THE BELLAIRE STAMPING COMPANY, manufacturing all kinds of Stamped Ware. Just moving into their new building.

NEW REPAIR SHOP at the Car Works, 100x300 feet. Contract just let.

BESIDES EIGHT INDUSTRIES in full operation.

600 HOUSES COMPLETED.

200 HOUSES UNDER CONTRACT—(Estimated).

IMPORTANT!—PLEASE READ THIS.

THE HARVEY LAND ASSOCIATION are the founders of Harvey, a temperance manufacturing town of unparalleled growth. THE HARVEY LAND ASSOCIATION is the only company or association that has subdivided and is selling the original subdivided lots in Harvey. Other subdivisions, or additions, and there are at least five of them, are wholly outside of the village of Harvey, and are NOT IN ANY WAY connected with the manufactories in the village of Harvey.

BE SURE before you buy any property represented as being in Harvey to see that the title comes through THE HARVEY LAND ASSOCIATION, and thus derive the benefit of the following contract with manufactories:

"And the said party of the first part in consideration of the agreements herein contained on the part of THE HARVEY LAND ASSOCIATION, hereby covenants and agrees that it will at all times in hiring employes give preference to persons living upon land owned or controlled by THE HARVEY LAND ASSOCIATION or its grantees, and that it will, so far as practicable, limit its employment of help to persons living upon land owned or controlled by said HARVEY LAND ASSOCIATION, or its grantees."

The above contract protects your property for all time and gives it added value over any property not thus protected.

Be sure and read the 36-page pamphlet before buying any property represented as being in Harvey, Send for plats. Address all inquiries to

The Harvey Land Association, 819 TO 825 THE ROOKERY
CORNER OF LA SALLE AND ADAMS STREETS, CHICAGO, ILL.

P. S. For the next 60 days we will pay your actual railroad fare from your homes to Chicago and return, provided it does not exceed 2½ per cent of what you purchase of us while here.
Mention THE UNION SIGNAL.

Care of the TEETH is of great importance. To secure a perfect dentifrice should be your aim. Test deliciously flavored

RUBIFOAM

Sample vial mailed free.
Address
E. W. HOYT & CO., Lowell, Mass.

If any of my Union Signal Friends care to investigate a way to "corral" some dollars, I have a plan to present which has been wonderfully successful. No "canvassing;" nothing speculative; simply a dignified, practicable and popular matter of the greatest interest. "How much can be made?" That depends. But if you can give three hours or more per week you should clear at least $20 to $50 per month. I name these figures as the lowest that has been done with the kind of energy which I know—from experience—is yours.

Such Opportunities Are well worth Looking Into?

For full information address GEO. C. HALL, Room 269, 280 Broadway, New York City.

ACME CORSET & DRESS PROTECTOR

A complete garment, worn under the corset or flannels, protecting the clothing from perspiration. Cheaper than dress shields 1 pair doing the work of 6. Misses', bust measure, 28-33, 80c; Ladies', bust measure 34-39, $1; Ladies', bust measure, 40-46, $1.25. M. DEWEY, Manf'r, 1397 West Monroe Street, Chicago.
AGENTS WANTED.
Send money by Post Office Order. Catalogue Free.

ORIGINAL
DRESS REFORM ROOMS.
(Established 1875.)
Complete lines of Equipoise and Delsarte Waists, Jenness-Miller Bodices, Bust Supports, Jersey-fitting combination suits, etc., etc.
Send stamp for free Illustrated Catalogue.
MRS. S. W. PIKE,
75 Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

$5 to $15 per day, at home, selling LIGHTNING PLATER and plating jewelry, watches tableware, &c. Plates the finest of jewelry good as new, on all kinds of metal with gold, silver or nickel. No experience. No capital. Every house has goods needing plating. Wholesale to agents $5. Write for circulars. H. E. DELNO & Co., Columbus, O.

Just published, 12 Articles on Practical Poultry Raising, by FANNY FIELD, the greatest of all American writers on Poultry for Market and POULTRY for PROFIT. Tells how she cleared $449 on 100 Light Brahmas in one year; about a mechanic's wife who clears $300 annually on a village lot; refers to her 60 acre poultry farm on which she CLEARS $1500 ANNUALLY. Tells about incubators, brooders, spring chickens, capons, and how to feed to get the most eggs. Price 25 cts. Stamps taken. Address DANIEL AMBROSE, 45 Randolph St., Chicago.

$50.00 A WEEK

A bright, energetic man or woman wanted to take the sole agency for an article that is needed in every home and indispensable in every office. SELLS AT SIGHT, in town or country. $700 in 90 days and a steady income afterward. A "Bonanza" for the right person. Good jobs are scarce and soon taken. Write at once.
J. W. JONES, Manager, Springfield, Ohio.

ALUMINUM SOUVENIR

Charm (dime size) with the Lord's Prayer coined in smallest characters, and strung on blue silk ribbon, sent free to any one sending 10 cents for sample copy of The FREE St. Louis Magazine. Aluminum is the wonderful new metal, bright as silver, light as wood, strong as steel, will not tarnish.
St. Louis Magazine, 901 Olive St., St. Louis, Mo.

THE UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION — FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND

Vol. XVIII.—No. 15.] CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, April 14, 1892. [Price $1.00 per Year in Advance.

Mrs. Ursula D. Herrick
2419 19th st
9-5-92

THE WORLD'S FAIR TEMPERANCE HEADQUARTERS AT HARVEY, ILL.

$ ONE DOLLAR $

ONE DOLLAR deposited now secures a room for yourself or friends for the World's Fair in the great WORLD'S FAIR TEMPERANCE HOTEL at Harvey, Ill., the greatest Temperance Headquarters in the World. See special offer below. The rooms are large and light, pure water, perfect ventilation; all outside rooms. Twenty-five minutes' ride to the World's Fair Grounds. Healthful, wholesome, perfect quiet. No disorderly persons allowed. No Saloons in Town. Great religious services on Sunday.

RATES.—Four persons in a room, fifty cents each per day. Two persons in a room, $1 each per day. One person only in a room, $1.50 per day. Meals on the European plan will cost from 15 cts. to 75 cts. as you may choose. The ride to the Fair Grounds will likely not exceed 5 cts. These rates are much less than Chicago prices for similar accommodations, and THESE PRICES FOR ROOMS WILL ADVANCE as soon as 5,000 SHARES OF $10 EACH ARE SOLD.

GREAT SUNDAY MEETINGS

Will be held throughout the World's Fair at Harvey. These meetings will be addressed by the leading temperance men and other reformers of the world. Among those already engaged and who will be there and speak, are: Wm. T. Stead, of London, the great English journalist; Frances E. Willard, the Queen of Women; Dr. A. B. Leonard, D. D., one of the foremost platform orators of this country; Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, the largest labor organization in the world, and Mary A. Woodbridge, the statesman of the W. C. T. U. Among those who have been invited and will be secured if possible, are George William Curtis, General O. O. Howard, Dr. T. DeWitt Talmage, D. D., and many others of like fame.

Mary A. Woodbridge, Secretary of the National W. C. T. U., and President of the newly organized WORLD'S FAIR TEMPERANCE CLUB has this week closed arrangements with The Harvey World's Fair Temperance Hotel for the entertainment of her new national organization. It is estimated that this club will reach a membership of 50,000 in three months. Mary A. Woodbridge, President; Mary T. Lathrap, Mrs. F. H. Rastall, Vice-Presidents; B. F. Parker, Secretary; Clara C. Hoffman and Geo. B. Woodbridge, National Organizers.

A Texas College is negotiating for rooms for 200 Professors and Students. 1,000 Teachers from a single State are forming a club and will be entertained at Our Hotel at Harvey.

Clara C. Hoffman, of Missouri, Mary T. Lathrap, of Michigan, and Esther Pugh, of Ill., were among the first to subscribe for the Guaranteed Profit Sharing Stock of our Hotel.

REMEMBER The Hotel is only two blocks from the Illinois Central R. R. Depot on 147th St., and close to the Grove where the Greatest Temperance and Educational Sunday Gatherings ever held in the world's history will take place during the Great Fair.

WHAT TO DO.

Those who order and pay for rooms now get their lodgings at present rates, and moreover among them will be distributed ONE-HALF OF ALL THE PROFITS of the enterprise during the WORLD'S FAIR. Meals need not now be paid for. Send only money to pay for lodgings. The way this is arranged is Guaranteed Profit-Sharing Stock Certificates are Sold in Ten Dollar Shares. This stock entitles one to rooms at above rates, if taken now, to the full face value of the stock, either for themselves or for their friends. Then when the Fair is over James B. Hobbs, President of the Commercial Loan and Trust Co., Gen. C. H. Howard and Mary A. Woodbridge will adjust the accounts and divide the profits into two equal parts, one of which will belong to the Hotel Company and the other to the patrons who buy now these Guaranteed Profit-Sharing Certificates. Only 10,000 shares offered. Rooms are guaranteed ONLY for those who engage them in advance on this plan. Work will begin on the Hotel to accommodate 1,000 guests as soon as 3,000 more shares are sold.

SPECIAL OFFER

In order to commence work at once, and until 5,000 shares at $10 each are sold, we will accept subscriptions on the following plan: Send us One Dollar for each share of Ten Dollars each which you may wish to take, and we will enter your name and reserve for you rooms to the full amount of the shares subscribed for. You can send the balance in monthly payments of One Dollar or more until fully paid. Use the form at the right in sending order.

REMEMBER, only 3,000 shares can be gotten on this plan. SEND FOR YOURS BEFORE YOU LAY DOWN THIS PAPER.

ONLY $100,000 WORTH OF THESE CERTIFICATES OFFERED. CASH WITH ORDER. SHARES $10 EACH.

THE HARVEY WORLD'S FAIR HOTEL AND ENTERTAINMENT CO.,

A CUT THIS OUT OR COPY IT,

Fill the blanks, SIGN IT, and pin it to a ONE DOLLAR BILL or ONE DOLLAR postal note for each share ordered, and mail it at once to Walter Thomas Mills & Co., 161 La Salle St., Chicago.

..... 1892.

Walter Thomas Mills & Co., 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.:

I hereby subscribe for and agree to take and pay for rooms in The World's Fair Temperance Hotel at Harvey, Ill., on the Guaranteed Profit-Sharing plan, amounting to —— shares of Ten Dollars each, total $——. It is specially understood that these certificates are, when fully paid, non-assessable, without liability, and receivable at their full face value, and at the regular rates, in payment for rooms at the above Hotel during the World's Fair, besides entitled to pro rata share of one-half the profits of the enterprise. Inclosed find $—— cash payment on this subscription, the balance to be paid in installments of not less than One Dollar per share each calendar month until fully paid, but in the event of the default of any of these payments, or in the further event of grossly immoral or improper conduct on my part at any time prior to or during the World's Fair, all rights or claims hereunder are forfeited to and at the option of the said World's Fair Hotel and Entertainment Co.

Signed.....

Address.....

All orders for stock should be addressed to WALTER THOMAS MILLS & CO.,

OUR EXCLUSIVE AGENTS FOR SALE OF STOCK, 161 LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

READ THIS TWICE

We desire to call your attention to THE SAFEST INVESTMENT you can now make. The opportunity will not be long offered, as the small amount now unsold will soon be taken. We refer to the stock of the

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association

It has an established business. Capital stock, $125,000.

ABSOLUTELY NON-ASSESSABLE
DIVIDENDS PAID ANNUALLY

Price per share $25.
Address all inquiries to

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION,
161 LA SALLE STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

HAVE YOU ANY USE FOR MONEY?

If so, we have a plan of our own which will put money in your pocket. It practically amounts to just this.

WE TAKE THE RISKS OF BUSINESS
WE FURNISH YOU CAPITAL
YOU TAKE NO RISK
YOU INVEST NO CAPITAL
YOU REAP THE BENEFITS

by becoming our solicitor for "CHILDHOOD; ITS CARE AND CULTURE," or "GLIMPSES OF FIFTY YEARS." With which would you prefer to work?

PLEASE STATE YOUR CHOICE

And we will send terms with full details of the plan. Assuredly, this is an offer which it is to your advantage to investigate. You can make more money in this business, if rightly conducted, than in any other and you can do much good. Send for details at any rate.

IT COSTS BUT A POSTAL CARD.

ADDRESS

SUBSCRIPTION BOOK DEPARTMENT,
WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUB. ASS'N,
161 LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO.

Correspondence.

A JAPANESE GIRL'S LETTER.

The following most naive and interesting letter is from a young Japanese student in the Northwestern University at Evanston, Ill.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—It is with gratitude to our common Master that, although a perfect stranger in this foreign land, I am permitted to attend this meeting, with a good opportunity to speak a few words in regard to my country, although it may be in poor English, which may possibly try your patience. You have at your command books, encyclopedias and the best speakers in the world to instruct you in regard to my country, and may know much about it that I do not know.

Japan, the land of the rising sun, is a small, independent empire in the eastern part of Asia, comprising the four large islands of Kiushiu, Shikoku, Yezo, and Nipon or rather Hondo, as we should call it. Besides these, there are more than 3,500 smaller ones. I was born on one of these main islands called Kiushiu. The meaning of Kiu is nine, in Japanese; shiu means country, so the exact meaning is that the island consists of nine countries.

Its situation is quite isolated from the other divisions of Japan. During the dark ages, despotic feudalism prevailed there in even greater force than in other parts of the empire. Then, too, its people differ greatly from those of the other islands, in character, manners, and customs and even in language. It is true, there is one pure language called Japanese, just as you have what is called "good English," and though, without doubt, your "accent" differs in various parts of the country, and peculiar expressions are used by people living in different sections, yet the differences are not nearly so great as in Japan. The language used by the Kiushiu people in old times could hardly be understood by others, and their manners were ruder and less polished than among some of their countrymen. This is the case even to the present day, so you must not judge the manners of the typical Japanese lady by mine, since I am only a Kiushiu girl.

The men of Kiushiu gloried in military rather than in industrial pursuits; they honored courage and a manly spirit. These strong influences exerted their power over the women also. My mother told me once that she liked the use of the gun better than that of the needle, and therefore had learned it.

But while fond of military glory the people of my native land were more ignorant of books than others; it can be said of them, however, that in courage and morality their reputation was far beyond that of their countrymen.

There are two or three ladies of my acquaintance who, so recently as fifteen years ago, shared with their husbands the dangers and the glories of the battle field. Such was the character of the Kiushiu people, but since "Old Japan" has fallen, and New Japan has won the day, the old Asiatic spirit has begun to pass silently away and to give place to the European ideas recently planted. We are quite proud, though, that most of the noted people in Japan came out of Kiushiu. Some American lady told me it is just the same with people born in Ohio. They are all very proud because they think there are more celebrated people from Ohio than any other. Former Kiushiu customs have become like those of other parts of Japan, and everybody understands our language now. Of course there are still a few places where the dialect is peculiar, and my native place is among them, so that when I first went to school a few years ago nobody could understand me. I had a very hard time—much harder than when I landed in America, for during the first few days of my Japanese school life, away from home, my lips were perfectly useless. I used to write out on paper what I wanted to say, and made many mistakes just as I am doing here.

People in my native land are no longer contented with worn-out doctrines of Asiatic morals and religions. Pagan religions seem to their inquiring minds mere relics of old superstition. True Christian education for men and women has been undertaken in many ways. The Imperial University in Tokio, the present capital of Japan, is sending out men of high culture by hundreds every year, to take some responsible position in governmental service or in private capacity. One or two more universities of high grade are soon to be founded, one in Kioto, the ancient capital where our Emperors once resided, and another in Tokio. One is to be wholly directed and carried on in the name of Christ. Girls' seminaries are found almost by the hundred, and are established in nearly every prominent city. Schools are constantly increasing. We Japanese, as you know, all have a keen appetite for everything new, so you will hardly find any school where some students are not studying an English course, even in the country grammar schools. The boarding school in the beautiful city of Kohe, where I spent the past few years, is quite a large one; it has fine buildings, and the students number 160, or perhaps more. Quite a large number of graduates are sent out every year. Most of these, scattered nearly all over Japan, are laboring for Christ's sake. Since the missionaries landed on our shores to preach the gospel not only by their words, but by earnest work and constant prayer, Christianity is becoming the leading religion of the land. Though the old religions, Shintoism and Buddhism, still prevail, they are losing ground, and are mostly believed by old people, and by the more ignorant classes.

The school which I attended was established "In His Name." Most of the students who come to it are unbelievers when they enter, but become Christians before they leave the school. This is the experience in all the Christian schools.

I joined the church in my native province, and all my brothers and sisters as well as my parents, and even my friends are Christians; yet I know since I went to the school at Kohe my faith in God has grown stronger. There were, at that time, four American missionary teachers, besides the Japanese teachers and all were "full of faith and the Holy Spirit."

The Christian women of Kohe are very earnest. A few years ago Mrs. Leavitt, of the World's Christian Temperance Union came to Japan and organized societies in many places, and as she visited Kohe to start the movement there, I became a member of the W. C. T. U., in which you are all so much interested in the United States. There are now hundreds of members of that society in Japan. Even in the Kohe church, where we belong, there are more than a hundred members of the union. In school we had three different societies for helping others; a temperance union, a home and also a foreign missionary society.

In our bi-monthly temperance meeting each one of us contributed something to the interest of the meeting, sometimes showing our schoolmates the effects of alcohol by chemical experiments. Let me tell you briefly how I became the member of this society. While I was in Kohe school the special meeting was held on this subject one Sunday evening, and two ladies had a debate about the temperance society. At first, in spirit, I was on the negative side, because the leading Protestant churches in Japan are really temperance societies, and of course we Christians do not drink wine.

One of our teachers, however, told us about Paul's view of such matters and his pity for the weak brothers, and I saw clearly that to save the weak brothers some special organization was needed. Then she sung, "Where is my wandering boy to-night?" I was deeply impressed and determined then and there to be a member of the W. C. T. U. Since then I have had a very strong desire to do my best for this noble society. I sincerely hope to know the temperance method by some way while I am in this country. Though my family are all Christians, yet they are not the members of this society for they have the same opinion as I had before. I had great discussions about the drinking of wine. Sometimes I broke the wine bottles. I am afraid you will think me a very rude girl, but I want to be very cruel toward wine.

The Home Missionary Society, which I said before, is for the purpose of sending out missionaries to many parts of Japan. Students are especially engaged in teaching the gospel during vacation.

Our Foreign Missionary Society was organized to help in the work being done in China, India and Turkey.

Perhaps you will wonder why we should organize a "Foreign" missionary society, when our own country is not yet evangelized. I can only answer, "We could not help it." We were constrained by the love of Christ, although some said, "We ought not to stretch out our hands to other lands while Japan is still partly destitute of the Gospel"; others said, "All the more reason why we should send the Gospel abroad." We should show our gratitude for the light already received, by following the example of those who sent us the Gospel. So we organized both societies and the result has been that the home-work has not suffered.

Although neither my parents nor their children ever worshipped any idol before their conversion to Christianity, my good grandmother was an earnest believer in Buddhism, carefully observing the Buddha's birthday by partial fasting, and worshipping her idol every day. She did not, however, content herself with daily prayer, she would offer before the image she adored, the choicest gift she could make in the shape of food. Grain by grain, she would pick out with patient care, the finest and whitest rice used for food, taking only the grains that seemed perfect, and making a delicate cake of them with which to please the god she worshipped.

I think if we love Christ as truly as my dear grandmother loved her idol, we will offer to Him all that is best and finest in this world; and gold and silver will only seem a little thing when we offer them to Him who has bought for us what is whiter than the fairest rice-grains, "the Pearl of great price."

Our Library Table.

There is ever a certain amount of fascination in anything savoring of prophecy or prediction. Not a few works of fiction have recently been placed before the public whose plots, laid years hence, hold enough of the possible, and are so linked to the present wonderful record of human progress as to win for themselves hearty favor. Thomas Fitch and Anna M. Fitch have written BETTER DAYS, OR, A MILLIONAIRE OF TO-MORROW, a story whose opening date is July, 1892. The book is dedicated "To the eight thousand millionaires of America." The narrative is well sustained throughout. The principal characters are men of fabulous wealth with the corresponding control over the welfare of wage-workers and the finances of the nation. David Morning becomes the possessor of a gold mine in the Santa Catalina mountains, the resources of which far exceed those of any mine on record. Its owner meets and solves the problem of unselfish, just disposition of this wealth, that it may do the greatest amount of good to the greatest number possible. The story is full of opportune suggestions, as the tendency of the age is toward trusts and monopolies which favor the few to the exclusion of the many.

F. J. Schulte & Co., 298 Dearborn St., Chicago.

ON THE THRESHOLD, by Theodore T. Munger. This work contains a series of lectures to young people, of which too high commendation would be difficult to write. The author speaks out of a true understanding of human nature and its ambitions. He reaches his audience by inspiring them through the high, sweet keynote he himself has sounded. The book is acceptable for and must prove helpfully suggestive to young and old alike.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston and New York.

CONSUMPTION; HOW TO PREVENT IT AND HOW TO LIVE WITH IT. This most practical work, by Dr. N. S. Davis, Jr., is, perhaps, one of the best written for the general public, for the reason that it holds out no false hopes, but from scientific and yet simple analyses of the nature and causes of the dread malady, proceeds to sensible discussions of the manner in which it may be "lived with," or even prevented. "It is not possible," writes Dr. Davis in the closing chapter, "by any means with which we are now acquainted, to eradicate the disease from the world; but if all who are predisposed were shown their danger and instructed in regard to the means by which it could be averted, it would require not more than one, or, at most two generations, to reduce its mortality as much as vaccination has reduced the mortality of small-pox."

Published by F. A. Davis, at 1231 Filbert St., Philadelphia, Penn.

To those who watch with interest the growth of Methodist mission work in foreign lands, A WINTER IN INDIA AND MALAYSIA, by Rev. M. V. B. KNOX, Ph. D., D. D., will be a welcome source of much valuable information. Perhaps no better word can be said of this book than that written by Bishop John F. Hurst, D. D., LL.D., in the introduction: Dr. Knox's "WINTER IN INDIA AND MALAYSIA" is so well written, so full of life and movement, and has so sprung out of the very experience and needs of the pastor at home, that they who read will hardly cease until they reach the end. . . . It should have a place on the pastor's table, in the Sunday-school library, and in the Christian homes in all parts of our land. . . . The book, however, is mostly to be prized for its intense and beautiful loyalty to the kingdom of the Christ."

Hunt & Easton, New York City. Price $1.20.

Every person wishing to become thoroughly familiar with the World's Fair City should be provided with the "STANDARD GUIDE TO CHICAGO" for the year 1892. There are between 125.000 and 150,000 subjects treated of in this volume, from the number of miles of sewers in the city to the earnings of the national banks, and from a description of the Exposition buildings to the presentation of the factory products and the wages received by the employés of the city. It is published in two bindings only—cloth and gold, postage prepaid, $1; flexible morocco and gold, postage prepaid, $2. The Standard Guide Company, 358 Dearborn street, Chicago, are the publishers.

MIND IS MATTER, OR, THE SUBSTANCE OF THE SOUL, by William Hemstreet, is a book of psychological interest, which, although dealing very decidedly with questions that are, by their nature, beyond the realm of positivism, nevertheless contains matter that is rich in its suggestiveness. The world at large is becoming more and more conversant with the study of mental science and if THE SUBSTANCE OF THE SOUL has no further good in it, the first chapter on "Mental Dynamics" is well worth thoughtful reading. Fowler & Wells Co., 775 Broadway, N. Y.

DRUMMOND'S ADDRESSES: The Greatest Thing in the World; Pax Vobiscum; The Changed Life; "First!" How to Learn How; What is a Christian? The Study of the Bible

This author's works are too widely known and admired to need more than mere mention, yet this edition of the "Addresses" by Thomas Whittaker, New York, is so attractively unique as to call forth an individual eulogy for itself. In a binding of lavender and white and gold, of a convenient size for handling, and clear, easy reading print, the little book makes a delightful accessory to private libraries. Price 50 cents.

THE TEMPERANCE MELODIST, issued by the Primitive Methodist Book Depot, London, England, far outdoes in size, variety of selections and expense of binding, corresponding volumes in America. It contains a number of hymns from "The White Ribbon" song book and is altogether a very choice production.

THE UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION — FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Vol. XVIII.—No. 15.] CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, April 14, 1892. [Price $1.00 per Year in Advance.

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

Tokio, Japan, has been visited by a disastrous fire.

The maple sugar crop is reported as one-fourth of the average size.

The Italian government has forbidden open-air celebrations on May-day.

Cornell University announces that hereafter summer courses will be given.

W. T. Baker was on Friday reëlected president of the Columbian Exposition board of directors.

Kentucky passed a bill on Thursday appropriating $100,000 for the state exhibit at the Exposition.

The President recognized Arbor Day, April 8, by planting three trees in the White House garden.

Three million five hundred thousand acres were opened to white settlers in Oklahoma Territory April 13.

Great misery and suffering exist in Atlanta, Ga., as a result of pneumonia and fever in the factory district.

Marshall Field has given $100,000 to the Chicago University, provided that a million dollars be raised within ninety days.

The American society for the extension of university teaching has decided to establish a seminary for the training of university extension lecturers and organizers.

It has been decided to discuss the question of Sunday opening of the Exposition on the second day of the next session of the National Commission, which will probably be October 6.

Women throughout the state of Illinois voted on April 5 for school trustees. In Evanston Madame Willard, in her eighty-ninth year, cast the first ballot of her life, as the fulfillment of a lofty purpose.

The ladies of Chicago have prevailed upon the managers of street car lines to display in their cars printed notices concerning the undesirability of spitting upon the floors. A diminution of the loathsome practice is already noticed.

Lady Somerset and Miss Willard spoke at Amherst, Tuesday evening, April 5, before the semi-annual state convention of the Massachusetts W. C. T. U.; on April 9 they visited Wellesley College, addressing the seven hundred students, many of whom wore the white ribbon, and on April 10 they spoke for the Lasell Seminary Congress.

The National Commission of the Columbian Exposition has decided to have a synopsis of all petitions against the opening of the gates on Sunday and the sale of liquor on the grounds printed for the benefit of the Commission, in order that the members might have them for reference when the time comes for the discussion of the questions. The right of petition was eulogized as one of the dearest of American institutions.

PROHIBITION prohibited, even in New York. On Sunday, April 4, saloons and gambling houses were tightly shut; let us hope that other haunts of sin were also barred and bolted. The like was never seen in Gotham. What was the reason? One Christian minister had preached against the abominations of his own city and had kept on preaching; had arraigned the sworn officers of the law as vulgar roughs leagued with the immoral and criminal classes. He had been cited to appear before the grand jury, had made his words good by sure testimony, the jury had arraigned the police; the police did not dare longer to let the law remain like a rusty sword in a still more rusty scabbard. So they set at work to do, under the lash of public criticism, what they ought always to have done. Who will roll away the stone for us in other cities? Where is the Dr. Parkhurst of Chicago and St. Louis, Baltimore and Boston? Heaven grant that he may soon appear with thunderbolts.

THIS is the last call for self-denial week, which follows Easter Sunday, lasting from April 17 to 23. Do not neglect to secure the blessing that comes from a real sacrifice as well as to contribute to the many needs of our work. Send the value of the self-denial to the your local union, or to the state, National or World's treasurer.

AMONG the reasons that cause us to hope for the return of Lady Henry Somerset next year, and hereafter not unfrequently to the country that has learned so much to love her, is the fact that she has admitted to one of our leaders that, taking 100 as a standard of first-class health, 70 would represent her status in England and 95 in America. This is owing to the practical cessation, while she has been in this country, of the headaches to which she has been subject when at home.

MRS. MARY SPARKES WHEELER, Phœnixville, Pa., superintendent of the missionary fund of the W. C. T. U., has entered on her work, and is hoping to secure many offers by which we shall be able to branch out according to the request of the convention held in Faneuil Hall last November. We have already made arrangements for a missionary to Japan and South Africa. Lady Henry Somerset is confident she will be able to have one sent to India from England. This is a good beginning, and before the year is out, if Mrs. Wheeler is successful, we expect to send three more white-ribboners, one to China and two to other important points in the Orient. Read the form of constitution on page 12.

A RECEPTION in the city hall, with the mayor to preside, and a great public meeting, in Liverpool, will greet Lady Henry Somerset on her arrival in that city. The British Women's Temperance Association follows soon after, and the World's W. C. T. U. conference, with a reception from her white-ribbon comrades, and immense meetings in St. James Hall; a school of methods in the summer; organizing trips with Miss Hood and Miss Balgarnie; the establishing of the new weekly paper, The World's White Ribbon (English edition of THE UNION SIGNAL), the preparation of sketches and articles for us here—all these, with the oversight of so much property, make this noble leader one of the busiest women living, and in ways the most beneficent. Her correspondence alone is enough to keep one person constantly occupied. Happily she has good health, a cheerful disposition, and boundless faith in God.

NINE young women in the becoming costume of the professional nurse, adorned with roses of the deepest red, the white aprons and dainty lace caps contrasting effectively with the dark earnest eyes—such was the picture that presented itself to an intelligent, cultured audience in South Park Avenue Church, Chicago, on the last Tuesday evening in March. The occasion was an auspicious one, being the first public graduating exercises of the nurses' Training School of the National Temperance Hospital. The president of the board, Mrs. M. E. Kline, announced that one hundred and fifteen lectures had been delivered and three hundred and fifty-nine class recitations held during the year. Fifty-three calls for outside nursing had been responded to and $1,000 had been collected for the same. The main address was given by Dr. Chas G. Davis, the president of the medical staff, on the subject of "Human Happiness," showing conclusively that health and the agencies that lead to its preservation and restoration are the foundation of all happiness. Several selections of choice music were rendered. The president of Illinois W. C. T. U., Mrs. L. S. Rounds, made a brief address of great beauty to the graduates and the exercises closed by the presentation of the diplomas and the badge of the hospital bearing these initials: N. T. H.—T. S. on one side, and the picture of a ministering nurse on the other.

OUR good and great friend, Edward Everett Hale, who has made his name a higher title than the colleges have been able to confer, celebrated his seventieth birthday April 3 by preaching as usual, only better, if possible, to his church in Boston in the morning, and addressing the juvenile temperance societies in the afternoon. He urged the boys to keep their bodies as clean from liquor as God made them, and illustrated his point by comparing the physical structure to that of a steam-engine which is so easily clogged and made unfit for use by the coming of any foreign element into its intricate machinery. At the public reception on the next day, Dr. Hale remarked at the close of the unique exercises, "Love is the only life; the one thing to live for and the only thing worth dying for."

FIFTY years ago in England a woman was hung because she stole a few yards of cloth, but the revulsion of feeling caused by a sentence so severe led to the repeal of all laws involving the forfeiture of life—except for murder. Within a few days in England two poachers have been hung for killing a game-keeper who sought to shoot them because they were trying to shoot birds in the hunting preserves of some rich landowner. Strenuous efforts were made to secure a commutation of sentence from the home secretary, but he declined to interfere. Great indignation is felt in England that such an outrage should be committed, and "all for one miserable bird," as Liberal members of Parliament tauntingly said to their conservative opponents. We venture to predict that never again will Englishmen have their lives taken away that the field sports of the aristocracy may not be interfered with. The game laws must go, and the wonder is that they have staid so long. In Scotland whole villages have been demolished that deer parks might be extended, and the patience of the people under such wrongs is the astonishment of the New World.

NO SIGN of the times is more encouraging than the discussion by experts of the question of better hygiene. One of the leaders in this movement is Charles F. Wingate, of New York City, who has invested twenty years in the inspection of tenement houses. He says the rarest thing in the great metropolis is fresh air and good light. One of the first phrases in the Declaration of Independence is the creed of his new movement—the right to life. The poor children of New York are being actually deprived of life. It is not the desire of Mr. Wingate to abolish all the tenements in the city, but there are some that must be torn down and dragged out. There is one on Washington street of which he speaks especially. He says he has a record of that building for twenty years. The bad air, the darkness of the halls and back rooms, the lack of washwater have caused ten times more deaths than in the wholesome tenements. In hallways that are utterly dark, people have to carry all their water up six flights of stairs! Happily there are now laws that can oblige the owners of that and similar buildings to make them light and healthful. Such buildings when found in a group ought to be condemned, demolished, and the grounds turned into playgrounds for the children. We are far behind the ancients in our provision for outdoor sport. Open-air exercise for children is to-day one of the most important social questions. The tendency toward physical degeneracy now observed in all large cities must systematically antagonize the happiness of future humanity in a great measure, and diminish the opportunities for the children of the coming generation to develop strong and healthy bodies. There must be more small parks in our great cities. The earnestness of one man in New York City turned a potter's field into beautiful Washington Square; instead of covering the remains of the dead, it has for many years been preserving the lives of the living.

Contributed.

ALIVE.

BY MARY LOWE DICKINSON.

ALIVE! Yes, after the midnight
Of anguish and bloody sweat,
After the kiss of betrayal
On cheeks with the night-dews wet,
After the judgment chamber,
Reed-scepter and crown of thorn
And scourge,—and the sorer smiting
Of curse, and denial and scorn.

Alive! Yes, after the spear-wound,
The thirst, and the gall and myrrh,
After the grave whose portal
God's angel alone could stir;
After the sun shrank—shrouded—
And the pale stars hid in shame;
Alive, and the whole world ringing
With the glory of His name!

Alive! And He cometh to meet us,
Over our troubled sea;
Alive! And he goeth before us,
Into our Galilee.
Alive, that our sorrow and sighing,
Our sin, and weakness and loss
May die with the pangs of His dying,
May share in the grace of His cross.

For this at the Easter dawning,
Ring out, O gladsome bells;
The whole world's song of morning
In music ebbs and swells.
From humblest souls and greatest
Glad Easter praises rise,
Earth's sad eyes gazing Godward
Have seen the Christ arise.

RECOLLECTIONS OF NOTED MEN AND WOMEN.*
IX.

BY LADY HENRY SOMERSET.

Charles Somers—Earl Somers.

Though we travel the world over to find the beautiful, we must carry it with us or we find it not; the best of beauty is a finer charm than skill in surfaces, in outlines or rules of art can ever teach, namely, a radiation from the work of art of human character.—Emerson.

Among the many who visit the world's oldest range of hills there are hundreds yearly from America, who, with a loving, dutiful diligence that is sweetly pathetic, linger among all the fairest and most historic spots in the mother country. Across the long line of Malvern hills, covered with golden gorse and purple brambles, the stranger is directed to undulating slopes and wooded valleys that form part of the old royal chase, dating back centuries, when on the wild borders of Wales, hunting deer and game, kings took their pleasure.

The groves of gnarled oak could tell tales of those "good old times" when gaily caparisoned lords and ladies rode with chained and hooded hawk, or galloped after the shy stag through the long bracken.

They could also speak of darker days when the clank of armed horsemen brought terror to the heart of the herdsmen on the hills. When amid clouds of dust the somber uniforms of Cromwell's soldiers, elated by the victory at neighboring Worcester, made for the old castle, staunchly defended by that loyal follower of the king, Sir Richard Cocks.

They stand to-day—those trees, their knotted knees hidden in fern, and overlook the chase; the many who pass pause and wonder at their age, while some more thoughtful—looking up at those gnarled branches wrapped in the shroud of winter, and bedecked with the gay garments of summer for so many recurring centuries—seem to feel that they "have plagiarized a heart and answered with a voice."

Amid these shady groves there stands an oak on whose topmost bough the sacred mistletoe is found. There are but three such trees in the kingdom, they were held sacred by the Druids, and with solemn rites they dedicated them to their deities. The way leads through a long ridge of dark yew trees that almost meet overhead, then through a burst of breezy, upland slope where the road turns sharply, disclosing the massive walls and turrets that rise from the glittering waters of the rippling lake;—a scene so still, so undisturbed by human life, that one is almost tempted to believe that the inhabitants lie buried in the sleep of centuries and await the vital touch of present-day humanity to call them back again to waiting work.

The surmise is true in part, for if you turn away from the main entrance, nestling unseen under the shadow of the great walls, the little village lies—one row of trim, sweet English cottages with thatched roofs and gay gardens. The schoolhouse stands facing the village green and just beyond the church, under whose covered, lytch gate have rested many on their way to a last home. Enter the Gothic church, exquisite in architectural proportions, rebuilt by the grandfather of the present owner of the estate, cross to the side chapel and you will see, where lie the bodies of a long line of ancestry, the still marble figure of the last earl, forever sleeping in unbroken rest; the fair pleasure grounds and lordly palace are forever monuments of his artistic knowledge and creative skill. The light falls from a lattice-window on the recumbent effigy; the shadows made by the trailing ivy branches as they wave in the wind across the casement are the only living, moving things in the stillness of death's chamber.

A head grand in its proportions, magnificent in intellectual development, sculptured with all the skill of the master hand of that great artist, Sir Edgar Boehm, tells the history of the qualities which made Lord Somers a man remarkable in his generation. The quick dignity of the outline speaks of the nobility of his really great character, while the gentleness of the clasped hand, holding the cross, reveals the childlike simplicity of the faith that clung to the "hope that was in him" and kept the vision of the heavenly clear and bright in the midst of an age of uncertainty and unbelief. On the gray stone base of the monument are carved the heraldic devices which tell of his descent from a great ancestor, the Chancellor who secured to the English crown the Protestant succession and of whom Macaulay speaks as one of England's greatest statesmen. His sister married the owner of the old castle which has now given way to the more modern structure that has stood for only a hundred years.

ARMORIAL HALL, EASTNOR CASTLE.

Charles Somers, Earl Somers, was their descendant, and tenth owner in direct succession of the property in Herefordshire and Worcestershire from which he took two of his titles, Viscount Eastnor and Baron of Evesham.

Artistic skill has made this monument worthy of him whom it commemorates, the record of the annals of the past have given it historic interest, but the touch of living hands that loved speaks with the truest eloquence of all that his life meant to a home circle; the flower wreaths freshly blooming laid by his sculptured form, tell of a devotion that withers not with the icy blast of death, and the beauty of the surroundings was evoked by the faithful love of her whose life was bound with his in a tie not even death could sunder.

Turn from the church, retrace your steps across the village and enter the gate that leads through smooth-shaven lawns and fine plantations to the entrance of the castle, cross the moat now dry, where hawthorns blossom and the shadows chase each other over the grass; enter the archway which guards the great courtyard and you stand on the steps before the massive oak doors of Eastnor Castle. Twice every week they open to the public and those who care to see the art treasures collected by the last Earl Somers, have an opportunity to gratify their curiosity or satisfy their thirst for knowledge.

A flight of steps leads you to the great hall on whose walls are ranged coats of mail belonging to the bodyguard of Charles V. of Spain; weapons of various dates and tapestries of the fifteenth century hang on either side the fireplaces. A cloistered gallery runs around three sides of the structure which rises to the arched windows and timbered roof, sixty feet in height. The designs for the early Romanesque decorations which ornament the walls were carved out under the direct supervision of Lord Somers, and the pictures that hang on the walls of the great staircase, the best examples of the early and finest specimens of modern masters, were collected by him, as was also the splendid variety of choice books that fill the shelves of the two libraries.

The family portraits have examples of Vandyke, Romney and Sir Joshua Reynolds; among them is one of Lord Somers in his Oxford gown, taken when he graduated from Trinity College in 1837. He began his school life at Harrow, one of the largest public schools in England, when he was ten years old. The discipline of those days was so severe,—the detestable system of fagging being then in vogue, whereby the younger boys were forced to serve the older—that he bore all his life the scars of boiling coffee, having met with an accident well nigh inevitable to one so inexperienced in the culinary art, when, as a little fellow he was obliged to rise at five in the morning to prepare breakfast for his master.

Before going to college he read for two years with the Rev. F. D. Maurice, whose close friendship he retained through life and whose exquisite sensibility found in his pupil the readiest response. Mr. Maurice, in his journal, speaks of the responsibility he felt in influencing a life likely to have great weight in after years upon the interests of humanity.

The most salient feature of his college career was perhaps the friendships that he formed with men who afterwards made their mark upon the age. Among these were John Ruskin, the art critic, Robert Lowe, the politician, Sir Charles Newton, the archæologist, Robert Curzon and many others. After taking his degree my father enjoyed a long experience of foreign travel; he visited Greece and personally superintended some very interesting excavations which resulted in valuable acquisitions to the British Museum; he afterwards reconnoitered the sites of Babylon and Nineveh and was largely instrumental in helping Sir Henry Layard to arrive at conclusions, the outcome of which was the uncovering of those famous ruins which revealed a mine of historic lore, and the transfer of these most remarkable remains to our national collection. His rare gift as an artist enabled him to reproduce scenes from those far-off lands, then practically unknown to the tourist and inaccessible to the English-speaking world. Few amateurs have attained such distinction with the pencil and the brush. He had worked under the best masters of his day. The great Turner was his friend, and a painter whom he very closely studied, the luminous quality of his sketches and the atmospheric effects which he obtained affording evidence of this.

He accompanied Mr. Robert Curzon in his explorations of the unknown treasures of the Greek monasteries; the results of their study are given in Mr Curzon's famous book the "Monasteries of the Levant." In some of the earliest, Christian manuscript copies were discovered throwing new light upon the study of the Bible and the Church Fathers. He made drawings of Athos, Pergamos and many other well-known centers of early Christian influence and a careful sketch of that famous monastery, perched like an eagle's nest on the summit of a sheer-rock into which the novice is drawn up in a basket and, having taken the vows, descends no more.

On returning from his eastern travels my father entered the House of Commons and sat as a Conservative, thus representing the politics of his family for several generations. But about 1849 he joined the Liberals, supporting the common law agitation introduced by Sir Robert Peel and Richard Cobden.

Lord Canning was not only an intimate friend, but married his first cousin, Charlotte Stuart, and thus in early life he was brought under the influence of many Liberal statesmen, whose policy he supported until within a few years of his death.

Lord Palmerston, Lord Landsdowne, and the Duke of Argyle were among those who recognized him as a brilliant conversationalist, and used often to remark that if he would but make in the House of Lords some of the wise and witty utterances which made him so welcome in political and literary circles, he would be among the foremost statesmen of his time. His natural self-depreciation was his great, indeed, his only hindrance in the work of life—it made him a student and a scholar rather than a politician and a statesman.

*Copyrighted.

In 1850, Mr. G. F. Watts, the now famous academician, painted a portrait which, when exhibited in the Royal Academy in London, created a sensation. It represents a tall, etherial figure, clad in a simple grey gown and loose, long cloak, the hands clasped and the beautiful face looking out into a distance which seemed to hold for her the vision of things to be. A young man standing before that portrait turned to a friend and said, "I will meet her, if possible, before many days."

A few weeks later this came to pass in Lord Palmerston's celebrated salon, and the beautiful Miss Pattle, whose appearance in London society had evoked universal admiration, met Lord Somers for the first time, and they were married a few months later.

After the birth of their first child, who writes these lines, (not only from affectionate remembrance, but because she believes the record is one well worth the making), his love of foreign travel led him to start once more for those lands which held for him so great a fascination. Upon this journey he was accompanied by Lady Somers who bore the fatigue of camping out among the Bedouins of Arabia with the intrepid spirit which made her a companion so congenial to his adventurous spirit.

On their return to England my father was appointed Lord-in-waiting to the Queen, and passed some time in the routine of court life, chiefly at Windsor, Osborne, and Balmoral. During this time Louis Napoleon, then emperor of the French, and the Empress Eugenie, visited England. Lord Somers had known the emperor in former years when he was looked upon as little more than an adventurer, and the kindness shown him then was never forgotten by the "soldier of fortune."

My father was appointed to be his special escort, and always spoke of him as a man of remarkable abilities. I have at Eastnor Castle a gold snuff box with his miniature surrounded by diamonds which he presented to Lord Somers, as a token of appreciation at the end of his state visit to the English court.

So varied, however, were the friendships of my father, and so varied the fortunes of the unhappy emperor, that some years later, when a ball was given in our London home to celebrate my entrée in society, the news was brought to the ballroom that the Franco-Prussian war had been declared. Members of the Orleans family were guests on that occasion, and dancing was forgotten, while the gray dawn saw them discussing the political situation and their chances of returning to the French throne.

Court duties brought my father in frequent contact with Prince Albert for whom he entertained the warmest regard and the highest esteem. He was among those who gave the full meed of praise to that great man while he was living, although many acclaimed his memory who failed to recognize during his lifetime, that he was a prince in that best sense of the word, which means a true and loyal Christian man.

The routine, however, of court life was hardly consonant with my father's studious tastes, and after a few years, notwithstanding the great kindness of the queen, he sent in his resignation.

From 1851 until his death in September, 1884, he sat in the House of Lords, serving often on committees and doing much valuable, though not conspicuous work. He was sought by the leaders of his party who attached much importance to his opinions and relied greatly on his judgment, although he was not a speaker, owing to the shyness of disposition that has been already mentioned.

The collection of pictures, books, antiquities and curios with which Eastnor Castle is embellished, was gathered by Lord Somers during his travels in the East and on the Continent. Few men were better judges of mediæval art; Lord Lindsay, whose books are acknowledged standards, and Sir Charles Eastlake, who made the most important purchases for the National Gallery, frequently consulted him. He was for years on the committee of the National Portrait Gallery and a trustee of the British Museum. The Earl of Warwick, whose historic castle is known to almost every foreigner who visits England, was my father's most intimate friend and congenial companion. Their literary and artistic tastes threw them together and many were the expeditions made by them in search of art treasures among the old palaces of Italian towns and cities.

My father's great desire to improve the artistic tastes of his countrymen was the prime motive in those often laborious undertakings. He had a rare power of recognizing artistic talent, and much of the decoration at Warwick and Eastnor Castles was designed by an architect whom he had trained from boyhood, Mr. George Fox. His gratitude and affection led him to execute artistic work for my father which had in it some of the inspiration that marked the achievements of the early Italian masters for their loved patrons.

Some years before Lord Somers' death the heart disease, which afterwards proved fatal, left him well nigh an invalid, and winter after winter he was forced to leave the home he held so dear and seek the sunny shores of the Riviera. On these journeys he was accompanied by my mother whose unceasing care and devoted nursing sweetened those years of sleeplessness and pain. She had been his constant companion in artistic research, and he relied much upon her excellent judgment and fine taste. My sister, the present Duchess of Bedford, was also frequently with him and her scholarly mind afforded him continual pleasure, his suffering being often for the time forgotten in the charm of her conversation and companionship.

It is not alone, however, in the circles of the great, the learned, the literary and artistic that Lord Somers is remembered. There is not a cottager on his estates at Eastnor who will not gladly entertain a patient listener with long stories of his kindness and benevolence. His men of business looked upon him as a friend. His genial and warm-hearted disposition and his childlike simplicity of mind made him especially beloved. None had a greater fund of witty anecdote, and no laugh was so inspiring to mirth as his. He strove after no effect but was always the same easy affable host to every comer, from the shy, country curate to the prince or prime minister. The secret of his popularity was his utter absence of self-consciousness or pride. From every one he felt he had something to learn and was always intent on acquiring whatever could be imparted by any.

LIBRARY AT EASTNOR CASTLE.

His faith was as simple as his disposition. In spite of all the temptations which profound learning gives to unbelief, he retained a deep love and reverence for the Bible and for its inspired teaching, and to the time of his death busied himself daily in making accurate translations from the Greek in the endeavor to acquire new light on the meaning of obscure passages.

When at a comparatively early age the call came which ended the earthly career of this great mind, that summons but opened the door to the kingdom of light where we "know no more in part," and England lost one of those true-hearted men whose genuine goodness is the patent of their nobility.

THE EASTER THOUGHT OF AUNT MEHITABLE PERKINS.

BY HELEN CAMPBELL.

The young minister stood for a moment in the vestry door, and then with hat pulled down over somber brows walked slowly with bent head toward the parsonage. It was not a cheerful spot. Like many other things in Linborough, moss and mould were on the walls and confusion ruled in garden and meadow, even the box, by nature, perpendicular and well ordered, taking on a rakish and lop-sided expression, shared by wandering vines and unkempt and frowsy shrubs. Beyond, lay the valley smiling in the warm sunshine of a capricious April day, a promise of the summer that even May might hesitate to fulfill.

Easter came late this year, and spring seemed bent upon giving more genuine share in it than most New England springs afford. The daffodils held their cheerful heads erect, and lilac buds were pointing into green before the little, gray house nearest the old church, a house so small that one wondered how Aunt Mehitable ever found room for her generous proportions. It stood on the very edge of the glebe-land, given three generations before to the church, still endowed and thus a source of no anxiety where salary was concerned. Values had risen. The old endowers had builded better than they knew and from rents, meadow-land and other sources came in a revenue that made the minister's salary less a disgrace than is most often the story of village pastorates.

It was then no question of want troubling the Rev. Arthur Haddon as he walked lingeringly from the church, Aunt Mehitable's eyes full upon him though she seemed to be absorbed in her daffodils and crocuses. She had slipped from the church as the service ended, a long sigh escaping as the outer air was reached. Inside the walls was an ancient and musty flavor of moth-eaten cushions, ancient carpet and the dust of past generations. It had even a hint of the graveyard at the back, a tinge of mould, a shadow of many an ancient skeleton. Bare, uncompromising walls and chancel, straight-backed pews and many-paned windows—if cheer had ever dwelt within them it had vanished long ago with the young people who had fled westward soon as flight was possible, leaving only a contingent of old people and the maidens, still clinging to the ancestral tree, unplucked by hand of man, nor with any fate before them but that of slow and decorous withering on the aforesaid tree.

"A dead town, a dead people. What can be done? The factory people turn their backs. The three steeples are a mockery. There are not twenty worshipers apiece. It is all a profitless, heart breaking struggle against a torpor so deep that they who sleep in the churchyard are hardly more locked in slumber. Why am I here? Why did I not see it before I pledged myself to a year of vegetation in this spot where all has gone to seed, and the seed itself taken wings, leaving no chance of crop on its native soil? I should resign if I were not ashamed."

Something like a groan had escaped from the Rev. Arthur's well-cut lips, and he pushed back his low-crowned, clerical hat, as if for more air or sun or any alleviating influence. Aunt Mehitable's broad back still bent over the daffodils, but as he paused she struggled to her feet, a little unmanageable from occasional twinges of rheumatism, and heavier than she liked, but still obeying the will of their owner who declined to notice any tendencies in this direction.

"I s'pose I'll have to give in, my shell ain't as manageable as 'twas forty years ago, but there ain't as much difference as most folks led me to expect there would be. Thanks be to praise, I'm tol'able lively an' likely to be for all I see, an' it's my opinion folks dig their own graves a long sight sooner than there's any call for it."

Hardly anybody in the village had had better reason to think the grave a desirable resting place than Aunt Mehitable, who, through all the days of her youth had nursed first a bedridden mother, and then a runaway brother, who, having tried all phases of demoralization on a Dakota farm, from grasshoppers to cyclone, and cyclone back to grasshoppers again, had returned home at last to die in the old house, a mere "but and a ben," but always big enough for what Aunt Mehitable decided it should hold. He had died at last and been laid with his fathers, and Aunt Mehitable, known as such to all the township, had returned to her tailoring, interspersed with nursing or anything to which her hand could be turned, the sick calling for her and the dying still leaning on her strong arm as they went down into the valley.

As to her creed there had been much debate in sewing society and even about the stove in the village store. That it was heterodox all knew, since she declined to go regularly to any one of the three churches opened occasionally for service, the only permanent one being a mere dot of a chapel where a zealous Methodist had done his best with the handful of people who favored that form of belief. But of late she had returned to her mother's church, and her keen eyes rested on the new minister, often with a look that seemed to mean pity. He had caught it more than once and wondered what it meant. Through all the Lenten services, kept up daily, in which he had been bell-ringer and wood-chopper and sexton, as well as parson, he had been certain he should find her among the half-dozen who appeared, their heads just visible above the high-backed pews. And always, as he intoned prayer and psalm, and chanted psalter or versicle, the grave eyes considered him and brought question of their meaning.

To-day he stopped short and faced her, and she moved toward him, a daffodil in her hand, but the same half-pitying and incomprehensible look on her face.

"I don't know as you take to yellow like me," she said, "but it's a real comforting sort of color. It's got the sun in it. Most yellow things have. I always want it round in something wherever I be."

"White is purer," the young minister said abstractedly, "but purple is the only color for this week of passion and of pain."

"You're certain, are you?" said Aunt Mehitable with a curious smile. "Well, I suppose a minister had ought to know, but if it was my affair I'd put yellow or anything else that had some life in it, anywheres in that barn of a church that I could stick 'em. I've been waitin' to see if the Lord was to have any sort of a chance with you more than with all the rest, but He isn't. He must feel queer when He sees most two thousand years gone by, and no more sense of things now than when He walked along with His disciples and they didn't know it. He might be here this minute, smiling away at the strangeness of folks an' things, but I suppose nobody'd open their eyes to take it in."

The young minister opened his, and gazed with wonder and then disapproval at the sturdy form before him.

"This is blasphemous," he began, then stopped. The look in Aunt Mehitable's eyes was too serene and undaunted for word of such order. "You cannot be aware of the bearing of your words," he went on. "It is hardly a season for thought of smiling, and Good Friday to-morrow."

"If you'd take the 'good' and let it have half a chance," said Aunt Mehitable, "there'd be more folks in the church and fewer outside. See here, Mr. Haddon, I've got to speak my mind to you or bust. There's sense at the bottom in such a head as yours, or I'm more mistaken than I've ever been before. I'm sick and tired, and so is every sensible man that walks, whether he ciphers it out the way I have or not, of a Christ always in gloom. He was never in the cloud. Do you suppose anybody coming straight from God and knowing he was going straight back again went along brooding and cast down and everlastingly saturated in gloom, the way you church folks fix it? I say He was joyful; I say He was strong and happy, and full of plans for folks. I say He liked His trade, and His own folks, and had good times talkin' with 'em; I say if He did go into the wilderness and up mountains, He wanted just a little silence and some chance to think over what was coming next, but He took comfort in every blade of grass an' every star that shone down on Him, and just knew God was smilin' back at Him, and certain sure the world was goin' to come out all right. Ain't there dumps enough of man's making without you declaring a God of tombs and not much else but death? For the land's sake, Mr. Arthur Haddon, open your eyes an' take the good of growin' things, an' all the works of the Lord that are for pure joy an' nothin' else, an' preach an Easter sermon that won't be about a Lord gone up into heaven, but a Lord come down here, along with His own, most beat out at the blindness of folks, but not discouraged so't He'll turn His back one minute. Let's have some courage, some show o' backbone an' grit; some pleasure in jest bein' alive, an' maybe then you'll get some one inside your church besides old women and hysterical gals. He was a strong man with a man's heart in His breast. Preach that, an' maybe there'll be some use for your churches. If you don't, I declare to man, you deserve to go with your head down all your days, and wait till kingdom come to know what you threw away."

Aunt Mehitable turned and fled, and the minister with a dazed look on his face stood for a minute, then made his way toward the parsonage. At tea time his door was still locked, nor did he emerge till late in the evening, his hair ruffled, and his stiff band loosed about his neck. His pale little wife made no comment. Lenten fasting was part of his system, and she had learned silence. But there was a look in his eyes that puzzled her, and with Easter morning she understood what it had meant, for no such sermon had ever come from a Linborough pulpit, though the tale of Easter day and its results must wait for another number. But Aunt Mehitable, who had gone in dubiously, sat with shining eyes, for the text rung out as if some other voice had spoken it—"And rejoiceth as a strong man to run a race."

In Mrs. Lathrap's prayer at Mrs. Downs' memorial service occurred this sentence: "Bless those who will remember when others have forgotten; hallow them by this grief."

THE NEW ENGLAND KITCHEN.

BY MARION A. MCBRIDE.

The securing of palatable, nourishing food at low prices, in the densely populated cities of our country, would be one of the most powerful agents possible in relieving the terrible strain now made on the life and health of those classes who are of necessity compelled to work long hours for small money returns. Free food or free soup are not what is needed; for the people who need help most are self-respecting; women who must work every moment, mothers overburdened, men who must live alone. These people prefer to pay for what they eat, but they cannot eat the food in its raw state, and yet they cannot pay much, if anything, in advance of the first price, to have the food prepared.

Right here the plan of the New England Kitchen steps in, a plan so simple, direct and practical that New York City has already followed the example set by Boston.

The kitchen is a place where inexpensive but highly nutritious foods are prepared in large quantities, by the best and latest methods.

PLEASANT STREET KITCHEN (FRONT).

The experiments started in January, 1890, were under the personal supervision of Mrs. Ellen Richards, professor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Mrs. Mary Hinman Abel. Money for the experimental kitchen was provided by a Boston woman, who gives thousands of dollars yearly to charities, but prefers to have her name withheld.

This fund was to be used for an experiment never attempted before in this country; the problem was to cook the cheapest and most nutritious food materials by superior methods, and sell the products for home consumption at low prices.

The first six months were devoted partly to the collection of facts regarding the condition of the food supply of the masses, learning how they live and what particular tastes they have, that a reform plan might be practically made.

PLEASANT STREET KITCHEN (BACK).

The collection of these facts was considered as of first importance, for opinions and plans must be constantly modified by them; the spirit applied to the work was the same which guides modern scientific research.

The kitchen was made very bright, accessible and pleasant to work in by securing a corner store and basement cellar in a portion of the city where small tenements abound, and near the business districts.

The kitchen has a small counter near the doors from which food is delivered to the purchaser, while the balance of the room is fitted with the cooking apparatus.

The center space is occupied by a large gas-cooking table, the invention of Professor and Mrs. Ellen Richards. The kitchen was opened January 24, 1890,

The following list will give the dishes at present prepared, with prices, also the manner of providing for every day, a plan which proves very popular:

Monday:—Vegetable soup, pea soup, fish hash.
Tuesday:—Beef stew, tomato soup, Aladdin stew.
Wednesday:—Clam chowder, pea soup, Aladdin hash.
Thursday:—Beef stew, vegetable soup, vegetable hash.
Friday:—Fish chowder, pea soup, creamed codfish.
Saturday:—Beef stew, tomato soup, baked beans.

The bill of fare runs as follows: Furnished per quart: beef broth for invalids, eighteen cents; vegetable, tomato, potato soups, twelve cents; pea soup, ten cents; fish, clam and corn chowder, sixteen cents; rice pudding, twelve cents; Indian pudding, fifteen cents; baked beans, fourteen cents; scalloped apple and apple tapioca puddings, eight cents per pint. Furnished per pound: pressed beef, spiced meat, sixteen cents; Aladdin stew, ten cents; Aladdin, vegetable and fish hash, eight cents; cracked wheat, oatmeal and corn mush, boiled hominy, five cents; creamed codfish, eight cents; health and white breads, five cents per loaf.

Many other dishes were tried, but they did not prove popular, or were not adapted to this kind of custom, or they could not be kept hot without loss of flavor, or could not be made for low prices on account of the changes in market prices.

Much labor was necessary to secure these simple dishes, which should be of uniform quality and price. Many attempts at soup making were tried, but the difficulty of regulating the heat and retaining flavors of the meat was found insurmountable, when large quantities of soup were to be made daily, and finally the most simple and practical of cookery was found in the Aladdin oven invented and patented by Edward Atkinson, of Boston. As this oven will be used in the new cooking department of the W. C. T. U. the following report made of its working at the kitchen by Mrs. Abel will be of practical interest:

"Along with these experiments went others with the Aladdin oven, which were so promising in their results that we had tin-lined copper vessels made to utilize the entire capacity of the oven, i. e., thirty quarts, and settled on this method for making the broth. It was found to have these advantages: First, it made the scientific requirements for soup making possible, i. e., (a) long, slow heating, before the coagulating point was reached; (b) the continuation of the cooking at a temperature slightly below the boiling point and long enough to get from the bones and tendons that proportion of gelatine which we knew to be desirable; (c) the retention of the full flavor; (d) and the production of a soup almost invariable in quality. Second, the greatest possible amount of broth was in this way obtained from a given quantity of meat and bones, no other process approaching it in this respect. Third, the labor involved was very small; nothing, in fact, between the placing of the vessel in the oven and removing it for straining. It suited our convenience, also, in that the cooking could be done at night, the meat being prepared during the day; and although the lamp under the oven went out some hours before the soup could be strained, the non-conducting character of the apparatus kept the heat, and prevented any deterioration of the soup. Fourth, the cost of fuel was reduced to a minimum, twenty-five quarts of broth being made with three pints of kerosene, at a cost of less than five cents.

"This method, with very slight changes, has been in constant use in the kitchen, and has proved perfectly satisfactory. We consider it a real discovery of great value, and we hope that it will, in time, be adopted in large institutions."

The soup making was not only a great benefit to the people who used it daily, but its superior qualities attracted the attention of leading physicians, and the demand for soups for invalids resulted in the creation of another branch of work, one that demanded the extreme care which the Aladdin oven alone could give.

Mrs. Abel further says: "That anything in the food line can be relied on, and be found actually the same in flavor and strength from day to day, invariable as the medicine of a first-class apothecary, seems to be a new experience to both doctor and patient, and we feel that the steady maintenance of this standard has had an important educative value. Concerning this most important dish of the invalids' dietary, we hope that a step in advance has been taken for this whole community. That combination of nutrients which ought, theoretically, to be the most valuable has been proved to be so by the effect upon patients, and a cheap, easy and exact method has been devised for making it. We have been especially pleased with one point, namely, that it is a normal food, and not a stimulant. Patients take it week after week, without tiring of the taste, or craving what they should not have. The indications are that this method of making bee broth will prove to be a first step in the much-needed reformation of hospital cookery."

When the cereals were first placed on the counter but little attention was paid to them, but after a few months the demand increased so that they were looked for by both morning and evening patrons.

The managers of the kitchen have had constantly in mind and heart the determination that nothing should be furnished that was not wholesome and nutritious, and those who at first called for dishes with which they were familiar, decided after a time that the kitchen diet was better for them, and many thankful words are spoken over the counter by those who feel the beneficial effects of a generous diet which costs them less than the former diet of bakers' confections, tea or beer, and the cheap preparations of a corner grocery. Many sewing girls, and others whose long hours are so hard to bear, express very feelingly their gratitude that there is one place where they can afford to get something good to eat which strengthens them and satisfies the appetite.

It seems probable that before many years the food consumed by the poorer families and the wage earning classes in cities will be cooked in some central kitchen, where economy can be secured by large purchases and the capacity to handle every part of the supply to advantage.

Ruskin says, "To be a good cook means the economy of our great-grandmothers and the science of modern chemists," while the Boston Transcript, in a recent editorial on proper food, remarks: "The pathway of the missionary in America lies through the kitchen."

As to the good accomplished by this kitchen, much of it is educational. The cooking is all done by gas; there is the large gas table referred to, which is a large surface of pipe, regular in arrangement, with here and there a burner, collectedly enough to take care of all dishes which must be cooked.

The Aladdin oven is a square, box-like affair, mounted on a frame of metal which raises the oven sufficiently to allow of easy lighting whether the gas is used with the favorite Bunsen burner, or a kerosene lamp with the new patent burner which prevents the lamp and oil from becoming heated and thus provides against any possible accident. The lower side of the oven has an opening for the admission of the heat, and the outer covering of the oven is of non-conducting material which never becomes hot, but holds the heat closely about the inner oven; the whole affair calls for care in the use of the light only, the heat being regulated by the size of flame. Every part of the kitchen is open to view and the simple order and cleanliness carry a lesson to every visitor.

The Boston Press Club have for some time been served daily with soups from this kitchen, which have proved very satisfactory to a hungry but fastidious membership.

An important feature of work at the kitchen is the use of evaporated milk which is being introduced for household purposes, and particularly as a diet for invalids and children. As the result of an experience extending over two summers, and a study of the problem of furnishing safe milk for children during the hot months particularly, this milk is considered the best to be obtained at present. It is pure milk, evaporated without the addition of sugar, in a vacuum pan, at a temperature of 130 degrees, which is lower than that at which thick, condensed milk is usually prepared. It is believed that at this low temperature the milk is far less changed from a normal condition than when it is heated to boiling, as the cream rises normally when water is added, and its digestibility is not impaired, while there is a probability that the usual process of sterilizing does affect the digestibility of milk. This milk will keep for a week or ten days in open pans in any ordinary ice chest, and there is no apparent change in three or four days at ordinary temperature.

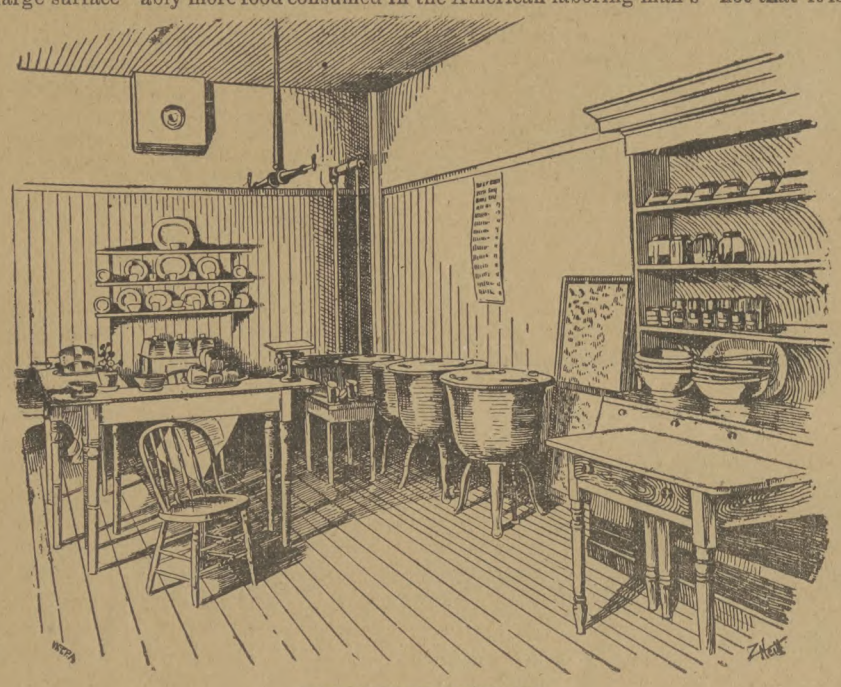
When diluted with three or four times its volume of water, the milk has the density of fresh, rich milk. In the interest of sanitation, physicians and others are giving evaporated milk a critical trial, with wonderful results. During the hot months of 1890 babies among the poor suffered as usual, and very extreme cases of exhaustion were put on a diet of evaporated milk by Mrs. Richards and Mary Hinman Abel. The cases were watched closely and anxiously, but every tiny sufferer took kindly to the scientific diet and speedily recovered health and strength; not one case was lost. The demands for this milk for children are on the increase, and its easy preparation removes all obstacles to its use.

The need of trained helpers, or of those who are willing to learn, has been the difficult problem in the prosecution of this work. Normal school work would seem to fit one particularly for the routine demanded here, which calls for precise and careful methods. Girls cannot graduate from the public schools of Boston until they have taken the course in cooking, so that we are on the right line to secure larger results as the years go by, results which will help not only the poorer classes, but the average housekeeper who needs help full as much as any individual extant. It is felt by those who have studied the subject that the work done by the New England Kitchen has struck at the root of many evils, and that on those foundations much can be built by public effort and private household life to teach better methods of living.

A branch kitchen is in operation on Salem street, at the north end of the city, in the midst of a dense foreign population, and the success here is the same as that secured at Pleasant street.

During the early part of November, Mrs. Richards visited New York City to superintend the fitting up of a similar kitchen which is started by practical philanthropists, and located on the west side of the city, amid a population who need such help as this kitchen can give. The New York experiment station is located at corner of Charlton and Hudson streets. When the W. C. T. U. cooking methods are perfected, we shall see many features reproduced from the famous New England Kitchen of Boston, the parent of scientific cooking for the masses in America.

[The New England Kitchen, though not a W. C. T. U. enterprise, is a white ribbon opportunity, and is given the second place in the Coffee House series, because, in it is the solution of the great problem for the poor of the greatest amount of food at the least cost. There is probably more food consumed in the American laboring man's home than among any class of wage-earners on earth. Yet Americans are not a well-fed people, and are world-known as a race of dyspeptics.



SALEM STREET KITCHEN.

Deep down in the social strata the daily scramble for daily bread makes life a perpetual anxiety, which grows into a terror when sickness lays by the bread-winner for a day. These people have no time to stop to study out the best means of feeding themselves; they must seize what can be procured quickest and cheapest, so that the tap of bell, or shriek of whistle may find them at factory or workshop door. On the educated leisure classes rests the responsibility of finding out how the poor may get the most and best food for a penny; the obligation is on them not only to put such food in the way of the poor, but to teach them the value of it. Illy nourished tissues of the body cry out; it is natural that the ignorant mistake this demand for a need for stimulants. The argumentum ad hominem in the shape of palatable, condensed nutrition is the only one for such cases.

The missions of the church are struggling in the slum districts of every city with the well-nigh hopeless miseries of the miserably destitute. The blessed Christ is uplifted, but as before, stomachs are empty, rooms bare and women martyred at the point of a needle, making shirts at fifteen cents a dozen. To these people the church must come with a gospel for the body, and like Christ must feed the hungry and heal the sick before it preaches a spiritual salvation. The New England Kitchen should be the adjunct of mission work in every city. This is practicable where a restaurant would be impossible, and opens an avenue for personal contact without which there is little uplifting of the degraded.

Prof. Ellen H. Richards of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, who made the experiments out of which the New England Kitchen developed, writes to our inquiry as follows: "To fully equip and run a New England Kitchen for one year will cost from $3,000 to $5,000 in money, according to magnitude, and that will not do without supervision by a paid woman who understands, first, working people; second, cooking; third, business, and who is a lady and a good talker. Also the location must be rightly chosen and the right people interested." There is danger of rushing unprepared and without the proper manager into restaurant or kitchen work. The money is not the only loss to the W. C. T. U. in the failure of an enterprise, but it sums up in the inevitable discouragement and paralysis consequent on catastrophe. Take caution in large doses beforehand, and planning will be wiser, and more care taken in administration.

The Central W. C. T. U. in Minneapolis has been rarely equipped with a board of managers who had nearly "preternatural discrimination" in their plans and selection of a manager. An enterprise thus officered would need the combined total depravity of animate and inanimate things to defeat it. Do likewise, if under like condition; otherwise, beware.—Ed.]

TAXATION AND THE POOR.

II.

BY REV. C. H. ZIMMERMAN.

The Indirect Tax.

In opposition to Adam Smith's obviously just rule for taxation, that it must be in proportion to income, stands the theory enunciated by Mr. J. R. McCulloch, an English economist. He boldly proposed to abandon all attempts at an equitable distribution of taxes, and declared that "the distinguishing feature of the best tax is not that it is proportioned to the means of individuals (!) but that it is most easily assessed and collected." While as was shown in previous article, the indirect tax is in radical conflict with Adam Smith's rule, it conforms perfectly to McCulloch's. It is indirect, because, as John Stuart Mill says, "It is demanded from one person in the expectation and intention that he shall indemnify himself at the expense of another." It is paid by the importer or manufacturer, and is added to the price consumers pay for their commodities. "It is most easily assessed and collected," because it is assessed by government on comparatively few persons, and is collected by the latter through subordinate dealers from all consumers. The government is thus relieved from the expense and burden of collection; but in process of collection it costs the people nearly twice as much as the government gets, for its "collectors" make it a means of enriching themselves by increasing prices much more than the amount of the tariff.

It is estimated that out of $1,200,000,000 of indirect taxes paid by the people, the government gets about $700,000,000 and $500,000,000 goes to individuals in the form of profits made by manipulations of the tax. The enormous aggregate is paid by the people, little by little, every day, in the enhancement of prices of articles of consumption. It is "easily collected" without producing discontent and rebellion among the poor who suffer most from it, because they hardly know they are paying it. They know that they can scarcely get sufficient food and clothing and shelter for their families, and that their lot is one of persistent, hopeless poverty; but do not understand why. The cause is hidden in the increased price of the necessaries of life which the indirect tax compels them to pay.

"The direct tax," says Mill, "is one which is demanded from the very persons who it is intended or desired, should pay it." Theoretically it proposes to tax all citizens (with the exception of the very poor) in proportion to the property, both real and personal, that they own. It is right in principle, but, as administered, it is even more unjust and oppressive to poor householders, small farmers and wage-earners who are struggling to acquire homes for their families, than the indirect tax. Not enough of their property is exempt from taxation—only from $300 to $500, I believe, of their personal property. Besides that, the poor man's cottage and lot ought to be exempt, but they are not, so far as I know, in any state. However humble and bare and heavily mortgaged, the homes of the poor are all in sight, and are easily got at and surely taxed. But their greatest hardship and injustice are caused by the evasions, by the rich, of taxation on personal property and by the fact that vacant land held for the unearned increment is not taxed so high as improved farms and lots. So that the poor householder is forced by these evasions to pay from two to tenfold more tax than he otherwise would.

In operation the direct tax follows the line of least resistance and difficulty. It loses all semblance of equity and is imposed where it is "most easily assessed and collected." To say nothing of the ability of the rich to secure favors of assessors who want their influence for reëlection, it has become a matter of general comment and conviction that property in money, jewelry, plate, notes, stocks, bonds, mortgages, is concealed from assessors, and false oaths as to assets are made to an extent that is alarming to every one who appreciates the debauchery of morals involved.

In a recent address in Central Music Hall it was alleged that capitalists have become notorious for their evasion of their just share of the public burdens. Before the United States committee on the relations between capital and labor, Carroll D. Wright, then chief of the Massachusetts Bureau of Statistics of Labor, testified that in order to evade taxation to the full amount of their assets, manufacturers in that state made false returns to assessors, sometimes to the extent of reporting only half of their invested capital. See Report Vol. III, p. 429. That it is the practice of many (not all) bankers to conceal much of their capital from assessors is well known. The methods of concealment are innumerable; money, plate, jewelry are buried or hidden in other ways. Depositors of local banks can get drafts on foreign banks or banks in other states on the eve of assessment and conceal them. Prof. Edward W. Bemis gives a well authenticated instance of a man who thus escaped taxation on $79,000. Mortgages given to men in other states are very generally hidden, certificates of stock can also easily be concealed. When it is remembered that probably half the wealth of the country is in these and other concealable forms, it will be seen that property in sight is forced to bear an excessive share of the burden of taxation, and that our system of direct taxation is unjust to all honest owners of unconcealable property, rich as well as poor; but the honest rich can endure the burden with less hardship than the poor, because they contribute out of their abundance, while the poor contribute out of their living. The dishonest rich and well-to-do more than recoup themselves by evading the personal property tax.

If the reader will consider the joint effects of our systems of indirect and direct taxation upon the poor and the rich, he will see why the rich are growing richer and relatively fewer in number, while the poor are growing poorer, and increasing in numbers. In other words, he will have one of the potent causes of the alarming concentration of wealth in a plutocracy, and consequent impoverishment and dependence of the masses. He may also see good reasons for the demand of the People's party for a graduated income tax. Of the merits of this tax there is not room in this article to speak, and per favor of the editor, the subject is reserved for another paper in this series.

Evanston, Ill.

Correspondence.

HONOR TO WHOM HONOR!

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—I send you the following letter of thanks to the men who voted against the local option, saloon-license bill offered by Colonel Gatch, of DesMoines. I ask you to find room for this in our National organ, for it is right that all should know that we are deeply grateful to these men who have been so faithful in our Iowa legislature:

Hon. E. E. Mack:—It is my most joyful duty this morning to return to you and your fellow-Republicans, the united thanks of a host of Christian women of Iowa. You have done right. You have stood true to the principle expressed in your party state platform. The women of Iowa who compose the state of Iowa W. C. T. U. are not disappointed in you. They are not sorry they indorsed you in their state convention and worked for your election. You have been like the house founded on a rock; when the floods came and the winds blew and beat upon that principle of righteousness, "No saloon in Iowa," you have withstood the shock. To every good cause comes a time of weighing in the balances, as to every man and nation. What a sense of joy must be in the hearts of those men who are not this morning numbered with the Judas Iscariots and the Belshazzars! We are not of the number of those who captiously say you have done this by force of party caucus, and against your own judgment. Far from it. You have demonstrated that in the realm of truth and eternal realities a seeming part may be greater than the whole. The large outside influence of your party in the nation, and of the press within this state, has not sufficed to make you blind to honor and truth. This is heroism. It is godliness, moreover, it is the real sentiment of the people of Iowa. The people are more enlightened than their would-be leaders. Let Iowa keep in the van in this matter of no legal saloon. The whole nation is going to follow before long. Go on with the good leadership. Resist the outsiders who use the same old argument the devil used to Eve. The saloon is not "a tree to be desired to make us wise." Let it never be planted on Iowa soil. To this end vote against resubmission, or crowd out its coming up in the Senate. Help us, with our rehearing and getting our constitutional amendment where it justly belongs. Then and not till then, we shall be all of one heart and one mind.

Again with sincere praise and thanks from women and children, hearts and homes, L. A. BURKHALTER,

Supt. Legislation and Petitions,
State of Iowa W. C. T. U.

[A note attached to the above requested Mr. Mack to read it to the men who voted against the Gatch bill.]

President's Column.

WORLD'S W. C. T. U. HEADQUARTERS.

AMERICAN—Chicago, Ill., 161 La Salle St.
ENGLISH—London, 57 Gordon Square, N. W.

WORLD'S W. C. T. U. OFFICERS.

President—MISS FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Vice-President-at-Large—LADY HENRY SOMERSET, 13 Memorial Hall, Farringdon St., London, E. C., Eng.
Secretary—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Ravenna, O.
Assistant Secretary—ANNA A. GORDON, Evanston, Ill.
Treasurer—MRS. ELLA F. M. WILLIAMS, 26 Chomedy St., Montreal, Can.

The following extract from a personal letter from our corresponding secretary of the National W. C. T. U., a woman universally trusted by her great constituency, is printed without her knowledge, as it affords a peep into a very secret and reticent place, namely, her heart. The letter was written soon after the translation of her honored mother to the brighter world:

March 16, 1892.

MY DEAR F.:—For almost the only time within my recollection, I am alone in the old home; alone without my mother. I have often been here with her only. We laid her away Monday last, and we shall not see the dear face again until Christ brings her with Him. So long as she was here, I did not feel lonely, but now that she is gone from the house it is so still. I wish I could convey to your mind some idea of how lovely she looked as she lay in her casket. What a blessed privilege it has been to be with her and to care for her. I did all the last things myself and dressed her for her long rest. My brothers thought I could not, but somehow it seemed a pleasure. They did not think I ought to try for they feared I could not hold out, but I did, and I know if my mother could speak to-day, she would say it was as she wished; but could she speak, I think she would not first speak to me but to you, to thank you for what I can never thank you for, the right to stay with her. When I see you, I will tell you if I can, how she feared to have me go out of the room lest I should leave her, and when she knew that the general officers had allowed me to stay right on, and that I should not leave her on any account, she seemed content.

The telegrams from you and Esther and your own dear mother came while we waited for the services to begin. Give my love to your blessed mother, and may she be spared to you for many years.

I shall return at the earliest possible moment. I have mother's things to pack away, and some slight business; afterward there will remain nothing more that I can do for her. "God be with you till we meet again."

***

In my recent article on "Homes for Homeless Children" the special need—as stated by the types—is "a Mother Harvard woman!" Just what sort of character this is must have been a matter of reflection with thoughtful readers. It could not refer to Harvard University which rules the women out and is itself about as unmotherly as any institution extant. Mother Hubbard would have done better if a misprint had to be made, for she would fain have given her poor dog a bone.

Please read "a mother-hearted woman," and cease to laugh at a "poor dear" editor's expense.

***

Sidney Smith said on temperance: "Many thanks for your kind anxiety respecting my health. I not only never was better, but never half so well; I find I have been very ill all my life, without knowing it. Let me state some of the good arising from abstaining from all fermented liquors. First, sweet sleep; having never known what sweet sleep was, I sleep like a baby or a plow-boy. If I dream; it is not of lions and tigers, but of Easter dues and tithes. Second, My understanding is improved and I comprehend political economy. I see better without wine and spectacles than with both."

***

PETITION OF THE

WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

FOR THE

PROTECTION OF THE HOME.

Addressed to the Governments of the World.

Honored Rulers, Representatives and Brothers:

We, your Petitioners, although belonging to the physically weaker sex, are strong of heart to love our homes, our native land, and the world's family of nations.

We know that clear brains and pure hearts make honest lives and happy homes, and that by these the nations prosper, and the time is brought nearer when the world shall be at peace.

We know that indulgence in Alcohol and Opium, and in other vices which disgrace our social life, makes misery for all the world, and most of all for us and for our children.

We know that stimulants and opiates are sold under legal guarantees which make the Governments partners in the traffic, by accepting as revenue a portion of the profits, and we know with shame that they are often forced by treaty upon populations, either ignorant or unwilling.

We know that the law might do much, now left undone, to raise the moral tone of society, and render vice difficult.

We have no power to prevent these great iniquities beneath which the whole world groans, but you have power to redeem the honor of the nations from an indefensible complicity.

We therefore come to you with the united voices of representative women of every land, beseeching you to raise the standard of the law to that of Christian morals, to strip away the safeguards and sanctions of the state from the drink traffic and the opium trade, and to protect our homes by the total prohibition of these curses of civilization throughout all the territory over which your Government extends.

NAMES. | RESIDENCES.

We must have one million names this year. Will not men and women, youths and maidens, boys and girls, who love the great cause of home protection, paste this petition on a nice, white sheet of paper and circulate it to the best of their ability, sending the names to Miss Alice E. Briggs, Rest Cottage, Evanston, Ill.?

TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS.

BY MATILDA B. CARSE.

Wherefore, if God so clothe the grass of the field, which to-day is, and to-morrow is cast into the oven, shall he not much more clothe you, O ye of little faith.—Matt. 6: 30.

It will interest our friends to know that the second payment on the Temple stock purchased from Marshall Field, which was due April 1, amounting to $10,000 was not only paid, but we doubled the amount and paid $20,000; we have now paid him $70,000 on his stock. The next payment is due July 1. It must be remembered that a large part of this money has come from the sale of Temple Trust Bonds; because of this our friends must not relax their efforts in sending in their gifts, for these bonds must be paid for in ten years, either through the gift fund or from the income from rentals. If they have to be paid from the latter source it will postpone for a long time any income being paid to the National and state unions. The more rapidly the gifts come in the quicker will we come into possession of our beautiful Temple and its princely income. Those who desire to purchase Temple Trust Bonds should do so very soon, or they will all be sold. Women who wish a safe investment, which pays a good dividend twice a year, can find nothing better than the Temple Trust Bonds. Write in regard to them to Mr. H. C. Speer, 137 La Salle St., Chicago.

***

If the Temple should never do more good than the opening up of avenues of self-denial for our white-ribboners and their children to enter, it will not have been built in vain. How precious to our blessed Master must this loving service appear. We give below extracts from some of the many letters daily received of how this work of love is going on among those who have little to give. Mrs. M. L. Mills of Chattanooga, Tenn., writes, "I enclose $5 for the Temple from my mother, Mrs. Julia A. Lemon. She is eighty-five years old and very feeble, but she keeps in touch with our work all the time. This money is the contents of a mite-box she got last summer. She has sold slips from her choicest flowers and knit lace and sold it to friends, all the proceeds going to fill her mite-box. This money is very precious to us who know how it was wrought out." How much more precious will it appear to Him who notes even a cup of cold water given in His name. Mrs. Henry Chase, Wentworth, N. H., writes: "Enclosed find order for $5, contents of mite-box collected through the endeavor of Ellen Douse, aged six years. She has been a faithful little worker; she has not had the advantage of a city or even a village in which to collect her money, as she lives back in the country among the hills of New Hampshire, but she is deeply interested in the Temple and is a member of our union." "A little child shall lead them." The following letter from a little girl, Gertrude Stannard, Chicago, is most inspiring: "Please accept my small gift. I have $4 in my mite-box which I send. Nearly all of it I have earned myself doing chores and running errands. I also sold some wax flowers. I went to see the laying of the corner-stone of the Temple. Mamma and I are going to work in the temperance cause as long as we live, or until the victory is won." One dollar has been received from Daniel Smith, Buckingham, Pa. He is the oldest veteran in the temperance army yet recorded, as he attained his 97th year, March 2. He is an honorary member of the W. C. T. U. of Buckingham. We have received such a nice letter from a good brother, Rev. J. T. H. Waite, Dorchester, Ga. We wish we could publish it entire. He is the white pastor of the Presbyterian Freedman's Church, over which he has presided for eighteen years. He and five sons vote the prohibition ticket; he sends $5 for two models of the Temple. He writes; "How happy I would be if I could send $100 to help build the Temple for God and Home and Native Land and to have our family name imperishably on its walls for total abstinence and prohibition, that the name known to be there might have a good influence on our posterity."

***

Mrs. S. J. Lundy, Palmyra, Mo., wrote recently from Louisville, Ky., where she was on a visit, as follows: "You will find inclosed my check for $25, first payment on $100. I give it with all my heart to the glorious Temple. I am quite sick now, and being over seventy years old am afraid I will never be able to see with bodily eyes the greatest building in the land. I wish you would make out three notes of $25 each for the remaining $75 I owe, and send to me to sign." The notes were sent, but before they reached her the loving heart was still, and the helpful hand that had done such a valiant work for temperance was stiff and cold in death. Mrs. Lundy was one of the old crusaders of Greencastle, Ind. Her niece, Mrs. Katie F. Singleton, writes: "Her devotion for the W. C. T. U. never flagged, many a Baby Band through her instrumentality was formed. When she was dying she requested that the white ribbon badge be placed upon her shroud." No doubt her executors will carry out the desire of her heart, although no mention of it appears in her will. It would be too bad that the name of such a woman should not appear on the marble tablets of Willard Hall on account of this oversight. Mrs. Mary Schultz, of Schuyler, Neb., made a provision in her will and bequeathed $400 to the Temple; her summons came a few weeks ago to enter the temple not made with hands. Her bereaved husband has just sent a check for the amount of the bequest she so generously and thoughtfully made. Mr. J. D. Philbrick, Griggsville, Ill., sends $100 in memoriam for his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth H. Philbrick. Mrs. J. E. Pierson, Clifton Springs, N. Y., sends $1 in memory of her daughter who died five years ago; she was a devoted white-ribboner.

***

All white-ribboners who desire to secure the photo of the group consisting of Lady Somerset, Miss Willard and Mrs. Carse, with their autographs, should send a two-cent stamp to Mrs. Carse for mite-box. Any person who fills a mite-box before April, 1893, will receive this picture. Address The Temple, La Salle street.

The Household.

THE WOMAN CAPTIVE.

BY DART FAIRTHORNE.

'TWAS early spring;—the by-way trees
Bloom-laden perfumed all the breeze
That from the hills so far away
Brought warmth and joy to Peræa.
It was the Sabbath. Who can tell
The peace, the gladness which e'er dwell,
And in the very bird notes ring,
Of Sabbath in the early spring!

Slow and in silence on that day
The Jewish dwellers took their way
Toward their sacred synagogue;
No greetings light their footsteps clog,
But with a grave and reverent air
They wend them to the house of prayer.

As was the custom in those days—
Veiled crept the women through by-ways;
Their snowy veils and garments bright
Glowed in the warm and golden light,
While tinkling anklet, bracelet band,
Made music upon every hand.

There on the sacred errand went
A woman, old, decrepit, bent;
Her hair white as the drifted snow,
Shone like a halo on her brow;
Her thin form wavered in the wind—
So lame she soon fell far behind.

The light shone on the reader's face,
The roll from out its sacred place
Had been already brought, e'er she
Behind the lattice quietly
Crept, that she well might hear the word.
Ah! how her fervent heart was stirred,
And how the Stranger seemed to sway
All hearts upon that Sabbath day!
Those words! from that dear voice divine
Seemed down into her heart to shine.

Behind the lattice could He see
So bent with her infirmity,
This woman, humble, poor and lame?
Yet softly to her side He came,
And said, "O woman, thou art free
From this thy great infirmity."
Then 'mid her grateful, joyful tears.
This woman, lame for eighteen years,
Erect and graceful once more trod,
And "standing," "glorified her God."

Recall how Eve reached up to grasp
A scepter just within her clasp,
And lost the coronet but now
Placed by Jehovah on her brow.
Have we not read with aching heart
And eyes from which the tear-drops start
How to the depths of bondage low
Her daughters ever deeper go,
Until, twice eighteen centuries past,
Her Saviour brake the bonds at last?

Now look abroad. The fields are white
With harvests ripening in your sight;
Go thrust your sharpened sickle in
And garnered sheaves for Jesus win.
Begin this Easter morn to tell
How Jesus doeth all things well:
And tell how He all gloriously,
Has set the woman captive—free.

York, Neb.

HE IS RISEN SURELY AS HE DIED.

BY JOHN'S WIFE.

"He asked water, and she gave him milk, she brought forth butter in a lordly dish."

"No, I shall never concede that women have a right to preach, either from an ethical or a biblical standpoint; I have never heard one who did not lose womanly identity and become at once a man in bearing. The voice is coarse, the general manner offensive to good taste. Feminine refinement, which lends to woman her best charm, flees from her when she mounts the rostrum. I will not even listen to a woman preacher; my whole being revolts at the exhibition."

Judge Rich said this to John one day when they were speaking of church practices and comparing views. It is wonderful how John and Judge Rich agree, that is, they never grow warm and "slash" right and left. It seems as if they forget one another and personalities of every sort in the questions before them. John doesn't argue much, but what he says has a weight with it that makes one think of it afterwards. He and the Judge are just like brothers; they are together every day for a while, and it is as good as a convention to sit still and listen.

"Judge," said John, "what do you think about the woman at the well, and of her going right to the city and telling 'the men' all about Jesus?"

"That is neither here nor there," said the Judge. "It doesn't say that the woman went into a church and gave out the notices, and preached a sermon and prayed and pronounced the benediction. That 'woman of Samaria' has been long enough held up as a bright example of female church suffrage. It is enough for me to read in plain black and white the commands of St. Paul, 'I suffer not a woman to teach; and, let your women keep silence in the churches.'"

"Well," said John, "what shall we do with the Sunday-school teachers and the choir? It's half the charm of the anthems for me to look into the sweet, clear face of Miss A. Her face is as it had been the face of an angel."

"Oh!" answered the Judge, "Paul didn't mean singing, nor teaching, nor anything else but preaching on Sundays and at funerals and dedications. As I said, leaving out the Bible altogether, I will not admit that it is right or fitting from any standpoint for a woman to preach."

"I am never tired," said John, "of reading that matchless song of Deborah's, that woman who could not keep quiet because she had something of importance to say, and Paul had laid no restrictions upon the sex, you know. I can almost hear her sing 'Awake, awake, woman! utter a song.' I suppose that Jabin was a Presbyterian, and did not believe in women's preaching until he was convinced by Deborah herself. When he was convinced he joined right in with her, just as you will do some day, Judge, when you see a woman such as Zechariah describes, 'with wind in her wings—having wings like stork's wings—bearing the Ephah away,' as if it were no trouble at all. Some woman with wind in her wings' will some day bear away the Ephah of your prejudice, I hope. Deborah was a prophetess, and of man she said, 'He asked water, and she, a woman, gave him milk, she brought forth butter in a lordly dish.' Be careful, Judge, or the 'lordly dish' which shall bring comfort to your soul may be borne in the hands of a woman."

Judge Rich laughed and said, "I guess not, John. As long as there are preachers among men I shall hardly ask water of a woman. You are welcome to the 'butter in a lordly dish.'"

Now we understand the Judge perfectly; he has a lovely wife and there isn't so much as a ripple on their domestic sea, so tranquil it is. But he was reared in the old school and has strong views on many things. John says "strong views do not always indicate a strong mind;" "The strongest mind," he thinks, "is the one which has the weakest self-will." He says, "Judge Rich is not self-willed."

This talk was away back summer before last, and the subject wasn't mentioned again. When winter came there was an epidemic of diphtheria in our city. It was very severe, scarcely a family escaped and many died. Our children had it first, and little Robert left us; the rest were spared. We had services at home and the funeral was well attended, for we have a great many friends.

The Rev. Abraham Faith preached, but somehow, as John said, "there wasn't the after-comfort in what he said that there might have been." He mentioned the usual things about heaven, and of how "little children had no need of a mother's care there;" as if that could be any particular comfort to me. And then he told us how "we should miss the child." That just broke us all down. He said "there would be a vacant chair at the table and an unpressed pillow in the crib," and mentioned the "heart-ache" we should have, and a thousand things that made us cry so. I fairly shook with sobbing. I couldn't help it. I did wish he wouldn't keep tearing open the wound, as if we didn't know better than he how we should miss the child.

Somehow, we felt more anguish when he was done than during all the preceding days. But then it was the ordinary funeral sermon and must be proper, I thought.

Judge Rich's family had escaped so far, and John said to him one day, "Judge, if I were you I would take the children away somewhere and stay till it's over."

"That's just what wife and I have decided," answered the Judge. "We shall go to Rivermere to-morrow. If anything happens we will send you word—it's only twenty-five miles from here."

They went in the morning, but it wasn't a week before a telegram came to us saying that the dreadful disease had followed them, and asking us to come down.

Our family had all recovered and so John and I went down to Rivermere. No one met us at the train, but we went right to Judge Rich's hired house and found two of the children just alive. The next day they died, a boy and a girl.

The poor father and mother were distracted with grief. John said they "were literally torn, lacerated beyond recognition." They were worn and weary and haggard with watching, and sat by the two little caskets, refusing food or comfort.

"Comfort," said the Judge, "where is comfort? It went out in the night as you snuff a candle and it is dark. Does God see and know? Why, then, did He hurt us so?"

"It was not God that hurt you," said John, "but God will comfort."

"Never," answered the Judge, "in this life. We are bereft of our children. Oh, it is cruel, cruel!"

The authorities insisted that the burial should take place the next morning without delay. This hurt the family still more, for they could not carry the caskets home and have the interment in Hillside cemetery.

We asked the Judge who should conduct the simple service. There was not any regular minister in Rivermere, and there wasn't time to send away. John made some inquiry and found that there was a woman evangelist, or lay preacher in the place who had even occupied the pulpit in some of the churches East. She had already conducted several funerals in Rivermere and everybody spoke well of her.

We could have telegraphed home for our own minister, but it was Easter, and we knew he was engaged, so were all the prominent ministers in the adjoining towns. John asked the Judge what we had better do, and he said he "didn't care what arrangements were made; there was no joy in Easter for him, and never would be again." If John and I "wanted the woman to preach he was willing"; as for himself and wife it made no difference, so the children were given a Christian burial. Their hearts were broken, and they would probably hear little that was said. "The woman might say the Lord's Prayer, and read a chapter if she wished."

So John went over and engaged the lady, who asked no questions at all, but was beautiful, he told me. She was a delicate, slender woman of thirty-five or forty, who looked as if she had seen more than her share of grief, and yet had comfort from some source. She had the sweetest voice; it was more like an echo, soft and far away, than a voice.

We were all seated in the parlor around the two little lifeless forms. Thrown carelessly upon the caskets, and falling over on the carpet, were wild flowers, such as grow in Southern California at Easter time, bluebells and creamcups and white heliotrope.

There were a few of the kindly people of the place present beside John and me. Mrs. S., the lady who was to conduct the services, came softly in and shook hands with the Judge and Mrs. Rich. "There was something in her touch," they told us afterwards, "that inspired them, a thrill, a sign or token of coming comfort."

There were no singers present, but Mrs. S. sang softly two stanzas of "Abide with Me." It was a low melody, suggestive of twilight, and then dark, and then a guiding hand in the dark, and finally the stillness of perfect peace.

The Judge and his wife who had been sobbing grew quiet, and when the hymn was ended there wasn't a word said for five minutes. Mrs. S. sat with a look in her eyes as if she were listening to hear some one whisper, and then she read the text, "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son," etc.

That was the strangest subject for a funeral, I thought, that I had ever heard, but, oh, the sermon that she preached from it; she turned to Mr. and Mrs. Rich and spoke to them for fifteen minutes about "the Father." She said that "He was more than father and more than mother, for a mother might forget her nursing child, yet would not He. Like as a father pitieth his children so pitieth He."

She never once alluded to the sorrow of those about her, nor of the "vacant crib" and the "empty chair." She spoke about the Son of God, who was with the Father; how they were nearer of kinship than we could possibly comprehend, and yet God gave His only begotten Son that He might comfort men. In Heaven was an empty place, the Son of God was missed. The Father gave Him up.

There had been a secret between the two, the Father and the Son, and now it must be made manifest, because God so loved the world. It was then that "the head of the Ancient of Days became as white as wool."

And then she spoke of the burial, and of the tomb "wherein was never man yet laid." How God made His angels visible, guarding His dead, that men might have something to remember when they watched their dead, as He watched His. "And God," she said, "had not forgotten to place a white stone at the grave of His Son, the white stone of Easter. Everywhere men could see it, and wreathing it with flowers, commemorate the hope for all the world which came forth out of the grave of the Son of God. "Oh," said the preacher, "when the last sun has risen and set on sorrow, and we see the Father face to face, then and not till then shall we know, howbeit even then in part, the throb of His great heart when He gave His only begotten Son that we might learn to trust Him with our dead."

I cannot remember much, but it was all beautiful, and as she went on Judge Rich grew so intensely interested that I thought he would fall out of his chair, he leaned so far forward; and his eyes glistened with such a far-seeing look as if he would go after the Father and comfort Him. He seemed to have quite forgotten his own loss and never once looked at the two caskets before him, but he pressed his wife's hand and she too stopped weeping.

"Like as the Father pitieth His children," said the preacher, "and shall not His children pity the Father? O hearts that are crushed and bleeding, not long and the stone shall be rolled away; already is the promise, like an angel in white sitting upon it, 'Ye shall know hereafter.'"

Then she was done, and there was silence. The mourners shed no tears. They told me afterwards that they couldn't describe it, but there had been pressed upon them such new and mysterious sense of the Father's grief, that their own sorrow could never seem so intense again.

And then the lady prayed. The Father was close at hand, nearer the grief of the parents than they were themselves. His presence was a peace, a peace as deep as the sea—past fathom. And we all felt it; John says he had heard of the "wings of prayer," but he was never so lifted up by them before.

Judge Rich never closed his eyes, but looked right up into the sky through a part in the curtain, as if he saw something he had never dreamed of before.

After that we went to the village graveyard and laid the two caskets in one grave. "Dust to dust, ashes to ashes," said the preacher, "into thy hands, oh, Father, our Father who art in heaven."

When we went back to the house the Judge grasped John's hand and said, "My brother, that sermon will live with me forever. I shall never sorrow as I did before. God is my Father in a new sense. Easter has a new meaning; it is a white stone at the grave of the Son of God."

John turned to me and said, "He asked water, and she gave him milk; she brought forth butter in a lordly dish."

Pasadena, Cal.

UNION SIGNAL

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

FRANCES E. WILLARD, LADY HENRY SOMERSET, MARY ALLEN WEST, } EDITORS.

MARGARET A. SUDDUTH, MRS. HARRIET B. KELLS, } OFFICE EDITORS.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.
MRS. F. H. RASTALL, Business Manager.
161 La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

DEP'T BOOKS AND LEAFLETS.—ALICE M. GUERNSEY, Editor.

Entered at the Post-office, Chicago, Ill., as second-class matter.

And when the sabbath was past, Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James, and Salome, had bought sweet spices, that they might come and anoint him. And very early in the morning the first day of the week, they came unto the sepulchre at the rising of the sun. And they said among themselves, Who shall roll us away the stone from the door of the sepulchre? And when they looked, they saw that the stone was rolled away: for it was very great. And entering into the sepulchre, they saw a young man sitting on the right side, clothed in a long white garment; and they were affrighted. And he saith unto them, Be not affrighted: Ye seek Jesus of Nazareth, which was crucified: he is risen; he is not here: behold the place where they laid him. But go your way, tell his disciples and Peter that he goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see him, as he said unto you. And they went out quickly, and fled from the sepulchre; for they trembled and were amazed: neither said they any thing to any man; for they were afraid.

Now when Jesus was risen early the first day of the week, he appeared first to Mary Magdalene, out of whom he had cast seven devils. And she went and told them that had been with him, as they mourned and wept. And they, when they had heard that he was alive, and had been seen of her, believed not.

After that he appeared in another form, unto two of them, as they walked, and went into the country. And they went and told it unto the residue: neither believed they them.

Afterward he appeared unto the eleven as they sat at meat, and upbraided them with their unbelief and hardness of heart, because they believed not them which had seen him after he was risen. And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned. And these signs shall follow them that believe; In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover.

So then after the Lord had spoken unto them, he was received up into heaven, and sat on the right hand of God. And they went forth, and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following. Amen.—Mark 16.

OUR BILL OF FARE

is not a strictly Easter one, but the touches are sufficient to remind our readers of the coming crowning festival of the year. Mary Lowe Dickinson's "Alive" bears comfort and hope to all. Lady Henry Somerset's recollections of her gifted father are enhanced by interior views of Eastnor castle. "Easter Thoughts of Aunt Mehitable Perkins," by Helen Campbell, teach a needed lesson of joy instead of sorrow at this season. "The New England Kitchen" is well described by Marion A. McBride and triply illustrated. The second series of "Taxation and the Poor" finishes the contributed articles with the exception of the President's Column and Temple Items. The Household is full of sweet Easter thoughts and Our Children are told the meaning of that joyful day. The editorial pages are appropriately filled with accounts of Lady Henry Somerset's farewell meetings.

DOES PROHIBITION PROHIBIT?

It is the fashion in certain circles that consider themselves well instructed to refer to prohibition as "a ghastly failure"; but those who use the phrase with the most glibness are invariably those who know least about the subject. It is certainly fair to ascribe greater weight to the statements of the governor, attorney-general, the grand juries and the press in the states that have prohibitory laws, and the consensus of opinion as thus expressed is overwhelmingly to the effect that prohibition is a success, as proved by the banishment of breweries and distilleries, the uprooting of the saloon, the great decrease in the figures of pauperism and crime, and in the diminished statistics of arrests for drunkenness.

These figures are so well known by temperance experts and specialists that we do not here intend to refer to them, nor to go into details in reply to the question at the head of this editorial. Our purpose is to give some account of our recent visit to Portland, Me., in company with Lady Henry Somerset, who was unwilling to return to England until she had seen the "cradle of prohibition," and the grand old lion reformer in his native haunts at Portland.

The occasion was improved by General Dow and his right-hand coadjutor, Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, so long the president of the W. C. T. U. of the state of Maine, assistant secretary of the National union, and treasurer of the Woman's National Council of the United States. They held a meeting in the city hall under the auspices of that valiant band, the Maine W. C. T. U., which fact in itself shows the hold that prohibition has upon the cities of Maine. Imagine a temperance meeting held in the city hall of Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, New Orleans or San Francisco! A mob would be the result.

Some of us have but too distinct a remembrance of what occurred in the city hall in Chicago in March, '74, when a procession of Christian women, than whom none stood higher for character and conduct, quietly filed into the city council room, with a petition containing 14,000 of the best names in the city, which these women had gathered up in ten days, asking that the officers sworn to carry out the city ordinances should not allow the one that called for Sunday closing any longer to remain a dead letter. A mob gathered in the city hall square, a mob whose lurid faces were like gleams of perdition to those devoted women, whose request was promptly tabled, and who, if they had not been informed by faithful friends (for the police took no interest in them) of a side stairway by which they could retreat, would have been subjected to indignities that would have remained an indelible blot upon the history of the electric city. The epithets hurled on them as they entered the hall were a sufficient indication of what would be in store should they attempt to make their way through the corridors crowded by saloon-keepers and their patrons.

No city that has a boodle council and a whisky mayor can afford to permit a temperance meeting within the city hall. But in Portland, Maine, throughout that state, and indeed all the states where prohibition is the law, such meetings are held as a matter of course, because they represent the action of the people in respect to the greatest curse that can come upon a community, and are therefore perfectly in line with public policy.

The city hall in Portland is one of great extent and fine proportions. It was brilliant with banners, bannerets, and ensigns of all nations hung transversely, extending from the roof to the corners, so that the audience sat under a blaze of color, and around the hall were the national flags, beautifully draped, of England and America, while the huge platform was decorated with the most exquisite banners of the white-ribboners and flowers innumerable; and over the pulpit was a beautiful globe, bound by white ribbons. The central figure on the platform was Neal Dow, now nearly ninety; his eye undimmed, his figure erect, his voice vibrant, his whole appearance that of a noble and exalted character, wholly invested in the love of God and humanity,

"For the cause that lacks assistance,
And the wrong that needs resistance."

Mrs. Stevens sat beside him, with her strong, quiet, alert face, and a quartette of ministers discoursed sweet music, beginning with "America," continuing with our favorite song, "There are bands of ribbon white around the world," and concluding with "God save the Queen," in honor of Lady Somerset, and "God be with you till we meet again" as a farewell. Women were present from the sixteen counties of Maine; not a few having traveled four hundred miles to get there. The white handkerchief salute was out in full force. Testimonials were presented to our English comrade from the state and local W. C. T. U., the Women's Council, and other societies. The Y. M. C. A., in brotherly fashion, furnished ushers for the occasion, the press was most considerate and kind, and all went "merry as a marriage bell." Lady Henry Somerset spoke of her delightful six months in America, and said that while she rejoiced to see the home of Longfellow and the statue of him in the public square, she could but feel that the monument of Neal Dow was built already in the beautiful city itself, with its bright, clean streets and well-to-do population, with not a grogshop anywhere.

General Dow, Mrs. Stevens and others went with us to the city hall to see the "spilling," as it is called; a unique ceremony for which preparations had been made for several months, as it had been known that Lady Henry Somerset was coming to behold this remarkable operation that she might take the story home to England and do good thereby. The sheriff and his two faithful deputies were on hand to show how it is done. They had saved all the liquor seized since December last, which did not present a formidable array, but was most interesting as revealing the devices of the smugglers, who still try to turn a dishonest penny by the violation of law. Some of the liquor had been packed into small bottles, intermingled with sawdust, and encased in a barrel, marked "Sugar." Some had been marked "Flour," others "Butter," others "Eggs," but the sheriff told us that an expert could very soon tell by the sound when these barrels were rolled, and by other unmistakable symptoms, that the superscriptions were fraudulent. He said that, aside from what they call "pocket peddling," the traffic was practically stamped out, that brewers found it did not pay, on account of the bulk of their material, to bring it in; and the traffic was so dangerous that all but the lowest now gave it "a wide berth."

It was most interesting to see Neal Dow with a jug of old rye in hand as he stood up beside the bricked up aperture through which the liquor is sent gurgling into the sewers of the city where it can do no one any harm, and listen to his ringing "Here goes!" as he turned the jug right side up which, when it has such contents, must be always upside down. By special request Lady Henry Somerset and others of us upset bottles, decanters and jugs, Anna Gordon—who as world's superintendent stands at the head of well-nigh 300,000 children—taking special pleasure in turning "the crather" loose into its natural home, assisted by the sheriff's little grandson, two years old, who entered into the sport with zest.

The sheriff, a man of fifty years of age, who has spent his entire life in Portland and vicinity, gave as his testimony that one could hardly estimate the change that had come over the people, the thrift and comfort of the working classes—their interest in education and progress, when compared with what they were as he remembered them in the olden time when there was a saloon at every cross-roads, and slatternly women, ill-clad children and red-faced men were the rule, and happiness the exception.

From the city hall we went to the county jail. In this jail, situated in a county of 100,000 inhabitants, it appears that there are but ninety prisoners, eleven of them women, more than one-third of the whole number being behind bolts and bars because of their efforts to sell strong drink. We should like to know how many counties could show as small a proportion of prisoners when we deduct the one-third usually allowed to go scot free in the pursuit of an ignoble trade. This would leave about sixty as the whole number out of 100,000, who "fetch up" in prison.

"Prohibition prohibits" even in Portland, and will do so in every city where the authorities desire to have saloons prohibited. This is the long and short of the whole argument. It is simply a question of the officer behind the ordinance, the law enforcer back of the law; so that it appears, in the last analysis, that a real rather than an India rubber backbone is what is needed in the citizenship of the country. The happy-go-lucky American voter needs to be fitted out with a conscience and to feel in his heart of hearts that he is the final factor in this whole argument. When he determines that his ballot shall be cast for such men only as will enforce the prohibitory law where it has been obtained and enact a prohibitory law where license now despoils the commonwealth, then we shall have the liquor traffic under ban and not till then.

Whoever is flagging in zeal or lacking in faith would do well to take a trip to Maine and get his spiritual strength renewed. Let him sit down with Neal Dow in his beautiful home where he has lived and toiled for sixty-two years, in the library in which he wrote the original Maine law, which, without a change of phrase, was adopted in 1851 and with but two years interval has been the law, strengthened and improved by experience, up to this time. Let him hear and lay to heart the cheery tones of prohibition's father, who, at nearly ninety years of age still says, "It is better further on," and bates no jot of heart or hope. Let him listen while Gen. Neal Dow, who fought the battles of his country and carries wounds received in that great argument of bayonets, describes the infinitely superior value of ballots to bayonets and recites the faith that is within him that only through politics and law can the American Republic free itself from complicity with that dire curse that renders sodden the brains of its best and brightest sons. Let him sit down at the table in that consecrated home and looking around him see how a pure, great life reaps its reward even here.

Around him are the testimonials in silver plate: "Presented to Hon. Neal Dow, author of the Maine Liquor Law by the Central State Committee on behalf of his friends in Trenton, N. J., January, 1853;" "Presented to Hon. Neal Dow, author of the Maine Liquor Law, by his friends in Pennsylvania, January 20, 1854;" "Presented to Hon. Neal Dow for his eminent services in the cause of temperance by Maine ladies of Portland, in 1856;" "Presented to Neal Dow, Esq., Mayor of Portland, by a few friends of temperance in Bangor, as a small token of their regard for his valuable services in procuring the passage of the law of 1851 for the suppression of drinking houses and tippling shops." Here are sets of china, elegant pitchers, and an engraving of the Social Science Congress of Great Britain presided over by Lord Derby, with Neal Dow in the foreground sitting near Lord Shaftesbury, Thomas Hughes, the author of Tom Brown at Rugby, and other distinguished leaders across the water. Many do not know the fact, but England considers Neal Dow to have been her pioneer in all the temperance successes, both social and legislative, that she has achieved. We are glad that this prophet is not without honor in his own country and among his own people, and that on his recent birthday, as oftentimes before, both press and public testified their veneration for their greatest and most famous citizen.

We have made this editorial descriptive as we intended, and we hope its statements will have weight with all those who read THE UNION SIGNAL and who have been so faithless toward God and humanity as to take up the old saw, "Prohibition does not prohibit"; "Prohibition is a ghastly farce."

A NOTED FAREWELL

[The following report of Lady Henry Somerset's farewell meeting in Boston, prepared by Mr. Fred Mason, was received too late for insertion in our contributed columns, so we gladly give it space on the editorial pages. —ED.]

Lady Somerset's farewell, at Tremont Temple on April 7, will form a memorable episode in the history of the W. C. T. U. The great hall was gaily festooned, after the manner of such meetings, with the flags of England and America, while here and there could be seen the following mottoes: "We wage our peaceful war for God and Home and every Land;" "Our hope never to be conquered" —the motto of the House of Somers, and "Noblesse oblige," a saying exquisitely illustrated in the career of our noble guest. Promptly at eight o'clock Lady Henry Somerset and Miss Frances E. Willard appeared on the platform, preceded by Mrs. Mary A. Livermore and Mrs. Susan S. Fessenden, and were greeted by the plaudits of the great assembly. By that time the hall was crowded, although each person represented a ticket of admission.

The chairman, Mrs. Fessenden, announced a hymn, composed for the occasion by Miss Ella Gilbert Ives, of Dorchester, Mass., for whose poems white-ribboners have learned to watch. It was heartily sung to the tune of "God Save the Queen," the following being the first verse:

"England, thy sea-girt throne
Hath one foundation stone
Strongest and best;
Where'er the sun doth shine,
Hearts, loyal hearts are thine,
Fashioned by Love divine:
Such, our dear guest."

A duet having been sung, Mrs. Fessenden remarked that they were glad and happy that night; that the pathway was not always enveloped with clouds nor beset by persecutions and misrepresentations, but that sometimes it was strewn with flowers and bathed in sunshine, and such a time was that evening. They would therefore bring the oblation of thanksgiving and would call upon the Rev. Dr. A. A. Miner to voice their gratitude in prayer.

A trio was then beautifully sung, the title being, "The Coming Victory," which had in it, as the chairman remarked, a "ring of gladness especially suitable to the purpose of the meeting."

Mrs. Fessenden, in a happy manner, then introduced the principal speaker and guest of the evening, Lady Henry Somerset, who was received with loud cheers, and delivered an address of great power. [This was received too late for insertion in this week's paper, but will be published in our next issue.—ED.]

The quartet rendered the well-known and popular hymn, "There are bands of ribbon white around the world."

Mrs. Fessenden then had the pleasure of introducing "The Right Honorable, very much honored and honorary president of the W. C. T. U., Mrs. Mary A. Livermore," adding that Mrs. Livermore would preside over the remaining exercises of the evening. Mrs. Livermore then briefly remarked that the audience having heard what they came for, namely, the address of Lady Henry Somerset, she would not speak at any length. Lady Somerset had now given her last address before leaving America, for on Wednesday next she would be sailing out of New York harbor on her return to England. The meeting could easily understand from Lady Henry's address how it was that the hearts of women generally went out to her, why it was that without distinction women have come to love her so much during the six months of her stay in this country. They were comforted that night by the thought that although they were saying good-bye, there was a prospect of her early return next year. [Loud cheers.] Lady Henry Somerset had been very much to the women of the W. C. T. U., and they could not permit her to leave without a brief word of farewell and without saying a little that was in their hearts. She had been deputed to read a farewell address which she then proceeded to do, Lady Henry standing the while.

At the conclusion of the reading Mrs. Livermore remarked that as a part of the testimonial, there was included a poem written by Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, president of the New England Woman's Club, and which would be read by herself. Loud cheers greeted the conclusion of the reading of this poem, which is as follows:

Our Guest.

BY JULIA WARD HOWE.

Ancestral halls her coming wait
Whose presence well may grace their state.
When she retreads her native ground,
Welcomes and plaudits shall abound.

With hosts of friends to call her dear,
With art's delight and music's cheer,
If leisured luxury could please,
Well might our Lady dwell at ease.

Yet with no folded palms she sits,
To claim the homage of men's wits;
Nor does the easy praise she wins,
Beguile her from world griefs and sins.

By the redemption of the age
She measures her illustrious wage;
Would run her gracious errands sent
Of Him who rules the firmament.

Heart-mistress, thou dost Master call
The Love supreme that governs all;
Nor pride nor vain conceit can chill
Thy purpose, wedded to His will.

In our wide gardens of the west
Men call thy visitation blest;
The winds that homeward waft shall bear
The burthen of our grateful prayer.

The seagirt mother of our race
Smiles on us in this woman's face;
And household angels, on swift wings,
Shall carry far the gifts she flings.

Gifts of a free and fervent zeal,
A hand outstretched to help and heal,
While its white fellow holds on high
The torch of peace and purity.

The original of both address and poem had been exquisitely written on leaves of vellum and bound in white satin covers, the corners finished in sterling silver filagree in which a silver bow was tied. It was, as Mrs. Livermore remarked, a suitable expression of the love they bore to her who had won all our hearts.

Miss Elizabeth Fessenden, president of the Y branch of the W. C. T. U. of the state of Massachusetts then presented Lady Henry Somerset with a beautiful bunch of roses on behalf of the Y's, accompanying the gift with a speech of remarkable point and power which will be printed, we hope, in the Oak and Ivy Leaf.

Similar gifts followed from Mrs. C. F. Doolittle, secretary of the order of King's Daughters of Massachusetts and that famous veteran of reform, Mrs. Lucy Stone, representing the Woman's Suffrage Society of the old Bay State, the peculiarity of this gift being twenty-three yellow roses, representing the age of the suffrage society and a single white rose for the world's one really "Free state"—Wyoming.

Lady Somerset's response to these gifts was as follows:

There are moments when silence is golden because there are no words with which we can express our feelings. And to-night words fail me as I would address the Honorary President and the president, and the dear sisters of the Massachusetts union, to thank them for what they have done for me to-night. Gratitude, they say, is a sense of favors to come. In this case, gratitude is a sense of all that would have to come in future life to render me worthy of all that you have said and done to-night, and for anything in the past I can receive such tokens as those that come to me in order to inspire me for the future, in order to send me out equipped to do better work, in order to send me with my heart ablaze with the Christian love I have met with in America, and which I return from the bottom of my heart and in order to tell all over the world that there are women with great, generous souls and loving, tender hands, ready to support those who are wanting to do the right in this great world of sin. How can I thank one whose poems I have read so often and have loved so much; who spent so much for the cause of womanhood—Mrs. Julia Ward Howe—who has written to me such words as those she has read to-night? I feel that in coming to America I represent, not only an individual, but a great body of women, and I take these tokens—these flowers—these beautiful buds—as trophies that I may lay at their feet who have so long borne the burden and heat of the day, and I shall prize these things amongst the treasured heirlooms that my family possesses because they have the touch on them, not only of works of art and beauty, but of something deeper and higher.—works of love, gentleness, sweetness and tender sympathy. (Cheers.)

A few words of brotherly greeting also came from Rev. Christopher Elliot, representing the Unitarian Temperance Church Union. Each of these gifts and the speechlets by which they were accompanied were acknowledged by Lady Henry Somerset with words so full of wit and wisdom as to "bring down the house" again and yet again.

Mrs. Livermore then remarked that the meeting had doubtless spied out the fact that they had with them besides Lady Henry Somerset, another woman whom they all loved and delighted to know, the National President of the W. C. T. U., Miss Frances E. Willard, an announcement received with loud and prolonged cheers.

Before Miss Willard came forward a bunch of beautiful Easter lilies and a pleasing poem from her own bright pen, were presented to her by Mrs. Katherine Lente Stevenson, corresponding secretary of Massachusetts W. C. T. U.

At the conclusion of Mrs. Stevenson's poem, Miss Willard responded humorously, saying:

I see that my white ribbon comrades are bound I should have a plum out of this toothsome English pudding. I thank dear Mrs. Stevenson for her beautiful words and my sisters for the flowers, but this is Lady Henry's night and I am simply maid of honor to the queen. As an offset to the exquisite poem of that great poet and patriot, Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, I have a jingle from the "wild and woolly west." Doubtless you have noticed that the very name of our English guest is rhythmic; you can scan it for it paces off, so to speak, of itself, and encouraged by having the first line thus furnished out of hand I was left to perpetrate the following:

Lady Henry Somerset
Since we welcomed Lafayette
Never foot our shore has pressed,
Of a more beloved guest.

Only those that sought the poor
Didst thou seek! and evermore
Through the cities of our land
Help and thee went hand in hand.

Livermore and Howe have sent
Blessings o'er a continent.
Great hearts two in England met,
Shaftesbury and Somerset.

Yankee lion, Salisbury lamb,
Lie in peace; but Uncle Sam
Needs no British treaty new
Save a dozen folks like you.

Eastnor Castle has a claim
On our hearts; its very name
Linked with thine henceforth endears
England's hated House of Peers.

Lady Henry Somerset,
Whether we are "dry or wet"
We have learned thy name to love
All but Gladstone's name above.

If thou hast not heart of stone,
Make our happy land thine own.
Do not go and leave us yet,
Lady Henry Somerset.

A unique and closing feature of the evening was the presentation to Lady Henry Somerset of a beautiful rocking chair by Mrs. Alice J. Harris, on behalf of the Massachusetts W. C. T. U., with the following speech:

It has come to us on the wings of the air, dear Lady Somerset, that while, during your stay in America, you have been interested in, and pleased with many features of our national life, there is one in particular that has claimed your especial, unqualified admiration; and we are glad to know that this, being a distinctively American invention, is not to be obtained in all England; that even your own Eastnor Castle, though rich in historic treasures, does not contain a single specimen.

I refer to the peculiar, American, womanly institution which we call a rocking-chair. If rumor is to be credited, so complete is your infatuation, that when the Teutonic sails next Wednesday, bearing you homeward, her cargo will consist chiefly of rocking chairs destined for England and Eastnor Castle; for in common with many of your English countrywomen who have visited us, and who have been likewise infatuated, you have been moved to ask, "What is home without a rocking chair?"

It does not surprise us Massachusetts white-ribboners that you have become thus enamored, for we well remember how successfully our own historic "Cradle of Liberty" was rocked by the eloquence of your ladyship during the recent World's Convention held there.

It is, therefore, my delightful privilege to present to you, in behalf of the Massachusetts Woman's Christian Temperance Union, this, your first rocking chair, and that we may hold in remembrance the picture of our dear Lady Henry Somerset as she will hereafter appear at home in Eastnor Castle, may I not have the honor of first seating you in it?

Lady Somerset was then led to the chair and seated, while Mrs. Harris rocked her to and fro singing, "Rock-a-bye, Lady," the audience laughing and applauding uproariously.

In reply Lady Henry feelingly said:

Mrs. Harris and all the dear sisters who have had such a sweet thought for me, I cannot say how much I like it. I cannot say how much I like America, but I who have appreciated what it is now to be rocked in a cradle over here for a little while shall deeply appreciate that sweet remembrance when I rock backward and forward, as your women are wont to do in this dear American rocking chair. I have noticed that all the brightest ideas come to the brightest of women—the President of the National W. C. T. U.—when she sits in a rocking chair, and I mean to see what the magic of that gentle, swaying motion can do for me. And so I thank you from my heart for all the loving, sweet, kindly thoughts that prompted such a gift as this. It did not need these gifts to bind me to this land, but they have been made doubly dear by the affection that will live in my heart. I say good-bye. There is a better word—God be with you!

The audience then united in singing, "God be With You till We Meet Again," the verses of the hymn being interspersed by Scriptural benedictions read by Mrs. Livermore.

The benediction was pronounced by the Rev. Mr. Elliot, at the conclusion of which the audience slowly dispersed, many lingering around the platform loth to depart with their loved and honored guest, whose gracious manners are as attractive as her speech and pen are cogent.

News from the Field.

STATE REPORTERS.

Alabama—Mrs. Jennie B. Gerald, Montgomery.
Arizona—Mrs. L. C. Hughes, Tucson.
Arkansas—Mrs. F. L. Sutton, 315½ W. Markham street, Little Rock.
California—Mrs. M. G. C. Edholm, Oakland.
California (Southern)—Mrs. Mary E. Garbutt, Temperance Temple, Los Angeles.
Carolina (N.)—Miss Bettie D. Caldwell, Greensboro.
Carolina (S.)—Miss Nettie P. Farrow, Spartanburg.
Colorado—Mrs. S. L. Teetor, Denver.
Connecticut—Miss M. Belle Smith, Rockfall.
Dakota (North)—Miss Emma F. Bates, Valley City.
Dakota (South)—Mrs. Irene G. Adams, Lake Helen, Volensia Co., Fla.
Delaware—Miss Annie Sutton, Smyrna.
District of Columbia—Miss Lizzie Kessler, 802 North I street, Washington.
Florida—Mrs. Emma L. Robinson, Winter Park.
Georgia—Miss Missouri Stokes, Decatur.
Idaho—Mrs. Mary E. McGee, Nampa.
Illinois—Mrs. G. H. Read, 412 E. North street, Bloomington.
Indiana—Miss Sadie B. Whistler, Terre Haute.
Indian Territory—Mrs. Sarah Ford Crosby, Muscogee.
Iowa—Mrs. Clara P. White, Volga.
Kansas—Mrs. S. S. Weatherby, Le Roy.
Kentucky—Miss Nellie Sloy, Lebanon.
Louisiana—Mrs. Mary Read Goodale, Baton Rouge.
Maine—Miss Mary French, Auburn.
Maryland—Mrs. Margaret A. Lake, Mt. Washington.
Massachusetts—Miss Emma W. Bumstead, 171 Tremont St., Boston.
Michigan—Mrs. C. H. Johnson, Flint.
Minnesota—Mrs. Amy B. Green, 2208 6½ avenue, Minneapolis.
Mississippi—Mrs. Olivia Fort Fitzhugh, Vicksburg.
Missouri—Mrs. Mary E. Jones, Humansville.
Montana—Mrs. W. W. Wylie, Bozeman.
Nebraska.—Mrs. Dora V. Wheelock, Beatrice.
Nevada—Mrs. Lena M. Westlake, Reno.
New Hampshire—Mrs. F. H. Bailey, Hopkinton,
New Jersey—Mrs. N. L. Caminade, Trenton.
New Mexico—Mrs. Ada Morley Jarrett, Socorro.
New York—Mrs. Frances Graham, Lockport.
Ohio—Miss Hannah A. Foster, Berea.
Oklahoma—Mrs. Sue Brown, Oklahoma City
Oregon—Mrs. L. A. Nash, Corvallis.
Pennsylvania—Mrs. Bertha Howe, Bradford.
Rhode Island—Miss Miriam Earle, Valley Falls.
Tennessee—Mrs. T. P. Holman, Fayetteville.
Texas—Mrs. Elizabeth Strong Tracy, Houston.
Utah—Miss Mary Howard Nutting, 2324 Madison Ave., Ogden.
Vermont—Mrs. Clinton Smith, Middlebury.
Virginia—Miss Lona A. Kern, Winchester.
Virginia (W.)—Mrs. Mary Cartwright, 1007 Main St., Wheeling.
Washington (East)—Mrs. Lucy A. Switzer, Cheney.
Washington (West)—Mrs. J. W. Lee, Tacoma.
Wisconsin—Mrs. Maria F. Hanchette, 322 W. Washington Ave. Madison.
Wyoming—Mrs. Therese A. Jenkins, Cheyenne.

MISSOURI.

MARKED PROGRESS.

"Count that day lost whose low descending sun, Sees at thy hand no worthy action done."

Between six thousand and seven thousand persons were crowded together to hear the addresses of Miss Frances E. Willard, Mrs. Clara Hoffman and Lady Henry Somerset, at St. Louis, and many could not gain admittance to the spacious hall. Never has this Southern metropolis been so stirred and awakened on the great theme of temperance. Mrs. F. H. Ingalls presided at the meeting. Our own Clara Hoffman appealed for the contribution, which amounted to over $1,500.

The next day the industrial conference met, to which the W. C. T. U. representatives were admitted as voting members. Again, another great gathering has refused to stand out boldly for equal citizenship and prohibition, but many noble men placed their names on record as being in favor of both.

Kansas City central union has generously sent several hundred books and magazines to the penitentiary at Jefferson City. They have taken up the national course of reading. They boast of an equal suffrage club now numbering nearly one hundred members as a result of the interstate conference held last month.

Mrs. J. H. Clark has been hard at work the past month in the fourth district. Three new unions have been organized and revived; at North Star, Mound City and Melbourne, twenty-six public meetings have been held, thirty-nine new members (including nine honorary) were gained; thirteen copies of temperance papers were subscribed for; L. T. L.'s were visited, also Sabbath and day schools. The energetic president of this district has been called to Pennsylvania to visit her sick mother.

Under the able leadership of Mrs. Neva Thomas, Springfield union boasts of fifty members, new ones being added at almost every meeting. They have held several Demorest contests and hope in the near future to have a gold medal contest. They have an L. T. L. of 125 members organized last Sabbath; also an "Industrial Home" for poor, unfortunate girls and a police matron. Meetings each Sabbath afternoon are held in the jail, the Y. M. C. A. of Drury College conducting the meetings in the men's department. Springfield unions and the clergy of the city have sent invitations to headquarters, asking that the next state convention be held there. Brookfield has also invited the state convention.

Canton union held a delightful public meeting recently. A Demorest medal contest was held with excellent results. Col. C. J. Holt spoke for a week to interested audiences; six new members were added to their union.

Fayette boasts of a free reading room and a library of over two hundred volumes. Our school of methods has already become a fixture in the hearts of energetic Missouri women. Our state secretary, Miss Morris, has begun to arrange for this meeting. Mrs. A. S. Benjamin (who instructed so well last summer) and Rev. Anna Shaw are among those expected at this instructive gathering which meets at Pertle Springs, next July.

The Carthage Y is teaching shorthand to a poor crippled boy, whose father is a drunkard. This is practical charity. Miss Alice Williams lectured to a full house in Harrisonville, and held a social purity meeting. These sisters are preparing for their "dollar social." Fairhaven union gave a delightful supper and an elegant entertainment not long since. Freeman union reports a constant and increasing interest in our work. Appleton City has established a library and restaurant. Verdella union expects to build a W. C. T. U. hall soon. Four new members were added to their union at an afternoon tea. Their Sunday-schools are supplied with the Crusader supplement.

Mrs. Julia Bosworth held a week's meeting in the first district and organized a union of thirteen members (and several honoraries) at Wyaconda. Rev. Henrietta Moore will be in this district the latter part of April. Eldorado Springs is enjoying a sure and steady growth. Contests have been held, mite-boxes sent for and a "dollar social" is planned there also.

No department has gained as rapidly as that of franchise. Many superintendents of other departments are this year working for woman's complete enfranchisement. The new union at Green Ridge is growing and much interest is manifested. Annual conventions will be held for districts as follows: First district at Memphis, seventh at Montgomery City, and thirteenth at Pierce City.

Will each woman interested in W. C. T. U. work in Missouri note in her state minutes that Mrs. Ida B. Cole, of Brookfield, is president of the second district and Mrs. M. E. Golliday, Holdon, of the fifth. The new union at Sumner is pushing the work vigorously; many new members are being secured. They have recently given a successful public entertainment. On account of ill health the state superintendent of juvenile work, Mrs. S. B. Shield, has resigned her position.

Fairplay has two Sunday-schools that have monthly temperance Sunday-school exercises, consisting of temperance songs, Scripture verses and recitations. A gospel temperance meeting was held last Friday evening in which the ministers and your correspondent took part. Humansville is working in several departments and are hoping to do good work for the Temperance Temple this year.

Bolivar is doing well. Mrs. Hoffman never gained so many converts to our cause as when she visited Bolivar last month. The largest church in the town was not nearly sufficient to accommodate the people. This union now has a new organ for its new hall.

Mrs. Mary E. Jones.
State Reporter, Humansville.

MINNESOTA.

"HERE A LITTLE AND THERE A LITTLE."

It is not always possible to record great things done, but there are always the "little things" which make up the great things in the life of our unions as well as in individual lives. So with this thought in mind, I gladly report the few little things that have been brought to my notice.

Will not the local unions throughout the state kindly send frequent reports of what they are hoping and planning and doing? Perhaps your union, dear sister, has lately held some kind of an entertainment that if reported, would be an inspiration to some other union. Perhaps some of the best sentences from that bright talk or paper Mrs. A. gave at your recent mothers' meeting would be helpful to other mothers far away from your own town. So please send them on.

Minnesota has always been justly proud of her Y's. The earnestness and enthusiasm they bring to the work is an inspiration and the promise of a bright to-morrow for the W's. The Anoka Y, one of the largest in the state, is a live union of active young people; upon their stationery is the motto, "The palm is not won without the dust of labor" and under it the words, "The Anoka Y. W. C. T. U., organized May 4, 1890, forty-five active members, twenty-eight honorary members." Thus the letters sent out by these girls tell a simple story of their aims and interests. At a recent meeting they took up the subject of narcotics. An essay on "Cigarettes" was read followed by a debate, "Resolved, that young ladies discountenance the use of cigars." Physical culture and dress reform was the next topic. Debate, "Resolved, that the trained skirt for street wear is unhealthful."

A Y union was organized in Spring Valley last fall, which is steadily increasing in numbers and interest, and "bound to be a success." They have taken up narcotics, social purity and flower mission work; have had two social teas, spent one afternoon sewing for the needy, had an interesting "Julia Ames day," and are now preparing for an evening entertainment. The W. C. T. U. of the same place is doing good work. A gospel temperance meeting was recently held in the opera house, which was filled to hear the colored orator, Rev. J. H. Hector. The temperance ticket was reëlected in the town much to the satisfaction of the unions, of course.

Rochester union has nothing special to report save that it is keeping up the regular meetings and having some pleasant temperance teas. "Blessed are the faithful."

The state editorial association held its annual meeting in St. Paul last month. A memorial was presented, signed by Mrs. Hobart and the state press superintendent, thanking the editors for favors to the W. C. T. U. in the past, and bespeaking a continuance, urging them to devote the mighty influence of the press to the aid of the home and humanity against the saloon. Mr. G. S. Pease, editor of the Anoka Union, which has ever had open columns for the W. C. T. U., presented the memorial. Mr. Pease was elected president of the editorial association for the coming year.

Mrs. Amy A. Green.
State Reporter, Minneapolis.

TEXAS.

HEADS FROM THE WHEAT FIELDS.

How I wish I could send each white-ribboner in colder climes some of the thousand blossoms of roses, wisteria, bridal wreaths, violets, hyacinths, and other of our flora, which are in full bloom in the open air; bouquets like those which have made glad the heart of our beloved state president who for the past week has held a school of methods in this city of Houston; the first we ever attended. Mrs. Stoddard was accompanied by Miss Mary Hetherington, state superintendent of juvenile work, and Mrs. Delia Collins, state superintendent of social purity. The Bible Readings were revelations to most of us, some hearing the Bible explained by a woman for the first time. Before coming here Mrs. Stoddard held a school at Beaumont, which has resulted in great good.

In this state we are dependent largely upon newspapers and periodicals for our knowledge of the W. C. T. U. Mrs. Fannie Reese Pugh, state superintendent of unfermented wine, says in the Texas White Ribbon: "Do we not know that the distribution of good literature is one of the best methods at our command to educate public sentiment? I became a member of the W. C. T. U., through reading about the work."

There are about twenty papers in the state which give columns to the W. C. T. U. At Dublin, there are two which give us one or more columns under the editorial management of Mrs. Dr. Rew. Brownwood has three papers, each giving a column a week to the W. C. T. U., Mrs. Prof. Newhall, editor.

Comanche, two weeklies, each give a column, having as editor, Mrs. Mary Franklin. Stephensville has Miss Allie King as editor. At Sweetwater, Miss Flora Rand edits a column in the one weekly paper. Midland, Pecos, Big Springs, Palestine, Dennison,—each publish columns and all local notices are given space. The Galveston News publishes everything pertaining to our work upon solicitation.

Mrs. Rebecca Henry Hays, Galveston, state superintendent of the W. C. T. U. for the World's Fair, is an active worker who is preparing for a lecture tour of the state to raise funds for the W. C. T. U. exhibit. The Dallas News publishes a column edited by Mrs. Ada Hetherington, and the Farmer's World at Dallas also has a W. C. T. U. column. Dr. Ellen Dabbs of the Industrial Educator, Fort Worth, publishes everything sent to her. The Beaumont Journal also gives space to Mrs. Watson for any temperance matter. Others are in the field and I hope to know of them and the names of the W. C. T. U. editors for my next report.

Wherever our state president organizes a union she arranges for the distribution of temperance literature through the boxes at railroad depots.

We are all in favor of the Sunday closing of the World's Fair. A petition is being circulated. Also the million voters' plan has found its way down here and is obtaining many signers.

The L. T. L's are forming all over our state. Houston has a fine organization. Our Y. W. C. T. U. is gaining ground, under the able management of Mrs. S. L. Hain. An entertainment was given by them during the school of methods. It was the "Initial Inquisition," published in the March Oak and Ivy Leaf, and was a source of much pleasure, besides adding many nickels to the treasury.

The Houston union has an acquisition in Mrs. Willa Lloyd Jackson, a native Texan, and an authoress who is making an enviable reputation. Assisted by the Houston Post and editor of W. C. T. U. columns she has successfully conducted a word contest on the word, Temperance.

Mrs. Elizabeth Strong Tracy,
State Reporter, Houston.

EASTERN WASHINGTON.

EARNEST WORKERS.

The thought of how much help each member who pays her dues can be to the great cause whose badge she wears, has come to me strongly of late, and I rejoice that East Washington has so many unions that not only pay their dues at the beginning of the year, but also respond cheerfully to calls of the finance committee and treasurer. I urge that those who have not done so will remember their responsibility in this respect, and thus enable our state to make payment of National dues proportioned to the enrolled membership.

Cortland union holds gospel temperance meetings every Sunday afternoon. Walla Walla also continues the Sunday temperance meetings. On a recent Sunday Miss Leota West, a Walla Walla teacher, gave an address on "Temperance Teaching in the Public Schools." The word comes that this union is prospering greatly. The unions that are planning reading rooms for the public are Colfax, Sprague, Roslyn, North Yakima, Latah and Waterville.

Latah reports gospel temperance meetings in their reading room, circulation of the million voters' pledge, a wall pocket at the depot and in their hotel, for literature twelve subscribers to The Union Signal and the celebration of the anniversary of organization. Four departments are carried on, and this report shows signs of great earnestness and prosperity. Cheney, Colfax, Rockford, Walla Walla and Waitsburg have engaged Dr. Kate Mitchell's services. Goldendale is arranging with Mrs. Dell Cox, National organizer, for a series of meetings before their municipal election. Kate Bushnell union at Spokane has engaged Joe Hess for a series of meetings.

North Yakima, through Mrs. Lon Cory, reports a good work in that beautiful city begun by Mrs. Stevens and continued in a series of five lectures by Francis Murphy, when over three hundred signed the pledge. Some confirmed drinkers were reformed and the meetings aroused great enthusiasm. Mr. Murphy has been engaged for a second series by the new converts to the pledge.

Mrs. Amanda Strong, of Walla Walla, state superintendent of Sunday-school work, recently organized a union at Huntsville. Mrs. Penn, state corresponding secretary, and Miss Halsted, president of Crystal union, arranged and held a medal contest at Spokane not long ago, one-half the proceeds of which will be given to state treasury. Our state president was quite ill in Boston and also after returning home. For the past six weeks she has been a prisoner, a victim to the prevailing disease.

The state convention has been called for May 11, 12, at Davenport with executive committee meeting on 10th and 13th. All who expect to attend the convention should send their names to the state recording secretary, Mrs. Jennie L. Green, Medical Lake, and to Mrs. A. M. Oliver, chairman committee of entertainment, Davenport. Mrs. Mary C. Boswell, Colfax, will arrange railroad rates. Members of the executive committee should know that the auxiliary dues from the unions with which they are connected are forwarded to state treasurer, Lucy R. Berry, Walla Walla, "at least one month before convention," if they were not paid in June, else it will invalidate their votes both in the executive committee and convention.

We earnestly request that donations for the Temple hereafter shall be sent to our state treasurer who will forward it to the National treasurer. Thus mistakes will be avoided as there are two state unions in Washington. The little silver model of the Temperance Temple which we have received is very beautiful and greatly admired.

LUCY A. SWITZER,
State Reporter, Cheney.

IOWA.

NOTES OF PREPARATION

For county conventions are sounding throughout the state. May is our month for these annual feasts. Mrs. M. H. Dunham, Mrs. S. F. Grubb and "the beloved evangelist," Anna M. Palmer, are all available for these conventions. Application for Mrs. Dunham's services may be made to her at Burlington. Mrs. Eva S. Gilchrist, of Ireton, arranges Mrs. Grubb's appointments, and will give terms. Mrs. Palmer may be addressed at Boone.

Our state president is making an extended tour through the western and northwestern part of the state. She has recently organized a union of Y's and trained a class for their first medal contest in Burlington.

Lovina Benedict, the loving and merciful, who has rescued, mothered and led to Christ hundreds of deceived girls, is now in feeble health. There were twenty-two inmates in "Mother Benedict's" home in February. Let unions who desire to do a good work send boxes of necessaries and rolls of money to her whose burning thought now is, "How will the work go on when I am gone?"

Kendallville union, organized by Mrs. Washington last spring in a country school district, has distributed 200 copies of Timely Talks, is circulating Ungodly League editorials, takes five copies of THE UNION SIGNAL and six of Iowa's Signal, has been favored with lectures by Rev. M. A. Gault, held a temperance entertainment, and raised a goodly sum of money for speakers and for other purposes.

Edgewood union, in addition to other work, has secured a large number of signatures to petition for Sunday closing of the World's Fair.

Thousands of signatures to the million voters' pledge have been obtained. Mrs. R. W. Marriage, our state superintendent of peace and arbitration, has been at work in Minnesota, Wisconsin and this state holding mothers', mission and peace meetings, finding a great need of mothers' meetings on the line of social purity.

The first district reports a successful application to superintendents of the C. R. and I. C. railways for permission to work on their lines and has placed literature and Bibles in cars and way stations. Several medal contests have also been held in this district. Eleven different petitions have been signed and sent on their mission. Money and goods have been sent to Mother Benedict at Decorah; meetings for the benefit of the Russian sufferers have been held. Favorable reports of Miss Moore's meetings have come in from different parts of this district. There were twenty applications for her services in the state that could not be filled. Ireton union, in the eleventh district, has sent a petition with sixty names to the General Assembly for a reformatory for women.

Our state superintendent of physical culture, Miss R. Anna Morris, of Des Moines, gave an address and an exhibition of Delsarte and Indian club swinging before the teachers' association. Two very enthusiastic and successful classes were secured at Ireton and Rock Valley. Miss Morris also gave a talk to the L. T. L. at Ireton on "Health, and How to Keep it." Surely our women will do wisely to be up and doing in securing Miss Morris's invaluable services before other states find out about our treasure and win her away from us. No better work can be done than arranging for her at teachers' institutes.

Woodbury county, in the eleventh district, reports five unions, three of which are in Sioux City. We shall doubtless be favored with an exhibit at the World's Fair, of corn palace marvels from the deft hands of some of these workers. The Central union at Sioux City has twenty-one members, has printed programs for its regular meetings, holds a mothers' meeting monthly, and has recently had a literary entertainment and supper which netted them forty dollars. Rev. Henrietta Moore gave them an address and a parliamentary drill. They hope soon to be able to complete the payment of one hundred dollars pledged to the Temple fund. Mrs. Koons, president of this county, is a most devoted and successful worker. Calliope union has secured the services of Mrs. DeVoe, of Illinois, for a lecture on suffrage. Other unions are also arranging for Mrs. DeVoe.

This district has lost by removal to California two of its most efficient department superintendents, Mrs. G. A. Darlington, and Mrs. G. D. Turpening, of Ireton. The third district under the management of its president, Mrs. R. L. Wallace, a new leader forced to the front by stress of circumstances, is making wonderful progress. It seems to me that the reason of the marvelous success of these new workers, so timid and distrustful of their own powers, can be given in these words: consecration and trust in God. Eldora union, although few in numbers, is faithfully doing the work that comes in its way, and considers medal contest work the most available at present.

Shell Rock is always up and doing everything that willing hearts and busy hands can find to do. They are expecting a visit from Mrs. Dunham this month. The Dows union, with only six active members, is distributing literature, keeping a rack filled at the depot, circulating petitions, and filling mite-boxes for Temple fund. Radcliffe union, it is said, ought to be called "Yolande," because it is so true. Its honorary members deserve special mention, such true-blue brothers-in-law as they have proved, very generous in giving financial support, and always ready to lend a hand.

A large number of silver medal contests are reported by this district. They held one gold medal contest and expect to have another soon. Willard union in Dubuque, has twenty-two members, and is carrying on evangelistic, jail and prison, flower mission and peace and arbitration work. The jail work has been faithfully kept up for ten years, often under great discouragements. Iowa Falls union is struggling under difficulties, but presses on. This union circulates petitions and literature, keeps a rack filled at the depot, sustains a column in The Citizen, a Republican paper, and has a local suffrage society. Osage union in fourth district is editing a column in Mitchell County Press. It has a new editor each month, and is called "Woman's Kingdom." Republican and Democratic editors are very kind and courteous to our women, publishing our notices and reports free of charge.

Prof. J. R. Dill, of Topeka, Kan., has been giving a series of lectures to Delaware county unions which are highly commended by the president of the district. A new union of fourteen members has been organized at Winthrop, also an L. T. L. with thirty-five members. A tremendous pressure was brought to bear upon the House of Representatives in its last hours, to secure the passage of the infamous high-license Gatch bill which it will be remembered had already passed the Senate. Large delegations went to Des Moines for this purpose, but were told they were too late. So our law is safe for two more years. Different opinions are given as to why the bill did not pass. Let us take comfort in the belief that the anti-prohibition leaders feared to press the matter too far on account of the multitude of pure, white ballots that would be cast in the rural districts against the party if it dared betray the youth of the state into the hands of the enemy.

The Republican state convention was composed of a majority of delegates opposed to prohibition, and therefore adopted a platform silent as death in regard to this question. But this by no means expresses the sentiment of a majority of Iowa's noble men upon this live issue. Let the blind leaders go on. They will hear an alarming sound in "the tops of the mulberry trees" one of these days.

CLARA P. WHITE,
State Reporter, Volga.

COLORADO ITEMS.

Temperance work in Colorado is by no means lagging.

Another local union has established its own headquarters. The Longmont union has been incorporated and has purchased a two-thirds interest in the Mumford block in which the Longmont Ledger has its quarters. This will give them abundant room in which to carry on the good work.

The Highlands union held its second silver medal contest on February 19 in the Boulevard Congregational church and it was a success in every way. The medal was won by Anna C. Hinckley. The second honor was given to Leontine P. Harger, and the third honor to Edgar A. Howell. These contests have aroused such an interest among the young people that the organization of a Y. W. C. T. U. was a necessity. The young men were desirous of becoming honorary members and the wearing of the white ribbon has become fashionable among our young women. The Highlands union has introduced the mothers' meetings and also holds superintendents' meetings for a special hearing and discussion of their lines of work.

Mrs. C. M. Shapleigh, our state treasurer and member of the Denver central union, held a "Dollar Meeting," from which about forty dollars were realized. Rev. Mrs. F. E. Leonard married a couple to earn her dollar, and Mrs. Hortense Miller wrote valentines and sold them.

The Pueblo Mesa union held a literary entertainment in the form of a symposium on our public schools, having ten minute addresses on different sides of the question by some of the ablest educators and professional people of the city. Delta union has petitioned for Sunday closing with an increasing public sentiment in its favor.

The West Denver union realized twenty dollars from their mite-boxes. The Montrose union has been aided in the support of their reading-room by the Montrose Amateur Dramatic Club to the amount of forty dollars. Montrose opened a reading-room some time ago, when it was organized, and quietly goes on its way independent of outside help.

The Leadville union, which probably has done more charitable work than any other in the state, yet finds need of the same kind of work, and is about to open a coffee house and rooms for the homeless.

The Greeley union realized twelve dollars and forty-seven cents from their mite-boxes and contributions for the Temple fund.

Two new Y. W. C. T. unions have been organized by Miss Spaulding since my last letter. One in Colorado City and the other in Walsenburg. Two L. T. L's are started also, one in Boulder, under the Y's, and the other in Colorado City. The Y's of Grand Junction gave "Ye Hatchet Partie," on the evening of Washington's birthday. The North Denver Y's gave a social at which about one hundred and fifty were present and five new honoraries were enrolled.

Denver has a new union called the Leonard union. Mrs. Higgins has organized a union at Sterling with fifty members, twenty of whom are honoraries. It has thirty-five dollars in the treasury. Loveland union has held three medal contests. Boulder union has held a series of parlor meetings, discussing the Keeley cure, heredity and hygiene.

The Rocky Ford union has held its first medal contest. The school board of Rocky Ford has made temperance hygiene a separate topic in regular examination in all departments of their graded schools. Dr. Marks, a prominent physician of the town, is giving a series of free lectures under the auspices of the union. Lafayette union supports a free reading-room. Larimer county held its first county convention at Berthoud not long ago.

The third quarterly convention of the El Paso county W. C. T. U. was held in Colorado Springs, on April 1. We were glad to have with us representative temperance workers from Wisconsin, Iowa, and Pennsylvania. The reports showed progress. Colorado City union gave Miss Spaulding a crowded house to listen to her presentation of the work of the Y's, also an afternoon reception.

Florissant, well up in the mountains, did not hold meetings through the winter on account of sickness of the officers, and the unpleasant weather of the past winter, but roused to energetic work for Mrs. Woodbridge's lecture, and are ready to go forward. It has been difficult for country unions to accomplish very much the past winter. Frequent and unusual storms have kept people at home, unless there was mining on the brain.

Mrs. Woodbridge spoke three times on the Sabbath she spent in Colorado Springs, and is doing excellent work throughout the state. The Colorado Springs union is going forward with its employment bureau and woman's exchange more rapidly than anticipated. They have recently moved into new quarters. The mothers' work in kindergarten lessons is becoming popular.

The principal feature of the afternoon session of the convention was the parliamentary drill conducted by Mrs. Nellie Hewitt, who gave us a thorough lesson on the questions of the quarter as published in our state Bulletin, by our state superintendent of that department. The Y's of Colorado Springs gave the social between sessions, and the Y's of Colorado City and Colorado Springs occupied the evening. Three of the contestants for the Demorest medal, of the Colorado City union, gave their recitations and also one of the teachers. We hope for great results for temperance from the influence of the Y's, and it is very encouraging to feel that our places will be filled by these energetic and enthusiastic workers.

ELSIE W. CHAMBERS.

LOUISIANA.

MONROE W. C. T. U.

The Monroe W. C. T. U. has recently celebrated the first annual meeting since its organization. It was a most enjoyable and successful event, and brought into prominence the good work done by the local white-ribboners. Monroe is a conservative old place, and it has been no easy task to arouse the people on the important questions which are the basis of our work.

The hall was tastefully decorated with flowers, evergreens, etc., and a large picture of Miss Willard was conspicuous on the platform. Mrs. Blanks, the president, gave an interesting address, briefly surveying the history of the organization, National, state and local. Mrs. Woodland, the secretary, gave a summary of the work of the past year, which showed conclusively that the union had not been idle. The report of the treasurer, Mrs. Harper, was most encouraging, showing that there was a balance in the treasury of over three hundred dollars.

The poem, "When the Women Have their Way," was charmingly read by Miss Margie Garrett. "The Temperance Movement as an Educator of Women," was read by Mrs. Keeny with good effect.

When the roll was called, all members, honorary and regular, responded with some sentiment appropriate to the occasion. Some selected poetry, others prose, and others were original; very many were Scriptural quotations. The entire program was interspersed with music, instrumental and vocal, and at the close the election of officers took place, most of the old officers being reëlected.

After adjournment members and friends were invited to partake of refreshments elegantly served in another part of the hall. The over-supply of cakes, fruits, etc., was sent out the next day to the sick and poor; over fifty packages, with dainty cards attached, bearing the compliments and good wishes of the Monroe Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

"They serve God well
Who serve His creatures."

From twenty members at organization the union has grown to one hundred and forty honorary and regular members. They will send in about thirty dollars state dues.

The annual convention of the Louisiana W. C. T. U. will be held in Monroe in April. We hope for a grand rally of the forces.

MARY READ GOODALE,
State Reporter, Baton Rouge.

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

A TEMPERANCE flag is being made by the Albany W. C. T. U. It is of stars and stripes and to it will be attached the motto "Saloons Must Go."

MRS. M. B. REESE, National organizer, has been speaking effectively in Washington Territory and large audiences have greeted her every night.

MRS. LUCY A. SCOTT, one of our valued contributors, and author of helpful books for both young and old, a familiar name to our white-ribboners, is living now at Norwich, Conn.

MANY railroad men with their wives and children have been converted during the meeting held in Huntington, W. Va., by Jennie Smith, W. C. T. U. railroad evangelist. The influence she has exerted there is widespread and enduring.

THE Palmyra, Mo., W. C. T. U. will have the warmest sympathy of the white-ribboners when they hear of the loss it has sustained by the death of Mrs. Sarah Lundy, a most energetic and faithful worker who was dedicated heart and soul to the temperance reform.

THE address of Mrs. M. J. Borden, the president of New Mexico W. C. T. U., has been changed from Los Vegas to Albuquerque. This consecrated worker has recently been licensed as a preacher by the "New Mexico and Arizona Congregational Association."

MISS DEDE MCMILLAN of York, N. Y., was an earnest and zealous member of the York Y. W. C. T. U., who died January 3, 1892. Her hope was in the sacred truth, "For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."

THE seventh district of Kentucky W. C. T. U. will hold its annual convention in Paris, Ky., on May 4 and 5.

EAST WASHINGTON state convention will be held at Davenport, May 11 and 12, and executive committee meetings on May 10 and 13.

MRS. C. S. HARRISON closed the book of her life's history at Franklin, Neb., last month. She was an earnest worker in the temperance cause.

A FAITHFUL and loved member of the Gaines, Mich., W. C. T. U. was Mrs. James A. Perkins, whose death on March 17 was deeply deplored.

MRS. ABBY MORTON DIAZ, so well known to our readers as a gifted writer, will give a series of lectures during the spring and summer on various interesting topics.

REV. J. S. SMART, D. D., of Flint, Mich., was a friend and champion of the temperance reform, whose death on March 2 has removed a valuable and beloved brother and co-worker.

A REPORT from Canon City, Col., speaks in terms of high appreciation of Mrs. Mary Woodbridge, whose eminent qualities as a speaker and leader are being displayed in the Centennial state.

THE little bow of crape attached to their white ribbons is worn by the Niobrara, Neb., W. C. T. U., in loving memory of Mrs. Sarah Thomas, a leading member of their union, who died March 10.

A W. C. T. U. meeting was held during the annual conference of the United Brethren Church at Winfield, Kan., not long since, which evoked an unanimous expression of sympathy and encouragement for the earnest temperance workers.

THE Central W. C. T. U. of Minneapolis has just opened a lunch counter in the midst of a nest of saloons. It keeps open from 12 to 12 o'clock, and its coffee cart furnishes coffee free; so the liquor traffic has its own weapons turned against it.

THE Christian's triumph over death was manifested in the release of Dr. May A. Ford, of Vineland, N. J., April 1, a prominent reform worker, who, calling her friends to her bedside, conducted a praise and prayer service during her last hours, and met death hopefully and confidently.

A TEMPERANCE essay contest was held by the Syracuse, N. Y., W. C. T. U., No. 2, on the subject, "Moral Responsibility," recently. The successful contestant was Miss Sarah J. Underwood, who was awarded the prize donated for the purpose by an honorary member of the union.

MISS FRANCES R. MORRIS has been named an overseer of the poor by the board of aldermen in Boston. Miss Morris is well known in charitable work, and was recommended to the board by many persons identified with the amelioration of the poor. Nothing could be more appropriate than such an appointment.

MRS. EMILY S. BARTLETT, of Ventura, Cal., passed away last month aged seventy-six years. She celebrated her "golden wedding" last summer, at which time a purse of gold was sent her by the Emily S. Bartlett union of Colorado Springs, Col. The motto of her life of active, devoted service might well have been, "She did with all her might what her hands found to do."

EVERY white-ribboner who sees this item is requested to send to Mrs. Mary H. Hunt, Hyde Park, Mass., an account of any authentic instances which have come to her knowledge, of cider-drinking that has led to the formation of the alcoholic appetite. A collection of such incidents is to be made and published which will clinch the scientific statement that such is the case.

MRS. HELEN G. RICE, of Boston, is a phenomenal worker who is constantly devising plans for the promotion of the National juvenile department. A Loyal Temperance Legion a day is her record as an organizer in Massachusetts. She is also in demand for Bible readings and general temperance addresses. All join with one of the L. T. L. boys in saying, "Three cheers for Mrs. Rice!"

A REMARKABLY successful organizer is Miss Clara Parrish, of Paris, Ill., whose exceptional abilities in this line have been manifested in Missouri's second district recently where fourteen organized societies (six W's, four Y's and four L. T. L's,) are the record of less than a month's work, in the face of many difficulties. Her methods of work are attractive, her will and energy indomitable. Miss Parrish will shortly commence labors in Illinois, where success will undoubtedly attend her efforts.

MISS ANNIE THOMAS, 32 West 36th street, New York City, sister of Miss Julia Thomas, whose sad, early death will be remembered by white-ribboners, has offered, in memory of her sister, to give a course of lessons in psycho-physical culture to one member of the W. C. T. U. from each state in the union. The summer session will be held July 5—August 26, at National Prohibition Park, Staten Island, N. Y. Responses to this generous offer have been received from Vermont, Michigan, Illinois, Ohio, Iowa, Missouri, Maine, Kansas, Connecticut, Colorado, Florida, South Carolina and Tennessee.

NATIONAL TEMPERANCE HOSPITAL NOTES.

Mrs. Cora Walhington, one of the nurses in this year's graduating class, has received the appointment of head nurse in the Milwaukee County hospital. She understands thoroughly the nursing of the sick without the use of alcoholic medicines, and with her strong temperance principles it is believed she will benefit humanity by the knowledge she has gained at the National Temperance Hospital, and no alcohol will ever be administered by her to the sick.

The hospital is proud of the average made by the nurses in the training school this year, no member averaging below ninety per cent. In the final examination two of the class made a general average of ninety-eight per cent, and the average of the class, as a whole, was 95 per cent.

Some eight weeks ago a lady entered the hospital who was suffering from chronic bowel trouble. Prior to her entrance here she had been treated with alcoholic remedies; the patient and her parents realized that she was constantly growing weaker and if a change could not soon be made, she would not long survive. In the National Temperance Hospital she was placed under non-alcoholic treatment, and has shown a continuous improvement, and at the present writing is sufficiently recovered to return to her home.

Mrs. Cairns, of DeKalb, Ill., standing on the ledge of eighty Christian years, rounded up and completed her life-work by piecing in nine-patch the covering for two comfortables which she made and sent to the National Temperance Hospital at the beginning of this year. This was her last piece of work, for, shortly after, she was summoned to a higher life. Gone! yet her works live after her. Mrs. Cairns was a true Christian and a staunch Prohibitionist, and earned those blessed words, "Well done, good and faithful servant."

The following donations were received at the hospital during November, 1891. Received from the Belvidere, Ill., W. C. T. U., twelve cans fruit, five glasses of jelly, one towel, four sheets; Effingham, Ill., W. C. T. U. sent twenty-four cans of fruit; twenty-four glasses; one bar of soap, twelve towels, four sheets, two pillow cases, three dozen teaspoons, packages old cotton and linen, magazines and papers; Healey, Ill., W. C. T. U. sent twelve chickens, four pounds butter; West Plains, Mo., W. C. T. U., two pounds apples, ten cans of fruit, six glasses jelly, old cotton; Lake City, Ill., W. C. T. U., six cans peaches; Marengo, Ill., W. C. T. U., forty-four glasses jelly, twenty-one cans of fruit; Morrison, Ill., W. C. T. U., seventeen cans of fruit, seventeen glasses of jelly; Letts, Iowa, W. C. T. U., thirteen cans of fruit; nine glasses of jelly; unknown, twelve cans fruit, six glasses jelly, old cotton. ELLA SNYDER, Sec'y.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

The ninth annual convention of the Mississippi W. C. T. U., will be held at Corinth, May 5, 6, 7 and 8. The basis of representation is as follows: The president and one delegate for every local union, and one delegate for every twenty paying members. The railroads have granted the usual rates of one and one-third fare. Delegates and visitors should procure certificates of the ticket agent at starting point, which again must be signed by the recording secretary at convention, otherwise the reduction will be forfeited. A cordial invitation is extended to all friends of the cause.

LAVINIA S. MOUNT, Pres.
M. L. MONTGOMERY, Rec. Sec.

NOTICE—ILLINOIS.

Will Illinois unions please notice that Mrs. Nettie L. Hobbs, of Pontiac, Ill., former president of Livingston county, has consented to give three or four months of service in any part of the state where organizing work is needed? Mrs. Hobbs was a successful county president, is an intelligent, earnest white-ribboner, and a number of places in her county bear testimony to her efficiency. She speaks well. I especially commend her to those districts where the presidents cannot do field work. Her terms are moderate. Please confer with her at once and secure her help. MRS. L. S. ROUNDS.

Chicago, April 7, 1892.

Official Communications.

W. C. T. U. MISSIONARIES.

Constitution and By-Laws of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union Missionary Society.

[White-ribboners, please read, mark, ponder and mentally digest.—ED.]

CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE I.

This association shall be called the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union Missionary Society.

ARTICLE II.

The object of this society shall be to interest Christian women in raising funds to send forth missionaries to complete the organization of the World's W. C. T. U. in all countries.

ARTICLE III.

Any person paying a regular subscription of one cent a week, or fifty cents a year, may become a member of this society.

ARTICLE IV

The payment of twenty dollars shall constitute a life member. Any person paying one hundred dollars shall become a manager for life, and the contribution of three hundred dollars shall constitute the donor a life patron.

ARTICLE V.

There shall also be a memorial fund. The payment of not less than fifty dollars in memory of a deceased friend shall enroll the name of the departed on our memorial tablet.

ARTICLE VI.

The officers of the society shall be those of the World's W. C. T. U. and the superintendent of the World's Temperance Mission Work.

ARTICLE VII.

Its plan of work shall be to organize mission bands wherever practicable, in all lands; these to be auxiliary to the World's W. C. T. U. missionary society, and to number at least ten persons who will pay one cent a week. They shall endeavor by all legitimate means which their intelligence and zeal may suggest, to add to the funds, especially by holding anniversaries and soliciting life-members, managers and patrons.

ARTICLE VIII.

This constitution and the accompanying by-laws may be changed or amended at any annual meeting of the World's W. C. T. U. by a two-thirds vote of its officers.

BY-LAWS.

SECTION 1.—The Superintendent of the World's Temperance Mission Work shall have general supervision of the work, and shall receive a semi-annual report of the money raised in each band.

SEC. 2.—The treasurer shall receive all money, and disburse the same on order of the officers of the World's W. C. T. U.

SEC. 3.—All money raised for memberships, managers, or patrons must be kept inviolate and sent to the treasurer; necessary expenses of meetings being otherwise provided for.

SEC. 4.—An annual report of amount contributed shall also be given to the local union within whose territory it was obtained.

SEC. 5.—It shall be the duty of the superintendent and the treasurer each to submit an annual report to the World's W. C. T. U.

SEC. 6.—Each band shall report to the superintendent in March and September, not later than the tenth of the month. The money shall also be sent to the treasurer at the same time.

Superintendent of World's Temperance Mission Work, Mrs. Mary Sparkes Wheeler, Phœnixville, Pa., U. S. A.

Treasurer, Mrs. Ella F. M. Williams, 26 Chomedy St., Montreal, Can.

THE DEPARTMENT OF FRANCHISE.

Our department is now fully equipped and ready, we trust, for an active, an earnest and an aggressive campaign. To those of us who believe in religion, in government, and that women are equally with men concerned in both, it seems one of the important, the imperative phases in our work. Let us make this year tell in advancement all along the line,—an army thoroughly organized and equipped, the field studied and the situation understood, in short, a soldierly plan of attack. Our list of lecturers includes the following elect ladies: Miss Frances E. Willard, Evanston, Ill; Mrs. Susan S. Fessenden, 171 Tremont street, Boston; Miss Rena A. Michaels, Ph. D., Albion, Mich.; Lady Henry Somerset, Evanston, Ill.; Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman, 510 Rialto Building, Kansas City, Mo.; Miss E. U. Yates, Round Pond, Me.; and these, with others, you will please call into the field. Let our state officials see that there is movement all along the rank and file. Let us sow the country with literature as we expect to sow it by and by with purer, cleaner ballots. A "leaflet for a letter," may sometimes be a worthy substitute. Anyway, be ever loyal to the highest truth, the purest sentiment upon this subject. Do you pray for it, friends, as you pray for other reforms which are for the ennobling, the uplift of humanity? If not, it is time to begin.

LOUISE C. PURINGTON, Nat. Supt.
ALICE STONE BLACKWELL, Assoc. Supt.
3 Park St., Boston.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

To State Presidents, National Superintendents, and Organizers:

An important letter of the Postmaster-General has been mailed to each of you, calling attention to H. R. Bill 5,067: To amend postal laws, to correct an abuse through which trashy covered books, falsely claimed to be periodicals, are allowed to go through the mails at the rate of one cent a pound instead of one cent for every two ounces which is the legal rate for books and other miscellaneous printed matter. Also notice of H. R. Bill 120: To exclude obscene and crime-breeding reading from the mails.

I want to ask you personally to write a letter to members of Congress from your district, and to the Senators from your state urging them to the passage of both bills. A letter from an individual may not seem to you of much importance, but you will bear in mind that a large number of letters will go, and I can assure you that Senators and Congressmen are very desirous of catering to the wishes of their constituents so far as they can consistently.

EMILIE D. MARTIN,
Nat. Supt. Promotion of Purity in Literature and Art.
111 West 75th St., New York City.

BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

VAN HOUTEN'S COCOA

"Best & Goes Farthest."

"I said to Mrs. Harris, Mrs. Harris says I, Try VAN HOUTEN'S COCOA."

MRS. GAMP.

Perfectly Pure.

Rich, yet Digestible. Stimulating yet Sustaining. Saving what Other Processes Waste—and Developing the Delicious Flavor and Aroma.

"Once tried, used always."

A Substitute for Tea & Coffee.

Better for the Nerves and Stomach.

☞If not obtainable enclose 25 cents to either VAN HOUTEN & ZOON, 106 Reade Street, New York, or 45 Wabash Ave., Chicago, and a sample can, containing enough for 35 to 40 cups, will be mailed. Mention this publication. Prepared only by the inventors, VAN HOUTEN & ZOON, Weesp, Holland. a6.

A NURSE'S NOTES ABOUT BABIES.

By Miss M. H. Beebe.

I want mothers everywhere to see the pictures of three babies that I took charge of after their mothers had given up all hopes of rearing them.

They had tried nearly everything in the way of foods before I took the cases.

RUTH.

Ruth was a year and a half old when I took charge of her, and was not so large as a well child at seven months. Her flesh was soft, flabby, and wet with perspiration all the time. She hardly stopped crying, did not sleep nights, and was so weak that she could scarcely sit up. No one thought she could live. I put her on lactated food, and in a few weeks her flesh was hard and solid, she slept well nights, and was running all around, as well as any child.

When I first took Alice, she was in a terrible condition,—cried night and day, head all scales, no natural movement of the bowels. The trouble was improper food and too much medicine. Lactated food and good care made her what the picture shows.

ALICE.

The third child, Florence, was even worse off than Ruth when I first saw her. She wanted to eat all the time, but threw off her food as soon as swallowed. Lactated food had the same magical effect in her case, and that the child is alive to-day is, I believe, due solely to the use of this pure food.

FLORENCE.

With all three of these babies nearly every food had been tried without success before I used the lactated. I could mention many other cases where the lactated was the only food that agreed. My long experience has fully proven that none of the other foods equal it in making solid flesh, and giving that perfect health which shows itself in good sleep at night, and happiness in the day-time.

* * * *

The author of the above is Miss M. H. Beebe, Springfield, Mass., a nurse of long experience. The facts she describes prove that Lactated Food makes the sick baby well, and keeps the well baby a picture of health. This food is not a medicine,—simply nature's substitute for mother's milk that has saved many a little one's life. All reputable druggists sell it, or it will be mailed on receipt of price,—25 cents, 50 cents, or $1.00. Book of prize babies and beautiful birthday card free to any mother sending her baby's name. WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Burlington, Vt.

IN EVANSTON BRICK HOUSE (containing 10 rooms) with 100 feet of ground. All modern improvements and only three blocks from station. Cheap. Address J. H. BROWN, 22 W. Randolph St. Chicago.

Publisher's Notes.

As Others See Us.

Another scholarly woman of the pen, in the far South, says: "THE UNION SIGNAL was never so fine; every article in it is electrical with interest."

Our UNION SIGNAL grows better with age. Nobody can read it from week to week and not become wiser, stronger and better.—From California.

A literary woman of Pennsylvania says in a recent letter: "I believe THE UNION SIGNAL is the best exponent of that high call the women have answered, and it grows better with each issue. I cannot see how a woman can be at her best without reading it."

Our National organ should be in the hands of every white-ribboner. The best methods that wise brains can devise for abolishing the rum traffic are to be found in its columns. Now that our peerless Frances Willard and Lady Somerset are the editors we feel great confidence in recommending it more and more. Send for a sample copy or for a year's subscription. Read it and lend it to your friends.—The Outlook, R. I.

THE UNION SIGNAL, Chicago, appears under a new editorial management. Miss Willard and Lady Henry Somerset will bear the leading part, together with Miss Mary Allen West. The paper, even more than ever, is making itself indispensable to any one who would keep in touch with the most advanced reforms and philanthropic movements, not only of our own but of all lands. Lady Henry Somerset is contributing "Recollections of Noted Men and Women," and has already in articles of very great interest told of Lord Shaftesbury and Elizabeth Barrett Browning. On her return to England she is to edit an English edition of THE UNION SIGNAL to be called THE WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON. Then more than ever the W. C. T. U. will make its influence felt around the world every week through the columns of THE UNION SIGNAL. It illustrates how essential is the press to the success of any movement.—Congregational News.

Bargains in Leaflets.

Some of our leaflets have been transferred to a new series, and as we have a supply still on hand of the old style, we have decided to dispose of them at a sacrifice, with a view to utilizing our shelf-room for new stock.

MISCELLANEOUS LEAFLETS.

No. 2. Alcohol and Health.
No. 3. { Our Bondage, Miss Willard. Mat Women, F. P. Cobbe.

The price has been about 50c. per 100, but they will now be sold for 20c. per 100 postpaid. If you want to see them before ordering send 5c. for samples, and we will, at the same time, send a sample of

The Duty of the Pulpit,

by C. H. Paine, LL.D. This excellent paper appeared in THE UNION SIGNAL some weeks back, and is the best we have seen of its kind. It starts out with saying that "A chain of linked logic as strong as that which binds the universe together, binds our subject upon the conscience of the church and the pulpit." The five "links" are well connected, and the logic used is unanswerable. Every minister of the gospel would be benefited by reading the leaflet. Price 5c.; in lots of ten or more, 3c. each.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill

Will Soon be Ready.

The fine volume entitled, "A Young Woman Journalist." A memorial of Miss Ames, edited by Miss Frances E. Willard and Lady Henry Somerset. It contains an outline of her life, her travels as shown in her journal, her finest literary papers, the funeral oration by Miss Willard, etc.

Send for particulars to
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

MRS. E. F. VAIL, of Bradford, Ill., desires us to say that twelve shares of W. T. P. A. stock owned by her are for sale. Address as above.

Van Houten's Cocoa—The original, most soluble.

WE take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the advertisement of the Manufacturers' Cloak Co., which appears in another column of this paper. They make a fine line of goods, and their prices are within reach of all.

SPECIAL OFFER
FOR 30 DAYS.

To introduce our High Grade garments through the country, we will make, to measure, the latest and most popular style Spring Jacket (as per cut) Imported Clay Diagonal Worsted, or Corkscrew, satin-lined throughout, for $15.00

Regular price, to measure, $30
Usual Ready-made price, $25

We guarantee our garments to be Superior in Finish to any in the Market.

Write for samples, references and instructions.

REFERENCE:—Columbia National Bank, Chicago.

MANUFACTURER'S CLOAK CO.,
188 Wabash Av., - - Chicago, Ill.

Silver Ware

OF THE HIGHEST GRADE

THE QUESTION "WILL IT WEAR"?
need never be asked if your Goods bear the TRADE MARK

AS THIS IN ITSELF GUARANTEES THE QUALITY.
BE SURE THE PREFIX 1847 IS STAMPED ON EVERY ARTICLE.
THESE GOODS HAVE STOOD THE TEST FOR NEARLY HALF A CENTURY.
And are in the stock of all FIRST-CLASS DEALERS.

THE MAGIC CITY HARVEY

Has already located Manufacturing Industries representing nearly $5,000,000 IN CAPITAL and giving employment to AN ARMY OF MEN. Has had continuous growth from the start. Why? On account of its unprecedented location—only 2 miles from the City Limits on the south—the direction from the City where in all the History of Chicago the largest and surest investments have always been made and where the Great Trunk Lines of Railways pass, thus saving many hours to the Manufacturer in the shipping of Freight, even though he be located on the Belt Line in any other direction from the City. Harvey has no idle men.

HARVEY HAS NO RIVAL Either as an investment for residence or for a manufacturing town. Factories are already located and not indefinite promises with which so many are deceived by so-called Rivals. Those who come to investigate are sure to purchase. HAVE YOU SECURED A LOT? If not you should send a deposit and have one held till you can come and see it. $10 HOLDS A LOT FOR 30 DAYS and we will pay your actual railroad fare from your home to Chicago and return to the amount of and not exceeding 2½ per cent of what you purchase of us while here. Full line of illustrated circulars, plats and price lists sent free. WALTER THOMAS MILLS & CO., 161 La Salle St., Chicago.

The Noble Women of the W. C. T. U.

Are not a whit more anxious to gird the world with the white ribbon than we are to keep the best

DRY GOODS STORE

How well we are succeeding you can easily test by a personal visit, or by sending post card request for our new Shopping Guide or samples of anything in Dry Goods.

Address

Gundelfinger Brothers. Chicago.

HOW TO DRESS our children is fully explained and illustrated in the Gertrude Quarterly. It contains most complete description of W. C. T. U. Temple ever given. 50c yr; 15c copy. Gertrude Quarterly, Box 1088, Chicago

"Don't Tobacco Spit Your Life Away"
Is the name of a little book that tells all about Notobac, the only guaranteed cure for the tobacco habit in every form. This book is mailed free. Contains many testimonial letters, reporting cures in ten days and a gain of as many pounds. Notobac costs but a trifle and the man who wants to quit and can't had better write for the book to-day.
Address
STERLING REMEDY CO.,
Box 344, Indiana Mineral Springs, Ind.

New Temperance Programs.

An Evening with Robinson Crusoe, 16 pages 8vo.; 6 pieces of music; 3 Tableaux; many characters. Price - - - - 5c
Our Cider Entertainment. 3 Tableaux 15c
No King in America. (Patriotic.) - 10c
Other Temperance Literature as heretofore.
JULIA COLMAN,
47 Bible House, New York City.

Good Sense CORSET WAISTS
Fit all ages. Infants to Adults.
Are made of the best material and workmanship

SYLPH CYCLES RUN EASY
Hollow Tires.

Perfection of cycle manufacture; no need now to ride springless cycles or depend on tires alone for comfort. SYLPH SPRING FRAME destroys vibrat'n. Light, simple, strong. Cata. free

Rouse-Duryea Cy. Co.
77 G St., Peoria, Ill. Agts. Wanted

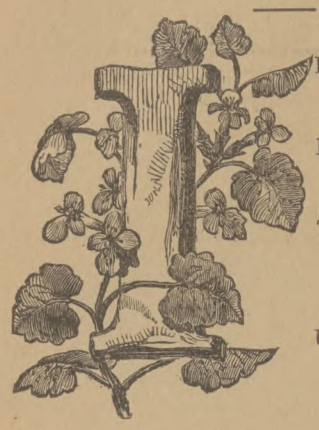
SAFEST OF ALL INVESTMENTS
CITY AND COUNTY BONDS Secured by tax lien on all property within their limits.
Descriptive Bond Lists furnished on application.
N. W. HARRIS & CO., BANKERS,
163-165 DEARBORN ST. - CHICAGO, ILL.
New York. Boston.

Our Children.

SOME JOYFUL DAY.

[For singing or recitation.]

BY M. B. B.



IF CHRIST were standing in our midst
This blessed Easter-day,
Perhaps He'd smile upon our band
In His divinest way.
The while He'd tell us ne'er to cease
Our work, nor think it done,
Until in safety, strength and peace,
Can live each mother's son.

So, just the same as though our ears
Had heard His real voice,
And just the same as though His smile,
Had made our hearts rejoice,
We'll sing and labor, yes, and pray
In this good work begun,
Until at last some joyful day
Finds safe each mother's son.

Xenia, O.

EASTER.

Christ has risen:—else in vain
All the sunshine, all the rain,
All the warmth and quickening,
And renewal of the spring.
Vain they were to charm our eyes,
Greening earth and gracious skies,
Growth and beauty, bud or bloom,
If within their fast sealed tomb
All our dearer dead must dwell,
Sharing not the miracle.

Crocus tips in shining row,
Welcome, for your sign we know,
Every bud on every bough
Has its message for us now,
Since the Lord on Easter Day
Bursts the bonds of prisoning clay,
All the springtime has a voice,
Every heart may dare rejoice,
Every grave, no more a prison,
Join the chorus, "Christ is risen!"

—Susan Coolidge.

REFORM IN FROG HOLLOW.

BY R. M. ALDEN.

(Concluded.)

The reasonableness of this plan (Mr. Kroak now reflected with some pride, as he sat on his log of antique oak) had been so apparent to the Frog council that it had been almost immediately adopted, and was faithfully carried into effect. All frogs were kept away from the bank, except at certain points designated by commissioners appointed for the purpose. And so charmingly did it result, that at the next council the recording frog announced that the number of deaths by fishing had fallen off 15.674 per cent. This was surely cause for thankfulness.

And still those families whose young were not included in that small percentage, complained of the order of things; and more reports came of the happiness of the Upper Pond, and more suggestions for moving there. But while it was apparent that in that locality there were many young frogs who had never seen a fishhook, it was discovered that three of the more venturesome ones had once taken a tour down the stream, and had been caught and carried off. So by this the plan was proved to be utterly useless. A report was even spread to the effect that more frogs were caught where there were no fishermen than where there was a plenty, and there was the added disgrace of having a perplexing and disorderly state of affairs. In the Hollow it was expected that frogs would be hooked, and so it was not so bad.

But as the discontent grew, Mr. Kroak came forward again and suggested a decree allowing all who wished to do so to remove to the Upper Pond. This having been adopted, a few had the venturesomeness to fold up their tents, sing their last evening carols under the familiar shadows, and try the experiment. But they were few.

This, then, was the condition of things when Mr. Kroak sat on his log and pondered somewhat sadly over the results of his philosophy. His theories, he reflected, were all without a flaw, and were it not for the really odious persistence of the fishermen, the execution of them would be equally pleasing. At last (I know not whether it blew from the sunshiny haunts of Lower Pond or not) the wind seemed to bring him an inspiration. Philosophy should triumph, after all. Before many minutes he had left his seat and was joining in the harmonies of the evening concert, where his somewhat hoarse voice rose as cheerfully as that of any one.

At the next council meeting he came forward with his new plan. The council always met at an especially mossy point, at the southwest corner of the pond. The councilmen had of late been surprisingly averse to taking up any matters relating to the fishhook troubles. It was difficult to see why this was so, but it was undeniable. They had formed the habit of laying on the table (which was an unusually large waunkapin leaf) all resolutions concerning the question; and whenever it showed signs of coming up they began to discuss the pensions given to old bull-frogs, or the rights of the Upper Lake frogs to the Straits of the Brook. On one occasion they adopted a resolution expressing "their deep sympathy with all the reasonable efforts which were directed against the depredations of the fishermen;" but this was all that had been heard from them for some time. One of the most interesting features was that whenever any speaker intended to oppose any and all devices for the relief of the community, he invariably began his remarks by saying that his grandfather had been a pioneer in the anti-fisherman movement, and as for himself, he was as interested in it as any one else.

But, said Mr. Kroak, under their very noses had lain the haven of refuge from all their troubles and they had failed to flee to it. What was it? The Lower Pond, to be sure. He would show in a few words the reasons why they should move there, and prepare for a long reign of peace within their borders. The Lower Pond was difficult of access to fishermen; it was not so much so as the Upper Pond, so that those who were fond of bait or afraid of injuring the fishermen, would not be troubled there; but he believed the paths of approach were so few that the number of fishhooks would fall off fully one-half. Mr. Kroak further pointed out that this would bring them a better class of fishermen, since none but those with some skill and perseverance would be likely to come. In addition to this the banks of the pond were vastly more soft and beautiful than those of the Hollow; and while some might claim that such matters were of little importance, Mr. Kroak would prefer to have reputable fishermen in his neighborhood, and have such catchings as were necessary done amid beautiful and soothing surroundings. He could not help adding that the bait would unquestionably be of a better variety; and the clearest thing of all was that this was exactly in the direction of the Upper Pond, whither the more radical frogs had urged removal. All should be satisfied and unite to help on the scheme.

Nearly all did; Mr. Kroak's plans always appeared so full of philosophy (and of course they were full of it) that the victory over all disagreeable things seemed to be gained, when one had once voted "Aye!" So one golden day of summer the removal was made, and the haunts of Lower Pond echoed with the voice of the newcomers. Mr. Kroak was a hero. Was it not the "Kroak Law" which had brought about this assured peace and prosperity? The fishermen were baffled for a time, and consequently the death list fell off encouragingly; but it did not take them long to find their way to the new quarters and begin work again—in smaller numbers, it is true, but the more persevering and the better equipped.

Our last view of Mr. Kroak is much as the first. Seated on his same log of antique oak, back in the scenes of his pollywoghood, he sat old and sad and alone. Philosophy, in which he had put his trust, had failed him. The life at Lower Pond, starting brightly at the beginning, had proved no different from the old. The frogs had dared to insist that the character of the fisherman and the number of his hooks made very little difference, while he continued his deadly work. Their children must be protected, and as the reports were renewed from Upper Pond, where fishermen never molested and where bait was not needed, the voice of the settlement rose like the wind, and they started for the haven of safety.

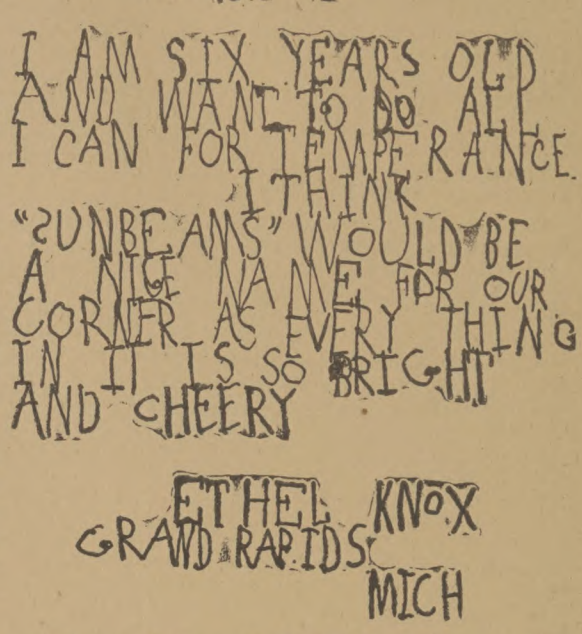
Mr. Kroak had followed them, thinking dimly as he hopped in the long procession, of how he had told them that Lower Pond was on the road to the Upper one. That was philosophy—and politics, but it failed to conform to the facts. He had followed them, I say, till his feebleness overtook him, and he sat down in his old place, and heard the voices of his companions slowly grow faint in the distance. "Is it possible," he said to himself, "that I, with my brilliant prospects and eloquent tongue, have proved to be a failure?" And as he said it he began to realize that he was not able to sit straight on his log, and in another moment he had fallen off into the green, still water.

Some dimpled, widening ripples ran out toward the edge of the pond, in the light of the evening sun; and a little water-bug who had been watching from a lily-pad wiped a tear away from her eye.

Washington, D. C.

What Shall We Call It?

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:—Of the large budget of letters received from you up to the present time, coming from all parts of the United States and from Canada, all but one have been in handwriting. Here is an exact copy of this one;



This sweet letter speaks for itself—"All I can for temperance," from a dear little one who finds everything in our corner "so bright and cheery," is a promise of the good times which even the "dear old folks" may live to see if we all use our brightest and best to help along the good work. Won't we?

Be on the lookout for the head of our column next week, for our question mark will be gone, and the answer take its place. Won't we be glad to see it!

Yours to help,

AUNT JANE.

SOFT-SHELLED NUTS.

28.

RHYMING BLANK CHARADE.

The first line rhymes with the second, the third with the fourth, and so on.

My first is a land famed for writ and ro ——
The sunny and vine-growing country called ——;
My second I make so crooked that you ——
At once, it is something that sounds like an ——;
Where my third is, there's always "a way" and ——
They abridge a boy's name by calling him ——
My fourth, so greasy and white is not ——
And if you're a Gentile, you'll often use ——.
My whole in the temperance reform is so famed
And known by you all, she needs but to be named.
The word her initials suggest is quite ——
For in all the wide world, like her there are ——!

29.

CROSS-WORD ENIGMA.

In table, not in dish,
In mackerel, not in fish,
In steamer, not in tug,
In mosquito, not in bug,
In temperance, not in drink,
In fracture, not in kink.

My whole is the anniversary of a great event of this month.

MOSQUITO.

30.

ANAGRAMS OF NOTED TEMPERANCE WORKERS.

1. Helm, don't err say yes.
2. Dare fill new cars.
3. Meet me at Villa Crynt.
4. John Zoe sat limp.
5. I'll try sell a man.
6. A dear bird, my "Wogo."

GEO. S. BAKER.

Answers in three weeks. Send all replies and original puzzles to Puzzle Editor, UNION SIGNAL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

ANSWERS TO PUZZLES PUBLISHED MARCH 24.

19. Anna Gordon, cold water, fountain.
20. Liquor.
21. Touch not; taste not; handle not.

And every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things. Cold water; cold water for me.

Correct answers: Elma Wood; Elsie M. Lippincott; Arthur R. Tuller; Mary C. Brown; Georgia Christian; Annie B. Brown; Mosquito; Mary Maule; Helen Smith; Hattie Wolfe; Naomi Coye; Elda May Abrams; Norma Morgan; Alice L. Caldwell; Curtis Clarke; Eva E. Greenhill; Leonard Hancock; Kathryn; Anson Keebler; Roy Beers; Bernice B. Gardner; Ben Rastall; Marian A. Burns; Wallace E. Dickman; Helen Smith; Lottie Arnold; Ralph Partridge; Maude Daly.

Kernels.

THE only way you can bring a child up is the way you're going yourself.

NOT long ago in London, a preacher indulged in this little bit of sarcasm over a small collection: "When I look at the congregation," said he, "I ask, Where are the poor? And when I look at the collection I ask, Where are the rich?"

ASPIRANT: "What is the chief requisite for a young lady entering the literary field?"

Editor: "Postage stamps."

CUSTOMER: "You are sure that this sideboard is really antique?"

Furniture dealer: "Yes, my dear sir, I know the man that made it."

HOUSEKEEPER: "Why don't you go to work and earn money?"

Dirty tramp: "They'd be apt to pay me in bank bills, mum, an' I'm afeared of bacteria."

A VERMONT editor has invented a new way for stirring up delinquent subscribers. He writes obituary notices of them, assuming that they must be dead, since he does not hear from them.

HE (preparing to leave): "I assure you, Miss Smarte, the time has passed very pleasantly this evening."

She (abstractedly): "Yes, it is pleasant to know that it is passed."

TEACHER: "Georgie Gazzam, what is the meaning of the word transparent?"

Georgie: "Something you can see through."

"Right. Now give an example."

"A ladder is transparent."

SHE: "Harry, another week's hard work will complete my trousseau at last, after six months' planning and toil." He: "By the way, that reminds me, I must drop in and order my wedding suit. Next Thursday is the day, isn't it?"

MAN laughs at woman for attempting to reform the world, but he lets her go on doing the reforming.

GUESS what it is? Invisible, unmusical, inedible and yet the most delicious thing known to human experience—a kiss.

A FAMOUS Brooklyn clergyman was once addressing a Sunday-school on the lesson of the day, which happened to be "Jacob's Ladder." He got along swimmingly until a little urchin in one of the back seats squeaked out: "Why did the angels have to have a ladder when they had wings?" After the inevitable laugh had subsided, the clergyman said: "Well, that is a fair question, who can answer it?" There was a pause, and then up went a pudgy fist. "Well, my little man," asked the clergyman, "why was it?" "I guess mebbe they was a moultin'," was the reply, and the address was concluded right there.

LADY (to her legal friend): "You won't charge for a question, I hope?" Lawyer: "Oh no! only for the answer."—Fliegende Blatter.

WILLING TO MIND.—Mamma (hurriedly): "Dot, I wish you'd mind the baby." Little Dot (mystified): "I don't know what he says."—Good News.

"OH, Isaac, baby has swallowed a penny!" cries mamma, in great alarm. Isaac: "Calm yourself. One would think he had swallowed a gold piece."—Le Figaro.

AN eccentric old gentleman placed in a field on his estate a board with the following generous offer painted thereon:—"I will give this field to any man who is contented." It was not long before he had an applicant. "Well, my man, you are a contented fellow?" "Yes, sir; very." "Then why do you want my field?" The applicant did not wait to reply.

THE more mind woman has the less chance she is given to express it. The new postal card for women is but two-thirds the size of that for men.

THE Philadelphia Press tells a good story as follows: The late Bishop Doane, of New Jersey, was strongly opposed to prohibition, and his sideboard was lined with brandy, wine, etc. On one occasion the Rev. Mr. Perkins, of the Sons of Temperance, dined with the bishop, who, pouring out a glass of wine, desired him to drink with him.

"Can't do it, bishop. 'Wine is a mocker.'"

"Take a glass of brandy, then."

"No. 'Strong drink is raging.'"

By this time the bishop, becoming excited, remarked to Mr. Perkins, "You'll pass the decanter to the gentleman next to you."

"No, bishop, I can't do that. 'Woe unto him that putteth the bottle to his neighbor's lips.'"

Publisher's Notes.

Strong and Helpful.

Mrs. Annie J. Bradbury, state superintendent of L. T. L. for Wisconsin, has issued a circular to her assistants, which is strong and helpful. Among other advice is the following, which we pass along for the benefit of others:

"Bring your children in touch with the Loyal Legioners of the nation through The Young Crusader. Only fifteen cents a year. You cannot afford to be without it, and if your bright girls and boys can get a long list of subscribers among their friends, so much is the work advanced. Neither can you afford to be without THE UNION SIGNAL, from which you may be constantly gathering material to keep the interest in your Legion warm and glowing.

. . . . . .

Get the children at work securing subscribers. The new form of the little monthly is very attractive, and its reading matter better than ever. The L. T. L. that will have on September 1, 1892, the largest number of subscribers, shall have a banner all its own, a present from the state superintendent. You may get Sunday-schools to take them. Why cannot your L. T. L. get a thousand subscribers?

Just Send for One.

We mean a sample of the Sunday School Lesson prepared for May 22. It is the finest we have ever issued, beautifully illustrated. We cannot do it justice, so do not attempt a further description except to say that Mrs. Helen G. Rice and Mrs. Mary Lowe Dickinson have developed the best thoughts underlying the lesson taught in the Scripture selection chosen as the theme for that day.

Let us all unite in an effort to place it in the hands of every teacher and pupil in our Sunday-schools.

The following liberal terms are offered: 100, 50cts; 500, $2; 1.000, $3.50; 2.000, $6; 5,000, $12. Add postage at the rate of 12 cents per 100. The Young Crusader and the Lesson will be sent on the following terms: 100, $1; 500, $4.75; 1,000, $9; 2,000, $15; 5,000, $35; 8,000, $48, postpaid. Send all orders to

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Free Rum on the Congo.

Read it.
Let your friends read it.
Lend it to your minister.
Present it to your Congressman.
Read it in your home.
And read it in your missionary society.
Then place it in your library.
We will send one copy on receipt of 25c.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N.
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Ye Faltering Ones,

Why do ye hesitate to send for particulars concerning our "New Plan"? It is a good plan, and commends itself at once to any one. Several of the agents now appointed are reporting most cheering results, and many are now at work making money by selling our subscription books. Write for information, and we guarantee that you will not regret it!

SUBS'N BOOK DEP'T W. T. P. A.,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Do You Want to Know what we can supply to advance your cause and ours?

Then send 2 cents for catalogue to

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

For homes,
For libraries,
For young people,
For adults,
For ministers,
For lawyers,
For men,
For women,
For temperance workers.
For Christians,
For Prohibitionists,
For license advocates,

For all classes, you can find nothing better than the collection of facts and figures entitled

The Temperance Movement.

See that all have an opportunity to read it. Price, $1.25, postpaid.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

As a man readeth, so is he. See that every one reads our temperance papers, books and leaflets.

I've washed at the tub,
And I've scrubbed the floor,
I've scoured the tin pans too; and Gold Dust

did it in half the time that any soap could do.

Sold everywhere. Cleans everything. Pleases everybody.

N. K. Fairbank & Co.,
Sole Manufacturers,
Chicago, St. Louis, New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, New Orleans, San Francisco, Portland, Me., Portland, Ore., Pittsburgh and Milwaukee.

One-third Your Life is Spent in Bed!

NO ODOR — COLD BLAST — CHICAGO — DUST ON — STUFF ON

The Art of purifying Feathers for Bedding purposes has been the subject of close study for many years, and has reached its highest development in the COLD BLAST PROCESS, by which all foreign matter, dust and the causes of odor are eliminated, and the Feathers rendered pure, clean and sweet, as well as permanently buoyant, while retaining their Feathery softness. FEATHER PILLOWS MADE OF THESE ARE HEALTHFUL. Watch for Trade Mark. Your dealer probably keeps them. If not, address

THE COLD BLAST FEATHER CO.
MAKERS OF Faultless Bedding. CHICAGO.

FREE For 30 Days. Wishing to introduce our CRAYON PORTRAITS and at the same time extend our business and make new customers, we have decided to make this Special Offer: Send us a Cabinet Picture, Photograph, Tintype, Ambrotype or Daguerotype of yourself or any member of your family, living or dead and we will make you a CRAYON PORTRAIT FREE OF CHARGE, provided you exhibit it to your friends as a sample of our work, and use your influence in securing us future orders. Place name and address on back of picture and it will be returned in perfect order. We make any change in picture you wish, not interfering with the likeness. Refer to any bank in Chicago. Address all mail to THE CRESCENT CRAYON CO. Opposite New German Theatre, CHICAGO, ILL. P. S.—We will forfeit $100 to anyone sending us photo and not receiving crayon picture FREE as per this offer. This offer is bonafide.

PERFECTION FLOUR BIN AND SIEVE

KEEPS FLOUR PERFECTLY DRY AND FREE FROM DIRT VERMIN ETC.

COMBINES BIN SIFTER PAN & SCOOP. AERATES AND PRESERVES FLOUR FROM MOLD

Avoids the great inconvenience of reaching into a barrel or sack. No scattering. Saves time and waste. Once tried you would not be without it for many times its cost. Send for circular.

Prices to hold { 25 lbs. $2.50 / 50 lbs. $3.00 / 100 lbs. $4.00 } Your dealer sells them or ought to. If he does not please write to us.

SHERMAN & BUTLER, Manufacturers, 26-28 W. Lake Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

MILLER'S HOTEL New York City, 39 West 26th St. A Prohibition Home. Patronized by W. C. T. U. workers visiting New York. Turkish, Electric, Roman Baths. Address. CHARLES H. HAYNES, Prop.

RELLSWORTH YOU Looking for a HOME or an investment where you can double your money? ELLSWORTH the new temperance suburb of Chicago offers both. Write to ELLSWORTH LAND ASS'N, Room 41, 81 Clark St., Chicago.

ALUMINUM SOUVENIR
Charm (dime size) with the Lord's Prayer coined in smallest characters, and strung on blue silk ribbon, sent free to any one sending 10 cents for sample copy of The St. Louis Magazine. Aluminum is the wonderful new metal, bright as silver, light as wood, strong as steel, will not tarnish.
St. Louis Magazine, 901 Olive St., St. Louis, Mo.

LADIES without business experience are making immense sales of Mme. McCABE'S CORSETS AND WAISTS. Send for agents' terms.
St. Louis Corset Co., St. Louis, Mo.

DRUNKENNESS cured by using BOSTON DRUG. Absolute secrecy guaranteed or money refunded. Price $1. All druggists, or by mail
W. R. BROWN & CO.,
105 Chauncey St., Boston.

A LADY WANTED
in each locality to manage Toilet Parlor at home; write, obtain names, send circulars. $5 to $15 weekly. Our Toilet Art Book Free. Send stamp. SYLVAN TOILET CO., Port Huron, Mich.

LADIES Send to the Stevens' Dish Washing Machine Co., Cleveland, for descriptive circulars of this wonderful invention. No dish or wiping cloth used; truly a great blessing to the household. Agents wanted.

LADY Agents make big wages every day With our Ladies' and Children's Specialties. Over 100 different articles. Indispensable. Catalogue Free.
G. L. ERWIN & CO., Chicago, Ill.

LADY wanted, on salary, to sell Roses, Shrubs, &c Brown Bros. Nurvm'n, Rochester, N.Y. & Chicago

HOUSEHOLD NECESSITY. Agents make big profits. Catalogue (A) and particulars free. Cline Mfg. Co., 67 W. Washington St., Chicago.

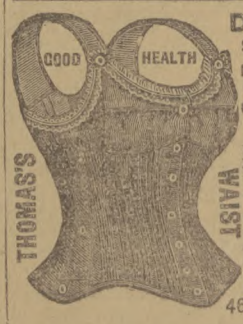
LADY AGENTS CLEAR $10 PER DAY selling my garments for ladies & children Mrs. L. E. SINGLETON, Box 665, Chicago, Ill.

10 cents pays for the best ladies' paper published for three months. Ladies' Bazar, Chicago, Ill.

"U" "WHAT I EAT, THAT I AM." U
GRANULA
AN INCOMPARABLE FOOD
Discovered by JAMES C. JACKSON, M. D., Founder of the Famous
DANSVILLE SANATORIUM,
Being the life-giving principle of WHEAT. Easily digested; readily assimilated by all. "A universal favorite wherever known."
Trial Package 36 cents, by mail postpaid. Send for our Pamphlet (free).
GRANULA MFG. CO.
DANSVILLE, N.Y.



DON'T WEAR STIFF CORSETS.
Thomas' Good Health Corset Waists BY MAIL. Ladies $1.50, Misses 1.25, Children, 60
Best for Economy, Health and Beauty. Buttoned or to clasp in front. Long or short waist. Material the very best.
Thousands mailed in the last year, with entire satisfaction to Patrons. Money cheerfully refunded if not satisfactory.
Agents wanted everywhere.
H. A. Thomas & Co., Manf'r's
465 W. Van Buren St. Chicago.

BEATTY Pianos $175. Organs $48. Want Ag'ts. Cat. free. Dan. F. Beatty, Wash'ton, N.J

"Why stand ye all the day idle?"

10 DOLLARS PER DAY

is not easily made in these times, but it can be made working for us in any locality. We have agents that have made more than $25 per day, the whole secret is we have something that every housekeeper wants and will buy at sight without any urging. If agents prefer will pay a straight salary of $75 per month and expenses. Full particulars sent free to all points where we have not already secured an agent. Exclusive territory given. Can refer to any express company in Boston as to our integrity. Address, (in full,)
STANDARD SILVERWARE CO.,
Order Dept. 127 Boston, Mass.

45 sold in '88
2,288 sold in '89
6,268 sold in '90
20,049 sold in '91
60,000 will be sold in '92

A STEEL WINDMILL and STEEL TOWER every Three Minutes.

☞ These figures tell the story of the ever-growing, ever-going, everlasting STEEL AERMOTOR. Where ONE goes OTHERS FOLLOW, and we "Take the Country."

Though sold, we were unable to make all of the 20,049 Aermotors in '91. Orders often waited 8 weeks to be filled, but now we have vastly increased our plant and are prepared promptly to plant our increase in every habitable portion of the globe.

Are you curious to know how the Aermotor Co. in the 4th year of its existence, came to make many times as many windmills as all other makers combined? How we came to originate the Steel Wheel, the Steel Fixed Tower, the Steel Tilting Tower?

1st. We commenced in a field in which there had been no improvement for 25 years, and in which there seemed no talent or ambition, and none has yet been shown except in feeble imitation of our inventions.

2d. Before commencing the manufacture, exhaustive scientific investigation and experiments were made by a skilled mechanical engineer, in which over 5,000 dynamometric tests were made on 61 different forms of wheels, propelled by artificial and therefore uniform wind, which settled definitely many questions relating to the proper speed of wheel, the best form, angle, curvature and amount of sail surface, the resistance of air to rotation, obstructions in the wheel, such as heavy wooden arms, obstructions before the wheel, as in the vaneless mill, and many other more abstruse, though not less important questions. These investigations proved that the power of the best wind wheels could be doubled, and the AERMOTOR daily demonstrates it has been done.

3d. To the liberal policy of the Aermotor Co., that guarantees its goods satisfactory or pays freight both ways, and to the enormous output of its factory which enables it to furnish the best article at less than the poorest is sold for. For '92 we furnish the most perfect bearings ever put in a windmill, and have made an exhaustive revision of the Aermotor and Towers.

If you want a strong, stiff, Steel Fixed Tower—or if you want the tower you don't have to climb (the Steel Tilting Tower) and the Wheel that runs when all others stand still, that costs you less than wood and lasts ten times as long (The Steel Aermotor) or if you want a Geared Aermotor to churn, grind, cut feed, pump water, turn grindstone and saw wood, that does the work of 4 horses at the cost of one ($100), write for copiously illustrated printed matter, showing every conceivable phase of windmill construction and work, to the AERMOTOR CO., 12th and Rockwell Sts., Chicago, or 12 Main St., San Francisco.

GALVANIZED It is not enough to make portions of a wheel of galvanized metal. That leaves exposed edges and is not so good as painting. The Steel Aermotor and Steel Tower are now galvanized after being completed, thus absolutely protected from rust and decay.

The Aermotor Pneumatic Water Supply System enables you to supply every part of your house with water without an Elevated Tank.

THE Total Abstinence Life Association
OF AMERICA
PAYS ALL HONEST LOSSES PROMPTLY and in FULL.

It furnishes to Total Abstainers the Cheapest and Most Reliable Insurance to be had.

New and liberal commissions will be paid to experienced agents in Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Michigan, California, Connecticut and Iowa.

It will pay you well to write to us.

THE TOTAL ABSTINENCE LIFE ASSOCIATION of AMERICA.
902-904 Royal Insurance Building,
CHICAGO, ILL.

PROVED

BY LIVING WITNESSES
THAT THE OWEN ELECTRIC BELT AND APPLIANCES
cure more people than any other one remedy under the sun.

NO HARM
can come from their use. A genuine current of electricity, continuous, can be made mild or strong, or reversed at the pleasure of the wearer. All of the above fully confirmed and indorsed, by hundreds who have tried them, in our

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE.
Also description, cuts, prices and other valuable information, printed in English, German, Swedish and Norwegian languages. This catalogue or a treatise on rupture cured with Electric Truss will be mailed to any address on receipt of six cents postage.

The Owen Electric Belt & Appliance Company,
MAIN OFFICE AND ONLY FACTORY,
THE OWEN ELECTRIC BELT BUILDING,
205-211 State Street, corner Adams, CHICAGO, ILL.
New York Office, 826 Broadway.
THE LARGEST ELECTRIC BELT ESTABLISHMENT IN THE WORLD.
MENTION THIS PAPER.

SEND for our list of 19 Catalogs of Music and Musical Instruments.
W. STORY, 26 Central St., Boston, Mass

Publisher's Dep't.

New Publications.

The following are the latest productions issued by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association. They will be found very helpful:

Department Leaflets.

Railroad department:

No. 1. The Traveler's Psalm. This is the 121st Psalm set to a chant, to which is added a conversation between an old farmer and his friend about to start railroading.

No. 2. The Moral Suasion Railroad.

No. 3. The Good Times Railroad.

Department of Systematic Giving:

"Tithing vs. Entertainments," by Esther Tuttle Pritchard, National superintendent. Price of all of the above 1c each, 50c per 100.

National Leaflet, No. 54, "Systematic Giving," by Esther Tuttle Pritchard.

National Leaflet L. T. L., No. 203, "Why I Never Tasted Liquor," by Edward W. Bok.

National Leaflet L. T. L., No. 205, 'Part of a Boy," by Estelle Thompson. Price of National Leaflets, 1c each, 90c per 100.

Loyal Leaflet, No. 17, Marching Song, with music. Price 1c each, per 100, 50c.

Timely Talk No. 9, "Yale and Amherst on the Effects of Tobacco on Physical Development," being a statement of the college physician of Yale University. Price, 30c per 100. Should be distributed among boys and young men everywhere.

Advance pages of the "White Ribbon Hymnal," compiled by Anna A. Gordon, being 24 pages of choice songs for the use of W. C. T. Unions neatly bound in paper. Price 5c per copy.

This is the Way!

Sow Prohibition seed in your neighbor's mind. How?

1. Send at once for samples of THE UNION SIGNAL. We will gladly furnish them for this purpose.
2. Make a list of hopefuls, and assign about a dozen each to such members as will agree to undertake the following task:
3. Give a paper to each, and ask for a careful examination as a special favor.
4. Call in three days, on each, and solicit a subscription, if possible for a year, six months, or three months.
5. If she refuses, ask if she will accept and read it (as a gift) for one month. If she consents:
6. During the last week of the month call again and solicit her subscription.
7. Keep it up; be tactful. Don't press an argument indiscreetly; but keep it up.

Take Notice.

Special editions of THE UNION SIGNAL are prepared for all special days, and extra numbers can be secured by ordering in advance. For rates on large numbers address

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

"HAVE you a copy of Thumb-nail Sketches?"

"What is that?"

"Do you not know? It is a booklet containing sketches of the workers and speakers of the W. C. T. U. who have a national and a world-wide reputation. Besides this, it has seventeen illustrations—fifteen pictures of our leaders and one of the Temple and the Temperance Hospital."

"Is it an expensive book?"

"Oh, no. You can get a copy for thirty cents."

"Well, I must have one."

You need it!
Your family needs it!
Your friends need it!
Your minister needs it!
Your children's teacher needs it!
Every thoughtful Christian person needs it!

What?

THE UNION SIGNAL.

Send for it. Introduce it to your friends and report results to

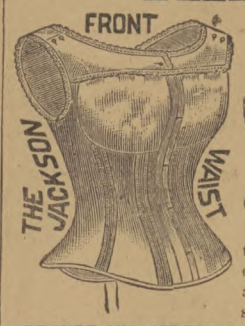
WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

If you do not know just what we have to help you, send for our catalogue.

"FREE RUM ON THE CONGO,"—you ought to know all about it. The recent treaty does not lessen the evil. Send for a copy. Price 25c.

Send for Color Samples and Price List. Patented February 23, 1886. Examine closely. Stamp on inside of Waist.

TAKE NO OTHER.



THE GENUINE
JACKSON
CORSET WAISTS

ARE MADE ONLY BY THE
JACKSON CORSET CO., Jackson, Mich.

The manufacturer's name is printed upon the boxes, and stamped upon inside of clasp in each waist. They are the most popular articles of the kind now on the market. You should have one of them.

BE SURE AND GET THE RIGHT THING. IF YOUR DEALER HASN'T IT, SEND $1.25 FOR SAMPLE.

WOMAN'S LAND ASSOCIATION.

$98,641,000 is the value of Real Estate owned by women in Chicago, as shown by the Records. For 10 years past the profits paid to women on their investments in Chicago Real Estate have amounted to over $40,000,000 each year. If none of this large sum of money belongs to YOU, or if YOU are not participating in these immense profits with those ladies, it strikes us that the wisest thing for you to do is to write at once for our 32-page Illustrated Catalogue and Plats, directing you where and how you can invest any sum of money, large or small, where it will rapidly accumulate and make you rich. A $5 investor has the same advantage as a $5,000 one. Mrs. M. A. Browning, of Bellwood, Neb., writes: "I approve of your Association. Inclosed find $5 as payment on one share. Hundreds of ladies in every state have warmly indorsed this original enterprise of women. Parents can invest for their children in their names. One lady sold enough shares in one week to pay for a lot. Less than one hundred shares remain for sale. Our Catalogue and plats are sent FREE.

Address, for particulars,
THE WOMAN'S LAND ASSOCIATION,
114 and 116 La Salle Street, - - - - - Chicago, Ill.

PEATS THE WALL PAPER MERCHANT CHICAGO

Retails all grades of WALL PAPER of the newest designs and latest colorings in small quantities; many patterns cheaper than your home dealer can buy them.

GOOD PAPER, 3c. GOLD PAPER, 5c.

Handsome parlor paper 10—12½—15c per roll with wide border and ceiling to match.

If you intend to use any WALL PAPER whatever send 10 cents for postage on samples and his guide "HOW TO PAPER" will be sent free. Agents sample books $1.

See his samples before you buy.

ALFRED PEATS, Wall Paper Merchant,
136-138 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

A Sample Cake of Soap and 128 page Book on Dermatology and Beauty; Illustrated; on Skin, Scalp, Nervous and Blood diseases sent sealed for 10c.; also Disfigurements like Birth Marks, Moles, Warts, India Ink and Powder marks, Scars, Pittings, Rednessof Nose Superfluous Hair, Pimples, etc. JOHN H. WOODBURY, DERMATOLOGIST, 125 West 42d Street, New York City. Consultation free, at office or by letter

3 Cakes for $1.00.

THE CONQUEROR

The New Salvation Army Monthly. Profusely illustrated. While essentially an American magazine for American readers, it yet gives news of Army operations all over the world.

"We warmly welcome this new magazine. The mechanical execution is of the highest class. Its illustrations are most attractive, and its matter up to the highest thought and purposes of that great movement which now embraces all nations, and seeks earnestly those most neglected, forgotten and forlorn.—UNION SIGNAL."

One Dollar Per Year.
BALLINGTON BOOTH, 111 Reade St., New York City.
Send for Sample Copy.

FAT PEOPLE You can reduce your weight 10 to 15 lbs. a month at home without starving or injury by DR. CLARKE'S Home Treatment. Proofs, Testimonials, Free. F. B. CLARKE, M. D., Drawer 133, Chicago, Ill.

PURE GUM RUBBER GOODS
Of Every Description; also,
Mackintosh Clothing;
also, Japanese Tissue,
For Mending Without Needle or Thread,
ELASTIC TIP CO.,
Headquarters 152-154 Lake St., Chicago

BAKER'S COCOA
IS ABSOLUTELY PURE. Unlike the Dutch Process, no Alkalies or Dyes used

VOSE & SONS PIANOS
EXCEL IN BEAUTY, TONE AND TOUCH.

ASTHMA
WORST CASES CURED TO STAY CURED IF UNCOMPLICATED BY ORGANIC DISEASE. Incurable cases declined.
WE WANT NAME OF EVERY ASTHMATIC. Examination free by mail.
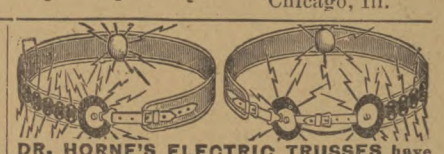
P. HAROLD HAYES, M.D.
BUFFALO, N.Y.



DR. HORNE'S ELECTRIC TRUSSES have cured 10,000 Ruptures in 15 years. The only Electric Truss in the world. 60-page book free.
DR. HORNE, INVENTOR, 180 WABASH AVE., CHICAGO.
Mention THE UNION SIGNAL.

DR. SYKES' SURE CURE FOR CATARRH
Taken internally and used locally with Insufflator. At Druggists or per mail, $1.50.
Has cured many cases pronounced hopeless by physicians. Send for Free Book 'Common Sense Talk' and numerous testimonials. They will convince you.
DR. SYKES' SURE CURE CO., 103 STATE ST. CHICAGO.

MALE AND FEMALES MAKE $3 to $5 A DAY at home working for us. Send your name on a postal card for particulars and Free Sample. Hobb's Medicine Co., Chicago, Ill.

BEST PAYING THING for Agents is our PHOTOGRAPH FAMILY RECORD PICTURE. We give you liberal terms. Address Dept. G
C. P. CORY & CO., 51 & 53 Jefferson St., Chicago

DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES CURED by Peck's Invisible Ear Cushions. Whispers heard Successful when all remedies fail. Sold by F. Hiscox, 853 B'way, N.Y. Write for book of proofs FREE

PILES Remedy Free. INSTANT RELIEF. Final cure in 10 days. Never returns; no purge; no salve; no suppository. A victim tried in vain every remedy has discovered a simple cure, which he will mail free to his fellow sufferers. Address J. H. REEVES, Box 3290, New York City, N.Y.

PARALYSIS CURED without medicine. Rheumatism, Spinal Diseases and Dropsy easily cured. Address Dr. C. I. THACHER, 6, Central Music Hall, Chicago, for a valuable book FREE to all.

RUPTURE A Positive Radical cure at Home. (Sealed) Book giving full particulars sent free. Write Dr. W. S. Rice, Box U Smithville, Jeff. Co., N. Y.

LINCOLN TEA. Guaranteed to cure Constipation, Liver and Kidney trouble. Blood and Complexion Purifier. Send for sample. Sold by all Druggists.
McCLURE DRUG CO., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

DRUNKENNESS Or the LIQUOR Habit Permanently Cured. All desire for Alcoholic stimulants quickly removed without knowledge of the patient, if desired. Treatise for home cure mailed free. Yale Hygiene Co., Box 1725, New Haven, Conn.

BABY CARRIAGES

Shipped anywhere to any one at WHOLESALE PRICES.
Latest Styles.
A $5.50 carriage for $2.95
A $12.50 " " $6.95
A $18.50 " " $9.75
Send for 40-page illustrated catalogue free.
CASH BUYERS' UNION, 362 Dearborn St., B 27 Chicago, Ill.

BABY CARRIAGES
We manufacture to sell direct to private parties at factory prices, and deliver free of charge to all points in United States. Our new Catalogue free. Address
C. T. WALKER & CO., 199 E. North Ave., Chicago, Ill.

103 E. ADAMS ST. BORSCH-OPTICIAN CONSULT US ABOUT YOUR EYESIGHT SATISFACTION GAURANTEED

"DELSARTE" Corset Waists and Braces are the best selling goods made. Sold by Agents only. Exclusive territory. Agents Wanted. DELSARTE CORSET CO., 142 W. 23d St., New York. Also 111 State Street, Chicago, Ill.

ROCK BOTTOM Prices on Dry Goods, Groceries. Everything you eat, wear or use. Send for FREE Illustrated Catalogue to M. R. EAGLE & CO., 68 Wabash Av., Chicago, Ill
We do not sell liquors in any shape.

Special Offer to Ladies:- If you secure a Life insurance policy in the American Temperance Life Insurance Association before January 1st, you pay no membership fee. Write at once for particulars. Geo. E. Godward, Sec'y, 187 Broadway N Y. City.

OUR NEW 1892 FLOWER SEED OFFER.

A Magnificent Collection of FLOWER SEEDS 200 Varieties FREE!

An Unparalleled Offer by an Old-Established and Reliable Publishing House! THE LADIES' WORLD is a mammoth 20-page, 80-column illustrated paper for ladies and the family circle. It is devoted to stories, poems, ladies' fancy work, artistic needlework, home decoration, housekeeping, fashions, hygiene, juvenile reading, etiquette, etc. To introduce this charming ladies' paper into 100,000 homes where it is not already taken, we now make the following colossal offer: Upon receipt of only 12 Cents in silver or stamps, we will send The Ladies' World for Three Months, and to each subscriber we will also send Free and post paid, a large and magnificent Collection of Choice Flower Seeds, two hundred varieties, including Pansies, Verbenas, Chrysanthemums, Asters, Phlox Drummondii, Balsam, Cypress Vine, Stocks, Digitalis, Double Zinnia, Pinks, etc., etc. Remember, twelve cents pays for the paper three months and this entire magnificent Collection of Choice Flower Seeds, put up by a first-class Seed House and warranted fresh and reliable. No lady can afford to miss this wonderful opportunity. We guarantee every subscriber many times the value of money sent, and will refund your money and make you a present of both seeds and paper if you are not satisfied. Ours is an old and reliable publishing house, endorsed by all the leading newspapers. Do not confound this offer with the catchpenny schemes of unscrupulous persons. Write to-day—don't put it off! Six subscriptions and six Seed Collections sent for 60 cents.

SPECIAL OFFER! To any lady answering this advertisement and naming the paper in which she saw it, we will send free, in addition to all the above, one packet of the new and popular imported Love-in-a-Mist, a hardy, erect-growing annual, with bright green fennel-shaped leaves, finely cut, and bearing a very pretty and curious blue flower. Plants grow about 12 inches high, are of the easiest culture, and very profuse bloomers. We will also send free one copy of our Manual of Floriculture, a book of great interest and value to all who cultivate flowers.

ANOTHER GREAT OFFER! Upon receipt of Thirty-five Cents (our regular subscription price) we will send The Ladies' World for One Year, together with our magnificent Collection of Choice Flower Seeds above described, likewise one packet of "Love-in-a-Mist" and our "Manual of Floriculture." Address:
E. H. MOORE & CO., 27 Park Place, New York.

TOKOLOGY, a complete Ladies' Guide in health and disease. Lizzie N. Armstrong writes: "If I knew I was to be the mother of innumerable children it would have no terrors for me, so great is my confidence in the science of TOKOLOGY." A mother writes: "TOKOLOGY treatment under God, saved my life in childbirth, and gave me a strong, healthy baby." Prepaid, $2.75. Sample pages free. Best terms to agents.
ALICE B. STOCKHAM & CO. 277 Madison-st. Chicago

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE ROLLERS
Beware of Imitations.
NOTICE AUTOGRAPH OF Stewart Hartshorn ON LABEL AND GET THE GENUINE HARTSHORN

STUDY LAW AT HOME.
TAKE A COURSE IN THE SPRAGUE CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL OF LAW. (Incorporated.)
Send ten cents (stamps) for particulars to
J. COTNER, JR., SEC'Y,
DETROIT, MICH.
625 WHITNEY BLOCK.

THE BERKSHIRE HILLS SANATORIUM.
For the cure of Cancer in all its forms, without the use of the knife. Book with complete information mailed free. Dr. W. E. Brown & Son No. Adams, Mass

DROPSY TREATED FREE Positively CURED with Vegetable Remedies. Have cured many thousand cases called hopeless. From first dose symptoms rapidly disappear, and in ten days at least two-thirds of all symptoms are removed. BOOK of testimonials of miraculous cures sent FREE. 10 DAYS TREATMENT FREE by mail. DR. H. H. GREEN & SONS, Specialists, ATLANTA, GA.

"Ring out the words, Wild Bells! Sound the good news, Sweet Bells!
Dr. O. P. Brown's
ACACIAN BALSAM
healed my throat, cured my lungs, stopped my cough, restored my voice!" This old, tried, Herbal Remedy loosens, heals, strengthens. Cures coughs, colds. 50 cts. and $1.

WOMEN wanted for a WOMAN'S ENTERPRISE. An early reply may make you rich, either as an investor or active worker. For particulars address
THE WOMAN'S LAND ASSOCIATION,
114 and 116 La Salle, St., Chicago, Ill.

If You Have an Eye
for beauty you can appreciate our efforts in the wall paper line. 100 samples mailed for 8 cents. Prices, 5 to 50 cents a roll.
A. L. DIAMENT & CO., 1206 Market St., Phila.

MY WIFE SAYS SHE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT FOR THE MONEY.

$12 Buys a $65.00 Improved Oxford Singer Sewing Machine; perfect working, reliable, finely finished, adapted to light and heavy work, with a complete set of the latest improved attachments free. Each machine guaranteed for 5 years. Buy direct from our factory, and save dealers and agents profit. Send for FREE CATALOGUE.
OXFORD MFG. COMPANY, DEP'T 20, CHICAGO, ILL.

FOR MANY LADIES THE
ELEGANT SHAPES AND MANY OF THEM
KABO
NO METAL EYELETS TO STAIN CLOTHES
BONES POSITIVELY DO NOT BREAK OR ROLL
ALL GUARANTEED BY CHICAGO CORSET CO.
CORSETS ARE THE ONLY ONES GIVING ENTIRE SATISFACTION.

Publisher's Notes.

Good Books

at low prices are called for on every side. We respond to the call and enumerate here a few of the best to be had for money.

STORIES OF THE MARCH, Mary Allen West, cloth, 320 pages, prettily illustrated. A collection of an odd three-score brief, pointed stories in prose and poetry. The frontispiece shows a youthful damsel beseechingly caressing the cheek of "grandma," with the urgent appeal, "Tell me a story, please." The book has been prepared in response to that appeal from the young in the nursery and at the fireside. It will brighten you up to read some of these stories aloud to the young folks. By looking at the list of authors you will find many of the best writers represented. Not only are they "Stories of the March," they are also stories written on the march, hence are full of vim and enthusiasm. Send for the book, it will do you good. Price reduced to 75 cents.

DRIFTWOOD, Mary Lowe Dickinson. Gathered from the tides of sentiment in favor of temperance, purity, chivalry and truth. Over 300 pages filled with bright stories for young and old. The author allowed us to select from a number of her productions whatever we pleased and we took pains to get the very best of what was offered. Considering the high repute of the author, this guarantees a book of unusual attractiveness. The book contains reading matter sufficient in quantity and quality to keep a large family in good humor for a month! A wise man said once that "A merry heart doeth good like a medicine." Suppose you try some of the merry-making "prescriptions" of the book! Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HYGIENE OF THE HOME, Susan Burr Barnes. Cloth, 231 pp. This book should be in every W. C. T. U. home. It is the result of the author's personal studies and experience, and it discusses preventives of disease and death. If the many now laboring under physical ailments, who secure little or no help from physicians and medicines, would carefully study the principles of this book they would soon share the experience of the author, who recovered from lasting illness by following nature's laws. The book tells how to regain and retain health, and discusses many of the questions kindred to health, heredity, purity, etc. It is a book that cannot fail to help and cheer the reader. Price $1.

FREE RUM ON THE CONGO, W. T. Hornaday. Paper, 144 pp. Introductory letter by Hannah Whitall Smith. The curse of the liquor traffic is far more deadly than the slave trade ever was, and it is fast demoralizing poor Africa. "Christian" America and England will some day be judged responsible for the bottled and barreled woe it sends out from its shores to the ignorant heathen. But the nation is made up of individuals, and this lays the responsibility at our own doors. Every man and woman has a voice which can be raised for justice, and we can all do something to stop the accursed traffic. The book suggests methods for stopping it. Let it be placed in the bands of every minister and Sunday-school official. The mayor of your place ought to have it; you should read it yourself. Local W. C. T. Unions will do a good work by voting an appropriation by which to purchase a number of copies for distribution. The price is 25c. While the supply lasts we will send five for $1; twelve for $2; twenty for $3.50, postpaid. At these rates no union is too poor to purchase a number.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Do You Know?

No. You do not know how very helpful the latest book written by Miss Willard will prove to those who secure it. Note the following facts:

It is a book of especial value to Methodists, because it tells of the origin and growth of THE Methodist seat of learning in the West—the Northwestern University—and gives illustrated sketches of the bishops and the leading dignitaries of the church who have been connected with it.

It is of especial value to temperance workers, as it proves what has often been claimed—that a town can prosper without the liquor traffic.

It is written in Miss Willard's best vein. Full gilt, 180 pictures. Price $1.50. You want it!

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Do You Want a Photograph

of one of the National W. C. T. U. leaders? You can have it. Write to us for information, and we will tell you how.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION

IN REPLY TO YOUR FAVOR.

161 LA SALLE ST.,

Chicago, 4/11, 1892

Dear friend,

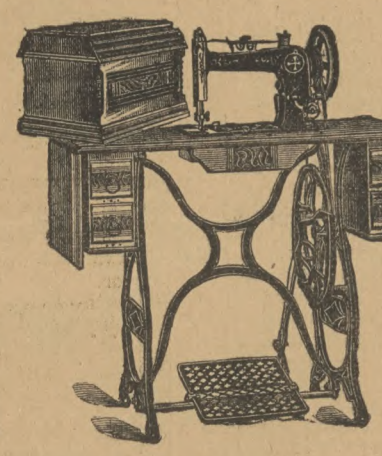
In answer to your inquiries, I am pleased to be able to report that "A Young Woman Journalist" is now in the hands of the binder and will soon be ready for delivery. It will be very suitable as a gift to your young friend - of engrossing interest to literary people, journalists and philanthropists, and will be in general demand. Its editors, Miss Willard and Lady Henry Somerset, will give it prestige.

We shall advertise it next week.

Yours truly,
Mrs. F. H. RASTALL, Mgr.

ONLY $20!

ONLY $20!



ONLY $20!

FOR THIS FINE

UNION SIGNAL SEWING MACHINE

If sent with twenty new names as yearly subscribers to THE UNION SIGNAL.

Sent at Receiver's Expense.

FOR $23.00 we will send it, freight prepaid, to any address in the United States, together with a FULL SET OF ATTACHMENTS. This machine is highly commended by all to whom we have shipped it.

Send orders to

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION,
161 La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

DO YOU WANT FACTS?

And do you desire others should know the facts in regard to the liquor traffic? You cannot do better than by securing a copy of that wonderful book,

The Temperance Movement

By Ex-SENATOR BLAIR.

It discusses
Alcohol and Health,
Alcohol and Crime,
Alcohol and Poverty,
License or Prohibition?
Alcohol and Wealth,
Alcohol and Labor,
The Forces Against Alcohol,
Temperance Organizations,
The Church.

It is a very valuable compendium of information. Every thinker and ever leader in all causes should read it. It is a book of 583 pages, beautifully illustrated. We offer it, bound in cloth, at the ridiculously low price of $1.25 postpaid.

Address WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Signal Notes.

THE temperance movement is gaining a hold among French Christians.

FIVE hundred children under ten years of age were arrested in London last year for drunkenness.

ONE of the most active and best informed Glasgow ministers has given it as his solid conviction that some thirty thousand men and women go to bed drunk in Glasgow every Saturday night.

MISSISSIPPI has passed a law prohibiting the sale of cigarettes to persons under eighteen years of age, also against smoking them in public places or in the vicinity of combustible material.

"EVERY ONE to his taste." The Patagonian lights his pipe, throws himself down with his face toward the ground, and swallows several mouthfuls of smoke in a manner which produces a kind of intoxication lasting several minutes.

FIVE thousand doctors of England and Ireland have signed a declaration of opinion that the habit of opium-smoking or opium-eating is morally and physically debasing, and is immediately associated with many and grave dangers to the well-being of the people of India.

THE Scottish Universities Commission have issued regulations, which only await the approval of the Queen in Council, giving power to admit women for instruction and graduation in their respective courses. This is a wide opening for women, and a great step in advance for conservative old Scotland.

THE Norwegian plan of running saloons (if saloons must be run!) commends itself in practice and results. A monopoly is given to a society of shareholders who must pay into the city treasury all profits over five per cent. This surplus is applied to deserving charities and benevolent institutions. Women are not permitted to be employed, nor youths under sixteen. Attendants are clad in uniform, each man with a number on his collar like a policeman. The bars are plainly fitted up, clean and respectable. There are no seats, private compartments or attractions of any sort for loitering on the premises. These saloons cannot be opened before eight o'clock in the morning, nor kept open after ten in the evening. It is a conclusive fact, founded upon experience, that the traffic in alcoholic beverages has been greatly reduced and drunkenness curtailed, since the introduction of this system in Norway.

SAYS Chairman Samuel Dickie of the National Prohibition Committee: "The Prohibition party is doing more work and better work during these spring months than it has ever before done at a corresponding period of the year. There is activity and hope and courage everywhere. The fusion idea seems to be pretty generally abandoned, and the determination to make an aggressive and vigorous campaign characterizes our workers in all parts of the country. Our meetings are large, our newspapers increasing in influence and in their aggregate circulation. Our party committees were never so well sustained financially as at present. Where committees, National, state and county, had one dollar at command four years ago, it can be demonstrated that we have ten to-day. With more money, better organization, and an equal determination of purpose, the party is certain to make the campaign of 1892 a memorable one."

English spelling is the worst in the world. Millions of dollars are wasted each year in the writing and printing of useless letters. The education of our children is retarded and the progress of our people is hampered by our cumbrous, illogical, misleading orthografy. The scholarship of the world is almost a unit in demanding a change. The American Philological Association has recommended the following RULES FOR NEW SPELLINGS, and a resolution has been introduced in Congress, instructing the Public Printer to conform to them in all printing for the government:

1. Drop UE at the end of words like dialogue, catalogue, etc., where the preceding vowel is short. Thus spell demagog, epilog, synagog, etc.
2. Drop final E in such words as definite, infinite, favorite, etc., where the preceding vowel is short. Thus spell opposit, preterit, hypocrit, requisit, etc.
3. Drop final TE in words like quartette, coquette, cigarette, etc. Thus spell cigaret, roset, epaulet, vedet, gazet, etc.
4. Drop final ME in words like programme. Thus spell program, oriflam, gram, etc.
5. Change PH to F in words like phantom, telegraph, phase, etc. Thus spell alfabet, paragraf, filosofy, fonetic, fotograf, etc.
6. Substitute E for the difthongs Æ and Œ when they have the sound of that letter. Thus spell eolian, esthetic, diarrhea, subpena, esofagus, atheneum, etc.

☞ If you would array yourself on the side of progress, adopt the foregoing in all that you write, and especially in all that you PRINT.

Good Cooking

Is one of the chief blessings of every home. To always insure good custards, puddings, sauces, etc., use Gail Borden "Eagle" Brand Condensed Milk. Directions on the label. Sold bp your grocer and druggist.

TAKE THE HINT.

WHENE'ER an anxious group is seen
Around some monthly magazine
Or paper that is daily whirled
To every quarter of the world,
And merry peals of laughter rise
As this or that attracts the eyes,
The smiling crowd, you may depend,
Above some illustrations bend
That advertise the strength and scope
And purity of IVORY SOAP.

But while they smile or praise bestow
And wonder whence ideas flow,
The fact should still be kept in mind
That people of the knowing kind
Will heed the hints or lessons laid
In rhymes and pictures thus displayed,
And let no precious moments fly
Until the IVORY SOAP they try,
And prove on garments coarse and fine,
The truth of every sketch and line.

COPYRIGHT 1891, BY THE PROCTER & GAMBLE CO.

··NEXT TO BEING THERE!··

Every Loyal Methodist would enjoy a visit to the GENERAL CONFERENCE at Omaha. Not One in a Thousand can possibly attend, but

THE DAILY ADVOCATE

Will give a Complete Portraiture of the Proceedings. Every motion, every remark, every speech, every memorial, every resolution, every amendment, every enactment will be printed in THE DAILY ADVOCATE; as also every ballot taken in the elections, and every great sermon and fraternal address by delegated visitors from other religious bodies—

:::::ALL FOR $1.25!:::::

A Large Eight-page Daily! It will be freely illustrated with cuts and sketches of interesting persons, buildings, etc., etc. Who can afford to do without the Daily? SUBCRIBE EARLY, so as to secure the first numbers promptly. Order through your Pastor, or send your name to the publishers, CRANSTON & STOWE, Cincinnati, Chicago, St. Louis.

PILES CURED FREE, New, Painless, Certain. Gives instant relief and lasting cure—never returns. To prove it we will send a trial package FREE, to any address. PYRAMID DRUG COMPANY, Box 35, ALBION, MICHIGAN.

BUY A SUMMER HOME ON THE SHORES OF

Imperial Lake Geneva, Wis.

We offer in parcels of 100 feet and upward BEAUTIFUL RESIDENCE SITES. All prices, all sizes and easy terms.

GRAND TERRACE ADDITION

For plats and further particulars address PRATT BROTHERS, 508 Chamber of Commerce, cor. Washington and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.

Send to 319 W. 45th St., N.Y., for Samples of GARFIELD TEA Overcomes results of bad eating; cures Sick Headache; restores Complexion; cures Constipation.

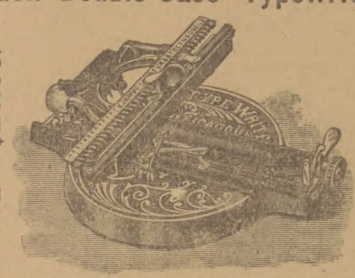
Odell Double-Case Typewriter.

ONLY $20.00.



50,000 IN USE.

NO TYPEWRITER will equal the work of our Double-Case for clean impression, perfect alignment, and number of copies of manifold at one impression.

Our new machine has 78 characters, and is the only one where a capital or small letter can be obtained without changing the position of the hand.

To any subscriber to THE UNION SIGNAL we will send the Typewriter upon receipt of Five Dollars. The balance to be paid in installments of $5 each, 30 days apart. The machine can be returned if it does not do just as we say it will.

ODELL TYPEWRITER CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

ARE YOU SUITED TO A T

IF NOT perfectly satisfied with what you are drinking

TRY KIKU-NO-HANA

It is an uncolored Japan Tea, and sent by mail or express, prepaid, anywhere in the United States.

Put up in pound packages. 75c. each. Address

"THE ENTERPRISE,"

Evanston, Illinois.

Send Postal card for 20-page pamphlet, "A Cup of Tea," which will be forwarded free.

5000 LADY AGENTS WANTED FOR DARKNESS AND DAYLIGHT

or LIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF NEW YORK LIFE

A WOMAN'S thrilling story of Gospel, Temperance, and Rescue work "In His Name" in the great under-world of New York. By Mrs. HELEN CAMPBELL. Introduction

By Rev. Lyman Abbott, D.D.

A wonderful book of Christian love and faith. 250 remarkable illustrations from flash-light photographs of real life. 31st thousand. 5,000 more Agents Wanted,—Men and Women. $200 a month. ☞ Experience and capital not necessary, for We Teach All. Give Credit and Extra Terms, and Pay Freights. Outfit free. Write for Circulars to A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

FREE by return mail, full descriptive circulars of MOODY'S NEW and MOODY'S IMPROVED TAILOR SYSTEMS OF DRESS CUTTING. Revised to date. These, only, are the genuine TAILOR SYSTEMS invented and copyrighted by PROF. D.W. MOODY. Beware of imitations. Any lady of ordinary intelligence can easily and quickly learn to cut and make any garment, in any style, to any measure, for ladies, men and children. Garments guaranteed to fit perfectly without trying on. Address MOODY & CO. CINCINNATI, O.

Just published, 12 Articles on Practical Poultry Raising, by FANNY FIELD, the greatest of all American writers on Poultry for Market and

POULTRY for PROFIT.

Tells how she cleared $449 on 100 Light Baahmas in one year; about a mechanic's wife who clears $300 annually on a village lot; refers to her 60 acre poultry farm on which she

CLEARS $1500 ANNUALLY.

Tells about incubators, brooders, spring chickens, capons, and how to feed to get the most eggs. Price 25 cts. Stamps taken. Address DANIEL AMBROSE, 45 Randolph St., Chicago

SAVE MONEY

SAVE $40.00 ON NEW $140.00

BICYCLES

New, Latest Pattern $140 Bicycles for $100. Cheaper grades in proportion; cash or time. Agents wanted.

A. W. GUMP & CO., Dayton, Ohio.

BICYCLES, GUNS & TYPEWRITERS taken in exchange.

GOLD Eyeglasses, 1 pair sent postpaid any address. $2 Worth $8, with chain, 50 cts. extra. Satisfaction guaranteed. All kinds of optical goods. Agents wanted. Particulars on application. Add.

N. W. OPTICAL CO. 17-19-21 Quincy St., Chicago, Ill

☞ See Name "EVER READY" on back of each DRESS STAY you buy. Take none but them.

YPSILANTI DRESS STAY MFG. CO., Ypsilanti, Michigan.

MISS BEACH'S Curling Fluid

Keeps the hair in curl for days Innocent as cologne. A toilet necessity. Not sent on trial.

30,000 Ladies have Endorsed It

At druggists or prepaid 50c.

LADY AGENTS wanted.

DENISON CHEMICAL CO., 56 (H) LaSalle St., Chicago.

LITTLE GEM FOLDING BAG.

The above cut represents a Folding Bag, so small when done up that it may be concealed in the hand or carried in the pocket, and strong enough to carry fifty pounds weight. Price, 50c. $3.50 per doz. Agents Wanted.

THE WORLD'S SPECIALTY CO.

Manufacturers of Novelties and Patented Articles.

ROOM 504, 85 DEARBORN ST., CHICAGO.

THE UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION — FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND

Vol. XVIII.—No. 16.] CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, April 21, 1892. [Price $1.00 per Year in Advance.

Miss Ursula D Herrick
2419 19th St
9ne92

FOR YOU! WHAT? OUR LATEST BOOK WHY? BECAUSE it WILL HELP YOU! LISTEN!

A YOUNG WOMAN JOURNALIST

Is a delightful book; Instructive to the Young; delightful to those no longer young. It is edited by LADY HENRY SOMERSET AND MISS FRANCES E. WILLARD.

It contains Miss Ames' letters from Europe, three of the literary papers she wrote,

MISS WILLARD'S SERMON or FUNERAL ORATION

And much more of Interest. Beautifully illustrated, PRICE $1.50.

Send orders to WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

N. B.—Agents wanted.

WOMAN'S SYNDICATE

We own $500,000 worth of property at South Waukegan; we bought it at wholesale and will sell it at retail after it advances in value

OUR PROFIT SHARING INVESTMENT BONDS

which are based on this property are a device which allow all to share in the large profits that will be made.

These bonds will be taken backby us at any time in payment for lots, at their face value, with such profits added as may be earned at the time. With each advance in the value of our lots the series of bonds then for sale is closed and the amount of the advance credited to each purchaser of bonds up to that date. Then a new series begins, and so on.

TO ILLUSTRATE:—If by June 1st, we shall have sold $50,000.00 worth of bonds and on account of the location of a factory, or for any other reason our property should advance in value ten per cent, or $50,000, each bondholder will receive credit for $5.00 for each and every bond held by her, and so on as often as the property increases in value; and when land is sold, both principal and profits are returned to the bondholders.

Bonds are Ten ($10.00) Dollars each and

ARE SOLD ONLY TO WOMEN.

South Waukegan is certain to become the greatest manufacturing town in the West on account of the low freight rates. The Washburn & Moen Mfg. Co., the largest concern of its kind in the world, will soon start their great plant. They will give employment to 4,000 workmen. The U. S. Sugar Refinery have $750,000 invested in buildings They will be ready to open up soon, and will employ 550 workmen. The Starch Works have a capacity of 14,000 bushels of corn per day and will employ 250 workmen. OTHER FACTORIES ARE SURE TO FOLLOW.

These three factories alone will bring 20,000 people to live at South Waukegan.

Our lots are all within ten minutes' walk of all the factories. They will advance rapidly in value after the factories start.

The deeds to our property and all money are held by the Commercial Loan and Trust Co., of Chicago, as Trustees for the purchasers of these bonds.

ABSOLUTELY SAFE AND NO LIABILITY.

Send a deposit, no matter how small, say how many bonds you want, and we will reserve them until you can arrange your money matters to make the payment. THOSE WHO BUY NOW WILL MAKE THE MOST MONEY.

MANAGERS:

MRS. R. A. EMMONS, Sec'y Woman's Lecture Bureau of the W. C. T. U.
REV. HENRIETTA G. MOORE, National Lecturer of the W. C. T. U
MRS. J. B HOBBS, of the W. C. T. U.

Our circulars give full information and are sent free on request. Make checks, drafts or money orders payable to

THE WOMAN'S LAND SYNDICATE, 161 LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO.

SOUTH WAUKEGAN

NO SALOONS

ANOTHER LARGE FACTORY

Located at the junction of the two railroads, on ground marked "Factory Sites" on our plats.

The Lanyon Zinc Oxide Co.

will erect 7 large steel buildings, the smallest one 80 x 150 feet, 3 stories high; a vast number of workmen will be employed. Already 100 carloads of material have been purchased.

200 of the FINEST LOTS in the Town in one body are to be SOLD ONLY TO WOMEN And a FACTORY LOCATED near by that will employ only women.

A clause in every deed FOREVER BANISHES THE ACCURSED SALOON, thus insuring ABSOLUTE TEMPERANCE FOREVER, and the best class of inhabitants.

To those who come to live at SOUTH WAUKEGAN we will give a contract agreeing in event of death to give the property bought of us ABSOLUTELY FREE to the heirs of deceased.

Lots in Worcester when the Washburn & Moen Co. located there, could be bought for . . . $200
The same lots are now worth in some instances $15,000
Lots in South Chicago in 1880, when the Illinois Steel Co. located there, could be bought for $150
The same lots are now worth in some instances $20,000

Lots in SOUTH WAUKEGAN with the Washburn & Moen Mfg. Co., the U. S. Sugar Refinery, the Starch Works, and the Lanyon Zinc Oxide Co., all of which will be in operation this summer, and will employ fully 6,000 workmen, can now be bought for $200, $250, $300, $350, $400 and in some instances $500 and $600, payable one-tenth cash, balance in 30 equal monthly payments.

INVEST NOW, IT WILL MAKE YOU RICH.

Lauren A. Perkins, of Xenia, Ohio, has bought lots in South Waukegan, and has already moved his business. Address him at Waukegan, Ill. Every one that visits South Waukegan buys lots.

Send a deposit no matter how small, say what price you want to pay, and have best unsold lots reserved for 60 days. We will return money if you are not satisfied after investigating. Our plats and pamphlets give full information. They are sent free on application.

MORRIS, GANSE & CO., 1300 CHAMBER OF COMMERCE BUILDING, CHICAGO, ILL.

EASTER DAY.

Fittingly observed at the National Bichloride of Gold Institute.

To the patients under treatment at the National Bichloride of Gold Institute, corner Hoyne avenue and Monroe street, Easter Sunday had a double significance. They were reminded that they had not only a spiritual but a physical Savior. At this institute some of the brightest men of Chicago are undergoing treatment for the liquor habit.

A number of citizens visited the institute yesterday afternoon and were shown through the spacious, elegantly appointed building devoted to the noble work of reclaiming the slaves of King Alcohol. Only a glance at the earnest, honest faces of the men as they received the evening "shot" was needed to show how thoroughly in earnest they were in their desire to break their chains. Only a glance was needed (at those who had passed through the hands of the skillful physicians in charge of the institute and were ready to "graduate") to show that they were freed from their bondage! At 3:30 Dr. Thompson, the president of the institute, delivered a touching address to the patients, in which he said that neither the hypodermic syringe nor medicine could reach the heart, but that faith in the divine power only could save a man after the physician had done his work and removed the appetite for liquor. Dr. Thompson is peculiarly fitted for the work in which he is engaged. A devout Christian and total abstainer himself, his heart and soul seem to be in the work of reclaiming the victims of strong drink.

An institute has been established at Hoyne avenue and Monroe street, where Dr. Mark M. Thompson and his staff of assistants are treating with wonderful success victims of the alcoholic habit. It is not a hospital but a home; no private residence in the city is more comfortably or elegantly furnished; from the basement to the attic there is nothing to remind the patient that he is anywhere but at home. At all hours of the day wives and mothers of patients visit the institute, and it seems really more like a large family than anything else. A fine piano, a reading-room, and library are at the disposal of the patients at all times, and the whole house is furnished with elegance and taste.

Doctors, lawyers, and in fact men from every station in life have been received and treated at this institution since its inception, and ninety-nine out of every hundred have been cured. Dr. Thompson has been treating victims of the liquor habit for the last seven years, and has yet to learn of a single patient who has suffered the least harm; on the contrary hundreds can testify to the benefits received from the treatment.

The general offices of the institute are at Nos. 17 to 21 Quincy street, where arrangements can be made for special treatment. Business men or others can be treated at their homes or offices if necessary by making arrangements at the office of this company.

The treatment of the alcoholic habit as a disease is no longer an experiment. Thousands of men from all parts of the country can testify that it is a grand success. Let the good work go on.—Chicago Tribune, April 19.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

NEWS NOTES AND EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS
EDITORIAL ARTICLES: Our Bill of Fare—The Mormon Question—A Day with Whittier—Thanks to Dr. Parkhurst—Personal Liberty 8, 9
TEMPLE QUESTION-BOX 9
WATCH-TOWER 9
CONTRIBUTED: Poem, A Battle Hymn, by Mrs. Merrill E. Gates—Lady Henry Somerset's Farewell—Prohibition in Maine, by Neal Dow—The Personal Equation in Temperance Work, by Elizabeth Stuart Phelps Ward—World's Fair Progress, by B. V. Cushman, M. D.—Saloons and Railroad Men, by T. D. Crothers, M. D.—Oakland W. C. T. U. Coffee House, by M. G. C. Edholm 2, 3, 4, 5
CORRESPONDENCE: Mrs. Leavitt's Word from South America—Temperance Temple Items 5, 6
THE HOUSEHOLD: Poem, Don't Stop at the Station Despair—"I Will Make you Fishers of Men"—Against the Kingdom of Darkness 7
QUEEN'S GARDENS 10
NEWS FROM THE FIELD: Maine, Kansas Notes, District of Columbia Dots, Delaware Jottings, New York State News—News in a Nutshell 10, 11, 12
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS: Concerning Literature—School Savings Banks—Temperance Temple Receipts 12
PUBLISHER'S DEPARTMENT 13, 15, 16
OUR CHILDREN: Poem, A Natural Interpretation—A Modern Daniel—Cardinal Manning's Pledge—Aunt Jane's Cozy Corner—Soft-Shelled Nuts 14
KERNELS 15

Our Library Table.

The beauties and wonders of California have been sounded in varying key-notes by enthusiastic visitants to that land of sunshine and flowers. To the list of volumes thus written, P. C. Remondina, M. D., has added THE MEDITERRANEAN SHORES OF AMERICA. SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA. ITS CLIMACTIC, PHYSICAL, AND METEOROLOGICAL CONDITIONS. The book, though bristling with technicalities, is valuable reading, discoursing as it does of the physical geography, the climatology in its relation to health and disease, the meteorology and mineralogy of that country, with interesting descriptions of the mode of life there. Forty-five valuable engravings and two double-page maps complete the book.

The F. A. Davis Co., Publishers, 1231 Filbert street, Philadelphia. Price $1.25 in cloth; 75 cents, paper.

THE CRUISE OF THE MYSTERY, by Louise Seymour Houghton. "The Mystery" is the name of a boat given up to McAll mission work in France. The character studies are from life and the details of religious experience all strictly true. The author has written this beautiful story of a cruising vessel that carried as its store the Bread of Life to starving souls, to aid in the project of the purchase of a house boat for mission work on the French rivers. She knows well whereof she writes, having been actively engaged in the work in Paris. The frontispiece of the book is a picture of Dr. McAll in his study, and the narrative is further illustrated by pictures of French scenery and French people, with a map of the coast, showing the route of the mission boat.

The American Tract Society, 150 Nassau street, New York City. Price, $1.25.

Annie L. Hannah has written a charming story for young people called ROY'S OPPORTUNITY. The heroes and heroines are "real" folks—not "the kind one reads about." The author evidently understands boy and girl nature, and many of her pen pictures provoke to laughter and to tears. The teaching of the book leads to the higher spiritual and moral truths, yet without any tendency to unnaturalness in the lives of its characters. Published by the American Tract Society, 150 Nassau St., New York City.

THE COMING CLIMAX IN THE DESTINIES OF AMERICA, is the title of a book of serious tone, by Lester C. Hubbard. Newspaper editorials and paragraphs, magazine articles, and many of the recent publications, speak a growing anxiety in the hearts of the people for the near future of the American nation. Mr. Hubbard, in the above named work, utters a fearless warning of a coming disaster, as terrible in its nature, he states, and as far-reaching as the civil war, for the reason that "Republican freedom and a triumphant plutocracy cannot co-exist in the same nation. They are ever in irreconcilable antagonism, and an irrepressible conflict will rage between them until one or the other is absolutely annihilated." In the intense earnestness of the author, the book is somewhat pessimistic in tone, but it evidences a careful study of the problems that are vexing the nation to-day, and a spirit of loyalty to American liberty in its deepest and widest meaning.

Charles H. Kerr & Co., Publishers, 175 Dearborn St., Chicago. Price 50c.

JASON EDWARDS, AN AVERAGE MAN, by Hamlin Garland, is a sad story of a farmer-hero, well named "an average man," since thousands are battling as he battled with the two dread enemies of our laboring classes—low wages and high rents. The book lacks, as real life does, the extravagant touches of romance and the disproportionate amount of high tragedy often coloring books of fiction, and it is the stronger in character depiction for that lack. It is a story above average for average people.

Arena Publishing Company, Boston.

THE THORN IN THE FLESH, OR A RELIGIOUS MEDITATION ON AFFLICTION, by J. W. Etter, D. D., with an introduction by Bishop John F. Hurst, D. D., LL.D. This is a little volume of about one hundred pages, that will receive at the hands of its readers, in all probability about an equal share of commendation and criticism. It is very positive and somewhat odd in its disposition of sickness, and the kindred ills all flesh is heir to. Men who irreverently speak of a "devil of a toothache" have but to reverse the impatient sentence and quote the author of this book, for he says: "Diseases are messages from hell . . . . . Our afflictions are from the same source. A boil is a devil in the flesh; a toothache, a devil in a tooth; a headache is a devil ache; men say they 'catch a bad cold,' when they mean that they catch 'a bad devil,'" etc. But the author has said some good things, which have strength and cheer for suffering ones.

W. J. Shuey, Publisher, Dayton, Ohio.

WHAT?

Why, the beautiful

Souvenir Spoon

which we have been preparing for our workers and all making a collection of spoons. Could it be more complete in design? It shows the beginning of the Great Reform in the bowl, where is pictured the little Crusade Church in Hillsboro, whence it sprang.

The culmination is emblemized in the World, belted with the White Ribbon at the extreme end, while the Medallion of the President of the National and the World's W. C. T. U. is embowered in the National Floral Emblem, the trailing arbutus.

On the reverse side are the World's Floral Emblem, the water lily, as also are the initials of the great Official Publishing House, which secured the production of the spoon.

Of course, every one will want one or more of these spoons—want them for personal use and as gifts. And we have decided to reduce the profits on the same to the lowest point of safety, so as to enable more to buy them.

NOTICE.—They are offered at a lower price than any sterling silver spoon on the market. Here are our rates for the different styles, all made of Solid Sterling Silver:

TEA SPOONS

For single spoon,	$ 2.25
Per set of 6, - -	12.50
With bowl gilded,	2.75
All gilded, - - - -	3.25

ORANGE SPOONS.

For single spoon, -	2.50
With bowl gilded,	3.00
All gilded, - - - -	3.50

AFTER DINNER COFFEE SPOONS.

For single spoon, -	1.50
With bowl gilded,	1.75
All gilded,- - - -	2.00

HAVE YOU ANY USE FOR MONEY?

If so, we have a plan of our own which will put money in your pocket. It practically amounts to just this.

WE TAKE THE RISKS OF BUSINESS

WE FURNISH YOU CAPITAL

YOU TAKE NO RISK

YOU INVEST NO CAPITAL

YOU REAP THE BENEFITS

by becoming our solicitor for "CHILDHOOD; ITS CARE AND CULTURE," or "GLIMPSES OF FIFTY YEARS." With which would you prefer to work?

: : PLEASE STATE YOUR CHOICE : :

And we will send terms with full details of the plan. Assuredly, this is an offer which it is to your advantage to investigate. You can make more money in this business, if rightly conducted, than in any other and you can do much good. Send for details at any rate.

IT COSTS BUT A POSTAL CARD.

ADDRESS SUBSCRIPTION BOOK DEPARTMENT,
WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUB. ASS'N,
161 LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO.

STOP AND READ THIS TWICE

We desire to call your attention to

• • • The Safest Investment you can make

The opportunity will not be long offered, as the small amount unsold will soon be taken. We refer to the stock of the

Woman's Temperance Publishing Association

It has an Established Business
Capital Stock, $125,000

Absolutely Non-Assessable
Dividends Paid Annually

PRICE PER SHARE, $25

ADDRESS ALL INQUIRIES TO WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION
161 LA SALLE STREET, CHICAGO ILL.

THE UNION SIGNAL

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION — FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Vol. XVIII.—No. 16.] CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, April 21, 1892. [Price $1.00 per Year in Advance.

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

Amelia B. Edwards, the noted Egyptologist, is dead.

Chicago's new city council was initiated Monday night.

Admission to the Columbian Fair grounds is now twenty-five cents.

Over 90,000 incandescent lamps for the Columbian Exposition have been contracted for.

It is reported that Dr. and Mrs. Lyman Abbott have connected themselves with the Salvation Army.

The New York assembly passed a bill on Friday giving women the right of suffrage in all state elections.

Joseph Cook visited Chicago last week and made a strong argument for closing the Columbian Exposition on Sunday.

An excellent scientific temperance education law has just been passed by the legislature of Nova Scotia. This is the first one for Canada.

The largest number of emigrants that ever crossed the Atlantic in one ship, 2,493, arrived at Baltimore on the steamer Oldenburg last Thursday.

Saloon-keepers and their friends tied up all the rapid transit lines in Sioux City, Ia., April 17, as a revenge on the new prohibition city government.

A sad catastrophe occurred at Hampstead railway station near London, April 18, in which eight persons were killed and thirteen seriously wounded.

Albert G. Porter, of Indianapolis, has received instructions from our government to resume his duties as United States minister to Italy and will leave shortly for Rome.

Photographs of Swift's new comet discovered a month ago were taken last week from the Lick University at Mt. Hamilton, California. The distance was computed at 100,000,000 miles.

The steamship Conemaugh, laden with 280,000 pounds of flour for the Russian famine sufferers, left New York Monday for Philadelphia, where her cargo will be completed and whence she will sail for Russia.

The United States government has paid $25,000 to the families of the three Italians who were killed last year at New Orleans. It is believed that this act of comity will restore the former pleasant relations between the two countries.

A new organization, called the Woman's Dormitory Association, has been formed in Chicago, whose purpose is to erect a building for the accommodation of women visitors to the Columbian Exposition, especially those of restricted means. It is proposed to build a temporary structure large enough to accommodate 5,000 women at a cost to each of forty cents a day. Mrs. M. B. Carse has control of the active management.

OUR senior editor had an interview with the now famous Rev. Dr. Parkhurst last week. This, with a picture and sketch of the "twentieth century clergyman," as she calls him, will appear in a near issue of our paper.

MISS WILLARD is now in Boston, the guest of Miss Anne Whitney, the sculptor, sitting for the portrait bust ordered by Lady Henry Somerset and the Boston W. C. T. U. Convention for the Temple. She will return to Rest Cottage in a fortnight and remain there all summer, except for special duties that may take her temporarily elsewhere.

THE new Treasurer's Text Book is now ready; it contains as much of explicit information on the finance problems and usages of W. C. T. U's as can be packed down. Five cents each; a liberal discount to large purchasers. Address Miss Esther Pugh, National offices, Evanston, Ill. The treasurer's blanks will be ready for delivery in a few days.

ON the rising waves of New York's rebound the not less leaky craft of Jersey City rises to a better level. On April 13 the municipal election showed three thousand majority for a decent officiary. If Jersey City can rise from its municipal mire so can Chicago and every other place. Let us live in hope.

THE Prohibition party convention (Cincinnati, June 29 and 30) promises to be the largest, best and most progressive ever held. Its following will far exceed that of the People's party and its people have staying as well as going qualities. An informal conference has been called for the day previous (June 28) at the Palace Hotel, Cincinnati, by the executive committee of the National Reform party. If only our chrysalis of prohibition could emerge into the butterfly of Reform party in the city of sin, the change of name would be worth a hundred thousand votes.

BISHOP FITZGERALD, of the Methodist church, is not afraid to speak out on the question of the saloon in politics as well as in law. He is also an avowed friend of the equality of men and women in the Methodist Church. Bishop Hurst takes the same ground. We are sorry that more of the comrades of these two great men do not stand shoulder to shoulder with them in these advance movements. It is stated that of the sixteen bishops of the M. E. Church, four hold the views herein set forth. That is far from being a representative proportion of the church as a whole, but mountains narrow as they climb.

IT would be well if we could secure the abolition of the screens that now protect the saloon from public investigation. We believe it would be worth while for our unions to endeavor to secure laws requiring that the shutters and screens be removed from windows and doors. This would serve to bring the saloons into greater disrepute, and would help to empty them the sooner; for young men would be ashamed to be seen drinking by the passers-by, and all except the hardened topers would be more likely to forsake these disreputable haunts. Such a law, it is thought by some of our correspondents, could be passed more easily than was the scientific instruction law.

THE New York Tribune, in congratulating the public that the new street cleaning bill has been established, says: "To the men and women who have labored long and assiduously to bring about this result, and to Mrs. Kennicut more than to any other individual, the thanks of this community are due." Now let the Tribune speak up for the women who are trying to clean the highways of politics, municipal, state and national. They deserve thanks just as much as Mrs. Kennicut. This same paper adds: "This law will not enforce itself. Like every other statutory obligation it can be trifled with!" Yea, verily. Why not be as considerate when commenting on prohibition law?

THE licensing magistrates in England are composed of a body of men who must have a somewhat high property qualification. They are appointed by the Lord-Lieutenant of the county who receives his commission from the Queen. He is invariably a peer, and selected either for political reasons or because he owns large estates. The magistrates have the entire power in their hands of granting or refusing licenses, and many of them have an interest in brewing companies or mortgages on saloons. The law enables them to refuse licenses without giving any reason, but until last year when the temperance question had received a great impetus such action was practically unknown. The law amply provides for the regulation of the liquor traffic. The trouble has been that the men who have sat upon the bench are not in touch with the people, have known little of their necessities, and have an interest, too often, in the traffic.

THE last message from Lady Henry Somerset, written on board the steamer, reads as follows: "Just as I am leaving American shores comes a note from the poet Whittier, enclosing an inscription to be placed on the portrait bust of Miss Willard on which Miss Whitney is now engaged. I know you will wish to share the great pleasure with which I have read the lines that show his noble comprehension of our chieftain and our work. They are as follows:

"She knew the power of banded ill,
But felt that love was stronger still,
And organized for doing good
The world's united womanhood.

"From the heart of every white-ribboner as from my own I know there goes the prayer, God bless the 'Woman's Laureate.' God be with you till we meet again."

THE W. T. P. A. and "headquarters people" generally, bade a reluctant good-bye last Thursday to one long associated with and loved by them. Miss Helen L. Hood, who has for years bravely "staid by the stuff" at 161 La Salle street, as corresponding secretary of both the Chicago Central and Illinois W. C. T. U., departed on that day for the East, and on Saturday sailed from Boston on the good steamship, Cephalonia. A farewell lunch party was given her at Headquarters, and Miss Willard and other friends saw her on board the vessel at Boston. She will be received in London by Lady Henry Somerset, who sailed four days previous, and as soon as she has rested, will begin the work of organizing in England. Miss Hood's health has suffered severely through the strain and grief of Miss Ames' sickness and death, and it is hoped that this pleasant change of scenery and occupation will fully restore it. As to the success of her work, that is already assured, for Miss Hood is preëminently an organizer and also an excellent speaker. American and English workers are gradually growing nearer in method and aim through this interchange of speakers, and the great cause of temperance becomes more cosmopolitan with every transfer of a worker from her native heath.

AT five p. m., April 13, the great ship Teutonic, nearly six hundred feet long and carrying over a thousand passengers, swung slowly round in New York harbor, and headed for the sea. From the long dock it was watched with loving eyes, for fully as many waited on shore to see the last of friends on ship as she bore away with her. Among these were our senior editor, also Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, Anna A. Gordon, and Mesdames Ella Boole, and Laura Quigley (Mrs. Downs' daughter) with her little girls, who brought flowers to our departing guest. Already in the parlors of the Hotel Brunswick, Mrs. Barnes and a small party of Y's had been received by our English comrade, and had presented a beautiful engagement tablet, embellished in silver and bearing the motto and insignia of the Y's. Mrs. Mary Lowe Dickinson and Mrs. Isabella Davis, of the King's Daughters, Mrs. E. B. Grannis, of the Church Union, came also to say good-bye, and Mesdames Colgate and Townsend, both of whom had entertained our British chieftain when she first visited New York. But, as she had wished, her going was unheralded. A letter "for every day in the week" came from Headquarters in Chicago, several marked "To be read in mid ocean," and flowers, books, and good-bye notes were numerous. Accompanied by her son, Henry Somers Somerset, his tutor, and her maid, "she sailed away in a gallant bark," and if all the gratitude she has called forth could change to placid waters, and all the benedictions breathed upon her beautiful spirit were transformed to balmy breezes, she would go as one who glides through sunset glories on a sapphire sea, our Lady Henry Somerset—God bless her, and send her to America again.

Contributed.

A BATTLE HYMN.

BY MRS. MERRILL E. GATES.

(TUNE:—Battle Hymn of the Republic.)

This poem, by the wife of the president of Amherst College, was written for the eighteenth anniversary of the Massachusetts W. C. T. U., and is a gem for conventions.

From the hills and from the valleys,
Rings a glad, triumphant song;
'Tis the hymn of human progress,
In its strife divine with wrong;
'Tis the golden, heavenly anthem,
Which earth's faithful ones prolong,
"Our Christ is strong to save!"

REFRAIN.—
Glory, glory, hallelujah, glory, glory, hallelujah,
Glory, glory, hallelujah, our Christ is strong to save.

He who died in pain and sorrow,
That His people might be free;
He who conquering death, and rising,
Captive led captivity,—
He our glorious, living, Leader,
Calls us on to victory—
"For Christ is strong to save!"

He will bid the powers of evil
Crumble to their final fall;
He will raise the bruised and broken,
And set free each prisoned thrall;
Who is he that may not conquer
Since his Lord has conquered all?
"And Christ is strong to save!"

O the growing, widening wonder
Of the gospel of His grace!
In His world-encircling service,
Every worker finds a place.
For we only turn dark natures
Toward the brightness of His face.
"And Christ is strong to save!"

Onward sweeps the gathering army
Luminous in living light.
Forward stream the hallowed banners
Floating far their snowy white.
Upward swells the mighty war-cry
Still, "For God and Home and Right!"
"Our Christ is strong to save!"

LADY HENRY SOMERSET'S FAREWELL.

S. S. TEUTONIC, NEW YORK, April 13, 1892.

To the White Ribbon Army:

DEAR SISTERS AND COMRADES:—This letter will reach you when I have left the land I have learned to love so well. The great Atlantic tosses her gigantic billows, and fathomless seas will soon roll between us; but "hearts are near, though hearts are far"; and my heart is bound by cords far stronger than the wires along which are whispered messages from the Old World to the New—the cable of a love that is anchored in heaven. The ship on which I crossed the sea had barely arrived in port before I knew that in your land, then strange to me, but now so homelike, there were hands held out to greet me, that the cause which brought me to your shores was my passport to your confidence and love; and the welcome and white flowers, the words of greeting, the waving banners of our nations intertwined, were tokens telling me that all I had hoped and prayed to find among my sisters here was to be more than realized. A letter from your president also reached me. Her valued words had been treasured by me, since on the occasion of my becoming president of the British Women's Temperance Association she wrote me her first letter, a message which I have preserved in England among my most valued documents. The first telegram I sent on my arrival was to her, in response to her loving words, and was unerringly prophetic, "Your welcome makes America home."

It has been said that I am writing a book concerning my impressions of America. Nothing could be further from the truth. I found it enough to breathe your air, to live your life, to make myself a part of all I saw, without aiming to enact the role of the typical Briton on his travels. I came not to teach, but to be taught; and though you have graciously said so many times that I can but believe you must have meant it, that I have been a help to you—it is you who have helped inspire and strengthen me. But, concerning my impressions, I may tell you quite confidentially that the intelligence and education of your wage-workers, the remarkable acumen and versatile acquirements of your women, the universality of the cold-water dinner table, the freedom and courtesy of the press, the progressive quality of men's minds, so that they seem to take as a matter of course that women are equals, the way in which American men share with their wives the cares of home and children, the independence of young women in the general conduct of life, and especially the pursuit of a vocation rather than a husband—though not at all to the prejudice of their finding that husband—the good comradeship between young men and women, boys and girls, the almost universal sobriety of women—these, with the boundless distances, rapid transits, and the varied scenery, have impressed me beyond any other characteristics of this happy country of the Larger Hope. In some respects my own dear land excels you, even in the particular that is your most striking quality—progressive thought. I make no plea for the superiority of our own government, but I merely state that it has given us a far more rapid and accurate postal service, and railways much less destructive to human life, although they do not provide the comfort and the luxury that I find in this country.

The smoking car on your trains seems to me a degradation. I have been obliged to pass through it several times, and grieve to see that card-playing is permitted—a thing strictly prohibited on English railways. It is sad to see how this demoralizing atmosphere has blinded the occupants, so that the uncleanly floor and the sickening air are not distasteful to them. A stunted manhood must result from the national custom that this "black hole of Calcutta" car illustrates.

The fact that our telegraphic system is under government control, is of inestimable value to our people. We can send twelve words for twelve cents to any part of the United Kingdom. Our civil service being wholly divorced from politics, is in every way more satisfactory. It is inconceivable to me that any people so intelligent as the American, should patiently put up with changing every local postmaster with every change of President. You are ahead of us, however, in that your civil service examinations are more widely open to women. One of the differences between our countries which seems to me most in our favor, is the far greater interest taken by English women in politics, local and general. They understand the questions of the day, and are by that much better fitted to be the companions of their husbands and sons. As a result of this domestic aspect of political questions, men of better class go in political life with us, than is, I judge, the case with you. In this there is immense advantage to the well-being of the country; and if I might make one suggestion to those whose mode of life has been so eloquently suggestive to me, I would beseech good women everywhere to give conscientious study to these public questions in the municipality, the state and the nation. For I believe that with the participation of women in government, the good of the people (which means the coming of Christ into the laws of the nation) is inextricably blended. The white-ribboners have served their country beyond telling, by bringing these sacred questions of human weal to the hearts and hearthstones of the people. It is my solemn conviction that with all this better understanding as to the real mission of politics, shall come the greater and more Christian America for which we hope and pray. Perhaps the Mother Country may do you greatest service by proving that the participation of women in government will be a surer solution of our social problems; for we are practically certain to precede you in putting to a test on a large scale the theories you have propounded. It is well-nigh positive that within five years women will be as thoroughly enfranchised as men throughout Great Britain.

. . . . . .

In taking leave of you, my fellow soldiers in our holy war, I grieve to think how utterly inadequate must be any word of mine to express my sense of the loving-kindness you have shown me ever since I first stepped upon your hospitable shores. You have made the last six months the happiest period of my life—the one in which I have learned most, lived most, loved most. Your purposes are mine, your methods my most valued text book, your enthusiasm has proved contagious, and I carry home in head and heart and hand gifts that shall enrich the entire future of my life as a worker for humanity. I have long been a student of life and the world. Few will accuse me of lack of deliberation in statements and opinions. I give it as my profound conviction that the cause of Christ has in these days of a great emergency no more loyal, intelligent, aggressive ally than the white-ribbon army in this and other lands. I believe we have but seen the first faint streaks of its dawning brightness and power. Happy are those who early espoused its cause, and who, in these days of its onmarching growth, hold the place of honor amongst its pioneers and veterans. Happy the young men and young women who rally to its standard, singing their battle song,

"We are coming to the rescue of purity and right,
And for a winsome token, we wear the ribbon white."

A thousand blessings on those true citizens whose votes are their oath of allegiance to God and country; the "sacramentum" of a new crusade.

Those in England who stand by and watch this great fight between the home and the liquor traffic in your country, feel that sanctified politics is the one thing that America needs, and that the white-ribbon women are leading the way to this blessed change. I do feel so strongly the fatuity of the position that draws a line between politics and religion; for the teaching of the church of the future will surely be that the casting of a vote is to each individual soul as solemn a responsibility before God as any other religious command or ordinance.

. . . . . .

To my mind, there was nothing so pathetic in the annual address of our white ribbon "chieftain"—as our dear "Yolande" was wont to call her—as the following passage:

The mind of one who tries to write is like the room where photographs are taken—he must shift this screen and that; shut off side-lights so that upon his spirit the light shall fall from heaven. The glaring cross-lights of our civilization bewilder him; its counter currents confuse; its hurried footsteps deafen; its eddying waves submerge. That quiet hour from whose alembic might be distilled a pure, invigorating thought, comes to him seldom in these thronging years.

Perhaps he might have carried his cup of cold water to some thirsty one with steady hand, but he was jostled in the midst of crowds and spilled it on the way.

To break in upon a train of thought is held to be a trifle, but could the sorrows of the mind be rendered visible, the nerves' recoil, the grasping after what was precious and is gone would prove itself no trifle. Thousands of associations are thus destroyed, and links of memory broken. No one sees or heeds all this, but a thousand times repeated as it must be in any worker's life, the outcome is pathetic oftentimes. In that more noiseless and considerate civilization of the future we shall learn that the invisible are the only things real, and that to spill sand among the wheels of a watch or to cut the wires of a telegraph line are trifles compared with the sowing of thoughts alien and unwelcome in brains at work more rapidly and to more helpful purpose than the valves and pistons of the most costly engine; compared with the ruthless cutting in twain of lines of thought that were being woven between heaven and earth or frightening away with inconsiderate voice the shy fancies that were just poising their white wings above the thinker's head. Thus I apologize for my "poor dear" address herewith submitted and composed under the inevitable, constant interruption of one whose duties are executive rather than scholarly.

My dear comrades, may I not beg you to heed those words, not for her sake only, but for yours? I cannot but feel that American women, like American men, work under too high pressure. The same is true, I must admit, of your English coadjutors in reform; but it will be a happy thing for us if we can conserve the lives of our leaders, for a real leader is not to be had for the asking. It is not in generalities that we are called upon to spare the services of one so greatly burdened as our President, but when it comes to the question of our own needs in the way of conventions, meetings and correspondence. I applaud your action in voting for two successive years a vacation to Miss Willard, whose life for the last three months I have had the opportunity to study, and I assure you that your request has gone absolutely unheeded. By what method you will ever succeed in enforcing rest on one whose deeply grooved lines of action lend momentum to her ever busy brain, I am unable to imagine; but I believe the problem to be worthy the consideration of women so loyal and large-hearted.

Just here let me "rise to a personal explanation" as we say in conventions. The incongruity of such frequent, personal complimentary mention of myself in the columns of THE UNION SIGNAL, while my name has flown on the flag at the mast-head of the good ship as one of its editors-in-chief, has made me fear lest our readers might not all understand that every such allusion was made without my knowledge or consent. This, taken in connection with the fact that ours is the official organ of white-ribboners the world around, who wish to know the whereabouts and successes of their leaders, helps to mitigate a situation which, otherwise, might justly lead to unpleasant criticism.

And now, good-bye, and God be with you who have been so good to me. When you read these lines I hope to have regained old England in safety and peace. My heart aches in the going, but there lies the work to which I am devoted and in which I hope we are to have our most fruitful and happy year. Pray that the spirit of God may be so with us in our convention that we may all hear the voice saying to us, "Go forward."

In June of '93 I hope to be with you, accompanied by a large delegation of British white-ribboners, to attend the second meeting of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union at the great Columbian Fair. We mean to work hard for the Polyglot petition, and to bring over more signatures even than we gave you in Boston.

"God is our home, and in that state
We cannot so far separate
As not to make the distant near,
And know the loved are always here."

Comforted by this holy thought I go upon my voyage; and am gratefully and tenderly

Your sister,

Isabel Somerset

PROHIBITION IN MAINE.

BY NEAL DOW.

The Nation of the 31st of March last had an article on the results of prohibition in Maine, which I think it well to notice because of the respectability of that paper. It is supposed to be always careful and truthful in its statements on all questions, not being influenced by prejudice or interest. On important public questions it is supposed to be entirely reliable. There are many papers in the country of bad reputation for truth and fairness which are often making statements as to prohibition as wide from the truth as is this of the Nation, but I do not often notice them. They are supposed to be in the pay of the liquor leagues.

The Nation has been badly misinformed as to the actual status of the Maine law in Maine, and I think it desirable to set the readers of THE UNION SIGNAL and the general public right upon that matter. The Nation says:

"Maine continues to illustrate the folly of enacting laws which are not sustained by public sentiment."

The Maine law was enacted in 1851 by a vote in the legislature of 86 to 40 in the House and 18 to 10 in the Senate, the governor and both Houses being Democratic. By a peculiar combination of rum-whigs and rum-democrats the law was repealed in 1855 and a license law substituted for it. At the next election the party by which this was done was annihilated and prohibition was reënacted. In 1884 after an experience of the results of prohibition for thirty-three years, a prohibitory amendment to the constitution was submitted to the people and adopted by a majority of 47,075, the affirmative vote being three times larger than the negative. In 1890 the Democrats put license into their platform and were defeated in the most humiliating manner; the Republicans at the same time having prohibition in their platform, as they have always done since the formation of the party in 1856. I know of no reason to suppose that there has been any change towards license in the public opinion of the state on this question since that time. The Nation may see then how wide it is from the mark in affirming that prohibition in Maine is not in accordance with public opinion. The Nation continues:

"A year ago Neal Dow succeeded in getting the legislature to pass a bill which was going to stop rum-selling 'sure,' because the liquor-seller would have to go to jail every time he was arrested and convicted."

I did go to the legislature with a few proposed amendments to the law and did say that if adopted there would not be a grog-shop in Maine in six months. The bill as I proposed it was emasculated to such an extent as very much to diminish its force. The legislature of Maine in this case occupied the position of defender of the saloons against the people, although it did adopt a few of the least important of my suggestions and by aid of them the grog-shops have been swept out of Portland almost entirely. Indeed, it may be truthfully said there is not one of them left there, though liquor to a small extent is sold most cautiously. No hotel now sells liquor in the city. I quote a paragraph from this morning's paper to show how rumsellers are hunted here. This is not exceptional as to the style of doing it:

"Deputy Sheriff Goold on Wednesday evening caught sight of Jim Welch's team, with two men in it and two kegs of whisky. Goold made a rush for the tail-board while the men laid the whip on the horse, which is a large, powerful animal. As Goold came into the wagon, one of the men went out plump on his face in the gutter. The other started to follow suit, but not before the sheriff caught hold of him so that he swung between the wheels. He was too heavy to haul into the wagon and so hung there while the horse went on the run down Free street; the sheriff on his stomach hanging on to the man and whisky kegs jumping in the air at every crosswalk. Fearing the approach to Center street the sheriff with one hand ran the horse into the side of the street and the man into the gutter, and jumped out after him, but he was too big for him and broke away, and man and horse both escaped in opposite directions." The Nation continues:

"Twelve months have passed, and more liquor is now sold than ever."

It is far within the truth to say that the volume of the liquor traffic in Maine is not one-twentieth so large as it was in the old rum time; and in Portland the quantity of liquor sold is not one-hundredth part so large. I have many times said this in the press and on the platform, and the truth of it has never been challenged by anybody, though we have two Democratic papers in Maine heartily in favor of licensed grog-shops. In more than three-fourths of our territory, having more than three-fourths of our population, the liquor traffic is practically unknown. We had many distilleries, some of them on a large scale; seven of them and two large breweries were in Portland, now there is not one remaining, and has not been for many years. At the same time we had immense quantities of West India rum imported, brought here by the cargo. For many years not even one puncheon has been imported. The Nation continues:

"The reason is the people do not sanction the law. On the one hand juries will not convict, though the evidence of guilt is plain, because they do not think the offense worthy of imprisonment."

We have never had the least difficulty with juries; they are always ready to convict and do convict when the evidence is plain. Once in Portland the judge set a verdict of "guilty" aside because, as he said, the proof was not conclusive. I took especial pains to examine the case and found beyond doubt that the jury was right. In 1875 the legislature on petition passed a law that on the first and every conviction, the rumseller should go to jail. This was submitted to a popular vote, and was sustained by the people by five to one. The next legislature repealed this with no notice to anybody and no petition. In Maine rum-selling is regarded as a great crime against the state. United States Senator Morrill denounced it as the "gigantic crime of crimes," and no penalty, not absolutely cruel, can be considered as too severe for its suppression. The Nation continues:

"On the other hand the judges themselves are so loth to inflict the penalty when conviction is secured, they will not send the criminals to jail, even though it seems questionable whether they enjoy any discretion in the matter."

The drink habit will debauch judges, as it will and does men of any other class, so as to deaden the moral sense and lead them to be false to duty of whatever kind it may be. Of this we see examples and proofs every day in multitudes of cases. In the propositions I made to the last legislature, and to many preceding ones, was included this: That all discretion as to fines and penalties in liquor cases was taken from the courts without reserve. The original Maine law had that important feature, but it was omitted when the law was reënacted. The New Yorkers by no means have a monopoly of that infamy—laws nullified practically by the courts. The Nation continues:

"The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court presided at the recent term of court held in Bangor, a city where the liquor traffic is conducted openly, and he let off all of the sellers who were convicted upon payment of fines; not a single jail sentence being imposed." The judge seemed to be aware of the great wrong he was doing when he answered to the protest of the county attorney that he would take the responsibility.

The chief justice lives in Bangor; no more than that need be said of any one's attitude on the liquor question, especially if he is not an abstainer from intoxicants. I told the last legislature plainly that it would be of small moment to pass any anti-liquor law, however good and wise it might be, without depriving the courts of all discretion as to fines and penalties and as to continuances for trial and continuances for sentence. The discretion of the courts where it is permitted, is often, if not generally, employed to make it as easy as possible for convicted rumsellers. My experience in this was the reason for putting that provision into the original Maine law. The law says the convicted rumsellers shall pay so much fine and suffer so much jail. The judge often says they shall not go to jail. Some of them say they shall neither pay nor be imprisoned! If our supreme court of 1851 had been composed of men like some of our present judges, I think the original Maine law would have been declared unconstitutional! When the Iowa case was before the U. S. supreme court, the point being compensation to brewers, a reporter of a New York paper asked me what I thought the decision would be. I replied that I knew very well what it should be, but had no opinion as to what it would be, because I knew nothing of the personal habits of the justices, nor of the character of their social surroundings. In this decision of the chief justice of Maine, no doubt he reflected the opinions of a considerable part of the people of the town where he lives as well as his own sympathies.

The Republican party of Maine at every state party convention has put prohibition boldly into its platform. I have them all, but the following is the latest that I can find at the moment. All of them are of similar character:

1882, "We refer with confidence and pride to the general record of the Republican party in support of the policy of prohibiting the traffic in intoxicating liquors, the wisdom and efficiency of which legislation in promoting the moral and material interests of Maine have been demonstrated through the practical annihilation of that traffic in a large portion of the state; and we favor such legislation and such enforcement of law as will secure to every portion of our territory freedom from that traffic. We further recommend the submission to the people of a constitutional prohibitory amendment."

I think I have shown that the Maine law is fully supported by public sentiment and that with honest, high-minded judges, it will do its work thoroughly. But even with courts as we have them now, with a few amendments to the law which our experience has proved to be necessary—and with imperative directions to the judges—the fraction of the liquor traffic yet lingering here will be promptly suppressed. All this will come in time; we must have patience.

THE PERSONAL EQUATION IN TEMPERANCE WORK.

BY ELIZABETH STUART PHELPS WARD.

I once asked a woman of great loveliness in personal character and eminent success as an organizer in charitable work, some such question as this:

"But how much do you see of the wretched homes which you are trying to elevate? How much do you know of the individuals for whose sake all this great philanthropic machinery is kept in motion?"

"Oh," she said, "I can't enter into relations with these people."

There are two kinds of philanthropists, I think we find: Those who organize and those who individualize—the abstract temperaments and the concrete, perhaps we might call them. Each is necessary, both "work together" for good. Certain "causes" have temperaments like people and tend more than others in this or that direction.

It has sometimes seemed to me (if I may be pardoned a critical word about a movement with which I am so warmly in sympathy that I cannot be misunderstood) that the temperance work at this particular time needs strengthening in the personal direction. In the earlier days of the new reform clubs, in the white-heat of a sacred excitement that ran like prairie fire over the country, it was inevitable that we should concentrate ourselves more upon the individual struggle to save the individual drunkard. It was not so much intemperance that we busied ourselves about as drunken Tom, Dick or Harry. There were fewer committee meetings and more visits; less red tape and more of the private confessional; less dependence upon conventions and more concentration upon conversions. We did not take the whole world for our vantage ground; we took the soul of James or Peter, and did not let him go until God blessed him.

The temperance work of one town in particular, of which I chanced to know something, was doubtless a fair sample of a hundred similar efforts. The organization fell to pieces, but the heart of all its loving struggle to save beat on. The club room was closed, but the beauty of holiness that its rude walls had sheltered and nurtured did not die in a neighborhood quarrel, nor was it buried for lack of funds. Men who had been the subjects of all those heartaches and prayers and secret tears and sacred expedients, did not live as if they had never known what it was to be thought about and cared for and toiled for by refined women with Christ in the soul. They could not. Now and then, of course, some poor fellow fell back into the mire and stuck there—but he was the rare exception. All that exhaustion of spirit and body was not wasted. Those friendships formed between the sheltered and the tempted, were not thrown away. The welcome to Christian homes, the seat in the parlor, the delicate touch of the white hand on the rough one, the kind word on the streets in passing, the secret conferences with the worn wife, the little loan when the emergency came that called for it, the hard work to find the new place for the new man, the ceaseless, patient, tender "personal relation"—this will never be forgotten. This helped. This lasts.

Now, far be it from me to discourage the necessary skeleton of organization which stands behind all extended effort to help the world; or to deny the reporting of it in a paper like THE UNION SIGNAL. But if I may be allowed to make a practical suggestion in open daylight, as the result of one woman's study of your columns and of some acquaintance with the needs of the temperance work, I should say: Fall back more often, more heavily upon the personal equation. Tell us more of what you do, as well as how you do it. Give us Thomas, Richard, and Henry. Tell us how this man was saved, and why that one was not. Tell us what sorts and condition of men come into the coffee rooms and what you say to them when they get there; who fill the reading-rooms, and how you treat them. Give us the story of the personal woman saving the personal man. Nothing can be more sacred than such confidences; and all clews to identification of personal histories by neighbors should be honorably and cautiously avoided; but such facts can be made to read like fiction and hurt nobody's feelings, yet help us all.

Let me suggest for THE UNION SIGNAL a department of personal testimony, filled with the experiences of temperance women in saving, or in failing to save drunken and wretched men. It might be made a thrilling, inspiring, and humbling column. The lives of your workers and readers must be crowded with practical incidents that would stir the country. Let us have them.

"ILKA blade o' grass keps its ain drap o' dew."

WORLD'S FAIR PROGRESS.

BY B. V. CUSHMAN, M. D.

It looks as if the young Columbian Exposition is now through with juvenile attacks. It has "had" a visit from Congress, a congressional investigation, and a cyclone. Of the first you heard in my last; of the second, Chicago is proud. She is used to compliments, but when Chairman Dockery of the investigating commission said: "We find nothing of plunder or corruption, and where so much money is involved this is almost marvelous," the invincible matron blushed rosy red, from the roots of her flaming bang to her breastplate, bearing the jeweled legend, "I will." It was the flush of joy. Chicago was pleased. She has been praised for many things, but to be pronounced a marvel of honesty, is new and altogether delightful. The civilized world may share in her pride and pleasure, and congratulate itself that the managers of the great enterprise have been so wisely chosen as to exclude politicians and boodlers.

The "corkscrew wind" was less satisfactory. It seemed a little pleasantry on the part of the elements, just to remind men that it is only by grace their best work stands. The Illinois building and Memorial Hall suffered most, having their walls twisted and towers torn off. The mining building lost a good deal of glass, and the entire damage is estimated at about $20,000. The various state buildings give much variety and picturesqueness to the grounds. Some of them will be of great beauty and significance. The dome of the Colorado building is to bear a solid silver statue of Justice, weighing twelve hundred pounds. One hand will hold the scales, the other will bear the sword. The scales are balanced with gold and silver weights, suggesting bi-metallic currency. That is Colorado's silent argument for free silver.

Miss Jean Loughboro' is the architect of the Arkansas building, having entire superintendence of its construction. Other women of East and West and South are bringing their offerings to the Woman's building. Miss Wait, of San Francisco, undertakes the finishing and furnishing of the room to the south of the main reception room, with the beautiful red-wood of California—found nowhere else—whose grained surface, when polished, is so exquisite that carving would mar its beauty. The red-wood lumbermen of the state contribute the finishing. Miss Wait also offers two columns, one of pure white marble, the other of California's translucent onyx, exquisitely carved. Miss Lily Jackson of West Virginia will be responsible for the finishing of the opposite room, using the varied native woods of her state. Mrs. Charles J. McClung, with the ladies of Knoxville, contributes the wainscoting of the main entrance. It is of the most beautiful of Tennessee's beautiful marble. Mrs. Rufus Frost, one of the Massachusetts lady managers, offers three handsome stained glass windows made by women. These will be placed in the assembly room of the Women's building. Mrs. Ellen Call Long, of Tallahassee, offers a large silk flag made from silk raised by herself in Florida. The Ladies' Columbian Club of Topeka have undertaken to supply the reading-room in the Kansas building.

The New York World remarks: "Whatever the women have to do with the Columbian Exposition is done with creditable dispatch."

It is a good sign that women are so actively interested in the educational exhibit. How can they fail to be, considering that they are overwhelmingly in majority among the educators of the country? The educational as well as the philanthropic exhibit of Massachusetts is entrusted to two women, Mrs. Palmer and Miss Dawes. These ladies have discovered that in proportion to wealth and population, their state leads all the rest in expenditures for higher education. Mrs. S. S. Harrell, emulous of good works, is determined that her state of Indiana, which ranked first at the Centennial in educational display, shall not lose its record at the Columbian. She conceived the idea of taking one cent collections in the public schools to aid the committee, and from those that have responded it seems probable that these collections will reach the sum of $8,000. Mrs. Harrell is making a tour of the state, besides carrying on an immense correspondence with teachers and school officers. The lady managers of West Virginia, who are also members of the state commission, have succeeded in persuading the State Board of Education to allow every other Friday afternoon to be occupied with discussion of Exposition topics. This will probably prove a very taking way of studying American history.

The Emma Willard Memorial Association has applied for space to exhibit a bust of Emma Willard, and some valuable papers in their possession, among them the first document concerning higher education for women ever brought to the notice of any legal body, which was presented to the New York legislature in 1817. The State Superintendent of Public Instruction of New York has sent out a circular calling upon teachers and pupils to prepare for their part. The educational exhibit will be upon the ground floor of the main building assigned to liberal arts and manufactures. It will cover between four and five acres, giving space to physical culture apparatus, hygiene and sanitation, library organization, manual training, trade schools, and every other. The blind are to be represented by pupils engaged in all the varied exercises in which they have acquired such wonderful skill of late years, as operating sewing machines, sewing by hand, piano-playing and tuning, writing and drawing. Yet with all that art and love have done for them, how pitiful will be their position in this maze of beauty, with power to grasp only what their fingers can touch! Mayhap the pitying angels look upon our whole groping race and say; "Poor souls! They only have what comes to them through five meager channels they call 'senses.'"

There seems to be a generous disposition on the part of the managers to give everybody a chance. Some one has accused Mrs. Palmer of crowding out the colored women. Mrs. Palmer says—and I believe her—that on the contrary she is crowding them to prepare for representation. Frederick Douglass is to represent Hayti at the Exposition, and the Haytian government has appropriated $25,000 for his use. A national monument is to be erected upon the Fair grounds commemorating the emancipation of colored slaves. Perhaps I should say I have not this officially, but press dispatches announce that New Jersey has appropriated a thousand dollars towards it. It certainly is fitting that the greatest philanthropy of the ages should be represented in some way. The mayor of Cape Town, South Africa, visited Jackson Park a few days ago. He promises a great mining exhibit from that region, and says there is much enthusiasm about the Exposition there. A movement is on foot among the mail steamship companies to run steamers direct to the United States at reduced rates.

There seems to be a real upreaching from the ends of the earth. New South Wales asks for as much space as Great Britain and Ireland have received. The Australasian colonies all together have asked for three times the space allotted to the entire United Kingdom, and promise to make a complete and rich exhibit of their wealth and progress. Perhaps nothing could be of more interest.

A "pet scheme" with all womandom is the Emergency ward, under conduct of the Illinois Training School for Nurses, to which the Illinois Woman's Exposition Board has given $6,000, upon condition that the Training School "shall fairly consider all applications from women physicians, surgeons and trained nurses of the state, for places on the staff of said emergency ward, and in selecting the staff shall fully recognize all the different schools of medicine, and so far as possible, all the different sections of the state." This will undoubtedly be a national rather than state enterprise, if for no other reason than that it is understood that English women will concentrate their strength upon an exhibit of hospital methods and trained nurses. This should be a challenge to the patriotism of every American woman belonging to either of these noble professions. There will be a little moral in whatever success Illinois medical women may achieve in this. They were the first to pool the petty differences of "school," and go in together for broad professional effort, realizing that it is not the chief work of the physician to write prescriptions, or medicate pellets. Dr. Frances Dickinson and Dr. Lucy Waite were leading spirits in that movement which makes this feasible. Dr. Owen, medical director of the Exposition, promises to place some women upon his professional staff, and that they shall rank equal with the men in all respects. Dr. Owen is in charge of the official hospital of the Exposition, with which the women's ward will have no connection.

SALOONS AND RAILROAD MEN.

BY T. D. CROTHERS, M. D.

The express trains on many of the great trunk lines of railroads carry with them a literal saloon for the sale of alcoholic drinks. The trainmen are forbidden to drink under penalty of immediate discharge, and the bar-keepers (called porters) are required not to sell or give spirits to any employé in service on the road. Managers of roads are aware of the risk and danger of the service rendered by men who use spirits, hence stringent rules are laid down, and efforts made to employ only healthy, temperate men, especially on trains and where great responsibility and exact duties are required. While the vast majority of trainmen on all railroads are practically total abstainers, there is always a small number who are concealed drinkers, growing worse steadily. The result of their drinking is always some accident and exposure with discharge. Often the accidents are of little interest to the public, because they are not attended with loss of life. In some instances the person who made the mistake is killed and his use of spirits (as the real cause of the accident) is concealed from the public. Where gross carelessness and stupidity result in an accident among experienced trainmen, the use of alcohol is not unfrequently the real cause.

These men are not public drinkers, and are known as temperate men, but after accidents it will appear that they have used spirits and probably carried it with them. There is another class of active, responsible trainmen, whose long-tried services have given them reputation with the company, who all unexpectedly make very serious mistakes in their ordinary work, which result in great disasters. Alcohol and its compounds are often at the bottom of these sudden failures. Want of ordinary caution, and sudden boldness in assuming a great risk, failure to remember orders, and faulty reasoning, are the usual symptoms. Such men use alcohol as a medicine and tonic, to enable them to do their work better. They fully recognize the danger of large doses, but are deluded with the idea that in certain circumstances small doses are necessary for their work. The fact is well known that the continuous strain and irregularity of railroad work soon wears out the brain and nervous system, producing states of exhaustion for which alcohol in any form is a most seductive tonic. To an overworked, tired out trainman, who has found spirits a perfect relief, no rules or restrictions can prevent him from taking spirits from the traveling saloon on the train, or the saloon at the station. Of course no one will see him, but his changed spirits and manner will tell the story. Those are the men who make the mistakes from which accidents come. A tired brakeman took a glass of spirits and went back to flag an approaching train—fell asleep and a frightful disaster followed. An overworked engineer, after a glass of spirits at the station, failed to see the danger signal a few miles farther on, and was killed in a frightful wreck. These and similar instances are repeated every year, on nearly all the roads, only many of them simply involve the loss of property and are unnoticed. The culpability and downright stupidity of the company managers in this matter are almost phenomenal. Irrespective of all moral considerations, and simply from a business point, it is absurd to expect any number of temperate men, engaged in a peculiarly nerve-exhausting occupation, to abstain from spirits, especially when exposed to its free use any time, and under all circumstances.

Loose gunpowder and sulphur matches might be carried in proximity for some time without accident. Public places for the sale of spirits on trains and at stations, under the control of the company, may seem to be harmless, but the certainty of accidents due directly and indirectly to them is beyond all question. It is an unwritten law of the saloon managers on trains and at stations, that trainmen are to have spirits free at all times, on the pretense of their use as medicines. It is a higher law of nature that the strain of exact and perilous duty, day after day, reacts in states of exhaustion, for which spirits bring most rapid temporary relief.

The same great physical laws make it impossible for men in this condition to abstain where the means of relief are at hand, even though they be temporary. No company can depend on the best judgment of its trusted trainmen as long as free spirits are carried round with them on the train, and are found at every station. A railroad dispatcher at a saloon station, after a glass of spirits gave the wrong order. Ten lives and over a million of dollars were lost. The dispatcher suicided in grief at his mistake. The company received a thousand dollars a year for the rent of the saloon at the station. The long night runs on through trains furnish abundant illustration of the peril and unknown risks of trains which carry traveling saloons. To the companies it is a question of selfish interest. To the traveling public it is a question of personal peril. Every year accidents occur which are clearly preventable, and a growing public sentiment demands better and safer means of transit. The saloon is always a source of danger in ways that are most unexpected. No one can tell how and when it may influence the brain capacity of the trainmen. Obviously it is the clear duty of all persons to demand that the saloons should be dropped from railroad trains; to demand that trainmen be free from exposure and be protected from every possible danger that will imperil their work and the lives of others. The trainmen themselves demand this protection, and no company can be free from grave losses due to this source except by this means.

Hartford, Ct.

COMRADE at the fireside, comfort your heart with these wise words by Harriet Beecher Stowe: "Talk of hair-cloth shirts and scourgings and sleeping on ashes as means of saintship! Let a woman once look at her domestic trials as her hair-cloth, her ashes, her scourges; accept them, rejoice in them, smile and be quiet, silent, patient and loving under them, and the convent can teach her no more; she is a victorious saint."

OAKLAND W C T U COFFEE HOUSE.

BY M. G. C EDHOLM.

No institution in the United States more thoroughly demonstrates woman's business ability than does the coffee house of the Oakland Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Its existence and wondrous prosperity are striking proof of God's answer to prayer and faith and work "In His Name."

Years ago, when the Oakland union was in its infancy, a few devoted and energetic women, Mrs. S. G. Chamberlain, Mrs. Wm. R. Sublett, Mrs. Mary Frank Browne—editor of Pharos—and others, inspired the union with the desire to do this practical temperance work of sustaining a W. C. T. U. coffee house.

After earnest effort a fund was solicited and April 14, 1884, a grand opening was held, appropriate addresses being made by Rev. Dr. Horton, Mrs. J. Ellen Foster, and the ladies of the union. The coffee house board, who, for more than five years have devoted their best energies and innumerable hours of work to making the coffee house a success, are Mrs. P. H. Templeton, Mrs. Clara O. Southard, Mrs. O. M. Burnham, Mrs. G. Grant, Mrs. B. C. Dick, Mrs. R. C. Gaskell and Mrs. D. W. C. Gaskell—and their names are held in grateful esteem by the union.

Mrs. Bosworth, now Mrs. Barnum, has from the beginning been the efficient business manager. In her "the woman and the occasion met," and her wonderful success proves it was a most happy meeting for the W. C. T. U., and no woman in Oakland is more esteemed and loved. Mrs. Barnum is also state superintendent of coffee house department.

At first a very simple lunch was set, consisting of coffee, bread and butter, soups, and other cheap dishes, the object being to give poor people a chance for an inexpensive meal, no dish being more than five cents, so that no drinking man could urge the economy of the free lunch of the saloons. In all the years of its existence this feature of the work has been adhered to, and the large numbers of working girls and poor young men and boys and urchins with only a nickel who patronize the coffee house, show that it is reaching the class of people for whom it was primarily designed.

The cheapness of wine and prevalence of wine drinking at meals in California, where nearly all restaurants serve a bottle of wine free at a regular dinner, makes the temperance restaurant more of a necessity in this state than any other in the United States. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union in their restaurant are not only fighting the free lunch of the saloons, but the free wine of the regular restaurants; the good they have accomplished in teaching people that a delicious dinner can be served without intoxicating liquor in any form, at very cheap rates, cannot be estimated.

The W. C. T. U. owes a vote of fraternal thanks to Mr. A. W. Dennett, the noted caterer, who has fourteen restaurants in various cities of the United States where not a drop of liquor nor tobacco in any form is sold, where Christ is recognized by Bible mottoes all about the restaurant, and where prayers are held every morning by the employés. His Christian principle is shown in refusing one tobacconist who offered him $15,000 per year for the privilege of selling tobacco in just one restaurant. Like the W. C. T. U. restaurants the meals are cheap, thus proving that to make money it is not necessary to sell either liquor or tobacco, and also like the W. C. T. U., he gives much of his large income to Christ's work, especially aiding the noted philanthropist, Mr. Charles N. Crittenton, in his grand Florence Mission for the rescue of erring girls.

But the Oakland restaurant from the beginning attracted the best people in town to its lunches, and senators and supreme judges and ministers and physicians and leading men and women are here seen side by side with working girls, newsboys, and the poor fellow out of luck, even though through drink, whom these mother-hearted women cannot turn away.

Almost from the first the coffee house was self-supporting; little by little the receipts increased until now the union receives about one thousand two hundred dollars per year, which is used in pushing the various lines of temperance work. Besides this it has accumulated several hundred dollars worth of furniture and has a reserve fund of $500 in bank, in case of fire, for the ladies in soliciting subscriptions from citizens promised that such help once given should never be asked again. Nor is charity forgotten and thousands of meals are annually given away.

So the years have come and gone and what do we see to-day? The Oakland temperance restaurant is a cheery, beautiful room, always bathed in a perfect glow of sunshine from its large southern windows whose bright, magic letters, W. C. T. U. Dining-room, and W. C. T. U. Coffee House on either side of the entrance preach constantly to thousands of people a temperance sermon. The interior is as inviting as the exterior. The spacious room is handsomely papered and ornamented and from the walls gleam the pictured faces of Lucy Webb Hayes and William Cullen Bryant, while a fine picture of Mrs. Carse's Temperance Temple is an inspiration to constant service and an answer to the query, "What are these temperance women doing anyhow?" Various other pictures and handsome Scripture mottoes make the rooms homelike, while a large scroll "STOP AND THINK" lets no one forget that liquor and tobacco waste $1.500,000,000, while thousands go hungry because less than $700,000,000 is spent for bread.

One more notable picture which will soon make beautiful our coffee house is the smiling face of "our patron saint," the World's and National W. C. T. U. President, Frances E. Willard. The life-size portrait of her in possession of our union hangs in headquarters.

Flowers and trailing vines throw out radiant beauty and redolent perfume summer and winter. The tables are most inviting with snowy linen, sparkling glass and glittering silver. Sweet-faced girls supply the wants of all with dignity and grace, and many a man is reminded of the loved sister in the far-away eastern home. Wholesome and appetizing food is temptingly served at low prices as shown by the bill of fare:

Regular meals, 25 cents. Soups, stewed mutton or beef, pork and beans, hash, potatoes, parsnips, pies, pudding, stewed fruit, milk, oatmeal and cream, mush and milk, tea and coffee with bread and butter, 5 cents. Steaks, Hamburg beefsteak, fish, mutton and pork chops, bacon, ham, corned beef, cakes and syrup, bread and butter with baked or stewed fruits and cream, macaroni and cheese, roasts (beef, mutton, pork,) beef à la mode, 10 cents. Eggs on toast, omelet, scrambled eggs, sirloin steak, 15 cents. Special orders taken at special prices.

W. C. T. U. COFFEE HOUSE, OAKLAND, CAL.

In a cozy corner, where rare California sunshine beguiles the reader into a dream of perfect content, is a reading table where any one having an idle hour to spend can find first-class magazines and "The Book." But perhaps the most interesting object in the dining-hall is our lovely Christian manager, Mrs. S. F. Barnum, whose chastened, mother-hearted face attracts hundreds of the customers to stop and have a chat on the temperance questions or other subjects, and the bits of temperance principle and Christian philosophy she has instilled in thousands of minds, from newsboy to United States senator, is only known to the All-Father Himself. The tender sympathy and wise counsel and practical aid she has given to hosts of the sorrowing and tempted and needy, have brightened countless lives, for such influence never stops with the "party of the first part," but the sunshine of love is reflected in other lives, and only "over there" in God's eternal sunshine shall we know results.

While only invited to write the article on the Oakland Coffee House, we cannot refrain from saying that the San Jose W. C. T. U. restaurant is also a great success.

AS PARTY platforms are but the embodiment of the principles which control party action and dispose of party supremacy, it is but natural to suppose that a political platform acceptable to the distiller and brewer, the gambler and the atheist, could not be to the minister of the gospel nor the communicant at holy altars.—Louise S. Rounds.

Correspondence.

MRS. LEAVITT'S WORD FROM SOUTH AMERICA.

DEAR SISTERS OF THE W. C. T. U.:—I started on the 8th of December from my daughter's house in Arlington to take the steamer at New York. Everybody was kind to "the sick old lady," as I heard myself called, after my family left me in the "sleeper" at Boston; but the exertion and almost constant coughing left very little power to stir, when at half-past nine in the morning, with my belongings, I was packed into my little room in the Vigilancia. This is one of the most beautiful, best appointed and best managed of the ninety-nine steamers I have sailed in.

Our course lay far out from shore, considerably east of south, leaving the Bermudas on the east, but the Bahamas on the west. Each day as the mercury mounted my illness abated, till when we reached St. Thomas, five days from New York, with a temperature of seventy-seven degrees, I scarcely coughed at all, the pressure, heat and soreness of the lungs was abated, and food began to be inviting again. How I wish everybody else on board had fared as well as I. One man seemed stronger and less ill than I when we started, but at the end of one week, though the weather has been the finest, and the deck almost as level and firm as a floor, the poor man seems near his end.

In the region between the Bermudas and the Bahamas, there was more seaweed than I have seen before; great islands of rust-colored loveliness floating in the blue water. I have noticed no other peculiarity of the sea thus far. One poor gull sailed round us about an hour one day, then disappeared in the west, whence it had come. Two missionaries sailed with us, so when Sunday came, a handful of passengers, a few officers and stewards gathered to honor God in public service. Prayer was earnest, song as uplifting, sermon as edifying as on shore.

December 14 we passed Porto Rico, St. Johns, and other smaller islands, and just at dusk wheeled round a point into the commodious harbor of St. Thomas; although we came up to a pier, it was used only for coaling, and people came and went by the ladder, really a good flight of steps let down by the side. It was all very like the West African ports. The configuration of hills and harbor, the little town tucked into a safe corner between mountains and sea, are so like Madeira and Funchal, that I seemed to be back in the Old World again.

"Coaling" at St. Thomas is a very interesting sight; negroes, formerly slaves, mostly women, form an unending, undulating line of human beings, each crowned by a flat, broad basket containing sixty pounds of coal, not much blacker, under the flaring torches burning in high-hung cages on the wharf, than their own faces, arms and legs. They put in one hundred tons an hour. Sometime during the night all the shoreward stragglers returned, the last basket of coal was dumped, the steamer twisted herself around and steamed out to sea, but blessed sleep kept my senses sealed so I knew nothing about it.

St. Thomas, St. Croix and St. John are the principal islands of the Virgin group. They belong to Denmark; the inhabitants are very eager to be annexed to the United States, and Denmark is ready to sell. If our trade with South America is to reach the proportions it ought and would, if government did its duty, these islands, or one of them, would be most important as a coaling station for our steamers. It is one of the unexplained mysteries of Johnson's administration, that after proposing to buy, after the people had expressed an earnest desire to be annexed, and after Denmark had consented to sell, that the whole thing "hung by the gills" year after year, and was then dropped. Now again the purchase could be made on very reasonable terms, and it is to be hoped the government will be wise in time.

Two days' sail brought us to Barbadoes on the 17th of December. As seen from the steamer's deck, anchored half a mile out, the town shows many good buildings, half covered with tropical trees. The land rises from near the water's edge slowly, a few hundred feet in the part of the island visible from the steamer. The gentle swells thus formed are dotted with what appear to be planters' houses, in the midst of fields of sugar cane. Everything looked prosperous. Barbadoes is becoming a favorite winter resort for the luxurious, the rich, and for invalids.

Five days more brought us to Para. Early in the morning the ocean, hitherto so deeply, darkly, beautifully blue, began to be streaked and patched with green, a sure sign of shoal water. These shoals are formed of the mud the Amazon brings down. In two or three hours the water was green all around us, but no land was in sight. After another hour or two the water ceased to be clear, it looked as if white clay had been stirred into it; still there was no land to be seen; at two o'clock we sighted the southern bank of the Amazon. About four o'clock land loomed up on the northwest, and we were in the Para. This confluent of the Amazon nearly equals the Congo, but the Amazon far surpasses it. I speak of what appears to the eye of the voyager, not of exact measurements. Darkness had settled down before we came to anchor at fully a mile from town.

The early morning, always so charming in the tropics that I want to call it heavenly, revealed a goodly little city, which had only been indicated by lights the evening before. Our American consul came on board for his wife,—Rev. Mr. Nelson to see me, and we talked of work to be done, if the Lord will, on my return. The day dragged slowly away till the mails and official papers were brought on board at three o'clock. They might have reached us at eleven a. m., but for tropic dawdling. The afternoon was delightful, as we sailed so near the shore that one could distinguish the different varieties of trees, and note small peculiarities of architecture in the houses of the numerous villages and isolated plantations.

As we got well into open sea again, after dark, came such a display of phosphorescent light as I had never before seen. Great crescents, great sheets of gleaming silver were scattered on every side as far as the eye could reach, constantly shifting with the rolling waves. Close down at the sides of the vessel the sea had ceased to be water, and had become solidified light. The ship's path opened out behind us to the verge of the horizon, a way of living light, leading back to home and friends and loved ones. The next morning Captain Petrie said, "I had a very hard time with all that beautiful phosphorescent light. With great difficulty I distinguished the 'light' I was looking for, and not to distinguish it might have meant disaster."

December 24 brought us to Maranhao. The last syllable only is difficult. Say nyow in one syllable, the o-w as in "now," very suddenly and with a strong caterwauling sound, and the result will not be far out of the way. This is a small place, of but little importance, but looks pretty from where the steamer lies. And so Christmas came. How very different from the same happy time at home. I read steadily all day that I might mind it less. At evening when we went to dinner we found the dining saloon decorated with flags of many nations, the "stars and stripes" being largely predominant. Steward and cook had outdone themselves in their menu. The two missionaries and I were the only ones who drank no wine. After the second table was over, a very young nursemaid was so far gone that it took two people to help her up the stairs. The next day she promised me she would never take another drop.

We approached Pernambuco, or Recife, as Brazilians call it, soon after sunrise, December 28. Olinda, a suburb, lies a few miles north of Pernambuco, on a small, abrupt, but not lofty hill. Pernambuco, said by one gentleman to have 70,000, by another 200,000 inhabitants, lies low, and, as the steamer dropped anchor outside the reef, appeared to swim on the water. As we wait for a pilot to take us "inside," scores of catamarans dart here and there, each with its three-cornered sail, or rest quietly as the occupant fishes. A catamaran in Brazilian waters is made of four sticks of timber, fastened side by side. The timbers are rounded away into two points aft. A mast rises forward, and a bench is fixed crosswise near the stern, which enables the occupant to keep all but his feet out of water.

A reef, a mile long, rising to the surface of the water at high tide, and about 300 to 500 feet from shore, forms an excellent though rather narrow harbor. At low water the reef stands ten or twelve feet out of water, flat-topped and apparently able to defy the action of the waves to the end of time. The city is crowded and uninviting as much as I could see from the steamer's position. Cocoa-palms bound the view at the south, and cone-shaped Olinda, with its white villas, red-roofed, embowered in trees on the north. Steamers and sailing vessels lie so near all around that we could converse with the people on their decks. "Cargo work" began at once. Some picturesque figures are to be seen in the barges or scows that carry and fetch it, clad in pantaloons that apparently have more dirt than cloth. This idea seemed to be supported by one pair, freshly washed, spotlessly clean, which had left more holes than cloth.

Bahia, where we arrived December 31, is built at the foot of and on the top of a bluff, at the back side of the northern promontory which guards the entrance to the bay of Todos os Santos. It stretches along a mile or more, showing its residences above, its stores and warehouses below, its churches on both levels, its beautiful groves and embowering foliage everywhere. At night the view is unusually fine, only to be surpassed by that at Hong Kong. Each light seems to have space to show its full power.

New Year's morning brought out a great display in the harbor of Pernambuco. An image of the Virgin Mary, which is kept in a church the remainder of the year, was placed on a tiny steam launch, so gorgeously decorated that it cost many thousand dollars. "Our Lady makes the circuit of the harbor to ensure its safety for the coming year," was the explanation given me. Several steamers, two of them of considerable size followed, each dragging a long trail of row boats after it. Next come many sail boats, and row boats unable or unwilling to pay for a "tow" bring up the rear. Everybody is as gay as gold and silver tinsel, flowers and branches, ribbons, tassels and feathers can make them. All the crafts stream with colors from fore peak to stern post. The Brazilian colors, green and yellow, preponderate over all others. When the procession was in mid-distance of their route, down came a tropical shower, streams rather than drops. Poor Lady!—and poor ladies!

Captain Petrie and the purser had interested themselves to get leave from the authorities on shore for another lady and me to pass by boat from the Vigilancia to the Clyde, a British steamer, thus saving one journey by boat and the custom house. Our object in making this transfer is to avoid quarantine at Buenos Ayres, as the Vigilancia "communicates" with the infected ports, Santos and Rio de Janeiro, and the Clyde does not.

At Rio, where we arrived January 4, the Clyde dropped mails and cargo into boats from shore, but no person or thing was allowed to come on board, not even the mails. Owing to this arrangement three days were consumed in discharging cargo, when one would have sufficed, could men have been brought from shore.

Many have asked me which is the finer harbor, that of Rio or Sydney, Australia. I should judge them to be equal, or very nearly so, as to capacity and safety, and to surpass all others in these respects. All the ships of all the world could be accommodated in safety in either of them without doubt. But Rio far surpasses Sydney in grandeur, picturesqueness and beauty of scenery. The morning we left, January 7, the clouds that had covered the higher peaks rolled away and the Organ mountains were revealed in all their beauty. Though less than 4,000 feet high, they appear higher than many loftier ones that are partially hidden by lower ranges and foothills, or that rise from plateaus. These tower direct from sea level. A rapid run of 1,030 miles brought the Clyde and her company safely and in good health to Montevideo, on the morning of Sunday, January 10. Good health for every person on board was of the greatest importance, as the least illness might still insure quarantine at Buenos Ayres.

Nearly all the passengers made it a day of pleasuring on shore. Cargo was worked all day. Whether any other but myself tried to keep it "holy unto the Lord" I do not know.

The estuary of the La Plata is the color of coffee and milk and it is very shallow. Sunday evening we dragged through two feet of soft mud, nearly up to Buenos Ayres; Monday morning the authorities pronounced us clean. As there is not water enough for so large a steamer as the Clyde to come up to the city, we steamed back to La Plata, thirty miles away. A curious, shovel-shaped pen appears, the lower edge, in which is an opening, presented to us. The fencing is of open timber work with a railway on the top. In we went, ran swiftly up the blade and handle, then entered a canal with low banks of earth, and finally came into a basin, surrounded by a fine stone-faced wall, serving as docks. Two tugs seized us, one forward and another aft, and swung us around alongside the dock, though there was not an inch of room to spare. We walked down an easy flight of stairs, across a platform a few feet in width, started off on a hot, dusty ride of two hours, and were turned out of the train into the custom house. As usual, the declaration that I had nothing dutiable, and a ready help about keys and opening things, made custom house troubles light, and half an hour after I was at ease in my hotel, hoping to see missionary friends in the morning. My change of steamers had disconcerted their plans for meeting me.

Thus ends a continuous journey of thirty-three days. The distance taken from the ship's "log" is 6,336 miles. We had much windy weather, but it never amounted to a storm. One short, sharp shower was all the rain we had. No accident befell us, and nobody was sick. I am as able to go to work as at any time during the six months spent in the dear home land.

MARY CLEMENT LEAVITT.

Buenos Ayres.

TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS.

BY MATILDA B. CARSE.

Faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being alone.—James 2:17.

Since the offer to give a photographic group consisting of Lady Somerset, Miss Willard, and the founder of the Temple, with their autographs attached, to any person who fills a mite-box by April 1, 1893, orders for boxes have averaged 100 per day. If orders continue at this ratio during the year the number sent out would be 31,300 (not including Sunday). To secure the photo each box must contain $3.65. This would foot up a grand total of $114,245; if each year this amount had been given since the project started, we would be the owner of the entire capital stock of the Temple to-day. And yet in face of this fact, white-ribboners are halting, holding back from giving for fear we cannot raise sufficient money to pay for the building. Beloved comrades, "give to the winds thy fears"; how can you hold back from doing your very best when God has in such a wondrous manner aided us in securing this magnificent Temple, the like of which for its purpose is not to be found on this round globe; for situation the very finest in Chicago; as a paying investment no better can be had. All this has not come to pass merely through individual effort, but through the interposition of that God who has promised to do great things for those that believe on Him.

***

The following shows how some of the faithful fill mite-boxes. A pastor's wife, Rev. Mrs. Welch, Barton, Md., writes: "I inclose $3.65 for our Temple. At the beginning of last year I felt I could not spare a penny a day, because there were so many calls to be met, one-tenth seemed too small to pay them all, but each week as I read the appeal in the SIGNAL, I wondered if I could not find a way to earn a mite. Last May the happy thought came that by blacking my husband's shoes every Saturday night, for 'five cents a shine,' (he can't bear to black his own shoes) I might help just a little. So it was agreed, and the greater part of the inclosed came in that way. I often made the brush keep time to 'Rise, Temple, Rise,' and if spared during this present year I expect to earn some more money for our Temple by the same method." Myron I. McLain, Glendive, Montana, sends $4; he writes: "This is a mite-box collection made on a sheep ranch, by a champion of the temperance cause and a believer 'In His Name.'"

Mrs. L. H. Adams, Centerville, Mich., sends $6.70, a mite-box collection gathered by Bessie Moshier, Claribel Adams, Madge Liembuch and Jessie Wilcox. Mrs. Adams writes that one of the little girls earned two dollars of the amount by picking up old iron and selling it herself, a little at a time, also from the sale of her mamma's paper rags. Mrs. E. L. Brown, Chittenango, N. Y., writes, "Please find enclosed $5, the contents of my mite-box to help build the Temple. May God prosper the work, and though I shall never look upon this noble structure (I am totally blind) may it have a speedy completion." Mrs. W. T. Wilson, Little Rock, Ark., sends $11. She says: "This is the proceeds of my own and my children's mite-boxes for the past year. It affords me much pleasure to add this to my other contributions, and we are all going to fill our mite-boxes again this year, hoping to have a larger sum to send you by 1893."

***

Mrs. H. M. Wilson, Ionia, Mich., writes: "I send $100. I desire to erect my own monument, and much prefer to place my name in Willard Hall than on any marble slab in the cemetery, as I am well assured from the Temple good will continue to go out for God and humanity long after I am laid to rest." Mrs. Sarah Topping, Monroe City, Mo., sends $50, first payment on a pledge of $100. She writes: "I am sixty-eight years old, live on a farm, and consequently cannot do much in the work but pray for those who can." David B. Carse sends a check for $100.

***

The bright little editor of The Midget, Ethel Stout, has fled from the cold breath of the North and taken up her residence at Melbourne, Florida. The Midget, however, still lives and continues to delight the children who can easily afford to take it, as it costs only ten cents a year. Little Ethel has lately sent $50 towards the Mrs. Trego tablet; $10 of this was for a Baby Band. A little L. T. L. girl, Minnie Gillett, Ashly, Ohio, earned $1.20 of the amount sent by selling the eggs of a little brown hen her mother gave her. Ethel writes: "Every day after that an egg was found in Brownie's nest, though all the other hens had ceased to lay during the cold winter weather." Miss Ruth Hawk, Delaware, Ohio, editor of The White Ribboner, organ of the thirteenth district Ohio W. C. T. U., writes, saying she is going to join The Midget in sending one-tenth receipts of the paper to the Temple, and will apply the money on the Mrs. Trego tablet.

***

The sale of silver models of the Temple are greatly on the increase; all are delighted with them. The jewel case makes an exquisite birthday gift to a lady, and nothing could be nicer for a gentleman on such an anniversary than the inkstand. Mrs. Hollopeter, Shenandoah, Pa., writes: "The inkstand has been received. I am more than pleased with it; it has been greatly admired. I purchased it for a birthday gift to my husband who is a lawyer, to use in his office; he says it is too pretty, he is afraid something will happen to it there." Price of inkstand and jewel case, $2.25 each; bank, $1.75.

***

All checks and post-office orders should be made out in the name of Miss Esther Pugh and sent to her at Evanston, Ill. Orders for Temple Trust Bonds should be sent to H. C. Speer, 237 La Salle street, Chicago. A two-cent stamp will secure a Temple mite-box and all documents in regard to the Temple including circular giving prices and description of silver models. Address Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, The Temple, La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

The Household.

DON'T STOP AT THE STATION DESPAIR.

BY JOAQUIN MILLER.

We must trust the Conductor, most surely;
Why, millions of millions before
Have made this same journey securely,
And come to that ultimate shore.
And we, we will reach it in season;
And ah! what a welcome is there;
Reflect then, how out of all reason
To stop at the station Despair.

Ay, midnights and many a potion
Of little black water have we,
As we journey from ocean to ocean—
From sea unto ultimate sea—
To that deep sea of seas, and all silence
Of passion, concern and of care,
That vast sea of Eden-set islands.
Don't stop at the station Despair.

Go forward, whatever may follow,
Go forward, friend-led, or alone;
Ah, me! to leap off in some hollow
Or fen, in the night and unknown—
Leap off like a thief; try to hide you
From angels, all waiting you there;
Go forward; whatever betide you
Don't stop at the station Despair.

"I WILL MAKE YOU FISHERS OF MEN."

BY MRS. F. M. HOWARD.

"My son," there was a pathetic quiver in the voice.

"What is it, mother? Don't look so downcast. I'm not going into a lion's den."

"Alas! dear boy, there are lions in every pathway in life. I should feel so much safer if you were a Christian."

"But I'm a gentleman, I hope, if not a Christian," and the young man straightened himself up proudly.

"Yes—well, I can pray for you still when you are gone. Your mother's God go with you, my dear boy. You are all I have, the hope and pride of my life."

She clasped her arms around him, and the old, old form of heart-breaking farewell was said—as old as the days in which mothers have parted from their sons, to see them go out from home to the temptations of life in the great busy world.

He waved his hand to her at the turn in the street which hid his home from view, and while she sank down by her arm-chair in an agony of tearful prayer, he passed on to the railway station.

For the first few days the excitement of seeing the new sights of the busy little city effectually drove away all thoughts of loneliness, and his leisure hours were devoted to looking up its manufacturing interests, in watching the steamboats coming and going upon the great Mississippi. But after a time these things, so interesting in their novelty, began to get stale, and as the evenings grew longer, an uneasy sense of disquiet took possession of him.

He had a room at his boarding-house—a box-like affair—the regulation bed-stead, wash-stand and chair and a rickety table its only furniture. No pictures or draperies to make it seem cozy or homelike, and he soon grew unutterably weary of its prison-like dimensions. Yet where could he go?

He had a horror of saloons, and he had never acquired the habit of lounging about the stores. He had made several acquaintances among young men of his age, one of whom in particular had repeatedly invited him into a club, which in its associations was only a saloon in principle, but he had so far avoided it and obtained for himself the title of "goody-boy" in consequence; but in his exceeding loneliness he had concluded to accept should the invitation be again pressed upon him.

"Come on, Baker, let's go out to church. The leading pastor in the city is giving a series of sermons to young men, and perhaps he'll have something for us." There had been a new recruit in the boarding-house ranks of late, a stranger like himself but of a stronger, firmer mould, and the two had felt strongly drawn together, to Harry Baker's advantage.

The house was filled when they arrived, but a skilled force of young men were acting as ushers and they were taking especial pains that young men, particularly strangers, should be well seated, and one of the best seats in the church was found for them. It was a strong sermon, full of pointed and helpful suggestions, and at its close the speaker said that in trying to solve the problem of what could be done for the young men who came from their homes to the city, that a number of ladies had offered to open their homes on stated evenings, for the entertainment of any young man who wished to enter the circle of an intelligent Christian family.

"I cannot tell you the pleasure it gives me to make this announcement," the speaker said earnestly, "and I trust that many of you here to-night will use the opportunity." He then read the names, the number of the residences, and the evenings upon which each would entertain.

"We design that two or more Christian homes shall be open every evening in each week, until we have had time to prove our plan a success or a failure, and cards containing the list for the week can be had of the ushers."

"Well, what do you think of it?" said Harry Baker.

They had each taken a card as they passed out.

"I think preaching and practice have got a mighty sight nearer each other than they usually get," was Ernest Duncan's reply. "It's easy enough to preach against questionable places, and tell a fellow he mustn't do this, and he mustn't go there, but if they take away all these things they ought in reason to suggest something in place of it. Shall we go?"

"We'll let circumstances determine." Harry Baker was naturally timid and dreaded the entrée among strangers.

Monday evening they were both busy, but on Wednesday evening the subject was renewed.

"Come on, Harry, we'll dress and hunt up the places, anyhow," said Ernest, coming into the small, uninviting room of his fellow-boarder.

"Clark wanted me to go to the theater with him this evening," replied Harry. "They're going to have an oyster supper afterward—some of the boys."

"Something you'd better avoid, if you'll take my advice. That is one of the lowest of variety theaters, and I don't fancy that Clark."

"I can't say that I do particularly, but a fellow must have some fun or fossilize."

"Better fossilize than decay. Come, Baker, I'd counted upon you to go with me to-night."

"All right, old fellow. I believe you're the safest man of the two," replied Harry, with a little secret relief in making the decision.

There were three homes open for the evening, and they found the first number on the list readily, the blinds were shut, and there were no outward signs of hospitality.

"Pshaw, do they think we are going to bombard such a formidable looking castle as that?" said Harry impatiently. "Come on, Duncan, let's go up to the theater. This Christian hospitality is a failure."

"Don't judge too hastily; we'll go on to the next place."

Very fortunately Clark did not cross their line of march or Harry would have broken ranks at the first fire of his sarcastic raillery, and as it was, Ernest barely succeeded in holding him until the next number was reached.

It was a pleasant cottage home, and a friendly light streamed out of the unshaded windows—a lovely white-haired mother placidly rocked in an easy chair, and a bright-faced girl was playing a lively tune upon the piano, while a young man carried a rattling accompaniment upon a violin.

"There's the place!" exclaimed Ernest heartily. "This looks more as if they were ready and expecting company," while a big, uncomfortable lump rose up in Harry's throat—he had not seen anything so homelike since he had left his own white-haired mother.

There was a little natural restraint just at first, but the music proved a bond of sympathy, and in ten minutes they were chatting easily and joining in with the family pleasures.

Others came in a little while, drawn there by the spell of that friendly open window, and several plans were proposed and gotten under way for spending the winter evenings pleasantly and innocently, a reading evening and musical evening each week among them.

"You will help us to bring in other young men who need home influence, will you not?" The dear, motherly hand was laid on Harry's arm with affectionate zeal.

"Yes, indeed I will, Mrs. Wayne. You do not know what this evening has done for me," his voice trembled in spite of him, as he contrasted its pleasure with that which he had contemplated.

That night was the turning point in Harry's career, as it branched out into avenues of usefulness and respectability, and as he and Ernest became interested in the work, many others in equal need were introduced into Christian homes, and furnished with innocent and intelligent amusement.

When spring again opened her avenues of interest and out-of-door recreation to the unoccupied, the pastor made another announcement to his congregation:

"I am greatly pleased to report that the plan of opening Christian homes to young and homeless men has been a noble success, and I am persuaded that the ripples of influence which have gone out from the movement will be immortal. In watching its workings I have noted one fact, however, which I will bring before you as a suggestion: It has been those who have fished with open windows and bright, cheerful firesides who have caught the most fish. Do not shut your blinds and present a dark front when you hope to entice a wanderer; rather hang out a banner with an illuminated 'Welcome' upon it, and give the saloon no advantage of brightness or monopoly of attractions for homeless or idle men."

AGAINST THE KINGDOM OF DARKNESS.

BY VIOLA ROSEBORO.

In how many ways—ways often uncontemplated—a good deed does good! That thought was impressed on me anew when a short time ago I made my first visit to a New York Chinese mission Sunday-school. Before me was a scene curious and impressive. In a large, pleasant room were many little desks scattered irregularly about, and at each desk sat a Chinaman and his teacher—and nearly every one of these teachers was a woman. The pupils' manner to their instructors was as if they felt them to be a superior race of beings, so profoundly, gently respectful was it. When one remembers the ideas about women in which they were bred, it is clear that however this school may or may not succeed in the specific aims it proposes to itself, it is bound to introduce a powerful leaven of new ideas into many a Chinese mind.

This first visit I made under the guidance of a little sweet-hearted, staunch-souled medical student, who, as soon as she is an M. D., is to sail for China as a missionary. She wears a white ribbon in her buttonhole, and is one of those typical "girls of the period" that the W. C. T. U. has done so much to cultivate, in whom burns a zeal for good works that identifies her with every movement for helping mankind. All the pupils were very neat in their dress, and I was much diverted by one funny little boy, fourteen or fifteen years old, I suppose. From some hidden receptacle of his mysterious apparel he drew a towel, and, though the need of such attention was not in the least apparent, began dusting himself from head to heel. The singing began; some one found the hymn and handed him a book, but the moment the benevolent singer's back was turned the little heathen returned to the attack, being evidently of the opinion that cleanliness is next to godliness, by being before it in importance.

I noticed that several ladies wore peculiar, bright silk handkerchiefs that did not exactly harmonize with their gowns. The doctor explained that these were gifts from pupils—that is, you may say, they are a badge of honor here, testifying the affection gained and appreciated.

As I have intimated, every pupil has a teacher to himself. Parenthetically I would remark that a limited experience leads me to think that two teachers to a pupil would often be about the right proportion; not that the Chinese are stupid, far from it; and what brings them to the schools is their great ambition to learn the English language, so there is never, in teaching them, any listless indifference to contest. But primary teaching and primary learning are hard at best, and when there is no common language between the teacher and the taught, the case becomes all but desperate. My friend, whom I—letting coming events cast their shadows before—shall call the doctor for convenience, devoted her attention to a bright young pagan who could read and write English, and who was most eager to perfect himself in these accomplishments, making inquiries as to the possibility of getting an English and Chinese dictionary and writing down new words on little tablets he carried with him; yet, when the doctor tried to explain that St. John was the one whom Jesus loved, Chang Wing, after a moment's puzzling, looked up brightly with the unaccountable remark: "Oh, yes, name John, name Love, all samee; I see." After being allowed to look about for awhile, I was put in charge of a little chap, in comparison to whom Chang Wing was a great English lexicographer; he knew his letters, but I can't imagine how he ever learned them for he could not speak any English. Our interview proceeded for a time in this fashion:

Teacher.—B-a-d. What does that spell?

Pupil.—(imitating inflections with disconcerting accuracy) B-a-d. W'atsatspel?

Teacher.—Oh, no. B-a-d; now, you spell it.

Pupil.—(with an air of great contentment, as if confident that wisdom would in time result from this queer game) B-a-d. Yoospellit.

It was too much like that old but edifying tale of the class undergoing examination in ancient Hebrew; one unfortunate, beginning to translate, got so far as "The Lord said unto Moses," and there stuck; he nudged his neighbor for help. "Skip it," whispered that astute youth, and "The Lord said unto Moses, 'skip it,'" read the grateful translator.

Presently, however, I put in practice what pedagogues call, I believe, the "word method," and with famous success, for my pupil had a good memory and gave me devout attention. I suppose the word method harmonized with his preconceived ideas, for it seems to be the one recommendation of the Chinese language that there is no spelling in it.

After the benediction my pupil stood a moment near me, hesitatingly, and then he said, "You comee nex' time? Me come, all samee. Goo-by." Who could have resisted that?

. . . . . .

Last week my washerwoman was showing me, with great pride, the two or three house plants that she had brought safely through the winter so far. To do it, she or "the children" had carried them many times up and down stairs to the coal bin in the cellar. "Here's one's got buds on it, see!" she exclaimed, proudly. Evidently these geraniums are the romance, the decorative border of her hard-working life, giving it that gracious touch that things of utility alone could never, to her feeling, bestow.

"Mrs. Mason," said she patiently, even with a touch of self-question in her tone, "said she should think I'd rather take the time to sew for the children. I do sew for 'em a good deal."

I told her that I thought those plants and their share of care of them would do more for her children than the little sewing they possibly displaced.

Of course this hard-working, honest little washerwoman of mine is not so terribly poor as many of her neighbors, or she could not manage to have even this little morsel of beauty in her life, but when the blessed summer comes—the summer that with all heat and sickness, lessens the bitter struggle for the food and warmth to keep bodies and souls together—then in the poorest quarters of New York you will see plants in windows, on roofs, on fire-escapes, here one, there another, oh, a good many altogether, and representing many a weary step downstairs and up again with water, now lifting boxes here, now there for sun or shade. I have seen, from the elevated road, in a dreadful neighborhood, a sort of screen built out of old bits of wood, and when the afternoon sun was too hot, it held some rags and old garments so that their shadow partly sheltered some morning-glory vines that grew out of a couple of old boxes sitting beneath a window on a roof. Ah! didn't those little, sickly, faithful vines—looking as if they were trying so hard to do the best they could—didn't they speak eloquently for the flower missions? And it made me so sorry to see that for all their good will, they were very monotonous morning-glories; beautiful a morning-glory must be, and divinely so in a place like that, but I knew their owner would have been so proud to have some white and pink ones amid the blue!

New York City.

UNION SIGNAL
WOMAN AND HOME — WHITE RIBBON

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

FRANCES E. WILLARD,
LADY HENRY SOMERSET,
MARY ALLEN WEST, } EDITORS.

MARGARET A. SUDDUTH,
MRS. HARRIET B. KELLS. } OFFICE EDITORS.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.
MRS. F. H. RASTALL, Business Manager.
161 La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

DEP'T BOOKS AND LEAFLETS.—ALICE M. GUERNSEY, Editor.

Entered at the Post-office, Chicago, Ill., as second-class matter.

W. C. T. U. COURSE OF STUDY—MAY READINGS.

Bible.—The Sunshine of Commendation. Elizabeth W. Greenwood.
Responsive.—Practical Hints for Social Work. Jennie A. Stewart.
Topical.—National Leaflets. No. 27, Society and Society Women—A New Definition; No. 102, A Girl's Influence; No. 104, A New Regime. No. 108, The New Crusade. Our Social World. The Temperance Movement, pp. 521-523. Childhood. Its Care and Culture, pp. 232-234.

Behold, I have given him for a witness to the people, a leader and commander to the people.—Isa. 55. 4.

OUR BILL OF FARE

presents first this week a new convention Battle Hymn, composed by Mrs. Merrill E. Gates. Lady Henry Somerset's charming farewell letter occupies the place of her character sketches. Page 3 bears the names of two widely read authors—Neal Dow and Elizabeth Stuart Phelps Ward, the former treating of Prohibition in Maine and the latter urging a more personal relation between the reformer and reformed. The World's Fair Progress, particularly that of the women's department, is told by Dr. Cushman. The imminent risk of saloons on railway trains is depicted by Dr. T. D. Crothers, an unquestioned authority on all forms of inebriety. The Oakland W. C. T. U. Coffee House is described by Mrs. M. G. C. Edholm, and illustrated by a good cut. The correspondence department is entirely filled by a long and interesting letter from Mrs. Mary Clement Leavitt, the first since the resumption of her round-the-world mission. "Amber" speaks effectively on sarcastic speech through the Queen's Gardens department, and "Aunt Jane" is able to tell the happy children that her "Cozy Corner" will welcome all the young readers of THE UNION SIGNAL.

THE MORMON QUESTION.

There are many theories of the origin of evil. The men who will write theological treatises in the twentieth century will probably explain its awful advent into this world as having resulted from the first intrusion by the stronger upon the mate or comrade who, though weaker than himself in body, was finer in soul. However that may be, the degeneration of man has always been the inseparable result of the subjugation of woman, for the stream cannot rise higher than its fountain, and it is written in God's sacred book of fate which men call natural law, that woman's relation to the home, to society and the state shall determine man's degree of elevation or of ignominy.

Turkey is doubtless the most debased country on earth, and there, as we were told in Constantinople by an American of twenty years' residence in that capital, a Turkish gentleman (?) who so far forgets himself as to mention his wife in the hearing of ears polite always adds at once, "I beg your pardon for the allusion." In Syria we learned from the missionaries that a man never calls himself a father unless he has a son,—his daughters being altogether counted out until a brother's birth places a significant figure before them, after which they are mentioned as "that boy's sister," whence comes the title of a famous lecture known to us all.

But America need not go so far for illustrations. Turkey is in our midst. Modern Mohammedanism has its Mecca at Salt Lake where Mormon leaders were wont to speak of their wives as "cows." Clearly the Koran was Joseph Smith's model in getting up his "bible," so closely followed as to exclude even the poor pretense of originality in his foul "revelations." A man was to take his position in the future world according to the zeal with which he had built up numerically "the kingdom" here, while woman's immortality depended on her conjugal relations.

When we consider that the country which, until recent years, permitted this abomination of desolation to continue, is the bright consummate flower of Christian civilization, when we remember that this is the nineteenth century and that the formula of Utah's monstrous lust is "Live your religion," we are tempted to change Sojourner Truth's famous words, "Is God dead?" from a question into a heart-sick affirmation. If the incalculable mischief of excluding women from a direct participation in the government needed an illustration so conspicuous as to silence the blindest and most conservative, it is afforded by the long dalliance of our government with its unclean constituency beyond the Wasatch mountains.

The same esprit de corps which led a Mormon wife to say as she touched the chilly hand of a dying man, "Thank God, this can never again strike a woman!" ought to inspire us as white-ribboners to work in this great cause, for although the Edmunds Bill has wrought out marvels, and placed the nation in a worthy attitude towards this organized villainy, work is still greatly needed to insure its enforcement and to keep Mormonism out of the other territories. We have all heard the eloquent speeches of Mrs. Angie F. Newman, our superintendent of work among the Mormons, with thoughts too deep for tears. Some other planet may have a vocabulary fiendish enough to fitly characterize what they reveal, but mere language is only the vocabulary of a prating parrot in presence of such pathos and such woe. There is something chivalric as the knights of old in the Mormon women's self-defense from the harsh criticism made by the uninformed upon their course in submitting to this awful tyranny. But with the physical strength and the money power in the one scale and only the poor mother-heart in the other, there is no more mystery about the passive attitude of Mormon women towards their masters than about that of unhappy wives in more favored localities, or in the mute endurance of slaves and squaws. When Brigham Young declared that if women would not willingly submit to polygamy they should be eternally damned, and when the records show that women who have resisted have often done so at the cost of life, the mystery of the non-resistance policy which they have commonly pursued is certainly cleared up. "Starve them and beat them if necessary to bring them to submission," said the Mormon apostle; "better crucify the body than let the soul go to perdition."

Well was the method of these hypocrites characterized by the Mormon wife who said of one of them, "He is a man who steps on hearts as though he stepped on stones." The fact that Emma Smith, the first wife of Joseph, so trained her sons that they reorganized the church, and their branch of it prohibited polygamy, shows that the one woman who had power in this subtle hierarchy was swift to use it for a righteous end. It is time that the Christian women of this nation aroused themselves to organized action against this sum of all curses which can curse the sex not physically strong. To say we have been hitherto indifferent would be to libel our womanhood no less than our religion when we remember the great petitions which have registered where they were little heeded, the votes of the great army of women whose actual ballot would soon deliver their captive sisters on the blighted frontier.

But the hour demands a deeper, more combined and farther-reaching movement, and the instinct of self-protection no less than philanthropy should warn all wives and mothers of this land that each woman's degradation means the potential degradation of all women, and it will lead us along the path of high endeavor which the great need of the hour points out, until the book of Mormonism is burned in the fierce blaze of Christian womanhood's indignation and man's righteous wrath, and until the gospel of Him who came not only to redeem the world, but to restore to woman her lost inheritance, the equality of equals, is the blessed home religion of every home. Let the warning be noted. We have not yet come to the end of the subtle, elusive, mighty "Mormon Question," either in Utah or elsewhere.

A DAY WITH WHITTIER.

On leaving Portland March 21, Lady Henry Somerset and her party visited Newburyport, perhaps the most historic town outside Boston in the good old commonwealth of Massachusetts. The poet Whittier makes his home here with his cousins, those noble Quakers, Joseph Cartland and Gertrude Cartland, his wife. We had been invited to lunch with that great man whom we love to call "the woman's laureate" and a few of his near friends. Miss Ellen Clement, an accomplished woman and cousin of Bishop Phillips Brooks, met us at the railway station with a few of our devoted W. C. T. U. women.

We then went to the Cartland homestead, where the white-ribboners were received by us, presenting bouquets of flowers and speaking gracious words, which were responded to in the same spirit of affectionate comradeship by which they were inspired, after which we sang "Blest be the tie that binds," and Lady Henry Somerset led us in prayer. Then for several hours we had the happiness of being in the presence of the author of "Snow Bound," "My Psalm" and "Laus Deo." He is now in his eighty-fifth year, and has recently been very ill, but his beautiful brotherly spirit caused him to remain with us when we felt he was hardly able to do so. He laughed at the anecdotes we told and the funny little recitals by which we sought to make the interval less wearisome. For, much as we desired to hear him speak, we would not ask many questions lest he be too much fatigued. Every one knows how utterly unpretentious is his manner and how great his unwillingness to speak of himself or his works; how generous his words of praise to those about him for anything they have attempted or accomplished, and how deep the impression he always makes of a devout spirituality.

He said, "If Lady Henry Somerset wanted to see an old-fashioned, down-east Yankee I am a fair specimen." He declared that he did not feel that he had done much in the world, only regretting that "while my opportunities have been so great I have accomplished so little! I love this world which has been most kind to me, and I have many friends here whom I would be very sorry to leave, but I am ready any time and know that the period must now be short. I have turned my case over into the hands of my heavenly Father with perfect serenity and peace; I know there is nothing to fear from Him who is both Mother and Father to our souls," He is a devout man and one whose whole life has been of the most exalted purity.

We saw the photograph of that sister whom he loved so much and concerning whom he wrote those tender lines:

"As one who held herself a part
Of all she saw, and let her heart
Against the household bosom lean,
Upon the motley braided mat
Our youngest and our dearest sat,
Lifting her large, sweet, asking eyes
Now bathed within the fadeless green
And holy peace of Paradise.

. . . . . .

Do those large eyes behold me still?
With me one little year ago:—
The chilly weight of winter's snow
For months upon her grave hath lain."

The face is like the poet's own.

He asked with brotherly kindness about our movements, about the progress of the temperance work and the W. C. T. U., the "House Beautiful" in Chicago, in which he evinced great interest and of which we promised to send him a picture. We felt consecrated by his presence, and went our ways grateful to God that we had ever met and loved one who has so deeply loved humanity.

In a copy of "Snow Bound" which he presented to her, the poet wrote these lines: "To Lady Henry Somerset with a full appreciation of the benign and Christian influences of her visit among us, and with sincerest wishes for her own happiness. From her friend,

JOHN G. WHITTIER."

God bless the beautiful soul whose white life shines already in the firmament of the immortals. May we all listen in these fateful days of the republic, to his loving, brave and brotherly voice saying, "Oh, my people, oh, my brothers, let us choose the righteous side."

THANKS TO DR. PARKHURST.

This well-merited recognition to a great and beneficent character and work is altogether in keeping with the white-ribbon code: "We will praise people while yet they are alive."

AUBURNDALE, MASS., April 7, 1892.

Rev. Dr. Parkhurst, New York City:

HONORED AND DEAR BROTHER:—We wish, as the two leading officers of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union, to thank you most profoundly for your heroic and successful efforts to arouse the good people of New York City to the abominations that have so long gone on unchecked in the metropolis of the new world. We believe that what you have accomplished will set a key-note to be heard throughout the nation and in other lands by Christian pastors, who will do more in the future than in the past to fight the dragons of their own day and to build over against their own pulpits and homes walls of protection for the young and undefended, the ignorant and the weak. We deplore the falseness of public officials, who, having sworn a solemn oath to enforce the laws made by the people's representatives, deliberately permit the worst crimes to go unchecked, and knowingly and for a bribe enter into collusion with the dram-shop, the gambling hell and the haunt of shame; but when a city has reached this pitch of demoralization in those who should be its guardians and defenders, we cannot but highly appreciate and magnify the public service rendered by such a servant of God as you, honored brother, have proved yourself to be; and we believe if other ministers in all our cities, towns and villages will stand, as you have done, for purity and truth, the laity will flock around them, and such a public sentiment will be concentrated as will give the deathblow to any man in public life who is in office, or who seeks election and is, at the same time, the secret ally of the vicious element whose recording office is the saloon.

Thanking you again most heartily for all you have done, and praying that the blessing of God may be upon your life and labors and home, we are, with devoted loyalty to the cause of temperance and purity,

Your sisters in the Master's work,

FRANCES E. WILLARD,
President World's W. C. T. U.
ISABEL SOMERSET,
Vice-President-at-large W. W. C. T. U.

"PERSONAL LIBERTY."

And ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free. If the Son shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed. Because the creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God. Where the spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty. Stand fast, therefore, in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage. But whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty, and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work, this man shall be blessed in his deed. So speak ye, and so do, as they that shall be judged by the law of liberty. But take heed lest by any means this liberty of yours become a stumblingblock to them that are weak. For, brethren, ye have been called unto liberty; not only use liberty for an occasion to the flesh, but by love serve one another. For all the law is fulfilled in one word, even in this: Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. Unto such there is no law. As free, and not using your liberty as a cloak of maliciousness, but as the servants of God. The Lord hath sent me to bind up the brokenhearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives and the opening of the prison to them that are bound.

AN inadvertent statement crept into our columns a few weeks since in an article entitled, "The Ideal Nurse," to the effect that Anna Carter Lee, daughter of Gen. Robert Lee, was deserted by her family on account of political differences, and left to die in the presence of an old colored nurse. In justice to the author of the article, we wish to say that her authority is to be found on page 22, Vol. II. of the history of Woman's Suffrage, and in justice to the relatives of Miss Lee we gladly state the correction furnished by her brother, which is that Miss Lee's political sentiments were just the same as those of the other members of the family, and that her mother and sisters attended her during her entire illness and were present at her deathbed.

THE New England M. E. Conference, in session in Boston, April 11, adopted the following, by a good majority, though strenuous efforts were made by "non-partisan" partisans to prevent it:

WHEREAS, according to testimony from many sources, that the two chief political parties of the country are in practical complicity with the liquor traffic, and the allegation is sustained by the fact that they are largely dependent upon the liquor vote; that rumsellers occupy positions of influence in their councils and caucuses, and that they persistently refuse to countenance the legal prohibition of the traffic, therefore,

Resolved, That, as Christian ministers and citizens, we repudiate those parties as false to a great principle of political morality and unworthy the votes of those who pray to God for the extinction of the legalized liquor traffic.

The report goes on to congratulate the state on the great gain made in the no-license vote, a "yes" majority of sixteen thousand having been changed to a "no" majority of over thirteen thousand since December 1. It also praises the work of the W. C. T. U., and favors municipal suffrage for women. Well done, New England Methodists.

The Temple Question Box.

QUESTION.—Will $100 sent in memoriam for our president give us a tablet in her memory, and also entitle us to become stockholders to that amount in the Temperance Temple?

ANSWER.—It will pay for a name in Willard Hall and will be credited on stock for the National W. C. T. U. When the building has been paid for and net returns made, one-half will go towards the National W. C. T. U, and the other half to the state from whence the money was sent, but it will not make any local union, as such, a stockholder in the Temple, as the National society will own the entire property. Local unions, without doubt, will reap the benefit from their gifts, as each state will receive one-half the income from the building pro rata the amount each state has sent to the building fund.

Q.—What guarantee can the unions have that half the income from money sent by a state will come back to the state sending it? Is it anything more than a plan? Has it any foundation in any action of the National society? Is it founded on anything that can be given as a guarantee? If the division is made on a business basis, will not the state treasurer receive the money and the state executive determine how it will be used?

A.—The guarantee that has been given to states that they will receive one-half the net income according to the amount each state sends to the building fund, is based on the pledge of the acting trustee of this fund, during the past five years, Mrs. Matilda B. Carse,—Miss Frances E. Willard coinciding therein on behalf of the National W. C. T. U.; consequently it is impossible to go back on any such pledge, as it would be dishonest and dishonorable in the highest degree and not to be tolerated for one moment among Christian women, as this guarantee has been reiterated in THE UNION SIGNAL and by circulars sent throughout the land during the last five years. Surely no stronger guarantee can be asked for or thought of than this. This pledge has been strengthened by Mrs. Carse calling to her assistance twelve of the leading white-ribboners of the country to aid her in the care of this fund, and they are, with the exception of Miss Frances E. Willard, Lady Henry Somerset, Mrs. M. A. Woodbridge, Madam Demorest and Miss Helen L. Hood, presidents of states, thus making this guarantee rest upon the shoulders of thirteen good and true women, instead of upon one. It does not require any action of the National W. C. T. U. to decide how the income from the building shall be disposed of, as that society must abide by the decision of the trustees who receive the trust fund, that the money sent from the various states will be thus disposed of. All the National society has to do in the matter is to receive the gift of the building from the trustees when it is fully paid for and deeded to them. It must be received by them on the conditions and guarantees held out to the people who gave the money to build it.

Yes, the state treasurers will receive their portions of the income from the building, and the state executives will undoubtedly decide how it is to be disbursed. No doubt all states will decide that a certain amount of temperance literature shall be given yearly to the unions that have contributed to the building fund. The board of trustees intends to recommend this to the states.

Q.—Must the building be paid for within five years, or a majority of the stock be owned by the National W. C. T. U. by that time?

A.—The trustees have an option whereby they can purchase it in five years, and it may extend to twelve years by the payment of five per cent for the use of the money. The trustees hold the stock for the National W. C. T. U. It is wisdom's part to secure the control of the stock as soon as possible.

Q.—Mrs. Carse says in her report at the Boston Convention: "Relying on the honor of the business men not to keep possession of the stock." Have we no other guarantee?

A.—Yes, we have a guarantee. All who placed their names in the stock book signed an agreement that they would sell the stock to us for the purpose of securing headquarters for the National W. C. T. U. by the payment of five per cent for the use of the money; this option to last for twelve years. By an action of the supreme court three years ago this decision was reversed, but all who signed the agreement with us acknowledge a moral obligation to carry it out far more binding than any mere law technicality could make it. To show their good faith, all whom we have asked to sell their stock on the terms agreed upon have been perfectly willing to do so, and we have purchased from Mr. Field, who is the largest stockholder, his entire amount of stock. Reference to the terms of this sale will be found in THE UNION SIGNAL of last week in the Temple items.

Q.—It occurs to me that we have several devoted givers to the temperance cause whom we might well hold in remembrance, not only in our hearts, but by reason of a tablet that should bear their names all engraved together on the same, and I would be willing to pay towards bringing this about as I doubt not other of their friends would also. What do you think of the suggestion?

A.—This is an excellent suggestion and we herewith append the names of several prominent friends of the National W. C. T. U. whom it would be a privilege to honor in this way.

Miss Sarah E. Spear, of Woburn, Mass., left in her will $400 to the National W. C. T. U. She was a noble young woman who passed away two years ago.

Mr. A. E. Bartlett, of Connecticut, left the National W. C. T. U. $5,000.

Mr. J. H. Kellogg, recently deceased, of Rochester, N. Y., built the Kellogg Cottage at Chautauqua, where we have our headquarters.

Mrs. Evelyn Peters, of Manistee, built Evelyn Cottage at Bay View, Michigan.

Dr. R. H. MacDonald, of California, has given thousands of dollars.

Ferdinand Schumaker has done the same, always coming to our rescue in difficult emergencies.

W. Jennings Demorest has invested tens of thousands of dollars in the great contests that bear his name, and there are others whom we would gladly enumerate, but for lack of space cannot. All these names should go on one tablet with the sentence, "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver."

The Watch-Tower.

Truth, like cream, always comes to the top.

***

All that God can do for the human soul, the tempter promises to do with the intoxicating cup. Whisky is the devil's counterfeit for the Holy Spirit, and mortals in all lands have been deceived by this counterfeit. The philosophy of Christian missions is a desire born of the Holy Spirit in a mortal's heart that he must go and tell mortals who may come to Him and drink and thirst no more.

***

Mrs. Annie Jenness Miller says that the inequality between the sexes and the dominance of man begins when the boy is allowed more pockets than the girl; he brings out things new and old, and especially new, from those mysterious receptacles of which he has a dozen to her one; he jingles the impossible collections of those pockets in her ears and she has no redress; she thinks, poor little innocent, that he must certainly be somebody or other when he carries with him such a menagerie, but all the same these pockets are no indication whatever of his superiority, for she could have and ought to have the same; she appreciates conveniences as much as he, and would just as gladly gather up a specimen exhibit of whatever is in the heaven above and the earth beneath; that she does not is altogether her misfortune and not at all her fault. We have been exceedingly mild in our remarks upon the inequality of fate and fortune as respects men and women, but we call for a strike on the pocket-question. Here is a good place to draw the line and say we will have our quota, we will no longer put up with fewer than one dozen pockets apiece, and before long we shall demand the outside number which, to the best of our knowledge, equals eighteen.

***

In these days when every scrap of information concerning Columbus is made much of, Mrs. Christopher Columbus should be made a subject of inquiry. She was a Miss Palestrallo, of Lisbon, the daughter of a navigator, and well educated. She made many perilous voyages with her father, who gave her, as her very appropriate dowry, a valuable collection of charts, maps and important memoranda which were better than money in banks to a man like Columbus. The lady managers should take measures to have Mrs. Columbus suitably recognized at the Columbian Exposition.

***

The Æolian harp yields no sound to the human hand but only to the breeze of God; in like manner reforms come only to hearts swept by the spirit of our Heavenly Father.

***

When you get so tired that rest seems an unattainable boon, when you are so overwhelmed with work that leisure is beyond reach, when all the "rough edges" seem to be on the outside, and all your nerves likewise above the surface, when your spirit is vexed within you, and even your "fond, familiar" friends irritate and oppress you, stay your impatient, wearied soul with the thought that to-morrow all may be changed, that while you sleep, a strange power may smooth the harsh things and undo the snarls, and that, at the farthest, there is not very far away a golden day when you will wonder why all these trifles hurt you so, and when you will find yourself smiling and serene as if no storms had passed your way, FOR, all these things have worked together for your good, as you are the Father's child, and so—good came.

***

One of the prettiest stories I ever heard is as follows: When Lady Henry Somerset was four or five years old a ball was given at Buckingham Palace to be attended by none except the first born of peers. She went with her parents, the Earl and Countess of Somers. Being an independent little thing she strayed off from her guardians and went on a tour of observation through the great hall, and finally when Queen Victoria and Prince Albert left to go to the banquet table she seated herself on the cushioned seat the Queen had vacated. She had on a white tulle dress with real daisies pinned or fastened to it and a wreath of natural daisies rested on her chestnut brown hair. When Queen Victoria returned, behold, the little girl was in her seat, whereat the Queen seemed quite amused and said, "And this is little Isabel." The child answered with quite a toss of her head, "This is Lady Isabel." When Lady Henry was eighteen years of age she was presented at court and wore a white dress covered with natural flowers as before. The Queen bent to kiss her fresh young cheek, as is the custom with the daughters of peers when they are presented, and said, "Daisies again, Lady Isabel!" She had remembered the circumstance of the ball-room all those years, in the midst of her greatly preoccupied life.

ON DUTY.

Queen's Gardens.

SARCASTIC SPEECH.

BY AMBER.

"Better the smart of a hair shirt than the wounds of a sarcastic tongue." Solomon didn't say exactly that, but it ought to be added to his proverbs. Of all warfares there are none so deadly as those that are waged with Indians. Why? Because savages do their deadliest work from the secret ambush, and all their methods are sly, and artful, and deceiving. They make a sortie from unexpected places, and overwhelm bravery by skulking artifice. The foe that meets you on the open field you can contend against, but the foe that sneaks up behind you with a sand-bag can never be coped with, even though you be a Custer for lion-hearted daring, or a Sheridan for brilliant dash. And so in those bloodless warfares of words, waged, alas! in every household. The adversary who comes out with a "present arms" of hot shot, in the way of a quick temper and an impetuous tongue, never does the mischief to domestic concord that that member of the family circle does whose tongue is tipped with the venom of sarcasm, as certain ancients dipped their sword-points in poison.

One can stand the onslaught of a fierce scolding, perhaps, but the bravest are liable to strike their colors before the sleek tirade of sarcastic speech. Even as a big ship breasts a tempest but "lays to" in a fog. Sometimes indulgent parents put pills in apple-sauce, and thus lure their little victims to take the physic, but any smart child would rather take the pill as a pill, than to run across its nauseous flavor in a sweetmeat. Give me an up and down whipping and I will take it like a hero, but tickle the soles of my feet and I die.

Oh, if married folks, and brothers and sisters, and loving friends, everywhere, would only take heed of this and lay it up for familiar practice. If you are bound to hurt one another, use sizable switches, don't descend to pin-points. Let your cause for grievance take good, round words for weapons, not innuendoes and heart-thrusts. To overwhelm an adversary with sarcasm is like prodding tender places with clumsy fingers, and pretending to be amazed that it hurts. I despise tortuous methods.

If you want to kill a chicken, chop off its head quick; don't pick out its feathers one by one, until the poor thing dies from torture.

Young wife, if you are determined to ruin the happiness of your husband and the peace of your home, do it quickly by open deeds of revolt, but don't sit, day after day, picking out feathers and touching nerve-centers. There is nothing so sure to murder love as nagging, sarcastic words and covert sneers and flings, but the work is slow, and slow murder is torture.

And, young husband, I would be almost willing to say that I would take my chances for happiness as a drunkard's wife, quite as soon as with a cold-blooded, sarcastic, sneering pessimist, who should stand over against all a woman's warm enthusiasm and bright extravagances of speech with the frigid touch of a sneer, or the nipping processes of ridiculing speech. Did you ever mark the way the frost locks up the sparkling brook? It is not solid ice all in a minute. First a film, and then a flake, and then the impenetrable crust of the cruel emblem of death. The spring sun may smile back the merry mood of the loosened watercourses, and send them singing like thrushes by winding ways to the sea, but there is no sunshine strong enough to warm the frozen heart of love, congealed by slow processes of chilling speech and cruel glances.

Be careful, then, good people. Deal less wantonly with the love that some day you may seek with aching heart to find within the home made desolate by its removal. I think there can be nothing in all the world so sad as the sight of one sitting by a coffin lid, and trying to call back the mocking words that once brought tears to the dear dead eyes, which no yearning cry of love can evermore unseal.

"Boys flying kites haul in their white-winged birds,
But you can't do that way with words."

Certainly a heart will break as surely whatever means you take to break it, and the heart that is slowly crushed in the press of petty tyrannies is just as much murdered in the end as the heart that is ground beneath the iron heel of the demon rum. Oh, my dear! this is a cruel world, and death finds myriad ways of killing both hearts and bodies. Let us be civilized, at least, in our methods, and fight our battles like white men, and not like Sepoys.

"WASTE no tears
Upon the blotted record of lost years,
But turn the leaf and smile, oh, smile to see
The fair white pages that remain for thee."

News from the Field.

MAINE.

MOVING ONWARD.

The Woman's Council has at last really taken root in Maine. While the men of Portland were struggling over the election of a mayor on March 4, the women were occupied in forming a union of clubs. Portland has seventy woman's clubs not one of which exists for the purpose of gambling, wine drinking or cigar smoking. Indeed, as one reads over their names, they justify Miss Willard's claim for women's organizations, for they certainly seem formed for every good purpose under the sun, and for no bad purpose. Twenty-three societies, literary, temperance, missionary, philanthropic, reformatory, charitable, are already represented in the council, and it is expected that many others will come in later. Mrs. M. T. W. Merrill, National superintendent of the W. C. T. U. department for securing homes for homeless children, was chosen president. Mrs. Merrill is a lady of broad culture and high, social position, one of the oldest and most beloved members of our state union in which she has accomplished much, especially along social purity lines. Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, who as treasurer of the national council, was the prime mover in the enterprise, was elected vice-president-at-large, while among the remaining officers are names familiar to Maine white-ribboners. Each society belonging to the council is represented by its president and one delegate, and while each organization will preserve its own identity and the council will be in no way responsible for the acts or utterances of any of them, occasions will be sure to arise when united action will be necessary to secure results desired, and at all times the women composing the different societies will be broadened in thought and sympathy by learning more of each other's work and plans. Those who think charity ought to begin and end in their own city may learn of the devoted missionary workers that they are "debtor both to the Greek and to the barbarian," and it is certainly to be hoped that all who aid in sending the gospel to distant lands will see the close relation of the temperance movement to their work and become equally zealous to prevent the export of strong drink.

That these forward movements on the part of women are viewed with friendly interest by men is evident from the following breezy comments of the Portland Press:

"Some of the women of this city are likely to be coming to the front in public affairs before many years if careful preparation counts for anything. Besides maintaining a persistent and well managed agitation for the privilege of voting, they are also perfecting themselves in parliamentary law—a very handy accomplishment in case any of them should be elected to the city government, the legislature or Congress."

Last week, Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens gave a parliamentary lesson at the rooms of the W. C. T. U. Mrs. Stevens is an excellent presiding officer and her lecture was attended and enjoyed by a large number of women who are members of the various clubs in the city, making up the Woman's Literary Union. The success of the lesson was such as to call for another which she has kindly consented to give.

March 20 was Gen. Neal Dow's eighty-eighth birthday, and many were the wishes expressed that the life and health of this "grand old man" of America may be long continued. In accordance with a custom of several years, the state union remembered the day by sending him a basket of flowers. Gen. Dow, though not very strong physically, retains his mental vigor and acuteness to a wonderful degree, and any one who ventures to assail the Maine law or the principle of prohibition through the public press, is pretty sure to hear from him. He recently contributed to one of our leading dailies a very interesting and valuable article, clearly showing to what an extent prohibition has diminished the consumption of liquors and increased the material and intellectual prosperity of our state. The contrast between the days when twenty distilleries flourished within our borders and every country grocery store was a grog-shop, and the present time, ought to convince the most skeptical of honest doubters.

Yet even with us the course of prohibitory enforcement does not always run smooth, and we are frequently reminded that, as a puzzled foreigner holding a United States license but arrested for liquor selling, forcibly put it, "The United States is bigger than Maine!" At such times we see clearly that there is but one way out of such a contradiction, viz.: that the righteous law of the state become the law of the land; nor do we intend to repose on flowery beds of ease till that time comes.

The sheriff of Oxford county has had this winter a somewhat peculiar experience. He was accused by a Boston firm of ordering liquors and then seizing them at the railway station for the commission. The firm claimed that though various signatures were appended to the orders, the handwriting was Sheriff Blood's. When, however, the case was brought before the grand jury, he was acquitted, to the delight of all his friends who declare that his faithfulness had determined the liquor dealers to cause his removal from office. As soon as the charge was brought against him, Sheriff Blood resigned, saying that he did not wish to retain the position while such an accusation was hanging over him. Many are now desirous that he be reëlected.

Despite the ravages of la grippe our department work is being vigorously prosecuted. Mrs. Wyman, superintendent of the department for securing homes for homeless children, writes: "I think I have every reason to feel greatly encouraged. It is only about four months since we took up this line of work, and we have county superintendents in every county but three, and I hope by continued importunity to secure appointments in these. Two weeks ago I sent a little girl of ten years, whose home had been ruined by drink, to a good, Christian, temperance home. The lady is treasurer of a W. C. T. U., and a member of a Baptist Church. The next Thursday I sent a dear little baby twelve months old, to another nice Christian home, and so the good work goes on, and I feel that the Lord is wonderfully blessing us in it."

Mrs. French, superintendent of temperance work at fairs, and Mrs. Mumford, of the juvenile department, are both much interested in the proposed children's exhibit at the World's Fair, and intend that Maine shall furnish a good number of links for Anna Gordon's total abstinence chain. In some places the red, white and blue cards have been ordered, and the work of gathering autographs of pledged children already begun.

Our state president has made two quite extended trips during the past month, the first into Penobscot county where unions were formed at Dixmont and Kenduskeag. At Dixmont the way was prepared by Rev. Mr. Conack, the son of a Massachusetts white-ribboner. The second trip was into distant Washington county, where she met the ladies of the new Calais union, and to Vanceboro where a new union was formed.

The Calais union has made a good beginning, having secured a room in a desirable locality for the year and received donations of furniture. The Law and Order League, of Calais, is most cordial to the union which promises to become a great power in a part of Maine where temperance work is especially needed.

A cheery note comes from the Presque Isle press superintendent: "We are having large and enthusiastic meetings this winter, and the reason seems to be that we have been at work." At the close of a recent meeting a number of invited guests came in and all sat down to a picnic supper. Sixteen gentlemen were present; eight of whom donned the white ribbon as honoraries. This pleasant affair realized about $13, which will go toward the $100 the union has decided to raise for the Temperance Temple. Twenty-one ladies have already agreed to earn a dollar for the same object, and to tell how they earned it at a "dollar meeting" soon to be held.

Saccarappa boasts of an unusually enterprising Y, which not only includes nearly all the best young people of the place, but is planning to hold a meeting in a neighboring town, hoping to form a society there.

Cumberland Mills has had four lectures, the last by Mrs. Barykat, who spoke most acceptably wherever she went, though a storm and a severe cold prevented her from filling some of her engagements.

The president of the Bangor union writes that they "have just closed the most effective and interesting series of temperance meetings ever held in Bangor." John G. Woolley was there under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. He spoke many times during the week of his stay, and the meetings grew in numbers and interest until the close, when the large hall could hardly hold the people. "Mr. Woolley is truly a man of God. He won all our hearts, and we parted from him with many regrets. The meetings cannot fail to do good and to help raise public sentiment in this city in regard to the temperance question. The pastors of the city stood by him, and were greatly roused by what he said."

MARY L. FRENCH,
State Reporter, Auburn.

KANSAS NOTES.

Sometimes I imagine myself back on the "Western Reserve" in the home of my childhood, and "long for the flesh pots of Egypt," which I forsook more than twenty years ago, but that desire is quickly overcome when I realize that with the sweets, must be taken the bitter portion also, and the "bitter pill," in this case would be, the return to a saloon cursed state, where, as a mother, I should not feel there was a moment's safety for my boys.

The W. C. T. U. of Kansas fully realizes that the call for a "Constitutional Convention" is a menace to our homes, in that it threatens our prohibitory law, and that we shall have a hard battle to defeat its purpose. We have felt the blessed boon of prohibition too long, however, to be willing to give it up, and we shall stand by it to the end, taking for our watchword the stanza so often sung:

"Oh! watch and fight and pray;
The battle ne'er give o'er;
Renew it boldly every day,
And help divine implore."

At the late sessions of the M. E. conferences of Kansas (four in number) the resolutions have had the true ring, and show an awakening on the subject of prohibition both state and National. It seems much as if a response had been made in the hearts of our ministers to the charges of the Voice in its article on the "Ungodly league between the church and the saloon." Among the utterances are the following: "We assure the leaders of all political parties that any alliance to the saloon or indifference to its suppression, is an offense which ought not to be, which cannot be condoned, by the enlightened Christian conscience of the state, no matter whatever other claim they may present for support at the ballot-box. We proclaim this to be the one overshadowing question in the politics of the day." . . . .

"State prohibition can never be made to thoroughly extirpate the evil of intemperance, as liquor can be imported from non-prohibition states, thus rendering nugatory the best laws that can be enacted by the state. National prohibition is the goal for which we must strive, if we would be free, even within our own borders from the blighting presence of the sources of intemperance," with much more to the same purpose. The lay conferences passed equally strong resolutions, and when it is remembered that a large majority of these men, both ministers and laymen, have stood loyally by the Republican party with their votes during all these years, because they believed it to be a prohibition party, it means, if it means anything, a break in the ranks, if that party fails to stand by prohibition in the coming political contest, and may the good Lord help them to vote as they "resolve."

Resolutions were passed denouncing the efforts being made to open the Columbian Exposition to the liquor traffic, also the opening of the Exposition on the Sabbath day. These conferences voted by a very large majority for the admission of women to the General Conference, and several women were admitted as delegates to the lay conferences.

The suffrage conventions which have recently been held throughout the state have been a pronounced success, judging from newspaper reports. A great advancement has certainly been made, in that the subject is no longer treated with contempt by the average newspaper man. Good reports of the meetings are given, and their readers are presented with very fair pictures of the faces of prominent workers for the cause, and the speakers are all given a full measure of praise, instead of ridicule. We shall expect to see the results of these meetings at the spring elections.

From Americus, Lyon county, comes a very interesting report of work done in the W. C. T. U. of that place from which I quote: "The most promising line of work we take up is in the mothers' meetings. Our town is a very small one, but we average fifteen to twenty present at these meetings, and over seventy different mothers have been present at the meetings in the year and five months since we started this most helpful work. The plan of our programs has been to alternate a practical paper and discussion with Bible readings. Our discussions are very frank and free, and bring out all possible sides to a question. A peculiar feature is our 'prayer list.' A list is kept of as many children as possible under fifteen years of age, arranged according to their birthday dates. At every meeting, each mother or lady present is given a list of children whose birthdays will come in the next two weeks, with the dates, and is asked to pray with us and the mothers for the child or children on the birthday. We have over a hundred children on our list now, and every meeting enlarges it. We have distributed over 1,500 pages of literature suited to the work. Last June in order to procure funds for leaflets, etc., we had a 'baby show' one afternoon, and a 'lullaby entertainment' in the evening of the same day, both netting enough for this work for a year. On Washington's birthday our union, aided by the W. R. C. of Americus, presented our town school with a fine large flag nine and one-half by fifteen feet in size. We had appropriate exercises taken from our W. T. P. A. little program of temperance and patriotism, and the flag was hoisted into position by the presidents of the W. C. T. U. and the W. R. C. Lyon county held its semi-annual convention at Americus, but the attendance was small on account of bad weather. Twenty departments are kept up, fourteen of these reported. We hope to 'boom' Lyon county W. C. T. U. before fall."

The president of Brown county sends a report of the good work done for them by J. Howard Moore. He is greeted by full houses wherever he goes. He delivered six lectures in the county and is expected to visit them again. A Y is about to be organized and hopes are entertained of awakening the slumbering unions ere long.

Arrangements have been made for a grand gold medal contest, to be held during the Chautauqua assemblies, both at Ottawa and Winfield the coming summer. Speakers have been secured and a place given them on the regular program. It will no doubt be one of the attractions of the assemblies. The successful competitors will be expected to take part in a contest for a diamond medal at the National Prohibition Convention. By the way, the "Kansas reporter" for THE UNION SIGNAL was honored by the state prohibition convention, in being elected as an alternate delegate to the National from the fourth congressional district of the state. Several women were elected as delegates, and an equal number as alternates.

MRS. S. S. WEATHERBY,
State Reporter, Le Roy.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA DOTS.

Among the W. C. T. U. events recently was Col. Geo. W. Bain's lecture at the Foundry M. E. church. Mrs. S. D. La Fetra presided, and introduced Madam Tel Sono of Japan; she spoke a few words in regard to the influence of the white ribbon movement in Japan.

The Y. W. C. T. U, of Ninth Street Christian Church has given a unique entertainment. About forty members of the union, clad in Martha Washington costume, occupied the front seats on the stage. Back of these, on raised seats, were the Japanese girls from the Tyler school, while still higher up were seated the little folks. A section of the Georgetown orchestra added very much to the success of the entertainment, while the Columbia Musical Club gave some excellent music. The drill of the Continental Guards was appreciated, as was the violin solo of Miss Pauline Iseman, and the humorous recitation of Miss Emily French. At the "Apple Party," little Annie Adkins told how cider was made, and all the little ones joined in the chorus, "No cider for me." "Grandma's Advice to the Boys," by little Hattie Bugbee; "Trees and Choppers," with a hatchet drill; the prize medal recitation, by little Alice Yingling; the "Flag Song" the "Tribute to the Flag," and the "Japanese Fan Drill," by the pupils of the Tyler school, and "A Y's Lesson," by Miss Marion Yingling, the choruses were all well rendered, and the whole entertainment was a success.

A large mass-meeting held at Mount Vernon M. E. Church was addressed by Madam Tel Sono. She told what she had suffered from a drunken husband, and how that had inspired her to come to America where the women had so many advantages. Mrs. La Fetra tendered Mrs. Tel Sono a reception at Hotel Fredonia. The spacious parlors were crowded all the afternoon by representative Christian and temperance workers. The parlors were handsomely decorated with palms, ferns and lilies. Refreshments were served. Later Mrs. Tel Sono spoke to women only at Foundry Church parlor, on the condition of native high caste women in Japan.

Quarterly meeting was held March 23 at Luther Memorial Church. The pastor of the church, Rev. J. G. Butler, gave us a most cordial welcome, and, in the course of his remarks said that "his people were in sympathy with our work, and that they did not sign petitions for the licensing of strong drink." Our souls were stirred by the presence and words of two sisters who have been engaged in our city, in alley mission work, for the past six months. They have been amply repaid in the salvation of souls; where cursing was heard, now the songs of Zion are being sung, and children have been taught the way of life. This is purely a faith work, and the means are supplied in a wonderful way. We were honored in having with us six ladies from different states, all white-ribboners.

The superintendent of prison, jail, almshouse and hospital work reported 722 papers distributed, 46 books, leaflets, envelopes and paper given, letters stamped and mailed; two signed the pledge. An auxiliary superintendent distributed 4,722 pages of literature. Good work is being done. Very encouraging talks have been held with prisoners.

The superintendent of temperance literature reported 40,000 pages distributed. One who has made seventy-two visits to barber shops has distributed 13,000 pages of literature.

The superintendent of the Y's reported 42 meetings held; $199.61 raised, and 225 letters distributed to inmates of the aged woman's home. A great deal has been done socially. One auxiliary held a patriotic entertainment out of which has grown a society termed the "Continental Temperance Cadets." This same Y is carrying on a tobacco crusade throughout the congregation of which they are members. Another auxiliary has had printed lists of grocers, licensed and unlicensed, prepared and distributed through pastors to the Christian public.

The social purity department superintendent reports thirty-five women admitted to Hope and Help Mission, and much good done. Flower mission superintendent reports over one hundred bouquets given to the sick; provisions to the poor; nourishment for the sick poor; visits to hospitals with medicine for the sick; kindergarten picture cards were distributed at the Children's Hospital. The interest in juvenile work has greatly increased, and two new Loyal Temperance Legions have been organized.

There has been an appeal made to the president and board of school trustees for a better enforcement of the law, and visits have been made to the schools. Evangelistic work was done by Mr. J. G. Woolley and Mrs. Snell during their visit. The auxiliaries have been earnest in this department. Petitions have been presented to Congress by the Sabbath observance department.

The superintendent of heredity and hygiene has been visiting some of the unions with good success.

The treasurer's report showed, receipts, $490.37; disbursements, $476.87. The corresponding secretary's report was a good one. Several new unions among the young women have been organized. A resolution condemning décolleté dresses was passed.

L. C. KESSLER,
District Reporter.

DELAWARE JOTTINGS.

The Delaware W. C. T. U. has been standing in "its own place" since the convention, ready to advance as opportunities presented themselves. The departments of scientific temperance instruction and Sunday-school work have made notable progress. The superintendent of the former, Mrs. E. D. Slaymaker, has obtained the promise from the state board of education to introduce the primary and intermediate text books of the Pathfinder series into the public schools at the beginning of the school year.

Sunday-school work received a wonderful impetus from the use, on temperance Sunday, of 2,800 of Miss Kimball's helps, all of which were distributed to the city schools by two unions. At a call from Mrs. E. H. Capelle, state superintendent, twelve Sunday-schools sent three representatives to a meeting held at the Wilmington headquarters, for the purpose of determining the best method of temperance work in Sunday-schools. The result of this meeting was the adoption of a constitution and the organization of these teachers who indorsed Miss Kimball's plan of work and arranged to hold a monthly meeting, and a mass-meeting every three months with special attractions for Sunday-school officers and teachers. As a proof of the interest in this important work, reference was made to its need by speakers before the state Sunday-school convention held in Dover, March 11 and 12; and resolutions were adopted embodying our National Sunday-school superintendent's plan of work.

The Hockessin W and Newark Y gave the "Milkmaid's Convention" not long ago, with decided success. L. T. L's are increasing throughout the state, and our work for the dear boys and girls has never had a more encouraging outlook. The Milton union, mentioned in a letter some months ago, has recently rented headquarters and opened a reading room, where each Saturday evening an entertainment is given the young people of the town.

A public meeting held by the Laurel W. C. T. U. a few weeks since was successful enough to popularize the attempt to other unions; the little town of Kenton having followed, by holding a similar meeting with a reception in the M. E. Church.

My own town has had several very pleasant W. C. T. U. happenings within the past two months. First came the meeting of the state executive committee at the home of the president of the county and local union, Mrs. Kate E. Smithers, at which time the county conventions were postponed until early in April. A very pretty tissue paper entertainment was given by our Band of Hope. A "high tea" has been held at the home of our state recording secretary, Mrs. Jennie C. S. Price; each guest present earned or saved, not a whole dollar—as at Evanston—but the fourth of one. It was a delightfully spicy occasion.

Appreciating the friendliness of the Wilmington Conference the ladies of the W and Y of that city tendered the members a reception at headquarters Saturday afternoon, March 19th. There were several hundred present, many of them ministers' wives who are active in W. C. T. U. work in our own state as well as in the sections of Maryland and Virginia within the limits of the conference. Tea, chocolate and cake were gracefully served by the young ladies.

A majority of votes were given for the lay representation of women in the General Conference. The temperance anniversary of the conference which had been most courteously placed in the hands of the state W. C. T. U. was held in the Opera House Sunday afternoon, the 20th. George W. Todd, an active member of the Law and Order League of this city, presided at the meeting, Rev. T. E. Martindale conducting the devotional services. The large audience (every seat was taken, and many stood) gave close attention to the speaker, Miss Elizabeth Greenwood, who talked eloquently upon "The Relation of the Church to the Temperance Reform." Good music was rendered by a selected choir from the churches. During the session of the conference the temperance committee recommended, in their report, that frequent and distinctively temperance sermons be preached, and that church temperance societies be organized by a temperance committee appointed at each quarterly conference. Declarations were passed warmly indorsing the lines of work pursued by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and all other temperance organizations, and denouncing the action of the World's Fair Commissioners in permitting intoxicants within the grounds.

It was my privilege to attend a meeting of the Y addressed by Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, the afternoon of the 21st. Before her arrival one of the young ladies distributed ivy leaves which were worn by those present; sprays of the same tied with white ribbon were entwined about Miss Willard's picture. On the evening of the 21st, Mrs. Barnes spoke with her characteristic persuasiveness before the young people's societies of the city, in the Central Presbyterian Church. Wishing to enlist the activities of the temperance committees of these societies, the president of the Y, Miss Josie Fogg, not long ago effected an organization composed of these, known as the Central Union. Mrs. Barnes spoke under its auspices at the meeting just mentioned, the state president of the Christian Endeavor Society, the Rev. Mr. Thompson, presiding. Thus it is the great world of Christians in all organizations are becoming more and more "workers together with God" for the uplifting of humanity.

ANNIE W. SUTTON,
State Reporter, Smyrna.

NEW YORK STATE NEWS.

Have you heard the news? The New York legislature has voted that our state exhibit at the World's Fair shall remain closed on the Sabbath, and we are rejoicing. Our beloved state president, Mrs. Mary T. Burt, has worked hard and faithfully during the winter, not only for this, but for and against other measures which have been before the legislature, and the work has told sadly upon her health and strength. At present she is resting—at least she has been forbidden by her physician to write or think, although the busy brain keeps on planning. I trust that long before this letter appears in print she will have recovered her usual health, and be able again to take up the work so dear to her heart.

The vile bill providing for licensing the social evil, against which our white-ribboners have sent such showers of protests, is receiving from the press of the state the condemnation it so justly deserves.

ORGANIZATION AND Y WORK.

A number of new unions have been organized during the past month, and also several Y's. Through the influence of a number of young women in Vassar college a Y has been organized there which now numbers thirty-four members. The object is mainly educational, and they hope to fit themselves for more active temperance work in the future. The Poughkeepsie Y's give monthly receptions to their honorary members. Brockport Y is rejoicing over a greatly increased membership, and over the general good done in their midst through the efforts of Col. George Woodford, of Chicago, who was with them for a week. During four evenings 319 signed the total abstinence pledge. The W. C. T. U. received forty new members and the Y fifty, and last, but not least, on election day the "no-license" man was elected. This is the first time in years that a no-license excise commissioner has been elected.

The union which was recently organized at West Plattsburgh, Clinton county, is in a healthy condition, and is preparing to do good work. They are studying the effects of alcohol on the system, and are looking into the cider question.

CONVENTIONS.

Fulton county reports an interesting meeting at Johnstown. The report comes from the county president, as both recording and corresponding secretaries were detained at home by illness, as was also the superintendent of press work. Each superintendent present gave an excellent report, after which a full and free discussion was held. Every moment was crowded, and all seemed to regret that the time was so short. In the evening the young people of Gloversville and Johnstown furnished the program, and a new interest was aroused among the Y's of both places.

Warren county held its semi-annual convention at Glens Falls. A heavy storm which continued all day prevented some of the delegates from attending, while sickness detainned others, yet a good meeting was held. The president read a "circulating letter" which had been started by her from Glens Falls union, and passed on to others, in the county, each one adding a brief account of its work, thus stimulating each other to even better work in the future. The convention appointed Mrs. DeVoll to write the first of another series which should be sent through the county as quickly as might be, especially urging the introduction of the quarterly temperance lessons in the Sunday-schools, by furnishing officers and teachers with the leaflet published by the W. T. P. A.

Reports of departments were full of interest. West Glens Falls union was especially commended for its work among the children and youth. The department of "Relief work" gave a report which caused some surprise as the work has been carried on less than three months, yet over three hundred garments have been given out, besides furniture, provisions, and $13.50 in money; also many little home comforts which have carried joy into homes where sickness and suffering were found. The question box and the resolutions came in for their share of attention. Mrs. Mary Haviland gave the evening address, after which select readings and remarks from the white ribbon brothers were in order. A generous collection followed, and when the time came to adjourn, all agreed "it has been good for us to be here."

Albany county met at West Troy and opened its convention with an evening mass-meeting of the children, impressing all present that the W. C. T. U. of West Troy is alive and vigorously working for temperance reform. Next morning the convention proper was opened by the president Mrs. Jump, of Albany. Seventy-two delegates, representing sixteen unions, were present. The address of welcome, the response, the greetings from the pastors, together with excellent papers, discussions, and the best of music, furnished inspiration for all. Earnest resolutions were introduced against Sabbath desecration, and urging the necessity of enforcing the law against cigarette smoking and the sale thereof to minors. An eloquent and stirring address from Rev. Mr. Hardendorf, of Albany, closed one of the most successful conventions ever held in the county.

A fine report of Ulster county convention comes from the superintendent of press work, and, judging from the account, the ladies of Clintondale, where the convention was held, left nothing undone which would add in any way to the success of the meeting. Great interest was manifested, and the house was full at every session. Mrs. Burgess, the county president, held the business well in hand. A workers' conference proved both helpful and profitable, and good thoughts were brought out in some excellent papers which were read. An inspiring children's meeting was held, and was addressed by Mrs. Boole, our state vice-president, who also delivered n evening address on "Deborah in Battle." Representatives were present from new unions recently organized in the county, and were quickly received as "members of the family." Mrs. Burgess has organized several new unions during the past few months.

Cortland county held its semi-annual convention at Cuyler. The day before the meeting was very stormy and a heavy fall of snow almost blocked their way, but as the secretary of that county truly says, "There are not many faint hearts in the white ribbon army," and in spite of storms a goodly delegation was present. The Cuyler union is not a large one, but has a host in its quiet, yet persistent president, Mrs. Olive Brown. Excellent papers on Sunday-school work and physical culture were read and an object lesson was given before a class of children from the village school. A new feature was an "encouragement meeting." That sounds good, doesn't it? I believe it will be well for other counties to take up that idea. We need encouragement always, and if we look for it I'm sure we can find it.

A question-box afforded much satisfaction, and was followed by eight minute speeches on department work. In the evening Rev. Mr. Sanford of Homer delivered a stirring address, and the choir furnished excellent music.

At the last charter election in Cortland the prohibition party nominated three members of the W. C. T. U. for the school board. They were not elected, to be sure, but they appreciated the compliment of being nominated. At the town meeting previous, a no-license commissioner had been elected. Homer, which had previously gone for no-license, elected license commissioners. As these two towns are near together and connected by street cars, they can exchange courtesies—the lack of one can be supplied by the other. God give us total prohibition that the accursed thing be wholly driven out.

A noon-day prayer-meeting for men has been held at Cortland W. C. T. U. headquarters for some time with gratifying results.

The W. C. T. U. of Williamson, Wayne county, invited three other unions to join them, and held an institute, which is reported at some length by one who for the first time attended such a gathering, and the meeting was a delight and joy, as well as a surprise to the reporter. Papers, discussions, a question-box, reports of work done, and plans for the future, interspersed with music and recitations, all made up a successful meeting.

Gloversville has had a season of temperance revival, the speaker being M. V. B. Bennett, of Kansas. He completely captured the city. Meetings were commenced in a hall which would seat six hundred, and at the end of the week the Opera House, which seats 1,800, was too small to hold the crowd. Great interest was aroused, and a largely increased prohibition vote was the result. The W. C. T. U. feels that Mr. Bennett has reached people that no other speaker has been able to arouse.

Union-Echoes, published at Greenport, Suffolk county, contains county news and also many choice articles. The Greenport union have recently rented a room on Main street, and have fitted it up for headquarters. They hold Sunday afternoon meetings there, and previous to town meeting day held two week night meetings beside to "keep the watch-fires burning."

Babylon W. C. T. U. gave a white-ribbon social, which was, indeed, a social in more than name. About $25 was cleared, which will be used in the work.

Southold held a parlor meeting for the benefit of the county treasury, at which time a most interesting talk was given by Miss Sara Adams, of Greenport.

And so the work goes on, and with God for our Father and Guide we shall work until victory is perched upon our banners.

FRANCES W. GRAHAM,
State Reporter, Lockport.

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

ONE of the best beloved of the Freeman, Mo., W. C. T. U. members, Mrs. Dr. Jenkins, was called away April 6.

FITTING resolutions of respect and esteem were passed by the Springboro, Pa., W. C. T. U. on the death of their co-worker, Mrs. Emma Perry.

GLOWING reports reach us from all along the line of the Rev. Mr. and Mrs. C. H. St. John's good work in revival and temperance meetings. At Fairbury, Neb., a White Cross League of thirty-five members was formed.

LOCAL superintendents of evangelistic work in Arkansas are requested to send reports before May 10 to the state superintendent, Mrs. B. J. Carlile, Searcy, Ark.

MRS. TEL SONO, the Japanese reformer, is vouched for in strong terms by Rev. and Mrs. A. J. Gordon, Bishop Phillips Brooks and other leaders of undoubted reputation. She has recently been in Washington, D. C., under the auspices of Mrs. LaFetra, who writes of her in high terms.

MRS. MARRIAGE ALLEN, now in San Francisco, Cal., has been holding good meetings at Baltimore, Md., St. Louis, Mo., Covington, Ky., Cincinnati, O., Memphis, Tenn., Little Rock, Ark., Holly Springs, Miss., en route. At the last named place 400 temperance pledges were signed.

MRS. C. F. LOCKWOOD, secretary of the fourth district of the Illinois W. C. T. U., who died three weeks ago at her home in Oak Park, Ill., was one of the "faithful" white-ribboners who was untiring in her work to make her district one of the foremost in the state. She will be widely and truly mourned.

MR. M. V. B. BENNETT, known as "the Kansas cyclone," has just completed a series of meetings in the enthusiastic young city of Gloversville, N. Y., which for interest and numbers surpass anything the city has seen since Major Hilton stormed the fort six years ago. Mr. Bennett's effort was for the election of a no-license mayor, and although the candidate was defeated by a small majority the increase in the prohibition vote was very gratifying.

MRS. P. B. GROAT writes concerning the Lady Henry Somerset W. C. T. U., Minneapolis, as follows: "She is a real loyal, active, little body, and I believe she will be able to take a stand that will be worthy of the name she bears. We have now on our list one hundred and nineteen names, and an attendance of from twenty-five to thirty-five every week. The ladies are fine workers. Our committee on press report space in three of our daily papers once a week. Our superintendent of police reports that we are to have a matron at the central station two weeks from now. We have decided to ask Mrs. Clara Hoffman to come to us, and we shall try to give her a fine audience. Let me tell you that little I introduced Mrs. Hoffman to the first temperance convention she ever addressed. It was in Hannibal, Mo., ten years ago, the 27th of April, at the same tabernacle in which Miss Willard organized the state W. C. T. U. and on the same day."

Official Communications.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

President—FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Sec.—MRS. C. B. BUELL, Evanston, Ill.
Recording Sec.—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Ravenna, Ohio.
Assistant Rec. Sec.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Treasurer—ESTHER PUGH, Evanston, Ill.

For presidents of states and superintendents of departments, see Annual Leaflet, which will be sent by Mrs. Buell on application, inclosing a two-cent stamp.

CONCERNING LITERATURE.

To the National Superintendents of Department Work:

DEAR SISTERS:—If you will send me samples of literature on your respective lines of work, I could greatly assist you by introducing it wherever I go in my work of organizing, and thus create a demand for more by awakening an interest. I will report to you every page distributed, thus helping you in making up your annual reports. There is a growing demand for our W. T. P. A. literature where it is introduced and understood. I find an increasing interest—an eager reaching out after the truth throughout this Northwest coast country that betokens a "better time coming" for the white ribbon army of Oregon and Washington.

DELLE C. H. COX,
National Organizer.

SCHOOL SAVINGS BANKS.

Recent letters and literature on the subject of "School Savings Banks," sent to the president of each state and territory, have elicited several responses. I am in daily receipt of inquiries as regards the system and its manner of establishment at different points through the United States. In order that the work may be advantageously presented and inquiries properly and fully met I should be glad to have an authorized reply from each state where there is W. C. T. U. thought on the subject.

The friends of school savings banks and postal savings banks, which run very closely together, are a wide host, and we would not have them depend for explanation or support on members of the organization where the work will not be looked into or understood. We are a very busy people. If we had had systematic thrift engendered with our education and its practical principles inculcated with our early development of thought we would have more leisure, means and ability for philanthropies. Were the economic, reformatory and educative force of the School Savings Banks to be counted out, which is impossible, the individualizing power alone which this instruction in thrift and security against cringing dependence gives to the disused forces of humanity, should make it of eminent moment to all who say, "the saloon must go."

How must it go? By the strength of a fuller individuality, by each man, woman and child being trained to cognizance of a definite self-responsibility. We have prayed and preached; we have discussed and assailed the laws; we have not yet achieved our end, and must acknowledge the greatest lack of the whole people is a sense of personal moral responsibility.

Individuality and self-dependence grow slowly. We must cultivate them if we would provide for the furtherance of our best conceived ends. A people thoroughly conversant with thrift could not endure the want and woe which now beset a nation whose ablest forces are in a measure untrained. We must wisely look ahead. Let us not be too busy to see, with broadened vision, all that can help us.

By the latest statistics we have 285 school savings banks in the United States; 27,430 scholar depositors, who have to their credit $136,615.

Encouraged in the news from Iowa, Minnesota, California, Arkansas, and North Dakota, may I not safely hope for at least a pro or con postal from the leader of each state and territory? All inquiries promptly answered. School savings banks literature in bulk on hand. Full line of samples, ten cents. Savings banks blanks and school supplies furnished at low rate.

Yours for the inculcation of thrift,

SARA LOUISA OBERHOLTZER, Nat. Supt.
Norristown, Pa.

TEMPLE RECEIPTS.

Alabama—Birmingham: Mrs. B. A. Vaughn, $1.

Arkansas—Beebe: Co. E. L. T. L., $5.

California—Winters: Mrs. Cobb, $1.

Carolina, North—Winston: Mrs. Phebe Ectors, $5.

Colorado—Grand Junction: Y. W. C. T. U., $5; Hygiene: Mrs. Julia Bickedike, $1.

District of Columbia—Anacostia: Moulton, Y. W. C. T. U., $1.

Florida—Lake Como: Mrs. C. R. Tuttle, $4.10.

Illinois—Englewood; Mrs. C. C. Mitchell, $2. Ava: W. C. T. U., $10.21. Jacksonville: Sunday-schools, $13. Champaign, Mrs. A. O. Howell, $3.45. Peoria: A friend, $25. Henry: Baby Band, $2.80. Mt. Palatine: W. C. T. U., $17.30. Edwards: Mary J. Edwards, $3.66.

Indiana—Monon: May Turpie, $2; Brazil: Winfield Sherfey, $2; Hope: Jane Stuckey, 85 cts.; Denver: Mary A. Hutchison, $2.

Iowa—Marion: W. C. T. U., $2.15; Crocker: Mrs. R. L. McConnell, $1; Corydon: Mrs. R. A. McClanahan, $3.65; W. C. T. U., $4; College Springs: Libbie Anderson, $1; Hesper: W. C. T. U., $5.

Indian Territory—Per Mrs. R. L. Fite, $19.

Kansas—Lawrence: W. C. T. U., $26.50; Rose: Mrs. A. P. Everson, $4; Lyon county: W. C. T. U., $1.75.

Massachusetts—Hinsdale: T. A. Frizzell, $3.69; Dorchester: Mrs. H. A. Olion, $3; North Scituate: Mrs. E. Bailey, $1; Williamsburg: W. C. T. U., $1.80; Lowell: Mrs. W. F. Brigham, $5; Roylston Station: W. C. T. U., $3.10; L. T. L., Co. O, $1; Westfield: W. C. T. U., $5.

Michigan—Sawyer: Mary J. Gibson, 35 cts. Plainwell: Mrs. M. A. Copp, $25; Manistee: W. C. T. U., $9; Grand Blanc: Baby Band, $1.

Minnesota—Brainerd: W. C. T. U., $15; Marshall: W. C. T. U., $5; Wadena: Mrs. Laura Nye, $1.

Missouri—La Clede: W. C. T. U., $3.25; Monroe City: Mrs. Sarah Topping, $50; King City: W. C. T. U., $5.

Montana—Red Lodge: Ellwood Ellis, $1.

Nebraska—Saline County: W. C. T. U., $35; Tecumseh: W. C. T. U., $15; Nelson: W. C. T. U., $5.

New Hampshire—North Monroe: Eva Guy, 25 cents.

New York—Seneca Falls: Helen Arnold, $100; Fredonia: Mrs. P. A. Moffett, $3.65; Eaton: W. C. T. U., $7; East Palmyra: W. C. T. U., $15; Port Gibson: W. C. T. U., $10; Pultneyville: W. C. T. U., $3; Brooklyn: Grace I. Burroughs, $3.50; Port Chester: Emily Hasbrouck, $3.65; Westbury Station: Mary R. Post, $5; Ithaca; W. C. T. U., $5; Clifton Springs: Mrs. J. E. Pierson, $1.

Ohio—Rockford: Mrs. J. O. Jones, $1.50; Cincinnati: Mrs. S. Horton, $5; Winona: Ruth Dorr, 25cts; Eagleville: W. C. T. U., $3.30; Loveland: W. C. T. U., $5; Seville: E. B. McCoy, $3; Reynoldsburg: W. C. T. U., $4.35; Walnut Hills: W. C. T. U., $5.

Pennsylvania—Green Castle: W. C. T. U., $3.25; Franklin: Mrs. Mary M. Findlay, $1; Mill Hall: W. C. T. U., $5; Burnwood: H. N. Hathaway, $1.

Rhode Island—Providence: M. A. Gould, $1.

Texas—Denison: W. C. T. U., $15.50; Corsicana: W. C. T. U., $5; Houston: W. C. T. U., $2.

Vermont—North Danville: M. E. Ward, $1; Barton: W. C. T. U., $5.

Washington (East)—Pine City: Josie Jackson, $5.30.

Wisconsin—Elkhorn: W. C. T. U., $18.65; Lodi: W. C. T. U., $9; Greenwood: Y. W. C. T. U., $1; Milton: Mrs. P. E. Seaver, $3.65; Mauston: per Mrs. Isadore Wetherby, $10.

Contributed by Japanese gentlemen, $1.15.

Sales mite-boxes, $72; pictures, etc., $5.15. Interest $5. Band of Hope girls, Harrismith, Orange Free State, Africa, $102.06.

ESTHER PUGH,
Custodian Gift Fund.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

Publisher's Notes.

See Here!

You may have forgotten that we announced some time since, that the life-size aquarelle tint picture of Miss Willard could be secured for fifty cents. So we venture to remind you of the opportunity.

We are very anxious to reduce our stock before we remove, about May 1, so we have decided to offer one of these fine pictures for three new subscribers at $1 each. Any one can secure one of these on such terms.

Removal Sale.

It will take some time to remove our supplies so that orders that reach us before May 7 will be filled at the rates here advertised, if the supply is not exhausted.

Back numbers of THE UNION SIGNAL, 50c per 100.

Back numbers of The Young Crusader, 50c per 100.

Wall-pocket packages, 50c.

A fine aquarelle tint picture of Miss Willard, and one of the impressive cartoons, "The Mill and the Still," for 50c.

What One Minister Thinks.

Rev. J. A. Worden, D. D., a Presbyterian minister in Philadelphia, in a recent address on "Organized Temperance Work in Sunday-schools," said:

"We must recognize the fact that temperance work is not something foreign to Christian work. It is essentially a part of it. Temperance work is not something external to the church. It must not be left to outside organizations, or outside people to do. They may do it, but the church must do it. Temperance is an essential and practical element in the Sunday-school. Now, how can this work be done in the Sunday-school? By having a temperance society in every Sunday-school, and with the very simplest organization. It should embrace the entire school, and not merely a few who would form a temperance band. In such bands, the very ones who need the help and strength to be derived from temperance work are not reached. Plan it so that the whole school should, at stated intervals, be turned into a temperance society.

"The committee on the International Sunday School Lessons have now arranged for a regular temperance lesson, instead of an optional one. Take advantage of this, and use the day in having the whole school join in the temperance lesson. Have temperance hymns, prayers, and the pledge.

"The pledge is a good thing. We need a revival of pledge work.

"The saloon element in our country was organized in 1876, and we have not been able to gain a victory since. Let us now go deeper than the vote, and train the voters. We have 7,000,000 children in our Sunday-schools, and the average life of each in Sunday-school is seven years. So every seven years we can train an army of voters, and by and by we can sweep all before us.

"Train your teachers; teach them how to teach temperance. Do not neglect the distribution of temperance literature. There is a power in truth, and we should scatter it far and wide. Have a grand annual meeting of the Sunday-school, with temperance speeches or sermon."

This has the right ring.

Now begin by using our illustrated lesson leaf on May 22.

"Don't Tobacco Spit Your Life Away"

Is the name of a little book that tells all about Notobac, the only guaranteed cure for the tobacco habit in every form. This book is mailed free. Contains many testimonial letters, reporting cures in ten days and a gain of as many pounds. Notobac costs but a trifle, and the man who wants to quit and can't had better write for the book to-day. Address STERLING REMEDY CO., Box 354, Indiana Mineral Springs, Ind.

READERS can have PAPERS and MAGAZINES sent them from Publishers all over the country, by sending 25 cts. to the CENTRAL SUPPLY CO Chicago. Mention this paper.

The town of Harvey, Ill., is established on a solid temperance basis, and has proved that manufacturers can be more prosperous when their employés are prosperous and are free from the saloon curse. It has been fully demonstrated there, that men can do better work in foundries and iron and steel works without beer than with it. They have just located three additional industries. One hundred and sixty-eight new houses are under contract, and there is great activity in this manufacturing town. We are fully assured that Harvey is without a saloon, and the restrictions are such on every lot sold by the Harvey Land Association, that saloons cannot come in the future.—UNION SIGNAL, April 7, 1892.

Now We Have It.

For a long time we have been anxious to find some illustrated work descriptive of the great event which is challenging the attention of the world, and which is so soon to take place, but have not succeeded in securing one to suit until now. We have at last made arrangements for an edition of the

Columbus Memorial,

a large folio volume, 12x15 inches in size, printed on super-calendered paper, neatly and attractively bound in heavy enameled paper. It contains 44 pages and shows the progress and achievement this country has made in four hundred years. It contains:

Letter press and full page map of discovery, 1492 to 1606, 116 years.

Letter press and full page map of settlement, 1607 to 1673, 66 years.

Letter press and full page map of wars, 1673 to 1773, 100 years.

Letter press and full page map of independence, 1773 to 1789, 16 years.

Letter press and full page map of constitution, 1789 to 1845, 56 years,

Letter press and full page map of dissension, 1845 to 1860, 15 years.

Letter press and full page map of secession, 1860 to 1865, 5 years.

Letter press and full page map of peace, 1865 to 1892, 27 years.

Map of the city of Genoa, Italy, supposed birthplace of Columbus, with biographical sketch of Christopher Columbus.

Three pages, general descriptive matter "World's Columbian Exposition," from its inception to the present time, with a carefully prepared and authentic table of the World's Fairs that have been held at different times throughout the world, from "Crystal Palace" 1851, to the "World's Fair" of 1893.

In all their magnificence are portrayed Machinery Hall, which alone cost $1,200,000; the Manufacturers' Building, the Art Palace, the Administration Building, the Government Building, the Electrical Building, the Horticultural Building, the Agricultural Building, the Transportation Building, the Fish and Fisheries Building, the Woman's Building, designed by a woman; the Mines and Mining Building, the Forestry Building, beautiful illustration of the wonderful lagoon scene; grand bird's-eye view scene of the Exposition buildings; double page map or diagram, showing the relative position of the main buildings, including state buildings and size of each, etc., etc.

We will send this and THE UNION SIGNAL one year, postpaid, for only $1.30, or we will send it to any address postpaid, in return for five new subscribers to THE UNION SIGNAL at $1.00 each.

Tell the children to ask their friends to subscribe for THE UNION SIGNAL. If they send five new names and $5, we will send one of the beautiful "Columbus Memorials" postpaid, to any address they may indicate.

Just Send for One.

We mean a sample of the Sunday School Lesson prepared for May 22. It is the finest we have ever issued, beautifully illustrtaed. We cannot do it justice, so do not attempt a further description except to say that Mrs. Helen G. Rice and Mrs. Mary Lowe Dickinson have developed the best thoughts underlying the lesson taught in the Scripture selection chosen as the theme for that day.

Let us all unite in an effort to place it in the hands of every teacher and pupil in our Sunday-schools without delay. Time is short.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

For homes,
For libraries,
For young people,
For adults,
For ministers,
For lawyers,
For men,
For women,
For temperance workers.
For Christians,
For Prohibitionists,
For license advocates,

For all classes, you can find nothing better than the collection of facts and figures entitled

The Temperance Movement.

See that all have an opportunity to read it. Price, $1.25, postpaid.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

DO NOT fail to read carefully the advertisement of "A Young Woman Journalist" on our outside cover page. You should know what is there said.

FOR SUMMER WEAR

Send for circular.

FERRIS' GOOD SENSE Corset Waists

are now made in

VENTILATING CLOTH,

also in FINE Single Ply CLOTH;

SINGLE PLY for Children, Misses & Ladies.

GOOD SENSE Waists are superior to all others.

—Tape-fastened Buttons. Cord-edge Button Holes—Clamp Buckle at Hip securely holds Hose Supporter. Shape permits full expansion of lungs.

Gives Satisfaction. Be sure your waist is stamped "GOOD SENSE."

FERRIS BROS., Manufacturers and Patentees, 341 Broadway, New York.
For Sale by ALL LEADING RETAILERS.
MARSHALL FIELD & CO., Chicago, Ill., Wholesale Western Agents.

DR. A. OWEN'S ELECTRIC BELT.

Send 6c. for sealed illustrated catalog with full list of diseases and sworn statements in English, German, Swedish and Norwegian, or Treatise on Rupture cured by Electric Truss. 2 THE OWEN ELECTRIC BELT & APPLIANCE CO., Main Office and Only Factory, State st., cor. Adams, Chicago, Ill. [The Owen Electric Belt Building]. Entrance on State-st. New York Office, 826 Broadway. The Largest Electric Belt Establishment in the World.

Webster's Original Unabridged Dictionary in 4 volumes, charges paid to any address in the United States, and a copy of Dr. A. Owen's Electric World for one year will be sent for $1.50. Address Dr. A. Owen's Electric World, 207, 209 State St., Chicago Ill.

PILES CURED FREE. New, Painless, Certain. Gives instant relief and lasting cure—never returns. To prove it we will send a trial package FREE, to any address. PYRAMID DRUG COMPANY, Box 35, ALBION, MICHICAN.

Hendryx' Compendium of Book-keeping and Business Forms for Self-Instruction.—As comprehensive, thorough and practical knowledge may be gained by its study as under an instructor. Price $1. Instructions in Book-keeping and Stenography by mail.
F. H. HENDRYX, 178, Bath, N. Y.

THE BABY will be given a beautiful birthday card if the mother will send baby's name and age to Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt. This is done to advertise LACTATED FOOD, the food that SAVES BABIES' LIVES.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints. Having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, and desiring to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who wish it, this recipe in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail, by addressing, with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. NOYES, 820 Powers' Block, Rochester, N. Y.

To the Cincinnati Convention via the B. & O.

Delegates and others attending the Cincinnati Prohibition Convention in June, are requested, before choosing their route from any point, East, West, North or South, to communicate with any of the following agents of the B. & O., who will cheerfully supply all information relative to the lowest rates obtainable, the most picturesque, quickest and safest route, and who will make special arrangements for the transportation of special parties in special cars: L. S. ALLEN, the Rookery, Chicago; W. E. REPPENT, Columbus; O. P. MCCARTY, Grand Central Station, Cincinnati; C. P. CRAIG, 415 Broadway, New York; A. J. SIMMONS, 411 Washington Street, Boston; C. R. MACKENZIE, 833 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia; B. F. BOND, Baltimore; S. B. HEGE, Washington. Pullman accommodations. Two Vestibuled Limited Express trains daily between Cincinnati and the East. Quickest and best train service to Cincinnati from Columbus. The B. & O. is the most attractive route all the year around between Chicago, St. Louis, Cincinnati and the East.

Excellent Service.

At 5:45 P. M. The "Fast Train" leaves Chicago via the Wisconsin Central Lines for St. Paul, Minneapolis, Ashland, Duluth and the Irontowns, composed of Through Pullman Vestibuled Sleepers to Chippewa Falls and Eau Claire, St. Paul and Minneapolis, Ashland and Duluth, making close connections at Union Depot, St. Paul, with the new train which has just been placed in service via the Northern Pacific Railroad to the Pacific Coast, leaving St. Paul daily at 9:00 A. M.

At 10:45 P. M. The "Pacific Express" leaves Chicago for the Pacific Coast via the Wisconsin Central and Northern Pacific Lines, composed of Pullman Vestibuled Drawing-Room and Tourist Sleepers, running through to Portland, Ore., and Tacoma, Wash., without change.

For tickets, time-tables, berth reservations, etc., apply to City Ticket Office, 205 South Clark Street, Chicago, Ill., or to JAS. C. POND, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, Chicago, Ill.

BICYCLES ON EASY PAYMENTS
No extra charge. All makes new or 2d hd. Lowest price guaranteed. Largest stock & oldest dealers in U. S. Cata. free. Agts. wanted. Rouse, Hazard & Co. 77 G St., Peoria, Ill

AGENTS WANTED ON SALARY or COMMISSION, to handle the New Patent Chemical Ink Erasing Pencil. Agents making $50 per week. Monroe Eraser Mf'g Co. x 213 LaCrosse, Wis.

LADIES WHO BUY NECKTIES for Husband, Brother, Father, Son or any other man, send stamp for Illustrations and Samples of Men's Neckwear.
RICHMOND NECKWEAR CO.,
52 De Kalb St., Chicago.

WANTED! A Christian lady in every township to do writing at home. Pleasant, remunerative work, requiring only a portion of each day's time. Address The Yale Hygiene Co. Agency Department, New Haven, Conn.

HOW TO DRESS our children is fully explained and illustrated in the Gertrude Quarterly It contains most complete description of W. C. T U Temple ever given. 0c yr; 15c copy. Gertrude Quarterly. Box1088, Chicago

YOSE & SONS PIANOS. ESTABLISHED IN 1851.
Celebrated for their Pure Tone, Elegant Designs, Superior Workmanship, and Great Durability. Sold on easy terms. Old instruments taken in exchange. Write for catalogue and full information.
170 Tremont St., Boston. Mass.

FENCING GALVANIZED WOVEN WIRE WIRE ROPE SELVAGE.

RABBIT & POULTRY FENCING.
Freight Paid. McMULLEN WOVEN WIRE FENCE CO., CHICAGO

Van Houten's Cocoa, once tried, always used.

HALF RATES TO HOT SPRINGS
Via the Wabash Railroad.

The Wabash Line will sell excursion tickets from Chicago to Hot Springs and return at one fare ($18.75), on the following dates:

May 6 and 7; good to return until June 10.

May 16 and 17; good to return until June 15.

Two daily trains from Chicago with coaches, reclining chair cars, parlor cars and compartment sleepers. Railroad and sleeping-car tickets through to Hot Springs at Ticket Office, 201 Clark Street.

CALIFORNIA.

California is the most attractive and delightful section of the United States, if not of the world, and its many beautiful resorts will be crowded with the best families of the East during the entire winter. It offers to the investor the best open opportunity for safe and large returns from its fruit lands. It offers the kindest climate in the world to the feeble and debilitated, and it is reached in the most comfortable manner over the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé Railroad. Pullman Vestibule Sleeping Cars leave Chicago by this line every day in the year, and go without change or transfer through to San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego. This is a feature not offered by any other line.

Write to John J. Byrne, 621 Rialto Building, Chicago, Ill., if you desire any further information as to the country and the accommodations for reaching it.

The World's Fair.

It would be difficult to devise a simpler or completer plan for securing the most desirable entertainment during the World's Fair, than is offered by the World's Fair Temperance Headquarters at Harvey, Ill. The place most conveniently located for the purpose, only twenty minutes' ride and with a probable five-cent fare. Great Sunday meetings will be held there throughout the Fair. Lodgings can be engaged at once, and among those paying in advance will be distributed one-half the profits of the undertaking. The enterprise is most fortunate in the management it has secured. It has the approval of all the religious, temperance and reform papers in Chicago, and the cordial support of the World's Fair authorities on public meetings. I am planning to make my headquarters there, and hope the readers of this paper will do likewise.—Clara C. Hoffman.

BEATTY Pianos $175 Organs $48. Want Ag'ts. Cat. free. Dan F Beatty, Wash'ton, N.J

Our Children.

A NATURAL INTERPRETATION.

BY LOUISE MANNING HODGKINS.

A true story of the contribution box.

We told dear Polly ere she went,
Her mind quite to prepare,
Of what the people did at church
And what would happen there.

Of how the good folk sang the hymns,
Then listened all devout,
On through the sermon and the prayer,
But one thing we left out.

And when she saw good Deacon Gray
Come tiptoeing down the aisle,
Politely holding out the plate,
A sweet, inquiring smile

Passed from her lips even to her eyes,
But as he nearer drew,
She settled what 'twas all about,
And all her duty knew.

A tiny hand was swift out-thrust,
Then suddenly withdrawn,
And half in whisper, half aloud
She wailed as he passed on,

"I only got a dime, mamma,
I didn't know before!
Do you suppose when he comes back,
He'll let me try once more?"

A MODERN DANIEL.

BY J. F. COWAN.

"Please don't call me 'Mr.' any more, I'm not used to it. At home I've always been plain John Robb, or Johnny most of the time."

And plain he certainly was, but not unprepossessing. There was a steady gaze of his eye, and a pleasant something about his brown and bony features which made you rather like the boy in spite of all.

That was the case with the driver on the stage line between the little station and the college town to which he was going.

"All right!" said Isaac Mussick, the driver. "I don't like handles much myself. But Mr. Pollock, he does. Been to Congress, your uncle has. 'How's the Honorable to-day?' I always says to him. And he don't forget to leave something in my hand. He told me to take good care of you on this trip. Reckon you'll have to take care of yourself among the boys up there. Guess you're able to do it, though," and the keen eyes seemed to search John through and through, pretty much as they would have looked out the good points of a horse he was thinking of buying. "They're a pretty hard lot up there," and Ike nodded over his shoulder toward the town. "Lots of money and a high time in spending it. Uncle taking care of you, I 'low."

"Yes," was the brief response, with a visible sobering on the part of John. "Father's dead, you see; and it's my only chance to get an education and be something more than a hard-working farmer. Mother thought it was best. It was kind in uncle." And John drifted into a confidential tone toward this stranger. There was something open and winning about sturdy Ike, the driver.

"I see," he said nodding his head. "Ever been to his home? Lives in great style, they say. No end of servants; and the books and pictures and statues and gilded and silver gewgaws, and the things to eat and drink—eh?"

Ike gave his left eye a queer twinkle toward John and then drooped the lid, as he dwelt with a peculiar emphasis on the last word of his remark.

John was not altogether easy under this significant look. He felt a delicacy about talking on some subjects with this almost stranger. He felt a sacredness pertained to his uncle's home life and practices which ought not to be violated in the presence of this stranger to the family, especially by one who was just entering upon the enjoyment of his uncle's beneficence. So he changed the subject and asked: "I suppose they're like all college boys, not really bad, but just thoughtless and noisy. Maybe they drink a little," he added in a questioning tone, seeing Ike's lifted eyebrows.

"'Twouldn't be strange if they did. Most of 'em has been brought up to it at home on their fathers' tables. Their kind of people all drink wine, I reckon. Your uncle has it on his table. You'll do it when you get to be a great man like him."

If that was what Ike had been looking for, he had a satisfaction in the flash of the boy's eye as he put this proposition. "I promised father," was all he said in words, but his looks said much more.

"Stick to it," said Ike. "I reckon you had to bend a little, just to please the Honorable while you stayed with him?" And again those shrewd but kindly eyes were bent on the boy as though they would search him through and through. John blushed under the gaze, as though the memory of something painful had been awakened.

Ike's face took on a disappointed look, and he began to crack his long whiplash around the leaders' ears. But he stopped the next second as the low sentence caught his ears: "I couldn't do it; but he said my life here would soon take that nonsense out of me."

There was a question in John's eyes—a sort of appeal to Ike, who was supposed to know so much more about affairs about where he was going, to say if it was true.

Crack went the whip like a pistol shot, and the leaders started off in a brisk trot. "Do you see that stock?" was Ike's only answer. "You could make a bow of that and it wouldn't budge a splinter. Hickory that I seasoned myself. Tough as whalebone."

John examined it carelessly. What did he care about such a trivial thing as that? If his companion had no information to give him, why did he trouble him with dissertations about whipstocks?

"That's the kind of stuff that holds out. It's all heart. It would break a dozen hemlock fence planks. Do you see?"

John had not seen the point yet, and was tapping his toe in impatience against the footboard.

"You'll find there's a pressure on the feller that don't do as they do. You'll be laughed at, and hooted at, and snubbed, and all that; but if you're made of that kind of stuff, remember what I tell you: one hickory heart is worth a dozen hemlock fence planks. Get up there, Kate! Gee in there, Nance! Crack! Crack!" and the old coach rolled down the dusty avenue of beeches, on toward the cluster of stately buildings that made up the college.

John was no stranger there by nightfall. "You'll find the Sigs a good lot. We have a royal time," one self-appointed escort told him, as he showed him around.

"You'll want to join the Alphs," said another as soon as he could be got away from the first. "That's the old man Pollock's fraternity. A good lot of fellows as ever sat around a festive board. Let me propose your name?"

"I don't know; not just yet," said John, bewildered with this new order of things. "I want to understand its objects better," he said to the others when they urged their society as the largest and most popular, "if it helps me in my college work."

"Fiddlesticks!" was the answer. "We don't work more than compelled to here. Oh, you mean your football and that?"

John made no further attempt at explaining the ideas with which he entered college. He saw already too wide a chasm between them and the prevailing sentiment and practices of the place. But he had a chance to explain at a reception which some of the boys had planned for the nephew of Congressman Pollock for that evening.

"Remember, 'heart of hickory'; that's the word here," was Ike's parting word, as he cracked his whip, in a trot past the college front that evening on his way to the next train at the station.

"Got the right look for the business," he muttered to himself; "but I'm afraid 'taint in any colt like him to pull out of such a hole. Takes seasoned wood. Get up, Nance! Gee in, Kate."

(To be continued.)

CARDINAL MANNING'S PLEDGE.

Written for the Children's League of the Cross.

A PROMISE TO GOD.

I promise Thee, sweet Lord, that I
Will never cloud the light
Which shines from Thee within my soul,
And makes my reason bright.
Nor ever will I lose the power
To serve Thee by my will,
Which Thou hast set within my heart
Thy precepts to fulfill.

O let me drink as Adam drank,
Before from Thee he fell;
O let me drink as Thou, dear Lord,
When faint by Sychar's well.
That from my childhood, pure from sin
Of drink and drunken strife,
By the clear fountain I may rest,
Of everlasting life.

If the apples bloomed to-day,
It would be pink, and would be May,
If great gold roses opened soon,
Then it would be yellow-June;
If it snowed—O, I remember!
'Twould be white, and be December;
Just because it's gray and blue,
April! April! that means you.

—Elizabeth Stuart Phelps.

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:—Here we are settled in our own special nook at last, and under the pretty name which you have chosen by your votes. Are you not all glad to be here? I look around on your bright faces with warm anticipations of the pleasure and profit which we can hope to gain in our Cozy Corner, for we will bring to it a reflection of the cozy corners filled with happy, loving hearts, in all our homes, so far away and yet so near. Come often and sit up close in the nook; send in your letters, questions, and puzzles, just as often as you please, remembering that we will all enjoy and get some benefit from them. Affectionately,

Aunt Jane

(These interesting little letters have been "crowded out" each week.)

A GOOD THINKER.

I have long been thinking what name would be best fit for this corner. At last I thought of one, "Young People's Temperance Corner." How would that do? I have been in Roseland, and saw men, women and children going past with pails filled with beer. I think it would be a good idea if both young and old would join our temperance corner. I for one will do it.

Your friend, JANE C. STEFFENS.

Holland.

A warm welcome to you, little namesake! Let us hear from you again.

IS LONESOME SOMETIMES.

I am a little girl, but youngest of the family. Have no little brother or sister to write about, so am pretty lonesome sometimes, and like to read the children's corner in UNION SIGNAL, or what is better, get mamma to read it to me. I have taken the temperance pledge and so has my little cousin. I think we would like to call our corner the Little White Ribboners' Corner.

EMMA CRISLER.

Chester, Ill.

Come right up close into our corner, little white-ribboner; here are brothers and sisters who want to charm away that lonesome feeling.

SOFT-SHELLED NUTS.

31.

DIAMOND.

*
* * *
* * * * *
* * *
*

Across: A letter; a domestic animal; something we could not live without; a color; a consonant.

Down: A letter; a public carriage; three-fourths of the earth; a boy's nickname; a consonant.

LEONARD HANCOCK.

32.

CROSSWORD ENIGMA.

I am in care, but not in pain,
I am in might, but not in main,
I am in up, but not in down,
I am in skirt, but not in gown,
I am in cure, but not in kill,
I am in hush, but not in still.
On Sabbath morning far and near
My welcoming bells sound sweet and clear.

33.

NUMERICAL ENIGMA.

I am composed of fourteen letters.
My 1, 11, 12 is a common metal.
My 8, 9, 6, 5, 13 means old.
My 14, 10, 3 is a common nuisance.
My 7, 2, 4 is a huge snake found in South America.
My whole is what everybody ought to be.

HATTIE WOLFE.

Send all replies and original puzzles to Puzzle Editor, UNION SIGNAL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

ANSWERS TO PUZZLES PUBLISHED MARCH 31.

22. Liar, lair, rail.
23. Isabel Somerset,
24.

a v e r v e r y e r s t
a f e r y t h e r e f a r e e r i n e r k e r i n d r e l d a n e n d s a f a r n a p s
e r s t

Correct answers: Mabel Beebe; Dollie Goodrich; Lola A. Shepard; R. H. Hill; Irene Leach; Mosquito; John Roberts; Minnie E Sinclair; Renel Mowry; Ethel Condra; Grace Shuman.

Kernels.

"There is a time to laugh."—SOLOMON.

TEACHER.—Name some of the most important things existing to-day that were unknown a hundred years ago.

TOMMY.—You and me.

THE following is a copy of a bill posted on the wall of a country village: "A lecture on total abstinence will be delivered in the open air, and a collection will be made at the door to defray expenses."

WIFE.—"O dear! The Jenkinses are coming to dinner and there's not a thing to eat."

HUSBAND—"Why, there seems to be a stew."

UNCLE HARRY.—"Well, Johnnie, and how did you like the ride on Uncle Harry's knee?"

JOHNNIE.—"Oh, it was very nice, but I had a ride on a real donkey yesterday."—Harper's Bazar.

A GENTLEMAN visiting a school had a book put into his hand for the purpose of examining a class. The word "inheritance" occurring in the verse, the querist interrogated one of the youngsters as follows: "What is patrimony?"

"Something left by a father."

"What would you call it if left by a mother?"

"Matrimony."

MR. TOPNOODY is no lawyer, but his wife is an able woman. He was stumped in his reading the other evening and appealed to her.

"Are you up on Latin, my dear?" he asked.

"What do you want to know?" she inquired with proper caution.

"I want to know the difference between de jure and de facto."

Mrs. T. studied a moment.

"Well," she said, "you are at the head of this family de jure."

"Yes," he put in, "I understand that."

"And," she concluded with some vigor, "I am the head of it de facto."

GENTLEMAN—"And so you are a newspaper man now, Uncle Rastus?" Uncle Rastus—"Yes, sir; I'se de editor ob de job depa'tment." Gentleman—"Editor of the job department?" Uncle Rastus—"Yes, sir; I carries in coal, an' scrubs de flo', an' washes down de window, an' all such editin' as dat, sah."—The Morning Star.

MISS MOIRE (starting out with Mrs. Hoppin to match a piece of goods)—"I suppose we'd better go to Chintz & Poplin's first."

MRS. HOPPIN—"No, indeed, we won't. They'll be sure to have it there."

NEIGHBOR—"Well, Patrick, I'm glad your master is dead. He was an old skinflint, anyway." Patrick (indignantly): "Faith, and Oi bet if he wor alive you'd not be afther sayin' you wor glad he wor dead!"—Life.

JOHN SMITH—"But how can you marry her? You are too poor even to pay your rent." Jack Uppers—O, but I expect pay-rental assistance."—Puck.

"MADAME, are you a woman suffragist?" "No, sir, I haven't time to be." "Haven't time! Well, if you had the privilege of voting, whom would you support?" "The same man I've supported for ten years." "And who is that?" "My husband."

HIRED GIRL.

Our hired girl, she's 'Lizabeth Ann;
An' she can cook best things to eat!
She ist puts dough in our pie-pan,
An' pours in somepin' 'ats good and sweet,
An' nen she salts it all on top
With cinnamon; an' nen she'll stop
An' stoop, an' slide it, ist as slow,
In th' old cook-stove, so's 'twon't slop
An' git all spilled; nen bakes it—so
It's custard-pie, first thing you know!
An' nen she'll say:
"Clear out o' my way!
They's time fer work, an' time fer play.
Take yer dough an' run, child, run,
Er I can't git no cookin' done!"

When our hired girl 'tends like she's mad,
An' says folks got to walk the chalk
When she's around, er wished they had!
I play out on our porch, an' talk
To the Raggedy Man 'at mows our lawn:
An' he says "Whew!" an' nen leans on
His old crook-scythe, an' blinks his eyes,
An' sniffs all round an' says, "I swan!
Ef my old nose don't tell me lies,
It 'pears like I smell custard-pies!"
An' nen he'd say:
"Clear out o' the way!
They's time fer work, an' time fer play.
Take yer dough an' run, child, run;
Er she can't git no cookin' done!"
—James Whitcomb Riley.

Publisher's Dep't.

We Remove Our Business Office

Into the Temple May 1st, and as we have on hand a limited supply of back numbers of THE UNION SIGNAL which we would like to send on a mission of usefulness, rather than take them to our new quarters, we will agree to send them to you for missionary purposes at ridiculously low prices. See.

For 10c, ten copies.
For 15c, twenty copies.
For 25c, fifty copies.

Now is your chance to get good reading for your neighbors at less than cost of postage. These papers are very fine, as you know. Do not delay. Send at once to

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Do Not Fail

To see that your Sunday-schools are provided with the Temperance Lesson prepared for May 22d. We have already referred to its value, and only wish now to urge that orders be sent in early to prevent disappointment. Do not forget.

The following liberal terms are offered: 100, 50cts; 500, $2; 1.000, $3.50; 2.000, $6; 5.000, $12. Add postage at the rate of 12 cents per 100. The Young Crusader and the Lesson will be sent on the following terms: 100, $1; 500. $4.75; 1,000, $9; 2,000. $15; 5,000, $35; 8,000, $48, postpaid. Send all orders to

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Bargains in Leaflets.

Some of our leaflets have been transferred to a new series, and as we have a supply still on hand of the old style, we have decided to dispose of them at a sacrifice, with a view to utilizing our shelf-room for new stock.

MISCELLANEOUS LEAFLETS.

No. 2. Alcohol and Health.
No. 3. { Our Bondage, Miss Willard.
Mat Women, F. P. Cobbe.

The price has been about 50c. per 100, but they will now be sold for 20c. per 100 postpaid. If you want to see them before ordering send 5c. for samples, and we will, at the same time, send a sample of

The Duty of the Pulpit,

by C. H. Paine, LL.D. This excellent paper appeared in THE UNION SIGNAL some weeks back, and is the best we have seen of its kind. It starts out with saying that "A chain of linked logic as strong as that which binds the universe together, binds our subject upon the conscience of the church and the pulpit." The five "links" are well connected, and the logic used is unanswerable. Every minister of the gospel would be benefited by reading the leaflet. Price 5c.; in lots of ten or more, 3c. each.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

That New Plan

Is attracting a good deal of attention as a splendid money-making scheme. It has already revealed to a number of good people the fact that there is both amusement and profit in the book business. For instance, one agent writes:

"Have taken fourteen orders for 'Glimpses,' and have canvassed only about three hours. I enjoy the work very much, and have been much amused and profited by my experience."

We have received many letters like this during the past two weeks, and they continue coming.

They show us plainly that success awaits every earnest worker, and it is simply a matter of choice with you if the

Dollars of Profit

Shall roll into your pocket or some other. Ladies and gentlemen who never before sold books or anything else are making money with our books. How is that? People want our publications, and therefore make ready buyers. It will pay you to send a postal for the plan.

SUBS'N BOOK DEP'T W. T. P. A.,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Free Rum on the Congo.

Read it.
Let your friends read it.
Lend it to your minister.
Present it to your Congressman.
Read it in your home.
And read it in your missionary society
Then place it in your library.
We will send one copy on receipt of 25c.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

SPECIAL OFFER
FOR 30 DAYS.

To introduce our High Grade garments through the country, we will make, to measure, the latest and most popular style Spring Jacket (as per cut) Imported Clay Diagonal Worsted, or Corkscrew, satin-lined throughout, for $15.00

Regular price, to measure, $30
Usual Ready-made price, $25

We guarantee our garments to be Superior in Finish to any in the Market.

Write for samples, references and instructions.
REFERENCE:—Columbia National Bank, Chicago.

MANUFACTURER'S CLOAK CO.,
188 Wabash Av., - - Chicago, Ill.

YPSILANTI Dress Reform UNDERWEAR

SPRING GOODS REDUCED IN PRICE.

Sanitary Balbriggan, Sanitary Lisle Thread, Sanitary MERINO, SILK and Sanitary Balbriggan, Silk and Cashmere mixed.

For SPRING and SUMMER WEAR. { The ONLY Sanitary Underwear, and Endorsed by the leading medical profession.

☞Send for new Catalogue, Samples, and revised Price List. If your dealer cannot supply them, they can be obtained of the manufacturers.

DON'T BE DECEIVED.
See that each garment is stamped with our Trade Mark—
"Ypsilanti Health Underwear."

HAY & TODD MFG. CO., Ypsilanti, Mich.

One-third Your Life is Spent in Bed!

NO ODOR — COLD BLAST — NO DUST — NO QUILTS — CHICAGO

The Art of purifying Feathers for Bedding purposes has been the subject of close study for many years, and has reached its highest development in the COLD BLAST PROCESS, by which all foreign matter, dust and the causes of odor are eliminated, and the Feathers rendered pure, clean and sweet, as well as permanently buoyant, while retaining their Feathery softness. FEATHER PILLOWS MADE OF THESE ARE HEALTHFUL. Watch for Trade Mark. Your dealer probably keeps them. If not, address

THE COLD BLAST FEATHER CO.
MAKERS OF Faultless Bedding. CHICAGO.

FREE For 30 Days. Wishing to introduce our CRAYON PORTRAITS and at the same time extend our business and make new customers, we have decided to make this Special Offer: Send us a Cabinet Picture, Photograph, Tintype, Ambrotype or Daguerotype of yourself or any member of your family, living or dead and we will make you a CRAYON PORTRAIT FREE OF CHARGE, provided you exhibit it to your friends as a sample of our work, and use your influence in securing us future orders. Place name and address on back of picture and it will be returned in perfect order. We make any change in picture you wish, not interfering with the likeness. Refer to any bank in Chicago. Address all mail to THE CRESCENT CRAYON CO. Opposite New German Theatre, CHICAGO, ILL. P. S.—We will forfeit $100 to anyone sending us photo and not receiving crayon picture FREE as per this offer. This offer is bonafide.

MENDING MADE EASY BY THE USE OF GUM TISSUE

Used for repairing all kinds of clothing, from the very finest silk or satin to a buckskin mitten. Kid gloves and umbrellas mended without sewing, quicker, neater, and stronger than ever before. SAMPLE 10cts. to intending agents. F. Cassgreen Mfg. Co. 134 Van Buren St., Chicago, Ill.

PEATS THE WALL PAPER MERCHANT CHICAGO

Retails all grades of WALL PAPER of the newest designs and latest colorings in small quantities; many patterns cheaper than your home dealer can buy them.

GOOD PAPER, 3c. GOLD PAPER, 5c.

Handsome parlor paper 10—12½—15c per roll with wide border and ceiling to match.

If you intend to use any WALL PAPER whatever send 10 cents for postage on samples and his guide "HOW TO PAPER" will be sent free. Agents sample books $1.

See his samples before you buy.

ALFRED PEATS, Wall Paper Merchant,
136-138 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

DELSARTE'

Corset Waists and Braces. Send for Price List.
Agents Wanted Also
DELSARTE CORSET CO.,
142 W. 23d St., New York.
111 State Street, Chicago, Ill.

FOR MANY LADIES THE BALLS PERFECT COMFORT HEALTH — NO POINTS — NO METAL EYELETS TO CUT STRINGS — THE FIRST DAY EASY — NEVER BREAK OR ROLL UP BONES — FIT SNUG BUT NEVER

CORSETS & CORSET WAISTS FOR OTHERS THE KABO ELEGANT SHAPES AND MANY OF THEM — NO METAL EYELETS TO STAIN YOUR CLOTHES — BONES POSITIVELY DO NOT BREAK OR ROLL UP — FULLY GUARANTEED BY CHICAGO CORSET CO.

CORSETS ARE THE ONLY ONES GIVING ENTIRE SATISFACTION

WEAK, NERVOUS PEOPLE.

DR. HORNE'S ELECTRO-MAGNETIC BELT positively cures RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, LIVER, KIDNEY and exhausting chronic diseases of both sexes. Contains 23 to 100 degrees of Electricity. GUARANTEED the latest improved, cheapest, scientific, powerful, durable and effective MEDICAL ELECTRIC BELT in the WORLD. Electric Suspensories free with Male Belts. ELECTRIC TRUSSES FOR RUPTURE. 9,000 cured. Send 4c-stamp for pamphlet.

DR. W. J. HORNE, REMOVED TO 180 WABASH AVE., CHICAGO

Mention THE UNION SIGNAL.

DR. SYKES' SURE CURE FOR CATARRH

Taken internally and used locally with Insufiator. At Druggists or per mail, $1.50.

Has cured many cases pronounced hopeless by physicians. Send for Free Book 'Common Sense Talk' and numerous testimonials. They will convince you.

DR. SYKES' SURE CURE CO., 103 STATE ST. CHICAGO.

MALE AND FEMALES MAKE $3 to $5 A DAY at home working for us. Send your name on a postal card for particulars and Free Sample. Hobb's Medicine Co., Chicago, Ill.

BEST PAYING THING for Agents is our PHOTOGRAPH FAMILY RECORD PICTURE. We give you liberal terms. Address Dept. C. P. CORY & CO., 51 & 58 Jefferson St., Chicago

DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES CURED by Peck's Invisible Ear Cushions. Whispers heard. Successful when all remedies fail. Sold only by F. Hiscox, 853 B'way, N.Y. Write for book of proofs FREE

PILES Remedy Free. INSTANT RELIEF. Final cure in 10 days. Never returns; no purge; no salve; no suppository. A victim tried in vain every remedy has discovered a simple cure, which he will mail free to his fellow sufferers. Address J. H. REEVES, Box 3290, New York City, N. Y.

PARALYSIS CURED without medicine. Rheumatism, Spinal Diseases and Dropsy Speedily cured. Address Dr. O. Y. THACHER, 6, Central Music Hall, Chicago, for a valuable book FREE to all.

RUPTURE A Positive Radical cure at Home. (Sealed) Book giving full particulars sent free. Write Dr. W. S. Rice, Box U Smithville, Jeff. Co., N. Y.

LINCOLN T&A. Guaranteed to cure Constipation, Liver and Kidney trouble. Blood and Complexion Purifier. Send for sample. Sold by all Druggists. McCLURE DRUG CO., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

MY WIFE SAYS SHE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT FOR THE MONEY. $12 Buys a $65.00 Improved Oxford Singer Sewing Machine; perfect working, reliable, finely finished, adapted to light and heavy work, with a complete set of the latest improved attachments free. Each machine guaranteed for 5 years. Buy direct from our factory and save dealers and agents profit. Send for FREE CATALOGUE. OXFORD MFG. COMPANY, DEPT 240, CHICAGO, ILL.

STRONG WORDS

I. "I could quote a thousand men who, when everything else failed them, found in Granula the very food their systems needed."—JAMES C. JACKSON, M. D., founder Dansville Sanatorium.

II. "Granula has saved my life on several occasions. I now carry the article with me as a sort of life preserver."—WM. GILLETTE (the actor).

III. "The Judge (A. W. Tourgee) has been crazy ever since he was in Dansville about the delicious Granula."—MRS. A. W. TOURGEE.

FOR THAT
"PERFECT HEALTH FOOD"
GRANULA

GRANULA CO., Dansville, N. Y.
Pamphlet free. Trial box, postpaid, for 36 cts.

GOLD MEDAL, PARIS, 1878.

W. BAKER & CO.'S
Breakfast Cocoa

from which the excess of oil has been removed,
Is absolutely pure and it is soluble.
No Chemicals
are used in its preparation. It has more than three times the strength of Cocoa mixed with Starch, Arrowroot or Sugar, and is therefore far more economical, costing less than one cent a cup. It is delicious, nourishing, strengthening, EASILY DIGESTED, and admirably adapted for invalids as well as for persons in health.

Sold by Grocers everywhere.
W. BAKER & CO., Dorchester, Mass.

Dr. O. P. Brown's
GREAT EXTERNAL REMEDY
HERBAL OINTMENT!
reaches disease through the pores, arouses circulation, heals inflammation, banishes pain. 25 and 50 cents, Druggists or mail. J. Gibson Brown, 47 Grand St., Jersey City, N. J.

THE Total Abstinence Life Association
OF AMERICA
PAYS ALL HONEST LOSSES PROMPTLY and in FULL.

It furnishes to Total Abstainers the Cheapest and Most Reliable Insurance to be had.

New and liberal commissions will be paid to experienced agents in Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Michigan, California, Connecticut and Iowa.

It will pay you well to write to us.

THE TOTAL ABSTINENCE LIFE ASSOCIATION of AMERICA.
902-904 Royal Insurance Building,
CHICAGO, ILL.

SOCIAL PURITY; True Manhood.
A Manual for Young Men. Mrs. F. H. Rastall, Business Mgr. W. T. P. A., writes: "I can most earnestly commend, as well as recommend, 'TRUE MANHOOD' as a suitable book for boys and young men, containing, as it does, information they all need in order to protect themselves from influences they cannot avoid, and against which this book will arm them. It will be especially valuable to parents who shrink from the duty of themselves conveying information on delicate questions to their boys at a suitable age." Price, prepaid, $1.65. Best terms to agents.
ALICE B. STOCKHAM & Co., 277 Madison st, Chicago.

For Harness, Buggy Tops, Saddles, Fly Nets Traveling Bags, Military Equipments, Etc.
Gives a beautiful finish which will not peel or crack off, smut or crock by handling. Not a varnish Used by the U. S. Army and is the standard among manufacturers and owners of fine harness in every quarter of the globe.
SOLD BY ALL HARNESS MAKERS.

Publisher's Notes.

Good Books

at low prices are called for on every side. We respond to the call and enumerate here a few of the best to be had for money.

STORIES OF THE MARCH, Mary Allen West, cloth, 320 pages, prettily illustrated. A collection of an odd three-score brief, pointed stories in prose and poetry. The frontispiece shows a youthful damsel beseechingly caressing the cheek of "grandma," with the urgent appeal, "Tell me a story, please." The book has been prepared in response to that appeal from the young in the nursery and at the fireside. It will brighten you up to read some of these stories aloud to the young folks. By looking at the list of authors you will find many of the best writers represented. Not only are they "Stories of the March," they are also stories written on the march, hence are full of vim and enthusiasm. Send for the book, it will do you good. Price reduced to 75 cents.

DRIFTWOOD, Mary Lowe Dickinson. Gathered from the tides of sentiment in favor of temperance, purity, chivalry and truth. Over 300 pages filled with bright stories for young and old. The author allowed us to select from a number of her productions whatever we pleased and we took pains to get the very best of what was offered. Considering the high repute of the author, this guarantees a book of unusual attractiveness. The book contains reading matter sufficient in quantity and quality to keep a large family in good humor for a month! A wise man said once that "A merry heart doeth good like a medicine." Suppose you try some of the merry-making "prescriptions" of the book! Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HYGIENE OF THE HOME, Susan Burr Barnes. Cloth, 231 pp. This book should be in every W. C. T. U. home. It is the result of the author's personal studies and experience, and it discusses preventives of disease and death. If the many now laboring under physical ailments, who secure little or no help from physicians and medicines, would carefully study the principles of this book they would soon share the experience of the author, who recovered from lasting illness by following nature's laws. The book tells how to regain and retain health, and discusses many of the questions kindred to health, heredity, purity, etc. It is a book that cannot fail to help and cheer the reader. Price $1.

FREE RUM ON THE CONGO, W. T. Hornaday. Paper, 144 pp. Introductory letter by Hannah Whitall Smith. The curse of the liquor traffic is far more deadly than the slave trade ever was, and it is fast demoralizing poor Africa. "Christian" America and England will some day be judged responsible for the bottled and barreled woe it sends out from its shores to the ignorant heathen. But the nation is made up of individuals, and this lays the responsibility at our own doors. Every man and woman has a voice which can be raised for justice, and we can all do something to stop the accursed traffic. The book suggests methods for stopping it. Let it be placed in the bands of every minister and Sunday-school official. The mayor of your place ought to have it; you should read it yourself. Local W. C. T. Unions will do a good work by voting an appropriation by which to purchase a number of copies for distribution. The price is 25c. While the supply lasts we will send five for $1; twelve for $2; twenty for $3.50, postpaid. At these rates no union is too poor to purchase a number.

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Do You Know?

No. You do not know how very helpful the latest book written by Miss Willard will prove to those who secure it. Note the following facts:

It is a book of especial value to Methodists, because it tells of the origin and growth of THE Methodist seat of learning in the West—the Northwestern University—and gives illustrated sketches of the bishops and the leading dignitaries of the church who have been connected with it.

It is of especial value to temperance workers, as it proves what has often been claimed—that a town can prosper without the liquor traffic.

It is written in Miss Willard's best vein. Full gilt, 180 pictures. Price $1.50. You want it!

WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

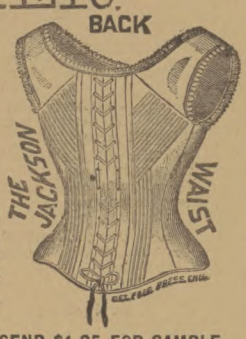
As a man readeth, so is he. See that every one reads our temperance papers, books and leaflets.

Send for Color Samples and Price List. Patented February 23, 1886. Examine closely Stamp on inside of Waist.

TAKE NO OTHER.

THE GENUINE
JACKSON
CORSET WAISTS



ARE MADE ONLY BY THE
JACKSON CORSET CO., Jackson, Mich.
The manufacturer's name is printed upon the boxes, and stamped upon inside of clasp in each waist. They are the most popular articles of the kind now on the market. You should have one of them.

BE SURE AND GET THE RIGHT THING. IF YOUR DEALER HASN'T IT, SEND $1.25 FOR SAMPLE.

$500 FOR A PANSY BLOSSOM!
Every reader of this paper should not fail to enjoy some of the Alice Pansies this summer, which were named by Mrs. Harrison. They create a sensation everywhere and their Beauty is beyond description. Their Mammoth Size of odd colors is wonderful, and they have cost me an enormous price to secure them, but they are far ahead of all other varieties of Pansies and can be had from no other seedsman. I want to increase their size and will pay $500 in CASH to any person growing a Blossom measuring 3 in. in diameter; 2¾ in. are very common size. See catalogue. For 25c. in silver or 28c. in stamps, I will mail, carefully packed, so they will go several days, 12 plants of the "Alice Pansies" (soon be blooming), a Pearl Tube Rose Bulb and my Illustrated Catalogue. For $1.00, I will mail 50 good plants, enough for an elegant bed, 4 Tube Rose Bulbs, and Catalogue. ☞ At these prices not a reader of this paper should fail to enjoy at least a few of the finest pansies in the world, which were named "ALICE" by Mrs. Harrison. You can have the nicest pansies around, besides you may grow 3 in. blossom and get $500. Every person ordering any of the above will receive FREE a packet of Mammoth Passion Flower Seed, Hardy Climbing Vine, perfect beauty that will flower the first year from seed and is worth $1.00. With every $1 order, I will give FREE, 6 Mammoth Verbena Plants, mixed colors, new and elegant. F. B. MILLS, Rose Hill, Onondaga Co., N. Y.
(MR. MILLS is perfectly reliable and trustworthy.—Ed.)

ORGANS ONLY $35 & PIANOS ONLY $175
Direct from the factory at less than wholesale prices, from one of the most reliable manufacturers in the world.

SHIPPED ANYWHERE ON 15 DAYS' TEST TRIAL.
SOLD ON THE INSTALMENT PLAN
UNLIMITED WARRANTY WITH EACH INSTRUMENT.
As an advertisement, the first instrument sold in a new locality will be sold at a reduced price. Order or write at once so as to avail yourself of this great offer.
Our instruments contain all modern improvements, and we guarantee to give more true value for the money than any manufacturer in the world.
Elegant new catalogue, with fac-simile awards given us. Full of valuable information. Sent free on application.
Address BEETHOVEN ORGAN CO., WASHINGTON, WARREN CO., N. J.

FREE
Prettiest BOOK ever Printed.
SEEDS ONE cent a PACKET, and upwards according to rarity, scarcity, or cost. Cheapest of any by oz. & lb. 1 000 000 extras. Catalogue free. R. H. Shumway Rockford Ill.

5000 LADY AGENTS WANTED FOR
DARKNESS AND DAYLIGHT
OR LIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF NEW YORK LIFE
A WOMAN'S thrilling story of Gospel, Temperance, and Rescue work "In His Name" in the great under-world of New York. By Mrs. HELEN CAMPBELL. Introduction
By Rev. Lyman Abbott, D.D.
A wonderful book of Christian love and faith. 250 remarkable illustrations from flash-light photographs of real life. 31*st thousand*. 5,000 more Agents Wanted.—Men and Women. $200 a month. ☞ Experience and capital not necessary, for We Teach All. Give Credit and Extra Terms, and Pay Freights. Outfit free. Write for Circulars to A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

ALUMINUM SOUVENIR
Charm (dime size) with the Lord's Prayer coined in smallest characters, and strung on blue silk ribbon, sent free to any one sending 10 cents for sample copy of The FREE St. Louis Magazine. Aluminum is the wonderful new metal, bright as silver, light as wood, strong as steel, will not tarnish.
St. Louis Magazine, 901 Olive St., St. Louis, Mo.

MILLER'S HOTEL New York City, 39 West 26th St. A Prohibition Home. Patronized by W. C. T. U. workers visiting New York. Turkish, Electric, Roman Baths.
Address. CHARLES H. HAYNES, Prop.

HOTEL FREDONIA. Washington, D. C. H St., between 13th and 14th. ELEGANT, QUIET. HOMELIKE & STRICTLY TEMPERANCE
G. H. La Fetra, Prop.

FAT PEOPLE You can reduce your weight 10 to 15 lbs. a month at home without starving or injury by DR. CLARKE'S Home Treatment. Proofs, Testimonials, Free. F. B. CLARKE, M. D., Drawer 133, Chicago, Ill.

LADIES without business experience are making immense sales of Mme. McCABE'S CORSETS AND WAISTS. Send for agents' terms.
St. Louis Corset Co., St. Louis, Mo.

See Name "EVER READY" on back of each DRESS STAY you buy. Take none but them.
YPSILANTI DRESS STAY MFG. CO., Ypsilanti, Michigan.

WORST CASES CURED TO STAY CURED IF UNCOMPLICATED BY ORGANIC DISEASE. Incurable cases declined.
ASTHMA
WE WANT NAME OF EVERY ASTHMATIC. Examination free by mail.
P. HAROLD HAYES, M. D.
BUFFALO, N. Y.

YOU Looking for a HOME or an investment where you can double your money? ELLSWORTH the new temperance suburb of Chicago offers both. Write to ELLSWORTH LAND ASS'N, Room 41, 81 Clark St., Chicago.

ROCK BOTTOM Prices on Dry Goods, Groceries. Everything you eat, wear or use. Send for FREE Illustrated Catalogue to H. R. EAGLE & CO., 68 Wabash Av., Chicago, Ill
We do not sell liquors in any shape.

PORTABLE BATHS.
Best ever Known. Wholesale and Retail
Agents Wanted Everywhere.
Send for Circulars.
E. J. KNOWLTON,
Ann Arbor, Mich.

20 Hidden Name, New Emb. Basket, Plush Fringe Cards, 1 complete Fountain Pen 25
Games & Agts. Outfit 10cts. Typewriter and Photo Cameras free to Agts. Clinton Bros. Clintonville, Ct.

YOUR NAME on 25 LOVELY CARDS, 1 RING, 1 LACE PIN, 1 PATENT FOUNTAIN PEN, 1 FORGET-ME-NOT ALBUM, 400 Album Verses &c, with the New and Popular Monthly, WAYSIDE GLEANINGS, THREE MONTHS FOR 10c. LAUREL CARD CO., CLINTONVILLE, CONN.

COMPOUND OXYGEN Price reduced. For information address
DR. A. H. HIATT. Central Music Hall, Chicago

AGENT made $71 in four days selling my Electric Corsets and Specialties. 100 PER CENT. profit and Cash Prizes. Sample free. Dr. Bridgman, B'way, New York.

A LADY WANTED
in each locality to manage Toilet Parlor at home; write, obtain names, send circulars. $5 to $15 weekly. Our Toilet Art Book Free. Send stamp. SYLVAN TOILET CO., Port Huron, Mich.

LADIES Send to the Stevens' Dish Washing Machine Co., Cleveland, for descriptive circulars of this wonderful invention. No dish or wiping cloth used; truly a great blessing to the household. Agents wanted.

LADY Agents make big wages every day With our Ladies' and Children's Specialties. Over 100 different articles. Indispensable. Catalogue Free. G. L. ERWIN & CO., Chicago, Ill.

LADY wanted, on salary, to sell Roses, Shrubs, &c Brown Bros. Nurym'n, Rochester, N. Y & Chicago

HOUSEHOLD NECESSITY. Agents make big profits. Catalogue (A) and particulars free. Cline Mfg. Co., 67 W. Washington St., Chicago.

LADY AGENTS CLEAR $10 PER DAY selling my garments for ladies & children Mrs. L. E. SINGLETON, Box 665, Chicago, Ill.

10 cents pays for the best ladies' paper published for three months. Ladies' Bazar, Chicago, Ill.

"Why stand ye all the day idle?"
10 DOLLARS PER DAY
is not easily made in these times, but it can be made working for us in any locality. We have agents that have made more than $25 per day, the whole secret is we have something that every housekeeper wants and will buy at sight without any urging. If agents prefer will pay a straight salary of $75 per month and expenses. Full particulars sent free to all points where we have not already secured an agent. Exclusive territory given. Can refer to any express company in Boston as to our integrity. Address, (in full,)
STANDARD SILVERWARE CO.,
Order Dept. 127 Boston, Mass.

These Are Some of Our Supplies.

NATIONAL LEAFLETS.

The standard leaflets for use in extending the knowledge of W. C. T. U. principles and methods; divided into three sections, designed, respectively, to aid in the general work, that of the Young Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and of the Loyal Temperance Legion. Suitable size for inclosing in letters. The titles in most cases suggest the class of readers for which each is designed.

Price, per package of 10 . . . . . $ .10
Per 100, of one number, or assorted 90
Per 1000, " " 7.50

1. The National W. C. T. U. Mary T. Lathrap
2. Duties of Officers. Mary Allen West
3. Finance. Esther Pugh and F. C. Hathaway
4. The Reason Why (Statement of the Relation of the W. C. T. U. to Politics). Frances E. Willard
5. The Story of a Great Conviction. Mary B. Willard
6. How to Conduct a Public Meeting. Frances E. Willard
7. The Silent Million. B. V. Cushman, M. D.
8. Preparation for Gospel Work. Rev. Amos Dean, D. D.
9. Scientific Temperance Instruction in Public Schools. Frances E. Willard
10. The White Cross and White Ribbon. Rev. Dr. B. F. DeCosta
11. Morality vs. Law (The Age of Consent.) Martha K. Pearce, LL.B.
12. Tobacco and the Drink Habit. Ruby I. Gilbert
13. Steamers and Smokers. What shall we do about it? Meta Lander
14. Capital, Labor and Temperance. Mrs. Augusta C. Bristol
15. A Pastorless Parish. Mary Allen West
16. Doctor and Druggist (To circulate among physicians). Frances E. Willard
17. The Drinker's Thermometer. M. D. Kimball
18. Work of the W. C. T. U. Mrs. M. H. Boardman
19. Little Things in Child-Life. Mrs. S. M. I. Henry
20. "'Twould Hurt His Hand." Lucia E. F. Kimball
21. Why Special Temperance Teaching in the Sunday-school? Lucia E. F. Kimball
22. Bible Wines. Mary Allen West
23. Is Alcohol a Stimulant? (A symposium from eminent physicians.)
24. Pants are Made for Boys, Not Boys for Pants. Annis Eastman
25. Is Cider Harmless? Alice Collins
26. Let Your Women Keep Silence in the Churches.
27. Society and Society Women; A New Definition Frances E. Willard
28. A Suffrage Question-Box. Henry B. Blackwell
29. Blood Will Tell. Rev. C. C. Harrah
30. The Teacher Taught. Mary Allen West
31. Political Economy vs. Commercial Economy. Dr. A. J. Ingersoll
32. The Tobacco Toboggan. Mrs. Helen L. Bullock
33. A Whole Humanity (Address on Woman Suffrage.) Mrs. Zerelda G. Wallace
34. Liquor's War on Labor. John Lloyd Thomas
35. Hints on W. C. T. U. Gospel Work. Mrs. F. C. Hathaway
36. The Coming Brotherhood. Frances E. Willard
37. The Teacher Questioned. Alice M. Guernsey
38. The Teacher Helped. " "
39. The Relation of Temperance Reform to the Labor Movement. Prof. Richard T. Ely
40. Spirituous Liquors Not Needed in Medicine or the Arts. Dr. J. R. Nichols
41. Busy Women and the W. C. T. U. Mrs. Lucy A. Scott
42. Twelve Reasons Why Women Ought to Vote. Alice Stone Blackwell
43. Why one Woman Wants to Vote. Ella G. Ives
44. "The Letter Killeth; the Spirit Maketh Free." Mrs. S. S. Fessenden
45. The Hour and Its Needs. Mrs. Margaret B. Platt
46. Self-Government for Schools. Frances E. Willard
47. Should Women Vote? " "
48. Safety for School Children. " "
49. "Dead Reckoning." R. Kelso Carter
50. Country Unions. Mary Allen West
51. Farm Mortgages. Mary Allen West
52. Gospel Temperance. John G. Woolley
53. Our Bondage. Frances E. Willard
54. Systematic Giving. Esther Tuttle Pritchard

Y. W. C. T. U.

101. A Problem Solved (How to maintain interest in our meetings). Elizabeth F. Thayer and Medora Drew
102. A Girl's Influence. Anna M. Vail
103. The Flower Mission. (A symposium from the Oak and Ivy Leaf.)
104. A New Régime. Maud Rittenhouse
105. Counting One. Eva Kinney Griffith
106. Fair Play. Mary E. McDowell
107. Leaving the Home Nest. Alice M. Guernsey
108. The New Crusade. Frances H. Ensign

L. T. L.

201. The Civic Guard. Emily A. Kellogg
202. Tested. Elvirton Wright
203. Why I Never Tasted Liquor. Edward W. Bok
204. An Appeal to Mothers. Frances E. Willard
205. Part of a Boy. Estelle Thomson

TOTAL ABSTINENCE LEAFLETS.

A series of short sketches bearing directly on the subject of total abstinence. Adapted for distribution in public temperance meetings, etc.

Price for five, or less, each . . . . . $ .01
Per 100 50

1. Some New Facts About Alcoholic Heredity. Dr. T. D. Crothers
2. A King's Son. Mary Lowe Dickinson
3. Is it Nothing to You?
4. In the Bushel or in the Jug. John P. St. John
5. Some Methods of Prevention. Edward Everett Hale
6. Hints About Helps.
7. Pledge-keeping.
8. The Law of Habit. Frances E. Willard
9. Turn on the Light.

SUPERINTENDENTS' SERIES.

Manuals of Department Work, by National Superintendents.

Manual of the School of Methods. Mary Allen West
Price . . . . . $ .25

Manual of the Y. W. C. T. U. Mrs. Frances J. Barnes
Price . . . . . $ .25

Manual of Juvenile Work. Helen G. Rice
Price . . . . . $ .05
Ten or more, each 03
Per 100 . . . . . 2.50

Questions Answered. Anna A. Gordon
On the work of the Juvenile Department.
Price . . . . . $ .25

Evangelistic Manual. Mrs. Annie M. Palmer
Price . . . . . $ .05

Golden Keys. Mrs. E. G. Greene
Manual of Kindergarten Department.
Price . . . . . $ .25

Manual of the Purity Department. Frances E. Willard
Price . . . . . $ .05
10 or more, each 03
Per 100 . . . . . 2.50

National Prohibitory Amendment Guide. Mrs. Ada C. Bittenbender
Price . . . . . $ .25

White Cross Manual. See p. 26.

DEPARTMENT LEAFLETS.

RAILROAD.

Price, for 5, or less, each . . . . . $ .01
Per 100 50

1. The Traveler's Psalm.
2. The Moral Suasion Railroad.
3. The Good Times Railroad.
4. Railroad Temperance Association Constitution.

SYSTEMATIC GIVING.

11. Tithing vs. Entertainments. Esther Tuttle Pritchard

FOR MOTHERS' MEETINGS.

HOME LEAFLETS.

For careful home reading. They treat of various questions vitally connected with the home—especially the training of children, physically, morally and spiritually.

Price, each . . . . . $ .02
Per 100 . . . . . 1.50
Per 1,000 . . . . . 10.00

1. Mothers' Meetings—Past and Present. Mary Allen West
2. Children in the Church. Rev. C. C. Harrah
3. Jesus Christ the Emancipator of Women. Rev. C. C. Harrah
4. Food Suggestions. Mary G. Underhill
5. Mothers and Public Schools. Mrs. D. Bentley
6. Obedience. Henry Ward Beecher
7. Temperance Training in the Home. Mary Allen West
8. A Mother's Experience in Non-Alcoholic Medication. Mrs. Joel Swartz
9. Mrs. Klyne's Life Work. Alvira M. Irish
10. "Let us Live with our Children." Mrs. C. R. McCartney
11. Reverence. " "
12. Marriage with Inebriates. Dr. T. D. Crothers

PURITY LEAFLETS.

Bearing to the general work of Social Purity a relation similar to that borne by the White Cross Leaflets to the work among boys and men. A series to be read and discussed in Mothers' Meetings, and to be talked over by parents at home.

Price, full set . . . . . $ .10
Ten numbers and over, at the rate of 50 cts. per 100 (½ ct. each).

1. Letter to the Women of America. Ellice Hopkins
2. Predisposing Causes. Kate Lindsay, M. D.
3. Early Perverting Influences. Irma A. Jones
4. Danger to Our Girls. L. Anna Ballard, M. D.
5. Dress and Vice. Frances E. Willard
6. Pitfalls for our Boys. J. H. Kellogg, M. D.
7. Narcotics. Lida B. Ingalls
8. Danger Signals. Rose S. Bryan, M. D.
9. Bad Hygiene vs. Virtue. B. V. Cushman, M. D.
10. Literature and Vice. Anna Garlin Spencer
11. Responsibility of Parents. Kate C. Bushnell, M. D.
12. Some Legal Aspects of the Question. Martha K. Pearce, LL. B

WHITE CROSS SERIES.

In Purity work, the W. C. T. U. cordially co-operates with the White Cross Army.

Price, each . . . . . $ .03
Per 100 . . . . . 2.00

1. My Little Sister. / Touching Pitch. Ellice Hopkins
2. Is it Natural. / Who Holds the Rope? J. E. H.
3. The Apocalypse of Evil. Ellice Hopkins
4. Bloodguiltiness. Rev. J. M. Horsley
5. Buried Seed. Ellice Hopkins
6. An Evil Tradition. Rev. A. G. Butler
7. What Can We Do? Ellice Hopkins
8. Black Anchor. " "
9. Little Kindnesses. / The Temple of the Eternal " " / J. E. H.
10. The Man with the Drawn Sword. Ellice Hopkins
11. Personal Purity. Mrs. Lucy A. Scott
12. Real Chivalry. Mrs. Lucy A. Scott

White Cross Manual. Frances E. Willard
Pledges. See p. 37.
Badge. See p. 54.

Signal Notes.

ENGLAND will probably try Sunday closing.

GREAT BRITAIN'S drink bill is attracting world-wide attention.

THE revival in Scotland still continues under Moody and Sankey.

THE famine that has been raging in Russia has extended to Finland.

THE Salvation Army strengthens its position by practical, helpful work for the masses which it aims to save.

THE French temperance organization is known as "La Société de la Croix Bleu." The careless Frenchman is becoming thoughtful in regard to the drink danger.

AN organizing committee has been formed in Holland to make arrangements for the fourth International Temperance Congress to be held in The Hague, September next.

THE current of events runs strongly in favor of women's advancement for the future, argues the Christian Colonist of Adelaide, So. Australia, in a brief résumé of the year's social progress.

THE author of the present prohibitory law in Kansas. Mr. Murray, is circulating a petition which requests the House of Representatives to prohibit the sale of liquor at the National Soldiers' Home in Leavenworth.

DR. NORMAN KERR is said to view with horror the fact that men and women are committed to prison scores and even hundreds of times for short periods, for the offence of drunkenness, when they ought to be sent to inebriate asylums for a much longer term, with some hope of recovery.

THE Queen Isabella Association will not have a pavilion or club house on the Columbian Exposition grounds. Its application for space for such pavilion has been rejected by the grounds and buildings committee, on recommendation of Chief of Construction Burnham, who urged that no space could be spared for buildings of the private club house description.

A GERMAN authority says that almost a third of all humanity—that is, 400,000,000—speak the Chinese language. Then the Hindu language is spoken by more than 100,000,000. In the third place stands the English, spoken by almost 100,000,000. Fourth, the Russian, with 89,000,000, while the German language is spoken by 57,000.000 tongues and the Spanish by 48,000,000.

SCHOOL Savings Banks are being introduced widely into the public schools, the latest heard from being in Mayville and Portland, N. Dak. The W. C. T. U. introduced the system into the latter town, and in the former $138 was deposited in the bank by the children in three months, only $15 being contributed by the parents. For particulars in regard to this commendable scheme, address Mrs. S. L. Oberholtzer, Norristown, Penn.

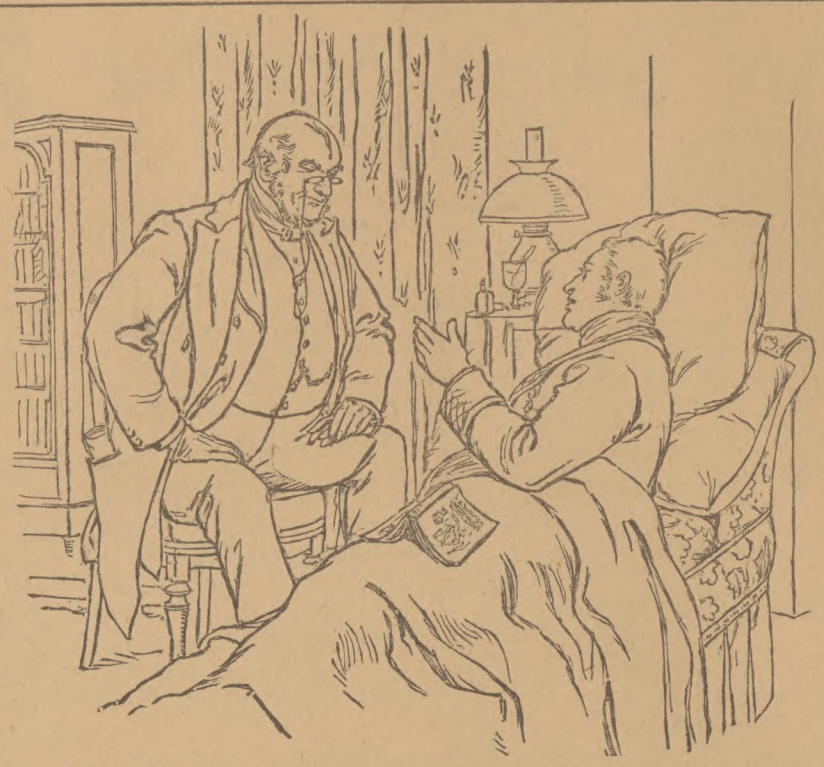
SIR RAYMOND KNIGHTLY was well known in political circles, and justly esteemed; he had, however, one weakness; he was too fond of descanting, at some length, on his family history and the brilliancy of his ancestry. Sir William Vernon Harcourt sitting opposite him at the dinner table one evening listened to one of his somewhat wearisome conversations with apparent patience, then turning to the guests he said very aptly:

"And nightly to the listening earth,
Tells the dread story of his birth."

IT is in direct violation of Missouri's statute law to employ women to sell liquor "unless the woman is the wife, daughter, mother or sister of such saloon-keeper." The grand jury at St. Louis, in response to a resolution presented by the St. Louis W. C. T. U., arrested and indicted the offenders. At the hearing, representatives of the liquor dealers' association eulogized the 1,800 saloon-keepers, who must be respectable, they said, or they could not procure licenses, and who paid $900.000 a year taxes. One of these addressed the ladies of the W. C. T. U. particularly, claiming that the objects of his association were, by every means, "to promote temperance and the good order of society"!

False Economy

Is practiced by many people, who buy inferior articles of food because cheaper than standard goods. Surely infants are entitled to the best food obtainable It is a fact that the Gail Borden "Eagle" Brand Condensed Milk is the best infant food. Your grocer and druggist keep it.



"Ivory Soap is actually healing this sore, Doctor."

"Not at all. Nature's doing it. The soap merely cleanses the wound. But the profession recommend Ivory Soap always for bathing wounds or sores. You can easily see why. If your neck had been washed with an impure soap it would have irritated it greatly."

"What soaps are impure, Doctor?"

"Nearly all. The Ivory is a notable exception. That's why we doctors use it. Especially avoid colored or highly perfumed soaps. I am always suspicious of them."

COPYRIGHT 1890, BY THE PROCTER & GAMBLE CO.

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE ROLLERS

Beware of imitations. Notice autograph of STEWART HARTSHORN on label and get the genuine Hartshorn.

$22. FIRST CLASS CURTAIN DESK Four and a Half feet long. Unlimited variety in stock and to order. American Desk & Seating Co. 270-272 Wabash Av., CHICAGO, U.S.A.

103 E. ADAMS ST. BORSCH-OPTICIAN CONSULT US ABOUT YOUR EYESIGHT SATISFACTION GAURANTEED

EARN BETTER WAGES

By attending, day or night, the INSTITUTE OF TECHNOLOGY, 151 Throop St. Chicago, Ill. Any person taught any study any time by professors. Leading Chicago School, 1,000 students last yesr. Open to both sexes. Admirable arrangements. Low tuition. Instaliments taken. Satisfaction guaranteed Send for Catalogue.

OWING TO NEW FACTORIES IN HARVEY

IN ADDITION TO 8 IN OPERATION AND 3 NOW BUILDING,

THE VALUE OF HARVEY LOTS IS RAPIDLY INCREASING.

You can buy a lot for $175 or $800 and sell it in a reasonable length of time at a profit.

You can improve a lot and thus make a permanent as well as profitable investment.

In the most SUCCESSFUL TEMPERANCE MANUFACTURING TOWN EVER founded. Address for particulars

The Harvey Land Association, 819 TO 825 THE ROOKERY CORNER OF LA SALLE AND ADAMS STREETS, CHICAGO, ILL.

RUBIFOAM FOR THE TEETH.

DELIGHTFUL, REFRESHING, BENEFICIAL.

DELICIOUSLY FLAVORED.

ALL DRUGGISTS. PRICE 25 CENTS.

PUT UP BY E. W. HOYT & CO., LOWELL, MASS.

HOW TO MAKE A FORTUNE

WANTED—Salesmen; who can easily make $25 to $75 per week, selling the Celebrated Pinless Clothes Line, or the Famous Fountain Ink Eraser—Patents recently issued. Sold ONLY by salesmen, to whom we give Exclusive Territory. The Pinless Clothes Line is the only line ever invented that holds clothes without pins—a perfect success. The Fountain Ink Eraser is entirely new will erase ink instantly, and is king of all. On receipt of 50c. will mail you sample of either, or sample of both for $1, with circulars, price-lists and terms. Secure your territory at once. THE PINLESS CLOTHES LINE CO. No. 184 Hermon St., Worcester, Mass.

ORIGINAL DRESS REFORM ROOMS.

(Established 1875.)

Complete lines of Equipoise and Delsarte Waists, Jenness-Miller Bodices, Bust Supports, Jersey-fitting combination suits, etc., etc. Send stamp for free Illustrated Catalogue.

MRS. S. W. PIKE, 75 Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

BUY A SUMMER HOME ON THE SHORES OF

Imperial Lake Geneva, Wis.

We offer in parcels of 100 feet and upward BEAUTIFUL RESIDENCE SITES All prices, all sizes and easy terms.

GRAND TERRACE ADDITION

For plats and further particulars address PRATT BROTHERS, 508 Chamber of Commerce, cor. Washington and La Salle Streets, Chicago, Ill.

PARENTS CANNOT AFFORD

To let their children grow up without the amusement and physical training which the World's Parlor and Lawn Game gives. ELASTIC TIP CO., 152 and 154 Lake Street, Chicago.

DULUTH 7% & 8% First Mortgages

REAL ESTATE AND MINING STOCKS. References Furnished. Correspondence Solicited.

Tvedt, Eckstein & Co., 327 W. Superior Street. DULUTH, MINN.

SAVE $40.00 ON NEW $140.00 BICYCLES

New, Latest Pattern $140 Bicycles for $100. Cheaper grades in proportion; cash or time. Agents wanted. A. W. GUMP & CO., Dayton, Ohio.

BICYCLES, GUNS & TYPEWRITERS taken in exchange.

Just published, 12 Articles on Practical Poultry Raising, by FANNY FIELD, the greatest of all American writers on Poultry for Market and

POULTRY for PROFIT.

Tells how she cleared $449 on 100 Light Baahmas in one year; about a mechanic's wife who clears $300 annually on a village lot; refers to her 60 acre poultry farm on which she

CLEARS $1500 ANNUALLY.

Tells about incubators, brooders, spring chickens, capons, and how to feed to get the most eggs. Price 25 cts. Stamps taken. Address DANIEL AMBROSE, 45 Randolph St., Chicago

AN ASSURED SUCCESS!

NATIONAL BICHLORIDE OF GOLD CO.

On March 14th we offered 4,000 shares of our capital stock for sale. Four weeks later OVER 2,000 SHARES HAVE BEEN SOLD and contracted for at $25 per share.

SUCCESS COMES AGAIN in the encouragement and indorsement which comes to us from all parts of the country. Ministers, mothers, sisters, brothers, physicians, W. C. T. U. women, and Temperance people of every shade of belief, indorse our work and bid us "God-speed."

Requests for branch institutes come from EAST, WEST, NORTH and SOUTH. We are corresponding with applicants in many cities who are anxious for the benefits of

Dr. THOMPSON'S BICHLORIDE of GOLD TREATMENT and we will make arrangements with the best of these to establish branches, each of which will pay tribute to this Company, and greatly enhance the value of our stock.

SAM SMALL the well-known Evangelist, sent for a pamphlet, read it, came to Chicago to investigate, preached Sunday afternoon, April 10th, to the patients at the Institute, where his labors were specially helpful to the men. Dr. SMALL said: "I shall recommend you and your work wherever I go." He started at once to ATLANTA, where he purposes establishing a branch institute. Rev. G. T. Holcombe sent for a pamphlet, came to Chicago to investigate, and has gone to Springfield to establish a branch institute. J. Griffin Conly, M. D., investigated our work in Chicago, and has gone to San Francisco to establish a branch institute.

ALL THE INSTITUTES WHICH WE ESTABLISH WILL PAY TRIBUTE to this Company, thus helping to swell our dividends.

CHECKS WILL BE SENT. DR. THOMPSON is kept busy from morning till night examining and receiving applicants for treatment, and our institute is already full to overflowing. It has been decided to declare dividends quarterly on all full-paid stock, and CHECKS WILL BE SENT JULY 1st for the first quarterly dividend. The number of patients now under treatment enables us to guarantee that the first dividend will not be less than 3 per cent for the quarter. If the stock did no better than this it would be a splendidly paying investment, but we have no hesitation in saying that it will go away beyond this.

A SPLENDID INVESTMENT FOR WOMEN.

In order to enable people of moderate means to secure shares we have decided to sell stock on $5 monthly payments. We furnish free by mail, or at our office, a pamphlet giving full information in regard to our plans and treatment, also testimonials of those who have been cured, and the indorsement of many of Chicago's leading Clergymen, Physicians and Temperance Workers. This pamphlet will convince you of the desirability of investing in the stock Send any amount of money, NO MATTER HOW SMALL, to secure as many Shares of Stock as you wish to have reserved until you can send a further remittance. THE 4,000 SHARES OF STOCK WILL SOON ALL BE TAKEN, SO ACT PROMPTLY.

OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS.

MARK M. THOMPSON, M. D., President, Originator of Thompson's Bichloride of Gold Treatment.
WALTER THOMAS MILLS, Secretary, the well-known Temperance Lecturer and Author.
J. J. THOMPSON, M. D., Vice-President.
GEORGE B. TOWNSEND, Treasurer, Late Financial Secretary, Chicago Y. M. C. A.
L. L. MILLER. ELLERY C. HUNTINGTON,

THE NATIONAL BICHLORIDE OF GOLD CO., 17 to 21 Quincy St., Chicago, Ill.

THE UNION SIGNAL

AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION — FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND

Vol. XVIII.—No. 17.] CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, April 28, 1892. [Price $1.00 per Year in Advance.

Mrs Ursula D Herrick
2119 19th st

WOMAN'S SYNDICATE

We own $500,000 worth of property at South Waukegan; we bought it at wholesale and will sell it at retail after it advances in value

OUR PROFIT SHARING INVESTMENT BONDS

which are based on this property are a device which allow all to share in the large profits that will be made.

These bonds will be taken backby us at any time in payment for lots, at their face value, with such profits added as may be earned at the time. With each advance in the value of our lots the series of bonds then for sale is closed and the amount of the advance credited to each purchaser of bonds up to that date. Then a new series begins, and so on.

TO ILLUSTRATE:—If by June 1st, we shall have sold $50,000.00 worth of bonds and on account of the location of a factory, or for any other reason our property should advance in value ten per cent, or $50,000, each bondholder will receive credit for $5.00 for each and every bond held by her, and so on, as often as the property increases in value; and when land is sold, both principal and profits are returned to the bondholders.

Bonds are Ten ($10.00) Dollars each and

ARE SOLD ONLY TO WOMEN.

South Waukegan is certain to become the greatest manufacturing town in the West on account of the low freight rates. The Washburn & Moen Mfg. Co., the largest concern of its kind in the world, will soon start their great plant. They will give employment to 4,000 workmen. The U. S. Sugar Refinery have $750,000 invested in buildings. They will be ready to open up soon, and will employ 550 workmen. The Starch Works have a capacity of 14,000 bushels of corn per day and will employ 250 workmen. OTHER FACTORIES ARE SURE TO FOLLOW.

These three factories alone will bring 20,000 people to live at South Waukegan.

Our lots are all within ten minutes' walk of all the factories. They will advance rapidly in value after the factories start.

The deeds to our property and all money are held by the Commercial Loan and Trust Co., of Chicago, as Trustees for the purchasers of these bonds.

ABSOLUTELY SAFE AND NO LIABILITY.

Send a deposit, no matter how small, say how many bonds you want, and we will reserve them until you can arrange your money matters to make the payment. THOSE WHO BUY NOW WILL MAKE THE MOST MONEY.

MANAGERS: MRS. R. A. EMMONS, Sec'y Woman's Lecture Bureau of the W. C. T. U.
REV. HENRIETTA G. MOORE, National Lecturer of the W. C. T. U.
MRS. J. B. HOBBS, of the W. C. T. U.

Our circulars give full information and are sent free on request. Make checks, drafts or money orders payable to

THE WOMAN'S LAND SYNDICATE, 161 LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO.

SALOON KEEPERS NEED NOT APPLY.

They will not be Treated at the National Bichloride of Gold Institute.

That the National Bichloride of Gold Institute, corner of Monroe street and Hoyne avenue, Chicago, is established on the proper basis, is proved by the fact that they refuse to give saloon-keepers the benefit of their treatment, unless they forsake their unholy work.

A week ago last Sunday a saloon-keeper was brought by a friend to the Institute for treatment. Dr. Thompson said to him:

"Do you intend to continue in the saloon business?"

"O yes! I am a little knocked out; been taking too much of my own medicine, and want to get fixed up."

"Well, you must go to some other place for treatment, we will not 'fix up' a saloon man to go back to his work of ruining men."

"But, doctor," said his friend, "he has plenty of money, and will pay you well if you fix him up all right again."

"No!" said the doctor, "you must go elsewhere. No amount of money would hire me to treat him unless he quits this terrible business."

"Well, doctor, what place is provided for such men?"

"I know of only one place; the place where he, and others like him are sending their wretched victims."

It is encouraging to state that the Institute is full of patients. They are coming from distant parts, as well as from Chicago. It has been found necessary to rent another large building near the Institute. Full information sent free to all. Address Naional Bichloride of Gold Company, 21 Quincy street, Chicago, Ill.

THE WORLD'S FAIR TEMPERANCE HEADQUARTERS AT HARVEY, ILL.

THE FIRST 20 CAR LOADS OF STONE on the way to begin foundations. The first plan was for a Hotel to accommodate 1,000 guests. Orders for rooms have at this date, made it necessary to more than double the original design, and work has commenced on a building to accommodate more than 2,000 guests.

MRS. E. A. RUSSELL, of Minneapolis, Minn., National Superintendent of the Coffee House Department of the W. C. T. U., and Manager of the W. C. T. U. Coffee House of Minneapolis, has just been engaged as General Manager of our Hotel at Harvey during the World's Fair. This guarantees beyond all question that our guests will be well taken care of. She has been engaged in similar work all her life. She was housekeeper of the GRAND UNION of Saratoga; at Manhattan Beach; at the ORIENTAL, Long Island; at the NEAL HOUSE, Columbus, Ohio; at the WEST HOTEL, Minneapolis. She had charge at the CONTINENTAL in Philadelphia during the Centennial. (See THE UNION SIGNAL two-page editorial of April 7th.) She will organize a force of three hundred assistants, composed exclusively of WHITE-RIBBONERS and college students.

REMEMBER ONE DOLLAR deposited now secures a room for yourself or friends for the World's Fair at the greatest Temperance Headquarters in the World. See special offer below. The rooms are large and light, pure water, perfect ventilation; all outside rooms. Twenty-five minutes' ride to the World's Fair Grounds; probably a five-cent fare. Healthful, wholesome, perfect quiet. No disorderly persons allowed. No Saloons in Town. Great religious services on Sunday.

SPEAKERS FOR the SUNDAYS Have been engaged as follows: WM. T. STEAD, London; FRANCES E. WILLARD, Dr. A. B. LEONARD, CLARA C. HOFFMAN, E. J. WHEELER, SAMUEL GOMPERS, MARY T. LATHRAP, MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, BISHOP ROBERTS, JOHN G. WOOLLEY, PROF. A. S. DRAPER, A. W. HAWKS. Invited: DR. T. DE WITT TALMAGE, DR. WASHINGTON GLADDEN, LADY HENRY SOMERSET, GEN. O. O. HOWARD, DWIGHT L. MOODY. Meetings in a fine grove, with seats for 10,000 people.

THE WORLD'S FAIR TEMPERANCE CLUB. Mary A. Woodbridge, President; B. F. Parker, Secretary; Mary T. Lathrap and Mrs. F. H. Rastall, vice-presidents; George B. Woodbridge and Clara Hoffman, National Organizers. The Federal Suffrage Association, the W. C. T. Unions of more than a dozen states, several church conferences, and local churches without number, have decided to make Headquarters with us during the World's Fair.

$

ONE DOLLAR

$

WHAT TO DO.

Those who order and pay for rooms now get their lodgings at present rates, 4 in a room, 50c. each per day; 2 in a room, $1 each per day; 1 only in a room, $1.50 per day; and moreover among them will be distributed ONE-HALF OF ALL THE PROFITS of the enterprise during the WORLD'S FAIR. Meals need not now be paid for. Send only money to pay for lodgings. The way this is arranged is GUARANTEED PROFIT-SHARING STOCK CERTIFICATES are sold in $10 SHARES. This stock entitles one to rooms at above rates, if taken now, to the full face value of the stock, either for themselves or their friends. Then when the Fair is over James B. Hobbs, President of the Commercial Loan and Trust Co., Gen. C. H. Howard and Mary A. Woodbridge will adjust the accounts and divide the profits into two equal parts, one of which will belong to the Hotel Company and the other to the patrons who buy now these Guaranteed Profit-Sharing Certificates.

SPECIAL OFFER

We will accept subscriptions, until further notice, on the following plan: Send us One Dollar or more for each share of Ten Dollars each which you may wish to take, and we will enter your name and reserve for you rooms to the full amount of the shares subscribed for. You can send the balance in monthly payments of One Dollar or more for each share taken, until fully paid. Use the form at the right in sending order.

ONLY $100,000 WORTH OF THESE CERTIFICATES OFFERED. CASH WITH ORDER. SHARES $10 EACH. SEND FOR YOURS BEFORE YOU LAY DOWN THIS PAPER.

THE HARVEY WORLD'S FAIR HOTEL AND ENTERTAINMENT CO.,

All orders for stock should be addressed to

WALTER THOMAS MILLS & CO.,

OUR EXCLUSIVE AGENTS FOR SALE OF STOCK,

161 LASALLE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

A CUT THIS OUT OR COPY IT,

Fill the blanks, SIGN IT, and pin it to a ONE DOLLAR BILL or ONE DOLLAR postal note for each share ordered, and mail it at once to Walter Thomas Mills & Co., 161 La Salle St., Chicago.

..... 1892.

Walter Thomas Mills & Co., 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.:

I hereby subscribe for and agree to take and pay for rooms in The World's Fair Temperance Hotel at Harvey, Ill., on the Guaranteed Profit-Sharing plan, amounting to —— shares of Ten Dollars each, total $——. It is specially understood that these certificates are, when fully paid, non-assessable, without liability, and receivable at their full face value, and at the regular rates, in payment for rooms at the above Hotel during the World's Fair, besides entitled to pro rata share of one-half the profits of the enterprise. Inclosed find $—— cash payment on this subscription, the balance to be paid in installments of not less than One Dollar per share each calendar month until fully paid, but in the event of the default of any of these payments, or in the further event of grossly immoral or improper conduct on my part at any time prior to or during the World's Fair, all rights or claims hereunder are forfeited to and at the option of the said World's Fair Hotel and Entertainment Co.

Signed.....

Address.....

Our Library Table.

The RECOLLECTIONS AND LETTERS OF ERNEST RENAN recently published by the Cassell Publishing Co., New York City, is a book of unique interest, even to those who do not accept the theories of life made known to our reading world by the great author who is an undoubted genius, and whose large humanity offsets in the minds of many somewhat of the harm done by his best known writings. The present volume is full of charming recollections of his boyhood and youth, and illustrates the environments, opportunities, friendships and methods of work, of an illustrious Frenchman.

STRAY SHOTS is a Lilliputian journal that is issued weekly from the prison at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas. The Easter number came to the Library Table too late for mention among the Easter publications. It contains a beautiful Easter service that must have brought comfort and strength to those participating in it. A very suggestive sentence at the end of the last page of STRAY SHOTS is "Didn't think the prison chapel could be improved much, did you?" "Christ is risen indeed" since inspired by Him, His people make even prison bars to surround something of joy and pleasantness. May the Christ of Easter bless the home of STRAY SHOTS.

TO WRITE OR NOT TO WRITE, by Alice A. Mylene, will, by its title, attract to its perusal those whose business or ambition is writing for the press. The book is principally made up of short selections by a number of successful writers and editors, on the subject of authorship. The suggestions and assertions are without question, good, but to any who have made themselves conversant with the best books upon the subject, there is a noticeable lack in this volume. The literary world is crowded to-day with people who mean to make the pen serve them, if possible, and they are looking for just the help the book in question has attempted to give; but they want it in such shape that it can be readily seized upon and assimilated,—not in the form of a symposium, however excellent the latter may be.

Morning Star Publishing House, Boston, Mass.

FIVE LITTLE PEPPERS GROWN UP, by Margaret Sidney, is the third of the inimitable "Peppers'" books, and will bring a full measure of admiration and delight to all who have learned to love that most loveable Pepper family. They are no longer 'little' nor 'midway,' but 'grown-up' lads and lassies, meeting the joys and sorrows that pass over the heads of the little ones to rest upon the brows of the older people, but meeting them with characteristic sweetness and bravery. The Peppers never forget that they were children—indeed, they seem to forget they were grown-up sometimes, and their friends have many a hearty laugh at their funny haps and mishaps.—And now are the grown-up little Peppers to be followed by "Five Little Peppers," who have grown old.

D. Lothrop Company, Boston, Mass. 12mo, fully illustrated. $1.50.

Maturin M. Ballou has written a delightful book on EQUATORIAL AMERICA, describing a visit to St. Thomas Martinique, Barbadoes, and the principal capitals of the Southern Continent. The style of the author is so vivid that the reader is carried along in rapt attention until, on laying the volume down, he feels as if he had been really present in the bright scenes that have held him so interested.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston and New York. Price $1.50.

HOME DRESSMAKING, by Annie E. Myers. Published by Charles H. Sergel & Co., Chicago.

Here is "something new under the sun"—a practical help for those who wish to make their own clothes well and stylishly. Its "cause of being" is well stated in the author's preface. The book is very practical. It commences at the very foundation, the training necessary for hand-sewing, the tools, the materials on which to work; and then tells how to cut and make dress skirts, basques, sleeves, collars, jackets and cloaks. It describes all kinds of plain sewing and many fancy stitches, tells how to make underwear, infants' and children's clothing, special costumes, riding habits, bathing suits, dresses for travel in various climates, for mourning, for bridal costumes, indeed for every occasion. It has a chapter on "Laws of Correct Dress," which is especially valuable, if that can be said of any chapter where all are so good. The book is illustrated by over an hundred drawings, has a unique and handsome binding, and is, in every particular, a fine specimen of the book-maker's art. Sold by subscription.

The present vigorous growth of young people's societies in the churches has given story-writers a most prolific theme. Sophie Bronson Titterington has come to the front with A NEW ENDEAVOR, a story that must prove very helpful and suggestive as well as full of interest. The first chapter, "Microscopes versus Telescopes," gives the clue to the new endeavor. "The microscope is wonderful, of course," says one of the heroines, "and gives us a glimpse of God's great power in one direction, but the astronomer who makes a study of the broad spaces of the universe, must have a broader idea of God's whole creation." From this idea a new plan of work grows for the Endeavor Chapter. Instead of using the microscope alone, i. e., turning their attention to the needs and conditions of their own small community, they use the telescope of investigation and study, become acquainted with Christian work, and needs for that work, in foreign countries—help others to look through their telescope, and the closing chapters find foreign missions no longer a dry-bones subject, but a live topic, drawing continually upon their time, strength and faith, and what is better, finds missionaries gone forth from the Endeavor Chapter, to labor in foreign fields.

American Tract Society, 150 Nassau St., New York City. Price $1.25.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

NEWS NOTES AND EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS.
EDITORIAL ARTICLES: Our Bill of Fare—The Wondrous Show—The Work of a Good Man—Enactment and Repeal of Prohibitory Laws by the Democratic and Republican Parties—Political Questions Answered—The Testimony of the Old 8, 9
WATCH-TOWER 9
CONTRIBUTED: Poem, Retrospection, by Warner Willis Fries—An Autobiographical Sketch: Mrs. Joseph Lucas—Taxation and the Poor, by Rev. C. H. Zimmerman—Railroad Ties, by John G. Woolley—Side-Lights For Workers, by Katharine Lente Stevenson—Key-Notes to Better Lives—The Vote of a Sot, by Rev. J. C. Wightman 2, 3, 4, 5
CORRESPONDENCE: Editorial Correspondence: The Kite-Shaped Track—"Our Union" Explains 5, 6
PRESIDENT'S COLUMN: Through the Eye to the Heart—Temperance Temple Items 6
THE HOUSEHOLD: Poem, An Evening Prayer—My Little Wife's Temperance Work—Ten Years on the Other End 7
NEWS FROM THE FIELD: Oklahoma, South Carolina, Nebraska, New Hampshire, Maryland, South Dakota, New Jersey—News in a Nutshell—National Temperance Hospital Notes 10, 11, 12
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS: The World's Petition 12
PUBLISHER'S DEPARTMENT: 13, 15, 16
OUR CHILDREN: Poem, The Zamzummims—A Modern Daniel—Aunt Jane's Cozy Corner—Soft-Shelled Nuts 14
KERNELS: 15

Do You Want to Use

W. C. T. U. AND Y. W. C. T. U. STATIONERY.

PRINTED.

Whiting's White Wove, superfine, printed Monogram. In box, 40 sheets note-size paper and 40 envelopes to match.

1 box for ..... $ .50
3 boxes for 1.25

500 Note heads.
Price $1.75

500 Letter heads.
Price $2.50

500 Envelopes.
Price $2.00

1,000 Note heads.
Price $2.75

1,000 Letter heads.
Price $4.50

1,000 Envelopes.
Price $3.25

EMBOSSED.

Whiting's Antique Linen, Laid, Embossed Monogram. In box, 24 sheets Octavo Note, folded; 24 Envelopes to match.

Price, per box ..... $ .50
5 Boxes for 2.25
10 " " 4.25

When 500 or more of either Note heads, Letter heads, or Envelopes, printed, are ordered, we will print names of the Union and principal officers without extra charge. Stationery thus ordered will not be sent boxed, but in one package.

SPECIALTIES.

Convention Tablets.
For taking notes in conventions. No worker is equipped for a W. C. T. U. meeting without paper and pencil at command.
Price ..... $ .07
Per 100 ..... 5.00

Portable Wall Blackboard.
Size, 3 feet high by 2 feet wide.
Price $1.25

Binders.
For The Union Signal ..... $ .75
" " Oak and Ivy Leaf ..... .65
" " Young Crusader, two years ..... .50

Book of Books.
A game to teach the books of the Bible. Just the thing for Sunday afternoon.
Price ..... $ .30

ANTI-TOBACCO AND OPIUM.

Timely Talks, 26.
Signal Lights, 7, 17.
National Leaflets, 12, 13, 32, 104, 202.
Loyal Leaflets, 6.
L. T. L. Manual, Vol II, No. 4.
Crusader Series, No. 3.
Price of package ..... $ .20
The Tobacco Problem.
Price $1.25

HELPS FOR WORKERS.

What are the most suitable leaflets for distribution at public meetings.

For a campaign against High License. Timely Talks and Signal Lights; see titles.

To secure Prohibition voters. Timely. Talks, Nos. 17, 24, 30, 31, 32, 33, 36, 37, 38; Signal Lights, Nos. 1, 3, 14, 16, 21, 28.

A Gospel Temperance Meeting. Timely Talks, Nos. 39, 40; Signal Lights, No. 22; Gospel Lights; Total Abstinence Series; National Leaflets, Nos. 49, 52, 54.

A Children's Meeting, or a Sunday-school. Loyal Leaflets and the National L. T. L. Series.

In the interests of the Purity Department. Select leaflets carefully, and with reference to individuals, from the White Cross and the Social Purity series. Use National Leaflet, No 48. for general distribution.

A Suffrage Meeting. National Leaflets, Nos. 5, 28, 33, 42, 43, 44, 47.

A Labor Meeting. Timely Talks, No. 7; Signal Lights, Nos. 8 to 13, 18, 27, 30; National Leaflets, Nos. 14, 31, 34, 36, 39.

A Teachers' Convention. National Leaflets, Nos. 9, 30, 37, 38, 46, 48, 201; Social Purity, Nos. 11 and 12.

A Mothers' Meeting. Home and Purity Leaflets.

For Ministers. National Leaflets, Nos. 1, 15, 21, 22, 52.

For Doctors. Signal Lights, No. 26, National Leaflets, Nos. 9, 23, 29, 40; Home Leaflets, Nos. 8 and 12.

Special half-price rates for all the leaflet publications of the W. T. P. A. will be sent on application.

HOW TO ADDRESS YOUR LETTERS.

In all cases put on the street number,
THE TEMPLE,
Corner Monroe and La Salle Sts.,
Rooms 1002 to 1010.

If you have an article you desire published in THE UNION SIGNAL, write to Editors of THE UNION SIGNAL.

Any items concerning Y. W. C. T. U. work, or communications for the Oak and Ivy Leaf, send to MISS MARGARET A. SUDDUTH.

Any item or articles for publication in The Young Crusader, any book or leaflet manuscript, or letters concerning such, send to MISS ALICE M. GUERNSEY.

Subscriptions for any of our papers, orders for our publications, subscription lists, orders for job printing, etc., send to
WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION.

Advertisements, or questions regarding them, send to
R. S. THAIN, Adv. Mgr.

ABOUT REMITTANCES AND LETTERS.

Do not send silver by mail.

Always give your name and P. O. address in every letter you write.

Please do not make us guess what state you live in.

Do not send local checks. Remit by postal note, money orders, registered letters, or by draft on some large city bank. Express orders are cheap and safe—can be had anywhere.

For the sake of simplifying matters, please make all drafts and money orders payable to MRS. F. H. RASTALL, MGR. We often get P. O. orders made payable to THE UNION SIGNAL, Oak and Ivy Leaf, Young Crusader, in our mail and it makes us much trouble, as we cannot tell how to indorse them. Your attention to this request will favor us.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION,
THE TEMPLE,
Corner Monroe and La Salle Sts.,
Rooms 1002 to 1010.

THE UNION SIGNAL AND WORLD'S WHITE RIBBON.

WORLD'S WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION — FOR GOD AND HOME AND EVERY LAND

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Vol. XVIII.—No. 17.] CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, April 28, 1892. [Price $1.00 per Year in Advance.

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

England has doubled her World's Fair appropriation.

Northern California experiences destructive earthquakes.

Captain John R. Tanner has accepted the appointment of United States sub-treasurer.

The Countess Leo Tolstoi, wife of the celebrated Russian author, died at Lisbon, Spain, April 21.

The New York legislature has adopted the infamous Excise Bill. Let white-ribboners besiege it for a vote.

A cable from Liverpool announces great enthusiasm over Lady Somerset's temperance address in that city on the 20th inst.

The Chinese exclusion bill was passed by the United States Senate April 25, for an extension of the present law ten years.

All Paris is trembling because of a successful dynamite explosion in the restaurant of a man who had delivered an anarchist to the police.

The structure of all the buildings on the Exposition grounds is practically completed, except the manufacturing and machinery buildings.

The corner-stone of General Grant's monument was laid at Riverside Park, New York City, on Wednesday. President Harrison officiated.

Ohio is at the front again. Its legislature, just before adjournment last week, passed a compulsory physical educational law, which goes into effect at once, with the hearty support of all the prominent educators of the state.

The steamship Teutonic, on which Lady Henry Somerset sailed, April 13, arrived at Queenstown in five days and twenty-three hours, covering a distance of 2,900 miles. Her best record, previous to this, was two hours less, but the distance covered in this passage was 109 miles greater.

LIEUTENANT TOTTEN, of Yale College, claims, with good show of argument, that while the Jews of to-day represent the two tribes that were not lost, the English-speaking race comprises the ten lost tribes, and Queen Victoria is a lineal descendant of King David!

THE Missouri conference of the M. E. Church at its recent session adopted a resolution declaring that if the World's Fair is opened on Sunday the ministers pledge to each other that they will not attend the exhibition on any day of the week, and will induce their people to follow their example in this regard. This action is worthy the reflection of Christian people generally.

MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE has been speaking in Trinidad, Col., where Mrs. Prof. Gordon, sister-in-law of our Anna Gordon, presided over the white ribbon meeting, which was a great success. On the 27th of March, Mrs. Woodbridge spoke to the prisoners of Colorado Penitentiary at Canyon City, and later on in Denver, where admirable arrangements are being made for the entertainment and success of the National W. C. T. U. Convention, to be held there in October next.

IT is very desirable that the World's W. C. T. U. should send a missionary this year to South Africa, and one to China, besides the provision already made by which we have four in the field, with a prospect of sending one of our leaders to Japan within a few months. Is there not some wealthy man or woman interested in our work who will agree to pay the expense for one year or even six months of a missionary to South Africa or China? The cost would not be great, and we throw out the request, praying and hoping that some one will send us a favorable response.

THE municipal officers of Salem, Mass., have recently adopted an order requiring that all entertainments and theatrical performance posters be submitted to the committee on licenses before they are posted. This is precisely what is needed in every city, town and village between the two oceans, viz., that the municipal authorities supervise all public handbills likely to be of doubtful character. Will not the local unions try to secure the passage of such an ordinance in their own towns and cities?

LADY HENRY SOMERSET left with Miss Willard an elegant gold medal, such as is given only to those who are invited to be present at the coronation of the British sovereign. It is a rare historic souvenir, and was given to Earl Somers, the father of Lady Henry Somerset. His daughter hopes that the medal may bring a helpful sum to the World's W. C. T. U., for the purpose of spreading its missionary work. We await bids from those who appreciate such souvenirs and who also appreciate our work.

THE Hon. Carroll D. Wright recently said that he did not believe the present Congress would grant the liquor commission so long asked for. He added that if Congress would grant an appropriation of $50,000 to his bureau, that of Labor, he would furnish the public complete statistics of the traffic. The refusal of Congress to provide for a commission to investigate the evils of the drink trade is little short of a crime against the people. It is one of the strongest proofs of the malign power that traffic has over legislation and legislators in this country.

OUR leaders in state and nation not infrequently bemoan themselves because their time is so fully occupied in general lines of work that they can do but little for the individual. Critics of the white ribbon army are not slow to censure us for this saying, that we have "departed from the original intent and lost the spirit of that Crusade-Pentecost whose keynote was work for individual sinners." The facts are that everything is beautiful in its season. The primal inspiration is to individual effort—the organic outcome is systematic benevolence carried into effect by better custom and more brotherly love.

THE World's W. C. T. U. concluded that it did not care for space on which to erect a separate edifice at the Columbian Exposition, because ample accommodations were promised in the Women's Building, and thus the money that would have been required for the enterprise could be put to more helpful use in extending the society. We make this statement in reply to many inquiries.

Query:—Why has the political press spread the statement in a recent issue, based on misapprehension, to the effect that we had been refused space, and not circulated the helpful fact given in the same issue: that Mississippi has now a scientific temperance instruction law? Why? Because great is politics.

"THE Kaiser's Law," recently enacted in Germany, is said to provide for the appointment of a guardian for persons who have become imbecile or otherwise incapacitated from the use of intoxicants to manage their property affairs. This is a step in the right direction, and we hope some day to see a law enacted that when a married man becomes unable to manage his property in a manner tending to the best interests of his home and family, he shall be restrained from management by a decision of the court, and if the wife be adjudged capable, the property shall be placed in her power. In case the wife is intemperate, the husband should be appointed sole administrator. These things are sure to be wrought out some day, in that "law of the land," which is simply a thermometer, showing to what height the education of public opinion has reached.

ONE of our expert correspondents writes as follows:—"Our national platform in '88 had thirteen planks, and Prohibition, as the name of our party, was a misnomer for all except two of them, while Home Protection would have covered every plank. Prohibition keeps our lecturers down to one idea, and one idea alone—the liquor problem. I am in favor of dropping the name Prohibition, and taking up some other name, while holding firmly to our principles."

MISS LOUISA MANNING HODGKINS, M. A., for fourteen years at the head of the literature department in Wellesley College, author of "A Guide to the Study of Nineteenth Century Authors," editor in the well-known English Classic Series, and annual lecturer at the New York college for the training of teachers, is visiting in Chicago and will give a lecture on "The Value of Shakespeare To-day," at the rooms of the Columbia School of Oratory, 24 Adams street, Thursday afternoon, April 28, at three o'clock. The proceeds of this lecture are to be divided equally between the Wellesley College chapel fund and the Wellesley Shakespeare House fund.

GOVERNOR FLOWER, of New York, seems to be an executive with a conscience. He has recently vetoed the Walker Bill, by which the attempt was made, in the interest of landlords, to exempt from police and sanitary supervision five thousand houses in New York City, by changing the definition of a tenement house from "a building that houses three families," to "four families." The Governor says, "this would leave, without sanitary supervision a class of buildings shown by official reports to be most in need of it." Thus, slowly but steadily, the great, firm hand of law protects those otherwise helpless, and the average justice of the whole circulates healthfully into the parts of the big "body politic."

UPON no subject mentioned in our columns have we had more responses than to the suggestion that a local union be named for Lady Henry Somerset, and those invited to join, who, for good and sufficient reasons, are not able to belong to any local union. The formation of such a society would require the action of the National Convention, and the plan can be brought before them when we meet in Denver, Col., in October next. One lady writes, "This union would include many a woman on the Western prairies far from towns, some in mining and lumber camps, also from the coal and oil regions, many in the outlying country districts in the Eastern and other states, some in the mountains and other districts south, and they would form a sort of picket guard, their work to consist largely in distributing literature and obtaining funds for it, and procuring temperance lecturers for their different localities."

UNIVERSITY extension is having a mighty boom in these days, and gospel extension is also getting a little under way. Sometimes we hear that the churches do not reach the people, that the pastors talk to the same set the year around, while the great mass passes by. There is much truth in this, and some of our more progressive pastors have adopted the plan of theater preaching and out-door services. The Crusade taught us the lesson that Mahomet must go to the mountain. From the saloons drinking men followed the Crusaders to the churches, which were in those days kept open like gates of gospel grace from morn until eve. Temperance meetings are now held in every part of Christendom at all hours and in most unaccustomed places—the depot waiting room is one of the best rendezvous, the blacksmith shop, the rink; in summer the band stand and the broad shore. Whatever you do not undertake, we urge you, sisters of the local unions, to establish and maintain these blessed, free-hearted, open-handed gatherings for the people; "the great humanity that beats its life along the stony streets."

Contributed.

RETROSPECTION.

BY WARNER WILLIS FRIES.

Oh! heart so sad, so bitter in thy grieving,
Thou dost not mourn alone;
Thousands to-day the lessons are receiving
Thou deemest all thine own.
Each life mature, however fair it seemeth
Hath sometime known regret;
There is no conscious brain that never teemeth
With things it would forget.

Where are the eyes whose tears have not been given
To satisfy remorse?
How many lips have prayed to be forgiven
Above some silent corse!
There are few tongues that sometime have not spoken
An unwise, unjust word;
Few hearts that have not some sweet promise broken
Another heart hath heard.

Oh! thoughtless words, so small, so little meaning,
How subtle are thy stings;
How baneful is thy harvest in its gleaning
When time that harvest brings!
Ah! not alone in gloomy prisons languish
Those whom repentance seeks;
To purest souls, her touch at times gives anguish;
To noblest minds she speaks.

And by her side there ofttimes walks another,
A presence fair to see,
Whose mien is that of a forgiving mother
Whose name is Charity.
To all who have a conscience there is given
The Hades of regret;
In that fair realm, which bears the name of Heaven,
Shall we its pangs forget?

When we have laid aside our earthly crosses
For raiment undefiled,
Perhaps toward the past, with all its losses
We shall be reconciled;
So when despair would make thee broken-hearted,
Take hope, begin anew;
Mourn not o'er days that have fore'er departed—
Each broken pledge renew.

AN AUTOBIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH.

Mrs. Joseph Lucas, England's Most Potent Pledge Winner.

[Lady Henry Somerset sent to her valued friend and coadjutor for notes from which she could prepare a more elaborate article than this which follows, but in the multiplied cares incident to her departure, was obliged to leave it in our hands, and we are glad to publish it this week, expecting for our next issue a sketch of Cardinal Newman, written "on the ship going over."—EDITORS.]

There are some requests that are a command when they emanate from one who is dearly loved. The other day a letter signed "Isabel Somerset" came from Chicago, asking me to write a brief account of my life and work, and I can no longer sit still. The potent voice calls me forth; the sweet, brave nature bids me take courage, and an influence, begotten of mutual sympathy and cradled and developed by an unbounded devotion to a common cause, beckons me onward to the fray.

This request also bore the name of Frances Willard. What could I do when two such women called me forth? Sit still? No! As the sunshine and the south wind touch the cold earth and whisper to the root and bulb, apparently dead, that longing eyes are waiting the possibilities of color and perfume that are in them, so this call is to me an inspiration. There is a stirring of the cold earth that has wrapped me round so long, and before this paper has reached America, I shall have burst forth into the blessed light and sunshine, and God helping me, I trust that animated with purer desires and a more intense zeal than ever, some corner may still be found for me in this glorious work.

I was neither born nor brought up in a teetotal home. Up to the age of seven I had always my small glass of ale for dinner, or a little wine. My girlhood was passed in a lovely farmhouse. Whenever there was a children's party it necessitated a long or short drive home, and on arrival there was always the hot elderberry or mulled wine and the little sipets of toast, "to keep the cold out." I was a pet with my grandfather, and there too I saw the wine and ale at almost every meal. The only teetotaler I knew was a godly old man, who held a position of trust on the place, who had a great gift for preaching and was one of my heroes

One day he told me that a temperance lecture was to be delivered in the neighboring town. I was allowed to go; it was the first time I had ever been to a meeting in the evening. The lights, the singing, and above all the lecture and the lecturer, the gifted and devoted George Lomax, enchanted me. I was seven years of age, but I was out by myself. I thoroughly approved of the whole thing, and at the close, with a promptitude that rather took John aback, I announced my intention of signing the pledge. John's religion was one of sympathy and action and he signed too. Many years after, on almost the last Sunday of John's life, I spoke in that same chapel; and the old man sat close to my side, happier than words could tell at hearing me speak for Jesus.

There was great dismay when I showed my card at home. After the next party I had hot milk instead of wine, and soon my mother noticed that if any of the children suffered from the night air or excitement it was never myself. After a little time two of my sisters also signed the pledge.

My father never became an abstainer. In April, 1882, I delivered a temperance lecture in this same little town. My mother had never heard me speak before, and up to that time she had not been able to fully sympathize with my public work, but at the close of my address she was the first in the hall to sign.

With the exception of a short period in the early years of my married life, I have been an abstainer, but I was not particularly interested in the temperance question. In 1878 a branch of the British Women's Temperance Association was formed in Sunderland, and I joined the committee. Even then, I had never the slightest intention of becoming a speaker.

In a marvelous way I found out one day that I had a gift. I'll tell the story. To my surprise, the ease, the nerve, the voice, the readiness to express my thoughts were all there, but it was of no use, because of my ignorance of the temperance question. This, however, could be set right. I bought temperance literature, I studied early and late. I read and recited out loud on every possible occasion, and soon I found that it was almost impossible to tire my throat and voice. The more I thought and read, the more enthusiastic I became, until at last my heart burned to be of some use. Then came my opportunity. A meeting of the B. W. T. A. was held in a large and fashionable Congregational church in Sunderland. Two ladies had promised to speak. The intervening hymn was being sung when the heart of the second speaker failed her as she looked at the old familiar faces, always the severest of critics, the most terrible of all audiences to address. The leader of the choir saw that something was amiss and the last verse was again repeated:

MRS. JOSEPH LUCAS.

"Hold the gospel banner high,
On to victory grand!"

sang the young voices. It was the last straw, and the poor lady retreated from the platform leaving the dismayed president and an amused audience (many of whom had expected "something of the sort would happen") to do the best they could. I was invited and entreated by the president to address the meeting. Another hymn was sung to give me time to "collect my thoughts." My husband was there. The reputation of the British woman was at stake. I made up my mind that I would do my best, and that if I failed I would fail after having tried.

And now, how glad I was that I had some "thoughts together." Oh! how thankful that I had worked so hard, and that I had learned the great lesson that every speaker, if she had the beauty of Venus and the gifts of all the Muses put together must learn, that there is no such thing as spontaneous acquisition.

Asking God to help me, I rose to speak. I spoke for half an hour, and at the close many people signed the pledge. The next day several influential people called upon me, and from that portent in the sky, no "bigger than a man's hand," has come my platform work.

Since that evening I have conducted one hundred and five Gospel Temperance missions, each of them lasting eight or nine days. Besides this I have addressed numberless drawing-room meetings, meetings for "women only," addresses to young girls, and to vast audiences on Sunday afternoons, all over the land.

At the missions alone, 44,000 pledges were taken. There were seldom any children at the meetings, and these pledges almost entirely represent adults, many of them also being those of the upper class.

LADY HENRY SOMERSET.

It was at one of these meetings that I first saw Lady Henry Somerset. In October, 1885, I conducted an eight days' mission at Ledbury. In the Town Hall the first night of my arrival, she was to preside for me. She stood at the foot of the platform to welcome me. I can see her now, the dark hair and eyes; I can hear the sweet voice and note once more the peculiar charm which makes her, wherever she goes, win the hearts of the people, and gathers round her the resistless force of numbers. She has also a wonderful power of calling forth the best of everything that a speaker possesses. With her by my side I did my most adequate work; every rustle of her gown, every touch of her hand, every sound of her voice, carried comfort with it. Above all else she gave me what I craved for most, love and sympathy, for you may as well let " . . . . . fall,

A drop of water in the breaking gulf,
And take unmingled thence that drop again,
Without addition or diminishing," as to expect a sensitive speaker to face a vast audience, and do herself and her cause justice, if she is surrounded by hard, unsympathetic hearts. With such a woman to lead the tens of thousands of devoted British women, we almost catch a glimpse of the happy day when the knell of the land's worst enemy will be rung out from shore to shore.

AN UNSYMPATHETIC CHAIRMAN.

How well I remember once being literally thrown at an audience with a short, snappish introduction in this fashion: "You have come to hear this lady, I forget her name; she says she is a teetotaler; I'm not, and while I have my senses I don't intend to be."

I had been traveling all day; I was an entire stranger; as far as I knew not one of the audience had ever seen me before. I got up, but instead of addressing the people a horrible sort of speculative interest about this man took possession of me. I stood and looked at him and an absorbing curiosity to know whether he had really forgotten my name fell upon me. Then a strange thing happened. Whether, as I "held him with my eye," my thought was conveyed to him by some electric current, or whether all along he had known my name, I cannot tell; but he got up, and although his body stood bolt upright, with a wave of his hand and a little bow in his soul to me, he said, "I have much pleasure in introducing to you Mrs. Joseph Lucas of Sunderland!" Then I took a little interest in the patient audience.

AN OSCULATORY SHOWER.

The missions bristle with incidents, some pathetic, some amusing, some provoking. Here is one that I have no doubt was amusing to the onlookers. One night at the conclusion of a very large and successful mission, I was saying adieu to a lady who had helped me in every possible way all through. She had a lovely voice, and night after night she sang to the people of "Jesus and His love." The previous evening I asked a poor woman to sign. "No, I thank you," she said, "I don't want to sign; I've been here every night and I've enjoyed the meetings, especially the music part. I ain't going to sign, but I shan't drink any more. I'm not so cross as I used to be. I'm more patient-like since I heard them hymns." Evidently, she liked the singing better than the speaking; but what did that matter as long as she was happier and nobler? Naturally I was grateful to the sweet singer, and as I said adieu I kissed her. In a moment every woman left in the hall came upon me, and without compunction claimed the same privilege. Kisses rained upon me; some light as a summer breeze, others resounding with a sort of "clamorous smack" that made the very gas lamps twinkle. It had been a crammed meeting and the reporters were still in the hall. I looked anxiously in the newspapers the next morning, but a discreet silence had been preserved as to this osculatory conclusion to a mission.

"ONLY A WOMAN."

In one town there was no building large enough except an Exchange Hall in which some brewers were interested. The hall had been frequently refused for temperance work. Once more the committee tried to secure it, and this time hearing that it was "only a woman," who was to lecture, they granted the use of the building, and in one week they lost 955 of their best customers. It was a lovely mission; the people took me into their kind hearts, and before the mission was half over, I could truly say with Antipholus of Syracuse:

"There's not a man I meet but doth salute me
As if I were their well acquainted friend,
And every one doth call me by my name."

"FOR FATHER'S SAKE."

It was at this mission that a poor woman brought her tiny girl of four or five years to sign the pledge. I feared she was too young; but the mother said with great earnestness, "I must have her sign now, for her father's sake. My husband is a good enough man, but he can't do without his beer. He never goes to a public house himself, and he won't let me go. The other children are all teetotalers, and my husband says that he'll never send a Band of Hope child to fetch his beer, so there's only this mite to go for him, and twice a day she goes across the road for the beer and never spills a drop; and," she added, "if she's old enough to go to the public house, she's old enough to sign the pledge." I foresaw domestic storms ahead, but the woman was so earnest and resolute that a pledge card was quickly put before her, and the little thing placed her mark and was delighted with a particularly large piece of blue ribbon. It was a great pleasure to me to take the pledge of the husband himself on my closing night.

MY LAST MEETING.

The last mission I ever conducted was at Plymouth. The last meeting I ever addressed was on Friday, November 11, 1887. The hall was crowded and overheated, and the next morning I went for a delightful drive with my dear, devoted friend, Miss Lily Johnson Brown. I was particularly happy and glad and little dreamed that there was about to fall upon me a sorrow, the effects of which will, I fear, never leave me.

When I got to my home there was a letter telling me that my husband was ill of acute inflammation. This was followed almost directly by a telegram saying that he had "passed away." For years I had suffered from rheumatic gout, and I felt this crushing blow in every nerve. It was a terrible journey home. I suffered the intensest pain, but was able to keep about till the day came when I could see the light of my home no more. He sleeps peacefully in the Friends' burial ground in Sunderland, and I sit here alone, the possibility of any active work entirely taken from me. From that day until now I have never been able to walk a step or to stand alone.

The Plymouth mission then was never finished. I had also numberless large missions nd engagements on my hands. I had intended to rest a few days, and then go on to Southampton to conduct a nine days' mission under the auspices of the Rev. Canon Wilberforce. Splendid arrangements had been made and the mission promised to be one of the largest and most successful ever conducted in this country. Lady Henry Somerset had gathered round her a perfect galaxy of ladies of rank and influence. The Duchess of Sutherland, Lady Henry Somerset, Lady Elizabeth Biddulph, Countess of Meath, Lady Mount Temple, Lady Millbanke, and the Countess of Cottenham all were to preside for me; and last but not least the very queen of organizers, Miss Morgan, of Brecon, had promised to be there. The committee had been untiring in its efforts, the whole town was expectant, and everything was ready when the blow came, and this mission was most reluctantly given up.

Here in my own peaceful home in Hitchin I live my quiet life. If any of my readers could come in now, it would be difficult for them to believe that there is anything the matter with me. I have been sorely stricken, and I can only hear of the battle from afar, but I am not unhappy. The lovely compensations of my life far outweigh the trials; from that sad day until now, I have not been allowed to have a care that human love could lift from me.

The work "the world was praising so when death spoilt all," can no longer be done by me; but if "suffering fits for service," then I have still some work given me to do. In the lowly shadows of the plain, I have learned lessons of gentleness, patience and charity that escaped me among the mountain breezes. In all my mission labors I never once lost sight of a profound conviction that it was God's work and that He alone had given it to me to do. The one thing that sustains me now is the certainty that I am in the place my Father has appointed for me and that I am His child. I sit still, but all day long I hear the music made by the glorious work of others, who are toiling up the steep mountain sides, bearing in their arms the tempted, the sin-stricken and the sorrowful. I see they are often weary. They are too busy themselves to even hear the celestial strain that is all around them, but the weak ones on the plain below can hear it and they know that all luminous and beautiful the day has dawned when all peoples and all nations, with steps more and more rapid, are going forth from the sin and the shame of drunkenness, into the glorious light of purity and godliness.

From my heart goes forth the prayer that God will richly bless every member of this great army of devoted women over which floats the white banner of temperance.

"Now the long and tedious duty
Stone by stone to carve and bring—
Afterwards the perfect beauty
Of the palace of the King.

"Now the training, strange and lowly,
Unexplained and tedious now—
Afterward the service holy
And the Master's, 'Enter thou.'"

TAXATION AND THE POOR.
III.

BY REV. C. H. ZIMMERMAN.

The Graduated Income Tax.

One merit of this tax is that it is a direct tax. The majority of political economists, from Adam Smith to the present day, admit the equity of the principle that citizens should be taxed in proportion to their incomes. Those who hesitate about its adoption, do so on the ground that it is difficult to accurately ascertain what are the incomes of citizens who are disposed to evade taxation. This, as was shown in the previous article, is a difficulty in the direct tax on personal property. The monstrous iniquity of the evasions of personal property tax by citizens whose wealth is almost entirely in that form (amounting in the aggregate to about half of the realized wealth of the country), and the consequent cruel injustice to poor householders and farmers, whose property is all in sight and is made to bear the tax thus evaded, was shown. There would be similar, though not as great, difficulty in preventing evasions of the income as the personal property tax. A man who will lie about his stocks, bonds, money, mortgages, bank capital, etc., will lie about his income. But on this point I wish to say, first, that we are studying the equities of taxation, and it is strange that any economists who admit the thorough equity of the principle of the income tax should be willing to abandon it, because so many men make dishonest returns. They should abandon the personal property tax for the same reason. But they do not. Why? Because, associated with it is the tax on property in sight which cannot be evaded, and since, like McCulloch, their inquiry is not, What are the equities involved? but, How can government most surely and easily get the revenue it needs? they consent to retain a system of taxation by which it can easily recover what it loses through the dishonesty of men whose wealth is in personal property, by imposing the tax they ought to pay upon property in sight. Second, it is neither easy nor pleasant for government officials to detect and punish rogues of any kind; but that is no reason why they should not do so. Not all thieves and murderers are caught and punished; but nearly all of them are. So nearly all men disposed to evade taxation, can be forced to make approximately correct returns of their property or their income, if government would pursue the same thorough methods of detection and conviction with them that it does with other criminals. Imprisonment and heavy fines for false oaths as to assets or income would have a wholesome effect on tax evaders. Of course government does not like to inflict such penalties. It is so much easier to get its revenue by tax on articles of consumption and property in sight, whereby the greater part of its revenue is paid by poor people.

This is precisely why I prefer the income tax to the property tax. It would take away from the government this temptation to adopt the unjust course simply because it is the easier course. If the people of this country would declare that the income tax should be the only tax in time of peace, the government would be forced to get its revenues from this source, and it would get them with a fair degree of equality from all incomes above those that should be exempt from taxation. Men of considerable incomes would never consent to bear a double burden because it is unpleasant to arrest and punish defaulters. They would compel the government to do all in its power to force every man with a taxable income to pay his share of the tax. The very nature of the income tax and the character of the men who would have it to pay would insure a more equal ass the present system. It would take ment officials the power they now ha fenseless poor pay the tax of rich faulters, rather than resort to the punishing the latter. I do not know of the People's party desire that the i the sole tax, but I believe it ought t above stated, and for this other reas it right to tax the little homes and and while it would seem that the est of land and costly buildings ought of no proposed plan to tax the latt former.

The income tax, in order to prote also exempt incomes below a fixed During the war we had an income incomes below $600. But at the sa had to bear both a tariff and a pro the income as the sole tax, an exemp $400 of income might be sufficient. all higher incomes be graduated. A of $1,000 would then pay a tax of, sa An income of $2,000 would be taxe 000, $2,600. Now the principle of t tax is that the percentage of taxatio increases. If $600 pays 5 per cent, $ pay 7½ per cent; $2,600, 10; $3,60 up to an income of, say, $10,000. T stand that in giving these figures, I give the exact rates that should be illustrating the principle of the gra Somewhere the increase in the perce it would amount to an effectual check not to confiscation. At the rate giv an income of $18,600 would be 50 would exert himself to acquire weal half of his income to the government there is a just principle in a gradua ple, a man whose income is $2,000 c per cent with no more hardship to hi with only $1,000 can pay 5 per cent.

The reader will also see that my o a graduated income tax is not to limi to impose the burden of taxation upo able to bear it, and to shield the poo

The graduated income tax is no wealthier classes. The one we had and immediately after the war, was of their dissatisfaction. The reason i to pay more tax under it than they w haps it did not operate as equitabl might now if it were adopted as the s to say that it will always be opposed and I am not sanguine that it will b because they are the classes who rea governments have always found it e poor than to compel the rich to do t ple have the power, but the problen mass their power in the interest of ju

Evanston, Ill.

RAILROAD TIES.
X.

BY JOHN G. WOOLL

The poor little man who wears nun five and a half hat, and rightly deems raison d'etre in pulpit or in politics meeting over at Boston in Tremon affront.

——Brazen Susan Fessenden presid stood right up before everybody and s voice was plainly heard in the rear balcony and then sat down as calml thing was perfectly ladylike; and Lucy Stone, Mary Livermore and there and saw her do it without a Henry Somerset who must have preached on the text, "It is not the that one of these little ones should course is true enough, but what of sand people listened as if she'd been

If this goes on there's many a goo "go to work."

. . . . .

The devout brother who is "just tionist as you"—but thought France the W. C. T. U. when she refused to sake of being in the fashion, must "nipping and a frosty air" as he Henry Somerset had not only come t the great convention in Boston, but t up and virtually repeated it in all t country, italicized, and that last Bos ht after a "run" of six wonderful w goes to England and around the society-woman with gloved hands face, and shoulders décolleté, modfrappé, who wondered what "those

. . . .

" must have been touched to hear l of London the Salvation Army is

. . . .

ble sectarian friend, who stands or ıncy of Biblical insight, must have his heart, to see Methodists, Bap-sts, Episcopalians, Universalists, ng together in gracious, loving em-o the guest of the evening, on the
as a disciple of Jesus Christ.

. . . .

faint faith, who "tries" to love the all things work together for good" ould go to war against the saloon if nd whose resultant political prin-nal betwixt faith and fear—are too nt by a ballot-box or anything less ıograph or a gas-meter—must have er" to hear that "it is characteris-il is not considered necessary."

. . . .

ase may be in England, Christian holds that evil is necessary. And very national election under a flag ady-made stipulation of surrender allowed to retire without having
' after having "laid on the table" a laration against the saloon, to-wit:
lized, by Democrats, without SIN."

. . . .

ge we believe in it, but draw the ed of crime or womanhood.

. . . .

fter the splendid swirl and sweep set's oration, and the galaxy of l, like those new-fashioned rockets ly.

ately and beautiful address, Mrs.
m, Lucy Stone's pithy and poetic cause, with a dozen words and two gnetized bayonet point; the sweet, urst of Miss Fessenden; the word
hters and the Unitarian society;
he almost whispered lily-speech of enson, and last, the broad, bright,
Irs. Harris that "our Lady" was awhile.

merset's half-dozen, delicious im-d-bye to "Mary Woolley and the en just two days in four months, onths more, and betake myself to to write my weekly stint of rail-the happenings.

. . . .

rain, C., M. & St. Paul Railway.—
a poor young man was nearly exıgate a refractory lock of hair that crown, defiantly dejected like a ıot bear to see suffering, so I had him; he was very grateful.

w I found my plumed friend vis-a- go Tribune. As he put down the dline, "Elgin Women Determined
s finger on it and said, with fine, es me sick." I had observed that thought it congenital. "Why?"
l explosively, "The woman I marry out her."

ıt a possibility so remote satisfied cerebration, made his hair so alert.
was "engaged" to a ghost he said,
nor to anything, but the woman feminine." . . . I thought ter so, but fell to wondering what oman would be like. . . . .
l he can't marry many. . . .
enew our conversation, it seemed out" his mind a little first; to give mal humidity would be cruel, like o a kid. . . . It makes me al impudence of this callow strip-ole question of equal suffrage by narry one female woman.
en reason similarly. . . Wo-s the worst of it, for as long as egarded as sugar and whey and t expect to be people.

SIDE-LIGHTS—FOR WORKERS.

BY KATHARINE LENTE STEVENSON.

Imagine the stereopticon set up:—View the first: It was at a neighborhood meeting in one of our smaller cities. The day was crowded full of good things; but the picture which stands out most clearly before my mental vision is that of a quiet, modest appearing woman, past middle life, coming forward to give her experience in W. C. T. U. work in the far west.

She had been an eastern crusader but had moved west several years before into one of the most riotous centers of that effervescing new life. Her inability to do any real work there, and the apparent indifference of the women, even the W. C. T. U. women, was a great grief to her, and she was continually looking out for a broader avenue for usefulness. Especially was her heart touched by the large number of "fallen women" in the place, and the peculiarly trying circumstances which seemed to surround their lives. Nearly as I could judge from her remarks there seemed to exist in that town a system very like the license system obtaining in foreign countries. The women were kept entirely within a particular quarter of the town, and at stated periods were driven in close carriages to the proper authorities by whom they were "taxed." More and more as she learned the condition of things did her heart go out in yearning love towards these women, but how to reach them was the problem.

When "Glimpses of Fifty Years" came out she had taken the agency, and one day, after repeated prayer for guidance, the thought came to her that, armed with this book, she might go into these houses. It was a great undertaking. If you could have seen the gentle, soft-voiced woman you would have realized how great! But, in the strength of the Lord of Hosts she went down that street where no pure woman was supposed to tread; she entered those haunts of death, and not on one but many days. Everywhere she met with a most courteous reception. She met both the women who keep the houses and their girls. She heard some stories that would melt the hardest hearts, and saw sights that it would be well if all might see.

Everywhere the book seemed a talisman to open their hearts. She sold and delivered three copies, and where the women seemed unwilling to buy, they still turned over its pages eagerly, and listened intently to her story of Frances Willard's work for women. Two fair young girls, as fair and sweet apparently as any in our own homes, were looking over the pages one day, when they came to the record of that prayer, hallowed by untold baby lips, "Now I lay me down to sleep." "Oh, I used to say that!" said the first; "did you?" "Yes, indeed," answered the other; "I learned it at my mother's knee. My mother was a good Christian woman."

In another house was found a woman of such evident culture and refinement that it was impossible not to express some surprise at finding her in such a place. Her full story she never told, but she did tell that only a few brief years before she had been a member of one of Boston's largest churches and a teacher in its Sunday-school. How fallen to this God and her own soul knew.

"But," said the lady, "how did you endure it to come, with your refinement, into such a life without pictures or books or anything bright?"

"Oh," she answered, "I brought along my Bible and hymn book and Frances Willard's 'Nineteen Beautiful Years,' and they have kept me alive."

Think of it, sisters! The record of Mary Willard's saintly young life carrying comfort to a heart so apparently fallen from everything pure and good. Dare we say that we have nothing to work upon when such a fact is possible?

The results of it all? Oh, those we cannot know. The seed-sowing is with us; the harvest is with God. It is good to know that one white soul among us has dared the descent into Hades for the lost ones there. We believe it was not made in vain. We believe others must surely follow. More and more clearly do the cries of these our stricken sisters come into my own ears. More and more do I feel that the W. C. T. U. has a mission to them, as yet unfulfilled. And the thought that three copies of "Glimpses" are abiding in those dark places fills my soul with a rare hope and a sure prophecy of coming light. And under all the other thoughts lay this: "How glad Miss Willard will be to know it!"

. . . . . .

Presto! It is quite another picture which flashes upon the canvas; none other than the sweetly-sad funeral service in the Auburndale Congregational Church when we laid to rest all that was mortal of that Great-heart among us, James M. Gordon. It was an ideally beautiful service, we wish our entire sisterhood might have seen the flower-filled pulpit and chancel; might have listened to the deep words of eulogy, each one of which all who knew him knew to be true. Some of Boston's best known names took part in that service, and felt themselves honored in thus being permitted to follow to the grave one who was known everywhere as a marvelous exponent of the true Christian life. Many touching incidents were related of his devotion to duty, his self-forgetfulness, his rare tact and judgment.

The music was of a nature peculiarly touching, since his favorite hymns were sung, and especially the one hundred and twenty-first psalm, long known in the Gordon family as the "family psalm." Flowers were sent by Lady Somerset, Miss Willard, and the Massachusetts W. C. T. U., as well as by many private individuals. The large token bearing the inscription, "Let me hide myself in Thee," came with an especial force to the hearts who loved him, since only a brief hour before his death he sang quite audibly that line.

"'Tis only noble to be good," this was the thought which came to me continually during that ideal service, and side by side with it, that rhapsody of the Revelator. "Write, blessed are the dead that die in the Lord. Amen, saith the Spirit; they rest from their labors and their works do follow them."

There is no room for tears at such a grave, and yet, to those who remain there is sore heart loneliness. May the God of all consolation comfort them!

. . . . . .

The third picture seems somehow to weave the two others together and to become a prophecy of the time when the darkness of the former shall be no more, but when men everywhere shall live pure, white lives, and die the triumphant death which only the white life can make possible. Your narrator attended a service not long ago in staunch old Pilgrim Plymouth, the joy of which has not yet left her heart. The young pastor of the Congregational church in that "forefathers'" town is a man of progressive ideas, and has, during the winter, been giving a series of addresses to men on "Rocks that Ruin." A few weeks ago his subject was "Immorality," and whether the thought originated with himself or with the union I do not know, but somewhere the idea evoluted of holding a service for women and girls at the same hour and then uniting the two bands in an after service.

It fell to my own happy lot to conduct that service, and never have I been in a meeting which seemed so pregnant with meaning, so full of the future blessedness of pure living for men and women. The women's meeting was crowded and resolved itself into an informal talking together upon personal purity, especially as it concerned mothers in their dealings with their children.

It was listened to earnestly and many thoughtful questions were asked.

But it was when we came together in the church above that the real solemnity and significance of the event burst upon me. Knowing the service we had come from, knowing the service which had just been held in that very room, it was wonderful to see the two congregations fuse into one, without a conscious look upon a single face, or even a blush to suggest the presence of an impure thought. God gave to me the straightest and clearest of messages, and the audience listened as if at His bar.

Altogether it was a phenomenal service, and has given to me large hope for the prosecution of our purity work. Why may not other unions form a like coalition with their pastors? O sisters everywhere, this department is pressing upon us. Sometimes it seems as if it outweighed all the others, and we are touching it so lightly!

It was a great thing to stand by Plymouth Rock; to climb Burial Hill, to drink in those sights so familiar to the brave souls who dared all for freedom to worship God. But greater still—and hint of a still brighter dawning—was that Sunday night service, for it told of the new port of purity and righteousness towards which we of the W. C. T. U. are steadily steering our Mayflower. God send us favoring breezes and brave hearts to man the bark!

Just picture a Boston liquor-dealer occupying the very front seat at Lady Henry's last Boston evening and you have our last "dissolving view"! He was careful to announce his vocation when calling for tickets, and when his dollar bill was safely in my hand said: "But I shouldn't think you would take rum money!"

"We would not, as a gift," I answered, "but we are giving you a full equivalent for your money, as much so as if you had spent it for flour or meat."

"That's so," he admitted, "but I'd hate to offer you a donation!"

In the conversation which followed it transpired that he was the same man who took up weapons so bravely for Lady Henry in The Record, when she was accused of making money by the liquor traffic. He attended the National Convention, and admired all our leaders, though professing to view us as a class of mild lunatics who are doing much harm in the hope of doing good. He extended to me a cordial invitation to visit the great brewery, which I hope to accept later. A man under strong conviction, fighting against his conscience, is our verdict. —And the curtain falls.

KEY-NOTES TO BETTER LIVES.

BY H. B. K.

The seventeenth annual meeting, on March 17, of the Chicago Central W. C. T. U., made a wonderful demonstration of its mighty works through the reports of its superintendents of departments. This union carries on the Hope and Anchorage Missions for the reclaiming of wandering girls and women, a day nursery and kindergarten, police station work, Bethesda Mission and gospel meetings.

Mrs. J. B. Hobbs' report of police matron work stated that for 1891, at the twenty-three stations in Chicago in which police matrons are employed day and night, there were 12,046 women and 523 children arrested; 8,247 women were searched; 1,413 lost children were cared for; 808 women and children restored to their homes; 306 destitute children provided for in stations; 124 children sent to Orphan Asylums, Foundlings' Home and Industrial Schools; 389 women sent to reclaiming institutions; 78 to the poorhouse, and 131 to hospital.

The present chief of police has appointed an advisory board, consisting of women members from the various philanthropic organizations of the city, whose duty it is to recommend and examine candidates, to recommend changes for the comfort and convenience of prisoners at the stations, and to have a general oversight of the matrons' work. This board has appointed a woman agent who visits the stations, courts, confers with matrons and officers concerning special cases, sees that the needy and unfortunate are provided for and especially takes charge of the young girls who fall into the stations.

The Anchorage mission, as reported by Miss Alice Bond, superintendent, has admitted during the past year four hundred different girls, including a number of really friendless and virtuous, many in the first stages of a downward course who are saved before going lower. Three thousand free lodgings with food were given. Three hundred women and girls have found employment as domestics, seamstresses, in laundries and other occupations. Six of the inmates have been married during the year. Fifty young mothers with their babies have been taken in. There is no other place in all this great Sodom where these girl-mothers can go when they leave the hospitals with their weakness, their new care and their shame. Many letters come from girls who have gone out from this shelter to battle with temptations. Miss Bond says: "They contain such expressions as these: 'Thank you all so much for what you have done for me.' 'Please write to me; your letters do me so much good.' 'What would I have done without that home?'—and better still, 'I have found Jesus at the mission.' Nearly every girl in going out from the home asks to be remembered in our morning and evening prayers."

The girls come into the Anchorage from the streets, police-stations, hospitals, infirmaries and houses of ill-fame, many having been entrapped into the latter by advertisements offering large wages for domestic service. One who was taken in on the verge of suicide is now running a small fruit farm, has a brother with her and is saving money to send for another brother. She has taken a homeless young mother and baby out to her farm—for she says: "My heart goes out in great longing to help other sorrowful lives." Another is managing a laundry, and has a bank account, and is saving money to buy a little home. The following was written, as she signs herself, "by one who has enjoyed its shelter and felt its influence":

THE ANCHORAGE.

"Anchorage," beautiful name to me,
No place more dear on earth can be,
We enter it, burdened, tempest tossed.
With even hopes of heaven lost.

We are told of an anchor sure and strong,
Which to every one may by faith belong,
An anchor by which, on the drifting tide,
We may safely reach the other side.

The soul's true anchor is, "Jesus died,"
By which stern justice is satisfied.
Both "sure and steadfast," so just the thing,
To which erring humanity may cling.

Oh, blessed anchor! The heart's true rest,
May the "Anchorage" by thee be blest,
Where so many souls have been led to see,
There is hope for them in their misery.

And when the storms of life shall cease,
And in dying, Jesus shall whisper "peace,"
All pleasant days at the "Anchorage" past,
May each frail bark reach the port at last.

WE permit these legalized dens of iniquity to ply their vocation six days in the week, and then order them closed the seventh, that the Sabbath day may be remembered and kept holy. A fine weekly preparation for holiness.—Anna S. Benjamin.

THE VOTE OF A SOT.

BY REV. J. C. WIGHTMAN.

Are men whose heads are crazy with ardent spirits fit to have control of the dearest interests of society? Is there not a fallacy in the assumption that the vote of a sot is as good as that of a sober man?—Socrates, the Athenian philosopher, promulgated the principle that he only is fit to manage public business who manages his own business well. As a class, drunkards ruin those interests over which they have control; they neglect their business and squander their estates. In a republic, votes are the helm of state; why should it be entrusted to the hands of those who ruin their own affairs by crime? Why should they be allowed to imperil the state? In Sweden, a man who is seen drunk four times is deprived of his vote at elections. Here is the point to strike. Cleanse the fountain and all the outflow will be pure. If rum has a right to vote, it has a right to choose its own representatives. Rummy votes elect rummy representatives, and rummy representatives make rummy laws. Rum admitted into the government will not cast out rum; devil will not destroy devil; Satan doth not cast out Satan. To concede the right of drunkenness to enter the penetralia of government is to surrender to it the right to stay there.

Correspondence.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

The Kite-Shaped Track.

DEAR COMRADES:—Don't accuse me of using slang, nor of going into the horse-racing business. Nothing of the kind. The kite-shaped track is a device of the Santa Fé railroad for seeing some of the most beautiful places in Southern California "with neatness and dispatch." Beginning at Los Angeles it sweeps through the vineyards, the olive, the lemon and orange orchards of Anaheim, Orange, Olive, Riverside and Redlands; skirts the base of the Marble mountain at Colton, carries you within sight of the "Arrow Head" with its wonderful hot springs and hot mud baths; gives the nearest railway approach to the Temescal tin mines, and on the returning curve shows you Ontario,—where the street-car horses draw the car up the hill and ride down on it—lovely Pasadena and the far-famed Raymond hotel. It takes you through a picturesque canyon, and shows you the sharpest contrast between the barren dreariness of "native California," and its astonishing fertility when irrigated and cultivated.

If any people on earth ought to believe in the efficacy of water, it is the Californians, for all they have and are depends upon it. This is well illustrated by the "Gates tract" along this same kite-shaped route. Until the past few years this land was worthless. "It would not bring ten dollars an acre," remarked a well-posted friend who sat beside me as we rode through it, "but now that Mr. Gates' scheme for irrigating it has proved successful, and it is thickly set with young orange trees, it is worth a thousand dollars an acre." And cold water did it.

At Redlands is the winter home of the Smiley brothers, those twin millionaire philanthropists, whose summer home at Mohawk is known the world over for its humanitarian conferences. Smiley Hill, as it is familiarly called, the Canyon's Crest as they have appropriately named it, is one of the most beautiful spots and the view from its summit is one of the finest I have seen in California.

The grounds show that perfection of art which seems to have no art; the winding road which carries you to the summit is bordered by a wealth and variety of trees, shrubs and flowers which nothing but the climate of California and the consummate skill of the landscape gardener with unlimited funds at his command could have grouped together. Even the steep sides of the ravines opening into the canyon are utilized and beautified.

The Canyon's Crest is rightly named, for at the back this wonderful flower garden breaks off in a sheer precipice, forming one side of a canyon which opens a path for the railroad, and further on, widens into a beautiful valley. Winding around the crest, by a sharp but safe descent, the road leads down to the bottom of the canyon, and for miles threads its way through it; sometimes the encircling hills close round, then recede, giving room for pasture lands, barley fields and the homes of quiet-loving Mexicans. At one place the road leads through a grove of live oaks, which reminds one of the opening chapter of Ivanhoe. Further on, the foot-hills present a peculiar blue appearance, which as we come nearer, proves to be caused by millions of "baby bluets" covering their sides. Think of great hills of "baby blue-eyes," acres of poppies, mountains of marble and onyx—such is California's munificence.

Now and then a guide-board appears, inscribed "to Alessandro." The whole region is full of reminiscences of Ramona. The return road just before it loses itself in the streets of Redlands, passes the home of Senora Moreno, the quaint old adobe mansion, on whose wide veranda Alessandro made the rawhide bed for Felipe; all around spread the broad acres which once enriched the Morenos and whose alienation broke their proud hearts. Later, in a trip to San Diego, I saw many other points mentioned in that prose epic which has moved the hearts of two continents.

Helen Hunt Jackson wrote much of Ramona in Redlands, and her description of the country is true to the minutest particular. No better guide-book to the natural features of this part of our land can be found than this book. Here the mustard grows "according to Scripture," and forms thickets in which might well occur the meeting of the good Padre and Ramona; all around are ravines in which it were easy to secrete Ramona and the horses while Alessandro foraged or explored.

From a lady in Redlands I heard what may prove an explanation of the contradictory stories concerning the original of Ramona. Some say she is now an old Indian hag of very bad repute; others, that she lives in the recesses of the San Bernardino mountains, poor, but pious; other stories give her a still different individuality. My friend said that Mrs. Jackson told her that the character of Ramona was woven out of the traits observed in twelve Indian maidens; different ones of these furnish material for the differing stories we hear. Among the few souvenirs of Southern California I am cherishing a pannier woven by one of the Ramonas, a Christian Indian woman, who ekes out a scanty living by making these baskets. Beautiful as all this region seems to me, the old inhabitants feel called upon continually to apologize for the looks of the country, injured by that "dreadful frost" which last December wrought such havoc among flowers and orange orchards.

Speaking of the frost reminds me of the philosophical view a lady of Riverside, whose loss by the frost was very heavy, took of it. "Out here, where by irrigation we can have the water on our fields whenever we wish, and so are independent of rain, and by means of fertilizers can produce as large crops as we desire, we were beginning to feel we could run our ranches independent of God. So He had to remind us of our dependence on Him, by sending His frost which in six short hours ruined half a million dollars' worth of oranges in this valley."

In most of the points on the kite-shaped track are W. C. T. Unions, doing more or less effective work. Riverside is the largest union, and here lives the state president, Mrs. N. P. J. Button. San Bernardino has an especially active L. T. L. in charge of Mrs. Goodcell, who, before her marriage, was principal of schools there, and understands managing and teaching children.

One thing troubles me all through this region, the decadence of the Y's. Riverside had an organization of nearly one hundred members that gave up and died for lack of a leader. Colton Y's, with a fine hall, nicely furnished, suspended for the same reason, and I have yet to find a live Y in this region. There is one at Whittier, and doubtless at other places, but I have not met them. This grieves me inexpressibly, for nowhere are there more lovely girls, and nowhere is the need greater of the work they can do better than any one else. When I am once more back at my desk, I think we must give Miss Sudduth a vacation for a Y crusade in Southern California.

Los Angeles, Olive and San Diego counties have all held county conventions combined with schools of methods during the past few weeks. The state reporter will tell you of them, of their enthusiasm, their grand rallying to the work, which promises so much for the future. I must not trench on her ground, but I cannot refrain from expressing the gratitude with which my heart overflows, for the privilege of meeting face to face these earnest-hearted women of Southern California. Workers there are among them of whom any state might be proud, dear, motherly women, in whose crowns will sparkle many stars; women bearing the heat and burden of the day here, where family life is so exacting and wearing, yet in the midst of their domestic duties finding time and strength to do the work which must protect their homes; and some choice spirits there are among the girls on whom I count for a revival among the Y's. God bless them every one.

One great charm of this region is the variety of scene and climate to be found by a few hours' travel. Each valley has its distinctive features and climate: for example, at Riverside, scarce sixty miles away, the season is two or three weeks later than in our own valley of Glendale, though there is little difference in latitude. From almost all points here, both sea and mountain height can be reached by a half day's easy travel, and thus people can get that change of temperature which the similarity of their Januarys and Junes denies.

The San Diego convention took me for a couple of days to that charming, quaint city; that short time was enough to make me appreciate Charles Dudley Warner's "The Winter of our Content" which he wrote from this Italy of America.

Even two days there made me feel content to stay on indefinitely. Never saw I skies so blue, nor sea so smooth and sparkling; a restful feeling comes over you as though you had reached "the land where it is always afternoon." From University Hill you look over the city to Coronado, across the bay to Point Loma and its lighthouse, the highest one in the world, and, like two sentinels guarding this land-locked harbor, see two granite islands belonging to Mexico. San Diegoans say they could make a good thing of working this granite for building purposes but for the tariff. For once I am not sorry the tariff shuts out importation; t would be a pity to have the weird, sphynx-like contour of those islands broken as it would be by the worker's dynamite and pick.

Hotel del Coronado, interiorly most beautiful, most homelike of vast caravansaries—I dare not begin upon at the close of an already long letter, but I wish you could all see sunset or sunrise from its towers, or feel your cheeks fanned by the sea breeze as you sit on its porches, or almost best of all, sit in one of its seventy-five pleasant parlors dreamily inhaling the fragrance of the flowers growing in its court or patio around which the house is builded, lulled into reverie by the soft tinkle of its fountains, or listlessly watching the movements of the shy quails which peer out from its thickets of calla lilies, to dodge back into cover should your newspaper rustle. This is not America, in the busy, bustling close of the nineteenth century, but Andalusia in days when troubadours sung, and dark-eyed maidens leaned out of balconies to listen.

MARY ALLEN WEST.

"OUR UNION" EXPLAINS.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—Will you permit one of your readers, in the interest of historical fact, to correct one or two slight errors in a statement published on page 7 of your issue of March 31?

The first official organ of the National W. C. T. U., "brought out in Philadelphia, July, 1875, by Mrs. Annie Wittenmeyer," and later, edited by Mrs. Jennie Fowler Willing, of Chicago, and published in Brooklyn, New York, by Mrs. Mary Johnson and Mrs. Mary T. Burt, was not called Our Union, but the Woman's Temperance Union. After the Newark Convention the publishing committee asked Miss Winslow, of Brooklyn, to take editorial charge of the paper which was then first called Our Union, Mrs. Burt retaining the publishing department.

No question of "whether news from the states that had adopted equal franchise as one of their departments" should be published, was ever raised, but the editor did object to the introduction of discussion on woman suffrage, on the ground of the unwisdom of saddling one unpopular reform with another. Because of this difference of opinion with the publishing committee the editor declined reëlection at the Chicago Convention in 1877, and Mrs. Hannah Whitall Smith assumed the editorship with Mrs. Burt as managing editor, and Mrs. C. C. Alford as publisher. The next year Miss Esther Pugh became editor.

At the first Boston Convention, November, 1880, the question of uniting with the Signal, of Illinois, was agitated, and the decision was left entirely in the hands of members of the executive committee, who invited Miss Winslow to resume the editorial chair with Miss Pugh as publisher.

Realizing that the state of public opinion was more advanced than she had supposed, and that therefore the advocacy of the particular policy to which she had before objected was not injurious either to the paper or the cause, the old editor gladly resumed her position and during her connection never refused to insert whatever was sent her for publication, whether in accord with her own private views or not.

At the close of the Louisville convention in 1883, the consolidation of the National organ with the Signal edited by Mrs. Mary B. Willard, was consummated, and its consequent removal to Chicago relieved Miss Winslow of her duties and left her free for other literary work. The last number of Our Union was issued by her and Miss Pugh in December, 1883.

The writer of course understands that the inaccuracies of statement in the article of March 31 arose entirely from lack of knowledge in its writer who will be glad, no doubt, to be set right by

MARGARET E. WINSLOW,
First Editor of Our Union.

WHAT a young man will not do for the sake of his own manhood—what he has not done for Christ's sake, he will soon forget to do for love's sake.—Frances J. Barnes.

President's Column.

WORLD'S W. C. T. U. HEADQUARTERS.

AMERICAN—Chicago, Ill., 161 La Salle St.
ENGLISH—London, 57 Gordon Square, N. W.

WORLD'S W. C. T. U. OFFICERS.

President—MISS FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Vice-President-at-Large—LADY HENRY SOMERSET, 13 Memoria Hall, Farringdon St., London, E. C., Eng.
Secretary—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Ravenna, O.
Assistant Secretary—ANNA A. GORDON, Evanston, Ill.
Treasurer—MRS. ELLA F. M. WILLIAMS, 26 Chomedy St., Montreal, Can.

THROUGH THE EYE TO THE HEART.

BY LADY HENRY SOMERSET.

Finding that I have been appointed chairman of the World's W. C. T. U. committee on literature, and feeling that a more important duty could have hardly been assigned to me or any one, I wish to make this as my first suggestion. We know that through the eye to the heart is the surest and shortest route; but as temperance reformers, we have not as yet acted on this principle to any great extent. What I propose is that "lantern lectures," as we call them in England, should be provided for, by means of which men and women who might find it difficult to entertain and instruct an audience by an evening address, and yet who are capable and devoted, might render us great service and earn an honorable living for themselves, giving entertainments somewhat after the following fashion: Let there be thrown upon the screen two or three of our most inspiring gospel hymns, interspersed with pictures of Bible scenes, to be briefly described by the lecture. Also historical, biographical and poetic scenes, illustrations of travels, etc., etc., intermingled with temperance pictures, explanatory of the origin and history of the reform and its development, its leaders, its polyglot petition, Temperance Temple, coffee houses, hospitals, etc. Also illustrations of physiology and hygiene, temperance figures, mottoes, portraits of rescued characters, and many other scenes and personalities that will carry home our principles to all who see these clear-cut presentations of the truth. The intermingling of temperance with other subjects will call out a much larger attendance, and thus do far more good I earnestly suggest that these lanterns and slides be offered as premiums to men and women who will secure for us a certain number of subscribers, or sell a certain quantity of literature. On my return to England I intend to put this plan before our women, and as my last practical suggestion before leaving these happy shores, I give it in this most unlooked-for capacity, as chairman of the World's Committee on Literature; for I take it as the broadest meaning of my mission, that I am to do my utmost to reach the great masses of the people with our principles of temperance and purity.

Auburndale, Mass., April 10, 1892.

***

"The Duties of Women," by Miss Frances Power Cobbe, has been brought out by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association at my urgent request. The reading of this book will prove to be an epoch in the life of every woman who gives it attention. As I have done many times before, let me request and urge every local union, whether older members, or the "wise," to read this book aloud, discussing as they go. It costs but twenty-five cents, and should be in all town libraries, reading rooms, and other places where thoughts are being passed from the printed page into the open mind.

***

We have had occasion repeatedly to refer to the Chicago Woman's Club, because it seems to us to be the best one of which we have knowledge, for the reason that it not only seeks to build up women in their personal culture, but to accomplish the utmost good for those less fortunate. Its mottoi s: Nothing that teaches humanity is alien to me. Dr. Sarah Hackett Stevenson is its president, and she is a woman abreast of the times. The Club is of the same age as the W. C. T. U., namely, eighteen years, and it has wrought results worthy to be recounted; for instance, in 1884 its members succeeded in having a woman physician appointed on the Cook County Insane Asylum medical staff, this being the first appointment of the kind in the state, and so satisfactory was the experiment, that to-day it is an established principle in women's departments in hospitals for the insane, that there should be one or more female doctors. They have, by persistent agitation, improved the quality of the diet in both insane and general hospitals, and were instrumental in the organization of the Protective Agency for Women and Children. They founded and have since conducted the first free kindergarten in Chicago, which was opened in 1884, in the lecture room of the Church of the Messiah. It was through their efforts that women were first appointed as principals in the public schools, and later they secured for their sex, representation on the board of education. They were also instrumental in having a number of police matrons appointed, and have been untiring in their efforts among the women and children confined in the county jail.

Frances E. Willard

TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS.

BY MATILDA B. CARSE.

And the Lord said, If ye had faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye might say unto this sycamore tree, Be thou plucked up by the roots and be thou planted in the sea, and it should obey you.—Luke 17:6.

A most unique feature of the Temple is the beautifully arched gothic entrance on Monroe street leading to Willard Hall; it is a triumphal arch formed of shields, with the abbreviated name of each state and territory in the United States carved upon the granite. The shields are three abreast and meet in the center overhead; they number fifty-four. This leaves four unnamed as yet, which will give room for the generations following us to record further acquisitions to our great republic. The above feature stamps the building as eminently national in its character. Great crowds from east and west, north and south will gather in Chicago during the Columbian Exposition. White-ribboners from all parts of the country will be here; the Temple will be the Mecca to which all their feet will turn; hundreds will daily pass under the triumphal arch of states to Willard Hall, and will be delighted to look upon the escutcheon of their own state among the number; as they proceed along the magnificent marble corridor leading to the auditorium, they will be still more pleased to see a panel with the name of their state inscribed upon it; underneath will be the words, "The Woman's Christian Temperance Unions of the Commonwealth of ———, whose names are recorded on this tablet, have each contributed to the erection of the Temple." If the tablet is full of names of familiar unions, they will feel a commendable pride, which will still further be increased by the sight of another well-filled tablet with names of individuals bearing the insignia of their state, with this history carved upon it: "The names upon this tablet represent the citizens of the Commonwealth of ———, who, heartily believing in the temperance reform, have contributed of their substance to the erection of the Temple." How will it be, however, with those who come from states that are doing next to nothing for "our house beautiful?" Will they not drop their heads in sorrow as they see the tablets of their state about empty, and feel almost as though they had no lot in the magnificent structure which speaks to the nation and the world in a visible form of the kingdom of righteousness and temperance?

***

Ashland, Wis., W. C. T. U. is going to have the names of its members on the tablet of its state, and sends $10, a first installment on a $100 pledge. So likewise decrees Richland Center, Wis., W. C. T. U., sending $17. Blackston, Mass., is also to be represented on a tablet. The union sends $50 on its pledge. The De Soto, Mo., W. C. T. U. sends $25, first installment on a $100 pledge. Mrs. C. M. Brant writes: "We hope it is not too late to have our names inscribed in the Temple, built through woman's prayers and work." We want all our sisters to understand that it will never be too late to send money to have their names or that of the unions inscribed in Willard Hall, until the last cent of indebtedness is wiped out upon the building. The King City, Mo., union has sent $10 on a pledge of $100. The East Palmyra, N. Y., W. C. T. U. sends $15. This makes $45 paid on its $100 pledge. The money comes largely through the noble efforts of Mrs. E. A. Reeves. Five dollars comes from the Delaware, O., W. C. T. U. which is bravely striving to raise $100. Mrs. M. A. Davis writes: "Delaware ought to have her name on a tablet, for here the first state W. C. T. U. was held." We are sorry we have only room in this column to notice the amounts sent by unions who are aiming to send $100. We have just been looking over a large number of letters from unions which have sent $10, more or less, but have not pledged to try and raise $100 (these gifts will be mentioned in Miss Pugh's report). We feel certain that all unions who have sent $10 can, if they try the mite-box system, raise the balance of the $100. Beloved sisters, try it any way. To all unions who are willing to try, and so write us, we will gladly send, free of charge, a large photogravure of the Temple and all documents.

Mrs. M. E. Peloubet, Mecklenburg, N. J., sends $2.75 for the memorial window in memory of our beloved and promoted comrade, Yolande Ames. Mrs. Peloubet writes: "I have wept tears of tenderness in reading the touching incident of Yolande's last illness and early call into the light which can never know any dimness. She seemed to ripen for her fitting place, heaven, all too soon."

***

Mrs. B. F. Moore, De Funiak, Fla., sends $1 for a tablet in honor of Jane Weeden. She wants to know if there are not one hundred of her friends who will join her in giving a like sum. No truer, nobler friend of the Temple lives than Jane Weeden. She worked most nobly and unselfishly for it, and raised by her individual efforts about $2,000. Her name deserves to go down imperishably to the ages upon its walls. The Norfolk, Va., union sends $25 towards the Mrs. R. H. Jones tablet. Miss Frances E. Willard writes: "We must certainly have Whittier's name on a tablet in Willard Hall. I am sure I can get the money among those who think everything of him." Who will help Miss Willard secure this tablet to Whittier, the grand old poet, whose name is a synonym for temperance, purity, and righteousness?

Ten thousand photographs of the group consisting of Lady Henry Somerset, Miss Willard and the founder of the Temple have been ordered to give to those who fill a mite-box between April, 1892, and April, 1893. Quite a number have already filled their boxes and desire the picture at once. So many write and wish to purchase these pictures, we want to say to all such, they are not for sale and can only be secured by compliance with the above plan.

***

Orders for Temple Trust Bonds should be sent to H. C. Speer, 237 La Salle street, Chicago. A two-cent stamp will secure a Temple mite-box and all documents in regard to the Temple including circular giving prices and description of silver models. Address Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, The Temple, La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

The Household.

AN EVENING PRAYER.

BY S. LATIMER ADAMS.

[A little minstrel played one night before a delighted audience, in one of our eastern cities After the concert he became very ill, and he prayed, "Gracious God, make room for another little child in Heaven."]

Footlights fade that gleamed so brightly
One by one;
Sweetest music now is silent,
All is done.
Now the crowd goes hastening homeward,—
Happy throng,
While it carries sweetest memories
Of the song.

Soon the angel Peace will fold them
In his arms.
In the quiet, restful Dreamland
Safe from harm.
If there's one who seeketh vainly
Blessed sleep,
For the balm that soothes so gently
Eyes that weep—

If the darkness comes too quickly
After noon,
If the daylight to the laborer,
Fadeth soon,
Surely childhood with its roses,
Lilies white,
Droops at nightfall, like the flowers
Out of sight.

Night of nights, it cometh surely,
Sleep of death!
"For a child, make room in Heaven."
This he saith.
Tender, loving plaint of childhood,
Entering in
Golden gateway, choir of angels,
Where's no sin.

Listening to that prayer of childhood
Angels wait,
Flooding with celestial brightness
Heaven's gate.
Till the evening we must tarry,
Little one;
Rest to thee has come so early—
Work is done.

Now the singer weary droopeth,
Folds his wings:
Silence comes, the trustful birdling
No more sings.
Peace, sweet child, has o'er thee folded
Sheltering wings;
Perfect love and untold blessings
Heaven brings

MY LITTLE WIFE'S TEMPERANCE WORK.

BY O. B. BIRD, M. D.

We were at the table, wife and I and the monkey, otherwise our little girl just beginning to prattle,—and the cooking was as good as any my mother did in the halcyon days of my youth, for Sarah Ann will put the finishing touches to everything herself, being a scientific cook, neat as wax and up to all the modern fads about gluten and fruit being better than starch and sugar, and the unprofitableness of too great variety, and believing in doing and looking her best for her husband as well as for company, an example which some women I know would do well to follow;—I say we were at the table, and I had been reading about some of our prominent temperance workers and their far-reaching influence, and Sarah Ann had bemoaned her inability to have a hand in the glorious work now enveloping the earth,—at the table, as I remarked, when the electric door-bell gave two rings, a pre-arranged signal for the huckster. The youngster shouted "hootoo," and Sarah Ann took up a tray or dust-pan or something which she had conveniently at hand,—for she does plan to save steps, carrying something or half a dozen things every time she goes from kitchen to dining-room and vice versa, clapping the right things into the right places in a twinkling, and making the whole table look as neat as an art store, before I have fairly adjusted my napkin,—took a tray and went to the side door, followed by all her children, the one aforesaid.

When she returned with her bargains in vegetables, she looked sadder than usual and, having readjusted the baby and other things and resumed her seat, she said:

"That huckster-boy looked ill. His eyes were blood-shot, his face pale, his mouth heavy-cornered, his manner shuffling and his hands tremulous."

I remarked, "Go on, wife; you are painting a next day drunkard. I fain would hear more."

With increasing sadness she answered, "That is just what I fear. I do hope he is not forming such a habit. He is a good-hearted boy, always respectful and honest, though somewhat rough looking, and always fond of the baby, thanking her when she gives him the money, and waving his hand to her, and—"

"Ha! That's the way to win a mother's heart, praise her baby. Maybe that is the reason I have so many patients among women."

She went on as if I had not spoken "He never was so before, and I do not believe he is a confirmed drinker. More likely he was led away for this once. I wonder if he would take it kindly if I should ask him about it. I believe I will, to-morrow."

Next day, as she passed out at the side door, I slipped to a window where I could see and hear. After she had selected her goods, but before she gave him the money—sharp, that wife of mine—she threw out this feeler: "You were quite sick yesterday?"

"Yes'm, indeed I was, about used up. Lost sleep the night before." And his face flushed a little, while his fingers twitched as if asking for the money. But Sarah Ann kept it tight in her hand, while the baby clutched for it, as she considered it her special privilege to hand it over.

Wife said, "You must have lost a great deal of sleep to be so sick from it."

"Yes'm, and then I was up with a sick horse, and the young man who was with me took a little of the horse medicine, and I guess I did, too."

"What kind of medicine was it?"

"Oh, I don't know, exactly, but it had liquor in it."

"Did you take it for the liquor or the other medicine?"

"No, we didn't want the other medicine. Yes, we took it for the liquor."

He was really blushing, now, but Sarah Ann had a firm grip on that money. Her face took on a look as though he had been own brother to the baby at her side, and she said,

"Charles"—wife is of Quaker extraction, and never calls people Charlie, Dick and Bill. "Charles, I was afraid of this, and I am more sorry than I can tell you. I have thought of it before, but never saw you as you were yesterday. Won't you tell me more about it? Did you take more than the horse medicine?"

"Yes'm, I'm willing to tell you, as you're so kind," for her face radiated more kindness and sympathy to the square inch than some people show in a whole seven-by-nine countenance, "I'm willing to tell you, only it isn't much. We tasted the medicine, and then one of us went to a saloon near by and got something better, wine, sort o' sweet as well as sharp, and then we wanted more, and got it, and so it went. It's like a down grade; the more you have the more you want, and the less courage you have to say no—like burning a candle at both ends."

"Charles, that is the saddest part of it. Liquor kills the soul. It weakens the will and eats away the manhood. If it only made you happy (if that can be called happiness), or sick, and then left you as well as before, it would not be half so bad; but it is just as you said, the more you use the less courage you have to stop using it."

"Yes, so it seems; but I've often heard that liquor gave a man strength and courage."

"Has it ever affected you in that way?"

"No'm, it only made me sort o' reckless, so I didn't care what I did."

"Well, Charles, that is exactly what the most careful physicians say, now-a-days; but men who drink never seem to know it or care for it."

"It must be they don't care, for they can't help knowing. Makes me ashamed to think I would do such a thing."

"I'm glad you feel so, for I want to ask you to stop it. Don't you think you can take the safe course and always let it alone?"

"Why, yes'm, when I'm here and you're asking me, I could do anything, but the trouble comes when I am among the other fellows, who only make fun and call any one pious that says a word against drinking."

"I know de—" she almost called him dear,—"I know how it is, but I can only say I am sorry. I cannot stop the ruinous practice of treating, nor prevent the effects of bad company. But you can; you can stay out of saloons, and to a great degree you can choose your companions. Oh! Charles, if you go on drinking, you will break your mother's heart!"

"Yes, but I haven't any mother," and he choked up in a way that brought tears to my wife's eyes, though I think there were some there before. And then, pointing upward, he said huskily, "She's up there."

"Charles, that is about like saying, 'I haven't any mother, here she is.' Why, of course you have a mother, and I suppose she is watching you more closely than she did before she went home."

"I declare, ma'am, I hadn't thought of that. Why, I must—" but his tears stopped his words, and he gave up to them and took refuge in his handkerchief.

Wife went on: "I want you for her sake to take a firm stand against any kind of drink that will intoxicate. You know it is the only safe way, and the only right way."

"Yes'm, so I do, sure enough. And I will if you'll only give me a lift now and then, when I come along."

"I will, indeed, my dear," her heart absorbed him then, "but you must help yourself, chiefly, and think of your mother's eyes upon you, and ask the One whom she loves and worships. Charles, here's a pledge-card, such as the Woman's Christian Temperance Union are asking people to sign. You see it says, 'God helping me.' Write your name here, and then come to our three o'clock meeting at the hall. Will you do it?"

"Yes'm, I will. It'll be the best thing I ever did."

He wrote his name on two cards, giving her one and pocketing the other, then crushed her offered hand in his, and started for his wagon with a look of happy determination that promised well for his pledge. The baby, who had been sitting demurely on the step, screamed after him and ran up with the money which he had forgotten.

I turned quickly from my post so as to avoid discovery, and found my eyes watery from intent gazing, or something. Reaching the table, I threw my coffee out at the window, and made other moves to indicate that I had been busily eating.

Sarah Ann appeared, with a countenance somewhat like that of Moses when he came down from the Presence, and I proceeded to act innocent.

"Hello, wife, bought his whole stock? Been gone long enough."

She always keeps a big lot of forgiveness laid up ahead to use on me when I say anything rasping, and so she quietly answered, "No, but I got him to sign the pledge, and promise to come to our meeting this afternoon."

"Easy to write one's name, and easy to stay away from a meeting."

"Yes, but I feel sure he is in earnest."

At supper she reported that he came to the meeting, was much interested, received many kind words, and promised to come again. Next day he brought her a bouquet, and she gave him something to read. And so they made love in a way that I wish were universal.

Soon he brought his horse-medicine friend, and then she had them both in Sabbath school, where Charles soon showed marked ability and aptitude. I do not know what stage of goodness he will have reached by the time this is printed, so lavish is Sarah Ann's praise of him.

One day I asked her if she didn't think there were more ways than one of doing good in the world. And she answered with a sweetly gracious smile that made me glad she was mine for time and eternity!

TEN YEARS ON THE OTHER END.

BY ELLEN F. PRATT.

"I walked with myself, I talked with myself,
Myself said unto me,
Beware of thyself, take care of thyself,
For nobody cares for thee."

These homely lines come often to my mind as I witness the rushing, scrambling, nerve-wearing hurry of the men and women of to-day. One feels like crying out as did the lad who got himself yoked with a young and frisky calf, "Head us! head us! somebody head us!"

I will tell you how one woman solved this problem to her satisfaction. She was not much given to the study of questions which are puzzling the minds of philosophers of to-day, but she felt the pressure of the hurry and effort all about her to do everything, and grasp at this and that new fad, so as not to be behind the times, and still was mother, nurse, cook, seamstress, and forty other things that most wives and mothers are, or aim to be.

Well, the consequence was she began to grow nervous, irritable and unreasonable. Her family began to feel the effects of the mother's moods, as they invariably do, and what had been a serene and happy household, began to grow discordant, and an air of confusion and worry was constantly noticed.

The mother felt it, and paused to reason why this change. She said nothing to the family, but gradually the old serenity returned, and peace once more smiled. A neighbor one day broached the subject of the nervous strain of life at its present breakneck pace, and deplored her own inability to withstand the pressure.

"I will give you my remedy," said the now reposeful matron. "I felt the strain just as you do, and saw that it was leading me to hopeless invalidism, and my family to disunion and discontent. I said: 'I will live a tranquil life for their sakes, for I do not mean they shall ever remember their mother as a nervous, distracted flyaway. I am going to be calm, amiable and reposeful—qualities which make me revere the memory of my own dear mother, whom we all so sincerely mourned. Life is dear to me, and I want to be helpful and companionable as long as I can to my dear ones. So, whenever the hurried feeling came, and I wanted to do a half dozen things at once, I would say, 'I will gain ten years at the other end of life if I go slow now. I will retain the health to make life joyous to my family. I am not necessary to the world only as I live my best self at home.'

"It took some months to readjust myself, but I did not falter in my resolve, and now I can sing with truth:

" 'So let the wide world wag as it will,
I'll be gay and happy still.'

"Mothers, gentle, sympathetic, dignified and placid, you are doing a godly work for the world. Book-lore is all right and good, but love-lore is of far more consequence. Christ was not gifted in anything but exceeding love. Let us follow our Leader, and the wisdom that is not of this world will fill our hearts and give us the peace that passeth understanding."

Iowa City, Ia.

UNION SIGNAL

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

FRANCES E. WILLARD, LADY HENRY SOMERSET, MARY ALLEN WEST, } EDITORS.
MARGARET A. SUDDUTH, MRS. HARRIET B. KELLS, } OFFICE EDITORS.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.
MRS. F. H. RASTALL, Business Manager.
161 La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

DEP'T BOOKS AND LEAFLETS.—ALICE M. GUERNSEY, Editor.

Entered at the Post-office, Chicago, Ill., as second-class matter.

For the Lord your God is gracious and merciful, and will not turn away His face from you, if ye return unto Him.—II Chron. 30. 9.

OUR BILL OF FARE

for this last issue in April does not fall below the high standard of the month. A poem of unusual sweetness, by Warner Willis Fries, on Retrospection, occupies the first place, the second being filled this week by an autobiographical sketch of Mrs. Joseph Lucas, a leader in gospel temperance missions in England. The Rev. C. H. Zimmerman's Taxation and the Poor, discusses this time The Graduated Income Tax with remarkable acumen. Railroad Ties No. X exhales the same breezy, cheery atmosphere of the preceding nine, and Side Lights—for Workers, is the title of a new series of entertaining sketches, the initial one being written by Katharine Lente Stevenson. Some of the best bits of the annual feast of the Chicago Central W. C. T. U. are given as Key-Notes to Better Lives. Miss West's Editorial Correspondence is charmingly conducted from her Southern California eyrie perch, and Miss Winslow's letter is most interesting from her outlook as first editor of Our Union. Our National president and Mrs. Carse each occupy their usual columns. The Household contains three interesting articles. Dr. Bird's story could doubtless be reiterated by the husbands of many good wives. The children are treated to a long and uncommonly good poem by John P. Trowbridge; the continuation of A Modern Daniel, and Aunt Jane's attractive Cozy Corner. Seven of our leading states are reported in News From the Field, and Nutshells without stint and the National Temperance Hospital Items occupy page twelve.

THE WONDROUS SHOW.

One can hardly make a more interesting excursion now-a-days than to the grounds of the World's Columbian Exposition, just south of Chicago. Two of the editors of THE UNION SIGNAL recently had this opportunity under the best auspices, for they went with Mrs. Potter Palmer, president of the ladies' board of managers of the Columbian Exposition, and Ernest R. Graham, assistant chief of construction.

The grounds are about four miles below the city, and are "beautiful for situation," along the illimitable lake shore. The extent may perhaps be inferred from the fact that while the Paris Exposition covered about 300 acres, this will cover about 600; 180 acres are roofed in; 16,000,000 feet of lumber are required to house the department of manufactures and liberal arts. The iron in this building weighs 5,800 tons. The span of its trusses is 368 feet, with a height of 206 feet. The span of the largest arches in Paris was 360, with a height of 136 feet. There are fourteen immense buildings. The largest is that of manufactures and liberal arts, which is, in round numbers, a mile in circumference. Five thousand men are at work, and the changes that a single day brings forth are magical. In the northern part of the grounds they are making a picturesque group of forty or fifty buildings, constituting a veritable village of palaces. These are on a hundred acres or more, beautifully laid out. They will comprise the buildings of the foreign exhibits, and of the states of the Union, surrounded by lawns, walks, and beds of flowers and shrubbery. These are arranged on wide, curving avenues, and constitute one of the most interesting portions of the entire Exposition. In this part of the great park stands the Fine Arts Building, a magnificent palace costing half a million of dollars. Just south is a lagoon, with an inlet to the lake, and encompassing two or three islands, on one of which stands the United States Fisheries Building, on another the United States Government Building, and a third has been assigned to the exhibit of Japan, which is to cost half a million or more, and which will be presented to Chicago. This will illustrate the airy, summer-like architecture, and the exquisite ornamentations of Japanese art.

On the lake shore near by, the United States Government will exhibit a gun battery, a life-saving station, lighthouse, war balloon, and a full-sized model of a three million dollar battle ship of the first class. We think, by the way, that we should get along well enough without this last token of enterprise. A little further south, extending a thousand feet into the lake, is the pier, which will inclose a lovely harbor. This harbor will have on one side a beautiful facade and casino, in whose free space crowds of men and women, protected by a ceiling of gay awnings, will look east to the lake, and west to the long vista of edifices, as far as the gilded dome of the Administration Building.

But to us, naturally enough, the Woman's Building is the most attractive, as we believe it will be to the public when all its arrangements are complete. A more beautiful site could not have been selected for this daintily designed temple of taste and culture. Encompassed by luxuriant shrubs and beds of fragrant flowers, it will stand like a white silhouette against a background of old and stately oaks. Miss Sophia G. Hayden, a young architect who was a pupil in the architect class in the School of Technology, Boston, graduated with high honors, won the first prize, and her design has already been transferred to marble, by which we mean that the building material, which is a sort of cement, has that effect. The style is classic, the gleaming colonnades, both outside and within, presenting a delightful variety, and pleasing the eye by their exquisite proportions. The principal facade has an extreme length of four hundred feet; the depth of the building being half this distance. The style is the Italian Renaissance. There are to be hanging gardens on the roof. The cost of the building is $200,000, and it is the first one completed. Women were prompt for once, be it remembered.

As we wended our way up and down its gleaming corridors, escorted by the young architect whose indefatigable labors have had so much to do with the success of the great plan herein set forth, and listened to the delightful explanations of himself and Mrs. Palmer—than whom our country has not produced a more accomplished and level-headed woman—we rejoiced to know that in these enlightened days, men and women are working together for the very noblest objects, and standing on one level, are able to bring vastly more of power to bear upon the mighty problem of an Exposition that shall outrank all others in this ingenious world, though held in the youngest country, and well-nigh the youngest city, on the globe. Two noble statues, one of the Republic by Mr. Dan C. French, which will stand at the head of the lagoon, and another of Columbus, to be located in the center of the main plaza, by the famous St. Gaudens, will be the most notable sculpturesque ornaments of this brilliant panorama.

We hope everybody will save up money enough to come as a pupil to this World's School of Methods, and to attend the World's Congress, which will be the most magnificent school of principles ever exhibited to humanity. The Temperance Congresses will be held in June, the World's W. C. T. U. convention occurring probably the first week of that month of roses. The World's Temperance Congress, to be presided over by Archbishop Ireland, will at once follow, and in it men and women will equally participate.

Let us all add the small increment of our own influence and power to make this Exposition the mightiest of the mighty, and the most helpful of all the holy things that it has ever entered into the heart of man to conceive. And let us leave no stone unturned to keep out brain poisons and secure a Sunday rest for employés. So shall it be a glorious birth of brotherly good will.

THE WORK OF A GOOD MAN.

Among the men who have done admirable work in this country is Anthony Comstock, who for twenty years has had a most beneficent influence over the twenty million children and youth who are under great temptation because of the subtle ingenuity that follows them as a sleuth-hound follows game, bringing to their untaught minds in ways the most ignoble, a knowledge of that which they should learn from the noblest sources and the point of view of the highest ideals.

At a recent meeting in New York City some of his work was reported. Nearly 2,000 persons have been arrested by him, the total of their penalties amounting to over 319 years in prison; nearly $112,000 worth of fines have been imposed, and over $83,000 worth of bail bonds were forfeited to the public treasury, making a total of nearly $200,000 secured for the public treasury through the efforts of Mr. Comstock's society. It has seized nearly 50,000 pounds of books and sheets ready to be bound, over 127,000 pounds of stereotype plates for printing books, over 820,000 impure pictures and photographs, and over 5,000 negatives for making photographs; over a million and a half of circulars, catalogues and leaflets; over thirty-two newspapers containing unlawful advertisements, and nearly a million names and addresses of persons to whom circulars have been sent, besides a large amount of other matter of criminal character, to say nothing of gambling bills, including over two million lottery tickets, nearly two million pool tickets, over 400,000 literary circulars, and a vast amount of other gambling material, making about fifteen tons of such paraphernalia, and forty-four tons of impure matter.

Some of us well remember the address made by invitation of our National President by Anthony Comstock, before the W. C. T. U. Convention in Philadelphia, 1885, at which our purity department was organized. The impetus he then gave for good has resulted in the appointment of earnest-hearted women in all parts of the world, who make it a specialty to study and carry into effect the best methods of suppressing impurity in literature and art. Mrs. Emilie Martin, the present National superintendent, is one of Mr. Comstock's best allies. The Rev. Dr. John Hall, of New York, in speaking at this meeting in Mr. Comstock's interest, recalled to the audience the day when Mr. Comstock visited his study and described to him the evil influences which surrounded children in the metropolis. Tears rained down Mr. Comstock's cheeks during the recital. One sentence by Dr. Hall would make an excellent epitaph when his work is over: "There must be good in Mr. Comstock to explain the hatred shown to him by wicked men." A beautiful set of china, costing $500, has been presented to Mr. Comstock as a token of the admiration and love felt for him by good people throughout the land.

We again call attention to the suggestion that a committee from every local union should wait upon the municipal authorities asking them to adopt at once an ordinance requiring that all theatrical and other posters shall be submitted to a committee appointed by the city fathers, before such posters can be placed on the bill boards. This would do very much to improve the appearance of our streets, which are now often rendered schools of vice for the young by reason of the exhibition of these miserable handbills.

ENACTMENT AND REPEAL OF PROHIBITORY LAWS BY THE DEMOCRATIC AND REPUBLICAN PARTIES.

Our answer to the following letter, dated March 2, has been delayed by search for the facts requested:

"EDITOR UNION SIGNAL:—In securing signatures to the Million Voters' Pledge, I made the assertion among a group of gentlemen that the Democratic party had given several states good and effectual prohibitory laws which the Republican party on coming into power had repealed. A Republican, ——, said that was not true, and that if I could substantiate the statement with evidence other than the 'lying, detestable Voice of New York,' he would also vote the Prohibition ticket at the coming election. I do not know where to find such evidence, unless I appeal to you. I think it would be advantageous in many ways to have a résumé of the prohibition statutes of Connecticut and Massachusetts and a history of the manner of their repeal published in THE UNION SIGNAL in the beginning of the campaign.

"Very respectfully, E. J. H.
"Secretary Prohibition Club.
"Billings, Montana."

We have taken no contract to champion the Democratic as a Prohibition party, but have succeeded in finding the "evidence" our Montana correspondent wants, in the following exact copy of an editorial in the Chicago Morning News of August 16, 1888. The News is a thoroughly independent and reliable paper, and as one of its staff assures us, "has no time or motive for lying about anything." He also said that the facts given below were not derived from the Voice. The editorial, with its title, is as follows:

"PARTIES AND PROHIBITION."

We have received the following letter making inquiries regarding a much disputed question:

WATERTOWN, D. T., Aug. 14, 1888.

We hear it often said that all of the temperance legislation has been done by the Republican party. Is it true? Also, I have heard it said, in contradiction of this, that the Republican party has done all of the repealing of temperance legislation in different states. Can you tell me what are the facts? I would write to some of our Evanston friends, who are Prohibitionists, but I wish an independent answer. W.

The states that have adopted state prohibitory laws under Republican legislatures, with the year when such laws were adopted, are as follows: New York, 1855; Michigan, 1855; New Hampshire, 1855; Maine, 1858; Massachusetts, 1869; Rhode Island, 1874; Kansas, 1881; Iowa, 1884, and Rhode Island again, 1886. This makes in all nine prohibitory laws adopted by the Republicans, counting Rhode Island twice.

The states that, with Republican legislatures, have dropped or repealed state prohibitory laws, with the dates, are as follows: New York, 1855; Iowa, 1856; Indiana, 1858; Rhode Island, 1863; Nebraska, 1867; Massachusetts, 1868; Connecticut, 1872; Massachusetts again, 1875; Michigan, 1875; Rhode Island again, 1875. This makes in all ten prohibitory state laws that have been dropped by Republican legislatures, counting Massachusetts and Rhode Island twice.

The states that, having Democratic legislatures, have adopted prohibitory laws with the dates, are as follows: Maine, 1846, Maine again, 1851; Illinois, 1851; Minnesota, as a territory, 1852; Michigan, 1853; Ohio, 1854; Iowa, 1855; Indiana, 1855; Nebraska, as a territory, 1855; Mississippi, 1855; Texas, 1855, and South Carolina, 1881.

This makes twelve prohibitory state laws adopted by Democratic legislatures, counting duplicates.

The states which, with Democratic legislatures, have dropped state prohibition are Illinois, 1855; Maine, 1856; Pennsylvania, 1856; Ohio, 1859.

In the states of Vermont, 1852, Connecticut, 1854, and Pennsylvania, 1855, the prohibitory laws were passed by Whig legislatures. The American party in Delaware passed a prohibitory law in 1855 and repealed it in 1857.

As the account stands, Republican legislatures have passed nine prohibitory laws in eight states and have repealed ten prohibitory laws in eight states; Democratic legislatures have passed twelve prohibitory laws in ten states and have dropped or nullified five prohibitory laws in five states. In this Texas is included as one of the five states. The Democrats in that state did not repeal the law, but so modified its penalties as to make it practically inoperative.

In this estimate local option or high license laws are not included; only state prohibitory enactments.

We could have obtained these facts sooner by applying to the Voice, for like the News, there are no motives that will induce it to lie. But we were prevented from going to that authentic source for information by the conditions imposed by our Republican friend in Montana. We trust he will be convinced by the evidence we print and will keep his agreement with our correspondent.

We have not at hand full data for a "résumé of the prohibition statutes of Connecticut and Massachusetts and the manner of their repeal." In 1854 a strong prohibitory law, called "the Maine Law," because it was in most of its features like the latter, was passed by a Whig legislature in Connecticut. That law continued in force until 1872. It was then repealed by a Republican legislature, as stated in the News article, and a license law was adopted, and is, with some minor modifications, the law in that state to-day. A Maine law was adopted in Massachusetts in 1852; was repealed by a Republican legislature in 1868, and re-adopted by the same in 1869; was again repealed by a Republican legislature in 1875, and a license law was adopted in its stead. At present, Massachusetts has a local option law, adopted in 1881, providing for annual votes on the license question by towns and cities.

POLITICAL QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

We have been asked the history of the constitutional amendment in Rhode Island:

The part played by the Republican party in that state was after this order: First in response to great petitions from the people, petitions gathered up with incalculable toil by the white-ribbon women, a Republican majority sent the prohibitory constitutional amendment to the people to be voted on. In Rhode Island at that time there was a restriction as to what men might vote. There is in that state a large foreign population engaged in its factories, especially French Canadians who are notably opposed to prohibition, and these were practically ineligible as voters. After a year or two of prohibitory law which worked wonders in improving the statistics of crime, drunkenness and pauperism, the liquor element offered such inducements to the Republicans that they first repealed the ancient law, and made the voting general. Then, knowing that they had a majority they put the constitutional amendment that had been voted up so recently into success once more before the people and it was voted down and out. It is also true that in many states the Democratic party more than a generation ago gave prohibition to the people and the Republican party coming into power proceeded (when the war was over and men had returned from it demoralized in their habits) to repeal these laws, putting under license the states that had had prohibition.

In response to other questions we may say that it is true that the Republican party in about half a dozen states where it had an undoubted majority has given prohibition to the people at the North, but it is also true that in the South where it has a majority the Democratic party has given a wider area to prohibition under the local option laws than we have at the North and enforced its laws better than we do. This, then, is the situation: Each party has done what it could under the pressure of the people's demands where it could safely take up the subject, but in the large cities where the majorities are close and where the foreign population is overwhelmingly large, neither party dare, because neither party can, and hence neither party will give us prohibition. For this reason the W. C. T. U. has declared that it will follow the prohibition banner wherever it leads. Any party that takes up prohibition sincerely as a living issue will have our prayers, our good word and our good will. No other party has taken up prohibition nationally except the Prohibition party and we have therefore declared in its favor, but in several states where the Republican party has been favorable to our cause we have spoken squarely for it and given it our influence while our Southern women have given theirs to the Democratic party. In spite of all newspaper representations to the contrary this is the situation correctly stated in a nutshell.

THE TESTIMONY OF THE OLD.

Perhaps no paragraph in the newspaper is read with more interest than the constantly recurring one headed "One hundred and three years old," or "Died at the age of one hundred and five." For however we may complain about this world, the average man and woman likes it well enough to be glad to go on living in it, and if they were sure of being treated as well in worlds to come, the chief charm would be taken out of this one. Perhaps the best feature of these paragraphs is that they usually give some record of the habits of our long-lived friends or forebears.

As a rule we find that they are persons of harmonious nature, optimistic spirit, kindly disposed, tranquil and well poised intellectual faculties. For grief, melancholy, hatred and other distempers of the mind wear on the nerves and muscles, poison the blood and minimize the prospects of longevity. Such natures are apt to remain free from the greatest disease and the most universal, possibly also the most contagious known to humanity,—that disease is worry.

It is said to be true that no man of violent temper, or pessimistic turn of mind has ever yet attained great age. It is also generally conceded that country life conduces to old age, probably because the blood is better oxygenized, and through that comes cheer for the mind and that general brightness of spirits which best lubricates not only the mental but the physical faculties. Old people were not in their youth and middle age drinkers of stimulants or eaters of meat as a rule. Cool blood wears least upon the nerves, the steadier pulse jars the machinery less. Here and there men who use alcoholics and tobacco live to a ripe old age, but a study of these cases illustrates the general principle that they might have lived much longer had they not induced this frictionizing force into the machinery of body and mind, and they are without exception indebted to a remarkable ancestry for those enduring qualities that enable them to escape in some degree the penalty of the violation of the beneficent and holy laws written in their members.

THE Rev. Dr. Douglass, probably the most eloquent man in the Methodist Church in Canada, when speaking against the opium curse foisted by England upon the Oriental countries, used this impressive language:

Mr. President, There is something greater than the electric storm which rends the heavens, something wider than the wideness of oceanic tides that moan and sob and wail and shriek around the shores of every island and every continent, receding at length, like some fair penitent, into silence and tears; there is something mightier than the forces of gravitation that interpenetrates all worlds and holds the universe in its integrity; and that something is the aroused conscience of a great people, who moan and sob and wail and appeal to God against a cruel wrong. That aroused conscience moves not earth itself, but heaven and the mortal universe of God.

The Doctor then goes on to ventilate the abomination of the opium trade in China and India. From the first venture of Warren Hastings who started the opium trade with 200 chests of the poison, which he sent in an armed vessel and forced on the Chinese, the trade has grown until about 80,000 chests are now the annual shipment from India to China. According to those who study the nature of the poisons, every four grains of Indian opium will send the strongest man unaccustomed to the drug, into the sleep which knows no waking. Every pound has poison enough in it to destroy 1,600 lives. Every chest containing 153 pounds of the drug has power to silence forever on earth 200,000 souls. Six thousand of these chests carry enough poison to destroy the whole of earth's inhabitants, while the 80,000 annually imported under England's auspices, would destroy the life of twelve worlds similar to our own. It has recently been affirmed by an educated Chinese lecturer that fifty millions of the Chinese Empire are opium smokers, while twenty-five millions are, beyond recovery, its abject slaves. Yet England advertises its opium depots in the railroad cars of the East India government, and the evil is belting the world. The secret of it all is that nearly thirty millions of accursed gold coming from this traffic, pass into the exchequer of the British government in India. Yet the London Times makes the atrocious statement that when one year ago the British Parliament adopted a resolution declaring that "the system" by which the Indian opium revenue is raised is merely indefensible, "The House of Commons was simply having one of its too familiar spasms of cheap Puritanism." Every effort is made by the British government in India to increase the sale of opium. A penalty at the rate of five rupees per pound on the quantity of opium required to make up the stated minimum must be paid by every licensed dealer who does not sell a certain amount of opium within a certain time. England has cleared itself from the crime of slavery. It fairly reels to-day under the stupor of drink, and but for this its brutality in continuing to poison the human brain in the Orient by the enforced sale of opium would be inconceivable, but in a nation staggering under the effects of alcoholic stimulants, no degradation can surprise us

The Watch-Tower.

Our laws, money and highways are all in the hands of monopolies and the government is a police agent to hold the people by the throat while the monopolists go through our pockets.

***

When Napoleon Bonaparte was on the island of St. Helena, and walking out in the cool of the day with the wife of Sir Hudson Lowe and other ladies of the staff, they passed in a narrow and precipitous street some black men who came toward them carrying heavy loads upon their backs. The ladies were inclined to make these men file past them, or climb back out of the way; but Napoleon, with a magnificent wave of the hand, turned toward them and said, "Respect the burden, ladies," himself giving full passageway to the men. There is in these words a deeper truth than that great man could possibly have understood, judging from his mode of life. The law of all considerate and truly Christian people is in everything to "respect the burden"; the burden of life, of occupation, of age, of physical condition, of specially onerous duties.

***

Mrs. Helen M. Barker has been made secretary of the World's Congress Committee for Temperance, Ladies' Branch. In Mrs. Barker we have a most intelligent and faithful ally, who from her relations to the Columbian Exposition, and from the fact that she is now constantly at the headquarters of that great movement and in council with Mrs. Potter Palmer and other leaders, can be of incalculable benefit to white-ribboners, in their endeavors to make a fitting presentation of a great cause, not only at the Congress, but in the Woman's Building, where we are to have our exhibit.

***

Little girl—"Oh, mamma, you'll have to send that new nurse off. She's awful wicked."

Mamma—"Horrors! What does she do?"

Little girl—"She tells us Bible stories on week-days!"

***

Motherly love has seldom had a more pathetic illustration than in an instance that occurred in a little pent-up valley in Switzerland where lived a pastor and his wife with their little ones. One day a flood caused by the melting of the glaciers came roaring down the river and carried away a score of bridges. A narrow gorge separating the valley from the minister's house was spanned by a small bridge. The pastor was on the village side, and his wife attempted to cross the bridge to bring him home. When she reached the middle pier the flood swept away the two side piers and she was left standing alone on the tottering bridge. Her children heard her clear, musical voice singing the Saviour's last words on the cross: "Oh, Father, into Thy hands I commend my spirit." Then the prayer ended, a sudden recollection passed over her face. They saw her tear away the keys from her girdle and fling them from her saying, "There are the keys," as the waters hurled her down the ravine. That mother remembered that she had the keys of the cupboard at her girdle and that her children would need them that they might have their supper.

***

They are now making a brand of whisky in the old Bourbon state and they call it "Horn of Plenty." So let it be—they have chosen the name wisely, for out of the thing designated shall come

"Plenty of poverty, plenty of pain,
Plenty of sorrow and plenty of shame,
Plenty of broken hearts, hopes doomed and sealed,
Plenty of graves in the potter's field."

***

No satirist was ever more unmerciful to affectation than William Makepeace Thackeray. Among the follies which have afflicted an artificial society, none, perhaps, has ever been more pitiful than the mania which has existed for obliterating all the history of a less favored past among men who have risen to wealth by honest endeavor. Dining one night at the house of a gentleman whom the great author had known when they were fellow students, and when probably they were often at a loss where to sup for the lack of a few cents, Thackeray greeted his host on entering, pronouncing his name in the way he had been wont to do in the old days, "Leach, I am truly glad to see you." "Pronounced 'Leack,'" said the other somewhat stiffly, and once or twice during the repast, he reprimanded his guest for slipping back into the old familiar pronunciation of the name he had known so well. Not by word or sign did Thackeray betray that he even noticed the interruption, but when the fruit was placed upon the table, during a pause in the conversation, he bent forward, and taking a peach, turned to his host and said, "Mr. Le*ack*, will you take a pe*ack*?"

ON DUTY.

News from the Field.

OKLAHOMA.

FLOWERS AND BREEZES.

The return of the birds from the southland, and the blossoming of the daisies and buttercups, finds the W. C. T. U. of this territory far from being "winterkilled." The "handful" of white-ribboners are asking God's blessing upon the National, for the practical help they are extending to their offspring, and thereby encouraging them to more active undertakings.

The L. T. L., of Norman, are raising money to erect a hall in which to hold their own meetings and also to rent for other purposes. The union at Frisco labored untiringly to keep a saloon from opening in their town; but the saloonist secured the necessary number of names to sign his paper. The union painted on white muslin, labeled "Home Destroyers," the names of those who signed his paper, and hung it up in the M. E. church where all could read who attend the service on Sabbath.

The El Reno union are supplying wall pockets in depots and court houses with temperance literature. They are also arranging to bring out a temperance play, for the purpose of raising money to defray the expenses of a lecturer, and contemplate having a Demorest medal contest. Gospel temperance meetings are held monthly in the churches. The Stillwater union has organized a large L. T. L. They did a noteworthy thing last summer: A beautiful grove was about to be used for a beer-garden; the union rented it and made a park of it.

The Willard L. T. L., of Guthrie, have a number of young men enrolled; they have been posting themselves on the subject of alcohol and its relation to the United States. The union of this favored city has had to accept the resignation of its loved president, Mrs. Lumpkins. She was presented with a handsome album. The Rev. Sergers, a Jewish Rabbi, has been in Guthrie, his wife is W. C. T. U. president of India; the union there sent her a beautiful hand-painted banner, with the motto inscribed in gold, "We wage a peaceful war for God and home and every land." Parlor meetings are a successful specialty of Guthrie union. They are held monthly, with increased attendance and deepening interest. Their programs consist of papers, talks, music and also refreshments daintily served. The subjects of papers have been pen pictures of Miss Willard, also Mrs. Frances Barnes and the Y department, and social purity. "Christ the Emancipator of Women" was an able article by Mrs. Boggess, that talented leader of L. T. L. work. Mr. Boggess is the pastor of the Christian church of Guthrie, and always wears the white ribbon. The sketch of Miss Willard's life was read before a literary society of the city which was a "nail well driven." A temperance rally at the M. E. church on Sabbath eve, under the auspices of Rev. Buck, has greatly encouraged this union.

I quote from a letter from our territorial president, Mrs. E. J. Roberts, which tells of the busy life she is leading: "I have been appointed by the M. E. Church north, field matron to the Cheyenne and Arapahoe Indians, my work being to teach them to do all kinds of housework. Many of them are very anxious to learn to work like white people, to bake, cook and sew. The Indian women are very anxious to dress their children as we do, but do not care to change their way of making their own clothing. While I am teaching them, I talk to them about Jesus. Some of the old Indians are very glad to hear; a chief said to me, through his interpreter, while I was teaching his wife to make bread, 'I am glad you came and talked to me about God.' There is a great deal of drinking among the Indians; the saloon-keepers sell to them in defiance of strict laws against it. I have tried to find out from the Indians where they get the liquor, but they, like the white people, refuse to tell."

A quotation in my last letter gave a view of the open saloon and gambling from a Democratic standpoint; this time I quote from an editorial of the Times-Journal (Republican organ) entitled "Hurrah for Oklahoma City": "Yesterday a deal of mammoth proportions, which has been on the tapis for months, was closed up; the ice factory of this city disposed of all their right, title and interest in the ice plant to the Anheuser-Busch Brewing Co. Oklahoma City is to be most heartily congratulated upon this very great accession. Its worth, directly and indirectly, can hardly be estimated; that such a shrewd, far-seeing, and wealthy company should select it as headquarters for its immense business and invest such a large amount of money will be a tremendous advertisement for her, and other large establishments will soon follow its lead; then, too, it is a company always ready and willing to donate liberally of its means to public enterprises, which build up cities where it is located. It was a red-letter day for our city when it secured the Anheuser-Busch Brewing Company." Thus does an organ of the "party of great moral ideas" extol a business which brings debauchery, crime and desolation to this "goodly land."

"The Lord brought us into a plentiful country to eat the fruit thereof and the goodness thereof; but when ye (the saloon) entered, ye defiled my land and made my heritage an abomination. Be astonished, O ye heavens, at this, and be horribly afraid; be ye very desolate, saith the Lord. For my people have committed two evils; they have forsaken me, the fountain of living waters, and hewn them out cisterns, broken cisterns, that can hold no water."

MRS. SUE UHL BROWN,
Ter. Reporter, Oklahoma City.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

PALMETTO LEAVES.

I trust no one will "view me with a critic's eye," on this my first appearance as state reporter. The whisper has so often been wafted to us from over the lines that "South Carolina is asleep or dead," that I had almost taken up the same dismal cry, and when a short time since I received my appointment, I asked, when and where shall I find anything to tell? But in answer to my question I find work going on in many ways, very quietly it may be, but progressing just as surely. Deep down in ocean depths coral builders are laying the foundation for isles of the sea; so it may be with us. All through our state, wherever our president has gone, if she failed to raise the white tent of the W. C. T. U. she left some true, earnest-hearted women bound so closely together that they can never entirely get away from the meshes of the white ribbon that binds them to the cause. Our influence, too, is felt by many who will not acknowledge it, and our principles are spreading in many directions. A distinguished lawyer said not long ago, "The W. C. T. U. has accomplished more than all the other organizations put together."

Through the efforts of Mrs. Chapin we have secured the industrial school bill. Miss Yeargin, the superintendent of our state Y's, was one of the committee to select site and plan for this school; it is to be located at Anderson.

The Charleston union seems all alive. They visit jails, hospitals, almshouses, and take flowers to the sick. They have a W. C. T. U. home, give free excursions to poor and sick people. They have gospel temperance meetings twice a week and distribute thousands of pages of literature. In social purity work, homes have been found for reclaimed women, "where occupation made the work of reform easier." In a recent letter from Mrs. Chapin she says: "I spent this afternoon at the jail; there was only one woman and sixty men." She visits the jails constantly when at home and prisoners have sometimes professed change of heart whilst she was praying with them.

Mrs. Jessie E. McCown, of Charleston, is the state superintendent of prison and almshouse work, also of railroads. When riding in the street cars, she folds a leaflet into some religious paper, and hands it to the driver. "Last Saturday," she writes, "on my way up to the Loyal Temperance Legion meeting, I handed the paper to the driver, who glanced at it and said, 'This is just what I was thinking about. Why don't they stop running the cars on Sunday? I go to church when I can get off.'" She holds services at the jail in each cell. She is now visiting a murderer sentenced to be hung on next Friday week. The jailer is a Catholic; he goes with her to each cell, and is attentive, kind and polite.

Mrs. McCown has organized another union, called North Side No. 2, of which she is the acting secretary. She also organized a Loyal Temperance Legion, and was made superintendent of it. This dear, earnest worker, whose heart and hands are so full of these and other good works, is also a busy housekeeper with home cares and duties.

Our corresponding secretary, Mrs. V. D. Young, who is also press superintendent, has written a great many letters to unions and articles for papers, besides distributing many pages of literature. Her pen is scarcely ever idle. Our president, Mrs. Sallie F. Chapin, has not been well since the state convention. Some days the doctor would not allow her to take up a pen. The responsibility of the convention rested mainly upon her. She is growing stronger, and now writes, "I am willing to go and organize anywhere."

The Spartanburg union sent a note of thanks to Mrs. Chapin for consenting to again serve our state as president, and we hope that this centennial year will witness great zeal and faithfulness in the ranks of the white ribbon army. The L. T. L. of Spartanburg sent seven dollars to Russia. The union has donated a contribution to the Waynesville Assembly.

Mrs. Walter, our former corresponding secretary, passed through Spartanburg a short time since. She gave us what seemed to be her traveling text, Job 22: 21, and I will pass it on: "Acquaint now thyself with Him and be at peace: thereby good shall come unto thee."

NETTIE P. FARROW,
State Reporter, Spartanburg.

NEBRASKA.

ZEALOUS WORKERS.

Our indefatigable president, Mrs. Hitchcock, has recently returned from an extended trip through the southwestern part of the state where she organized three unions, met with the eleventh district convention and spoke fifteen times in sixteen days. Since her return she has spoken at eighteen different places, attended two district conventions, addressed the prohibition club of Schuyler, and organized the new seventeenth district in the extreme northwest. A district convention was held, and a most excellent program was presented. Educated and refined women are found all along our western borders, who are zealous in the cause of temperance. These are being brought into our unions and our strength thereby greatly increased. Mrs. Hitchcock devotes her whole time to the work, and playfully says she wishes there were two of her.

The sad death of Mrs. Jennie F. Holmes, of Tecumseh, in the midst of present usefulness and well-formed plans for the future, has been a great blow to our unions. For four years she was our state president and only gave up the work when she felt unable to bear it longer. Since then she has served as corresponding secretary, and in various minor offices. At the time of her death she was perfecting plans as state W. C. T. U. commissioner for the World's Fair. She has done much work in the legislature for municipal suffrage for women, and has always been a prominent member of the Nebraska W. S. A. She was the president of the Tecumseh board of education, and at the meeting of the southeas Nebraska teacher's association which met in Tecumseh March 30 and 31, and was attended by over three hundred teachers, resolutions of respect and sorrow were passed. The funeral services were largely attended by friends and members of the W. C. T. U. from other cities. The public schools and places of business were closed, and the whole city united in paying the last tributes of respect to the memory of a noble woman. May the beautiful words of our state motto, "The eternal God is thy refuge and underneath are the everlasting arms," be fully realized by the hearts that mourn for her. Memorial services were held by the W. C. T. U. of Tecumseh on Sunday, April 3. At Lincoln, also, memorial services were held for Mrs. Holmes and Mrs. Dr. Stanhope, one of their own members. Mrs. S. M. I. Henry's memorial ritual was used, and was found to be beautiful and impressive.

Mrs. M. S. Putnam, president of the fifth district and of Thayer and Fillmore counties, has been at work holding conventions. Fillmore county held its convention in Exeter, March 15-17. Shickley, Fairmount, Grafton, Geneva and Exeter were represented. Revival meetings being in progress in Exeter the evening meetings were dispensed with, but the day meetings were filled with good things. A parliamentary drill was conducted by the president. Miss Ripley, state superintendent of scientific temperance instruction, gave an address on "Heredity" in the afternoon. The same evening she was invited by the evangelist holding revival services in the opera house, to speak in his place, which she did. She also gave a talk to the ladies on franchise. Two papers were presented: "How Can we Best Maintain an Interest in Our Unions?" and "Sabbath School and Juvenile Work," which were thoroughly and ably discussed. A Bible reading was given by Miss Put, and in the afternoon papers were read on the subjects of "The Life we Live," "Woman and Reform," "Health and Heredity," and Mrs. S. T. Corey gave the best methods of conducting mothers' meetings. At four o'clock, the teachers and schools having been invited, Miss Ripley gave an address on "Scientific Temperance Instruction," followed by kind and appreciative words from Rev. Mr. Walker, of the Baptist Church. A department drill was given by the president on Thursday morning, after which the convention adjourned, all feeling greatly strengthened and helped.

Thayer county convention was held at Davenport, March 17-19. Mrs. Putnam, president. Miss Mary Ripley gave an address the first evening on "Heredity," which was greatly appreciated as shown by the fine collection following it. She also read a paper at 4 o'clock, subject, "A Word to Woman," the school-teachers being in attendance. Miss Ripley is doing a great deal to advance the interests of her department, and gives many fine lectures upon the subject which she is so competent to treat.

The superintendents of departments ably represented their work. A most excellent Bible reading was given by Mrs. Gill, of Edgar, a treat indeed to all who heard it. Mrs. Putnam conducted a parliamentary drill. Mother Putnam is a shining example of what a noble purpose and earnest work will do toward keeping the spirit and even the body, youthful and strong. She, however, like most of her sex, does not care to have her age overestimated, and declares that she still feels quite youthful, being only in her seventieth year, and not in her eighty-second as we have previously reported. A reception to the convention by Davenport union closed the session.

Dr. M. H. Garten, one of the most trusted physicians of Lincoln, Neb., has opened in that city an institute called the Ter-Chloride of Gold Institute, where remedies of his own invention are used for the cure of the drink appetite and the use of narcotics. The treatment has been submitted to the severest tests, and is pronounced most successful. Dr. Garten has generously made most liberal offers to the W. C. T. U. throughout the state, for the treatment of patients sent by them. The Lincoln union have investigated the work of the institute, and are so well satisfied that they have sent their first patient to the institute, and at their meeting March 28, adopted the following resolution:

WHEREAS, Testimony has come to us showing that victims of drunkenness have been cured of their diseased condition, and have been restored to usefulness by means of the "Garten Cure," and

WHEREAS, we wish to avail ourselves of every possible aid in preventing intemperance and its attending evils,

Therefore, We, members of Lincoln W. C. T. U., do cheerfully recommend this cure to all who are afflicted with the disease of drunkenness, in the hope and belief that, by its aid, many may be brought into such a condition of mind that they will gladly receive the "Gospel Cure," in which alone we put our confidence for the removal of the soul disease that leads men to enter the paths of drunkenness and all wrong-doing.

Peru entertained the Nemaha county convention, March 28, 29, Mrs. Coryell, of Brock, president. Delegates were in attendance from Johnson, Brock, Auburn and Peru. Mrs. E. A. Fulton, president of the first district, greatly assisted in the work of the convention. Mrs. Taylor, of Peru, gave the address of welcome which was responded to by Mrs. Smith, of Brock. Recitations by the young people were a feature of the evening meeting. The failure to report work done was greatly felt, and the duty and necessity of sending in full reports was urged upon superintendents.

The executive meeting will be held in Fremont, April 14, 15.

In a very large number of our towns and villages the no-license ticket has been successful. This is due largely to the work of the W. C. T. U., and the failure of license to restrict.

DORA V. WHEELOCK,
State Reporter, Beatrice.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

BITS OF BRIGHTNESS.

An effort is being made in Manchester by the W. C. T. U. to protect the children from the drink danger by the sale of sweet cider, brandy drops and confectionery containing alcoholic liquids. The grocers have been interviewed upon the subject. The last Granite State Outlook contains a letter from Mrs. G. M. Heath, state superintendent of young woman's work, in which she urges the importance of interesting the young women in this great work. She sent her annual circular to nearly one hundred unions and asked, as a favor, that they write her personally. She has received very few answers, which is not giving her the hearty and earnest cooperation every worker should have.

The same paper has a letter from the state superintendent of press work, Mrs. F. H. Bailey, setting forth her plan of work for the coming year, and asking for the united assistance of the local superintendents in keeping the work of the W. C. T. U. before the public.

The Hollis W. C. T. U. have reason to feel thankful for their earnest, working, honorary member, the husband of the president of Hollis union. He has made a thorough canvass of the town with the petition to close the Columbian Exposition doors upon the Sabbath. Of a population of 1,000 he secured the signatures of 536 people, sixty-six of whom were over seventy years old. The state superintendent for Sunday observance wrote Hollis that theirs was the largest petition received up to date, and they must be considered the banner town.

A well-attended temperance meeting, under the auspices of the W. C. T. U., was held in Franklin, recently, at the First Baptist church. Local talent combined to make it very interesting. It would be well if these meetings could be held oftener. Mrs. C. C. Paige, president of the union, spoke of the work of the organization in town, state and nation.

Dr. A. C. Dorman spoke in the Concord Opera House, in March, before a large audience of men upon "Social Purity"; he also spoke in the South Congregational church in the evening of that day for the W. C. T. U. His lecture was very interesting and the Concord union recommend him cordially to any union wishing a lecturer.

A petition from the general officers and superintendent of Sunday observance, in behalf of the New Hampshire W. C. T. U., has been sent to the New Hampshire Commissioners of the World's Fair, entreating them to use their vote and influence for Sunday closing at the Exposition.

I am indebted to one of the earnest workers in the Great Falls union for the following account of their struggles and their final success: "Our union meets once in two weeks. Our headquarters, formerly called reading room, are at the head of Fore street. For several years past the town has paid the rent of our room, but this year the request was voted down. It has not been a success as a reading room, and for the past two years it has only been used as a place for our W. C. T. U. meetings. A very successful Y had been organized and was given the use of the room in which to meet. After town meeting, matters looked rather dubious, but Mrs. J. W. Bates, a very energetic worker, canvassed the town for subscribers to pay the rent, and was most successful; the Y's volunteered the remainder and so our headquarters are secure for another year."

From Ella T. Pearson's report on L. T. L. work, I quote the following: "In the report of juvenile work for 1891 twenty-four L. T. L.'s were given, since then three have been formed. Upon visiting Company I, at Exeter, I found seventy-five members. The president and secretary, both young boys, did their work well. Company C of Durham has twenty-four members.

